The House is thoroughly fitted up on the latest plan with first-class Baths attached; all newly furnished throughout; the tables will be supplied daily, and the best wines, liquors or ales for families.
The best attention will be paid to the comfort and convenience of Boarders.
Board and lodging per week.....$4 to $5
There is a fire-proof Safe in the House, where money and valuables can be kept at the risk of the proprietor.
Free Omnibus to the House. 1638

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.
YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.
THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORATED according to the laws of the State and empowered to confer academical honors, will commence the Twenty-first Annual Session on MONDAY the 22nd of July. The system of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.
TERMS:
Entrance, to be paid but once.....$10 00
Board and Tuition, per month.....18 00
Washing, per quarter.....12 00
Physicians' fees (unless it may be preferred to pay the bill in case of sickness).....2 50
Piano, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting, extra charges, but there is no extra charge for French, Spanish or German Language, Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, Use of Bed and Bedding.
Payments are required to be made half a session in advance. Parties will find it much to their advantage to be present at the opening of the Session. 1672

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Conducted by the Christian Brothers,
Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR:
(Payable half yearly in advance.)
For board, bedding, tuition, washing and mending.....$150 00
Entrance Fee, to be paid only once.....10 00
Half Boarders.....75 00
DAY PUPILS.
Senior class.....$40 00
Junior class.....30 00
Modern languages, music and drawing form extra charges.
Studies will be resumed on the 1st of August.
jal1 REV. B. JUSTIN, President.

DAY SCHOOLS
FOR
Boys and Girls.
THE SISTERS OF MERCY HAVE JUST COMpleted a commodious School Building on Powell street, near Bryant, where they will open the various branches of an English education.
The Primary Department will be under their care, and will be placed in charge of competent teachers. Both Schools will be opened on MONDAY, July 1st.
SISTER MARY R. RUSSELL,
San Francisco, May 27, 1871. Sister of Mercy.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL
THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN SANTA Barbara, a short distance from the sea, in a pleasant and healthy locality. The buildings, the grounds are extensive, and the building is kept in good repair.
The course of instruction embraces the most branches of an English education, and the terms is also taught.
TERMS:
(Invariably half yearly in advance).
Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, per annum.....$300
Piano, and use of instrument, per month.....$1 00
Harp, do. do. do. do.....1 50
No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, etc.
The scholastic year of ten months and a half commences August 15th, and terminates on the 31st June.
For further particulars apply to
SISTERS OF CHARITY,
Santa Barbara, Cal.
jy15

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,
LOS ANGELES, CAL.
DEGREES CONFERRED
Rev. JAMES McGILL, C. M.,
jal6-tf President.

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,
SANTA BARBARA.....CALIFORNIA.
THE FIFTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUTION, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, commences August 1st, 1872.
The object of the Institution is to give a good English education, with the study of the Latin language, in the lowest possible cost—a want long felt in California—and bring it within the advantages of the reach of all.
TERMS:
Entrance Fee (to be paid but once).....$10 00
Board and Tuition, per month.....18 00
Washing, per quarter.....12 00
Physicians' fees (unless it may be preferred to pay the bill in case of sickness).....2 50
Piano, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting, extra charges, but there is no extra charge for French, Spanish or German Language, Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, Use of Bed and Bedding.
Payments are required to be made half a session in advance. Parties will find it much to their advantage to be present at the opening of the Session. 1672

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Conducted by the Christian Brothers,
Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.
The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible.
The Classical course is the same as that pursued in the best Colleges throughout the country.
The course of studies is classical, commercial and scientific, including Book-keeping, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Use of the Globes, Natural Philosophy, Chemistry, Rhetoric, Logic, Moral Philosophy, Political Economy, Evidences of Religion, History, Ancient and Modern, Composition, Declamation, Elocution, Reading, Orthography, Grammar in English, French and Latin.
TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR:
(Payable half yearly in advance.)
For board, including tuition, washing and mending.....$150 00
Entrance Fee, to be paid only once.....10 00
Half Boarders.....75 00
DAY PUPILS.
Senior class.....$40 00
Junior class.....30 00
Modern languages, music and drawing form extra charges.
Studies will be resumed on the 1st of August.
jal1 REV. B. JUSTIN, President.

DAY SCHOOLS
FOR
Boys and Girls.
THE SISTERS OF MERCY HAVE JUST COMpleted a commodious School Building on Powell street, near Bryant, where they will open the various branches of an English education.
The Primary Department will be under their care, and will be placed in charge of competent teachers. Both Schools will be opened on MONDAY, July 1st.
SISTER MARY R. RUSSELL,
San Francisco, May 27, 1871. Sister of Mercy.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL
THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN SANTA Barbara, a short distance from the sea, in a pleasant and healthy locality. The buildings, the grounds are extensive, and the building is kept in good repair.
The course of instruction embraces the most branches of an English education, and the terms is also taught.
TERMS:
(Invariably half yearly in advance).
Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, per annum.....$300
Piano, and use of instrument, per month.....$1 00
Harp, do. do. do. do.....1 50
No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, etc.
The scholastic year of ten months and a half commences August 15th, and terminates on the 31st June.
For further particulars apply to
SISTERS OF CHARITY,
Santa Barbara, Cal.
jy15

SULLIVAN, KELLY & CO.
Northwest corner Pine and Front Sts.,
Where they offer for sale
THE LARGEST STOCK OF PAINTS,
OILS,
GLASS,
ETC., ETC., ON THE PACIFIC COAST,
AT THE LOWEST MARKET RATES.
101, 103 and 105 FRONT STREET,
ad3 110 PINE STREET.

Premium Cutler.
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1871
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1869
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1868
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1867
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1865
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1864
First Premium and Medal (Metal) Society of Arts, 1860
First Premium in New Orleans, 1858.

TO
M. PRICE,
FOR HOME-MADE CUTLERY,
STORE: 613 KEARNY ST., bet. Pine and Bush
FACTORY: 10 STEVENSON STREET,
SAN FRANCISCO.

POLL TAX
Now Due,
AND PAYABLE AT THE ASSESSOR'S OFFICE
OR TO A DEPUTY.
mh3

NOTICE TO TAX-PAYERS,
UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE REVENUE law passed by the last Legislature of this State, all assessments made this year prior to the date are void, and it is impossible upon me to levy a tax for the Fiscal Year upon Personal Property made by me under oath, at my office, No. 21 City Hall, without delay.
LEVI BUNCE,
Assessor City and County of San Francisco.
April 10th, 1872. ap12

Silver-Plated,
PORCELAIN-LINED
ICE PITCHERS,
The Latest Improvement and the Best article made.
TIFFANY & CO.,
jy14-6m Union Square, New York.

Murderous Missionaries.—Had as the accounts were respecting the captain of the Romaric slaughtering the inhabitants of a village in the South Sea Islands, a very horrible addition to the intelligence has been made public. It seems that a Protestant missionary named Milner was the person who suggested the blood-thirsty act of vengeance. This is a strange mode of diffusing the Gospel in foreign parts." A Protestant contemporary says that it must be confessed that "the Englishman, under whatever guise he appears among those simple South Sea Islanders, is a messenger of woe. If he comes as a trader, he kidnaps; if he comes as the commander of a war-vessel, it is to use a giant's strength with a giant's cruelty; if he comes as a missionary, it is to call down fire, not from Heaven, but from cannon, which bave all the destructiveness of celestial thunderbolts. Cannot we let these poor people alone? The world is very wide, wide enough, at least, for them and for us without intruding into those happy abodes of primitive simplicity, and converting the mocked people of the Lord into the image and bloodthirsty foe.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LYNCH & COMIEN,
MANUFACTURERS OF
Overstrung, Grand, Square & Upright
PIANOS.
WAREROOMS,
Nos. 203, 205, 204, 206 and 208 Broadway,
NEW YORK.
THESE PIANOS ARE UNSURPASSED FOR their Elastic Touch, Singing Quality, Full, Round and powerful Tone, Great Durability, and, in short, everything that renders a PIANO PERFECT
Description and Prices.
The Pianos will be delivered in San Francisco at the prices given.)
No. 1—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, plain legs, carved lyre.....$300
No. 2—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, resonating on plinth, carved legs and lyre.....$10
No. 3—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, serpentine moulding, carved legs and lyre.....$15
No. 4—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, serpentine moulding, beveled top, carved legs and lyre.....$20
No. 5—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, three mouldings, beveled top, carved legs and lyre.....$25
No. 6—7 Octaves. Four large round corners, inlaid back fits front, handsomely carved legs and lyre, three mouldings, beveled top.....$30
No. 7—7½ Octaves. Grand.....1,200
These Instruments are all in Rosewood Cases, beautifully polished.
UPRIGHT PIANOS.
Seven Octaves—Black Walnut case.....$400
Seven Octaves—Rose, Rosewood case.....500
PARLOR ORGANS AND MELODEONS, of all sizes and styles, at manufacturers' prices.

TESTIMONIALS.
Below will be found a few of many letters sent as complimentary to our Pianos:
From Hon. George W. T. Sherman.]
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 11, 1870.
MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—GENTLEMEN: I am very much pleased with the Piano you made for me. It is really a fine instrument in every respect, and is admired by all who have seen and heard it, for its fine touch and sweet tone. Many of both the good musicians and distinguished persons have called when it has been in our parlor, and pronounce it a fine instrument. We ourselves are charmed with it. I shall most certainly recommend it to my friends who may wish to purchase. I am very truly and respectfully yours, ELLEN E. SHERMAN.
The original of the above letter can be seen at this office.—Ed. MONITOR.
[From the World-renowned Artist, Camilla Urso.]
NEW YORK, May 27, 1870.
MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—GENTLEMEN: After giving your Pianos a fair trial, I am happy to congratulate you on the achievements you have made. Your instruments possess rare merits, and it gives me much pleasure to recommend them to the public.
Yours truly, CAMILLA URSO.
[From Rev. J. Shea, S. J., President of St. John's College, Fordham.]
FORDHAM, N. Y., June 4, 1870.
MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—GENTLEMEN: I give my pleasure to state that the Pianos which we bought of you are giving entire satisfaction to the professors and Pupils in the Music Department.
J. SHEA, S. J., President.
[From the Sisters of Charity, Academy of Holy Cross, Sisters of the Cross of New York.]
Having Lynch & Comien's Pianos in use we take pleasure in recommending them as equal, if not superior, to those of any other manufacturer.
[From Mrs. James Sadlier, 329 West Thirty-sixth street, New York.]
MRS. JAMES SADLIER has very great pleasure in certifying to the excellence and beauty of Lynch & Comien's Pianos manufactured by Messrs. Lynch & Comien, 203, 205, 204, 206 and 208 Broadway, New York. Mrs. Sadlier for over seven years used it (with a really good instrument), rich, and sweet in tone.
Mrs. Sadlier's Pianos were purchased from Messrs. Lynch & Comien by Mr. James Sadlier, and are now in use at 329 West Thirty-sixth street, New York.
Extract of a Letter from the Superior of Sisters of Convent, Drogheda, [Ireland.]
I have much pleasure in stating that the Instrument you have sent us has given satisfaction to all who have seen and heard it. The beauty and finish of the workmanship, added much to the value of the Piano. We selected it [that of April] Lynch & Comien's Pianos, because we thought it the best, and we have not been disappointed.
Extract of a letter from the Superior of Sisters of Convent, Drogheda, [Ireland.]
We have much pleasure in stating that the Instrument you have sent us has given satisfaction to all who have seen and heard it. The beauty and finish of the workmanship, added much to the value of the Piano. We selected it [that of April] Lynch & Comien's Pianos, because we thought it the best, and we have not been disappointed.
Extract of a letter from the Superior of Sisters of Convent, Drogheda, [Ireland.]
We have much pleasure in stating that the Instrument you have sent us has given satisfaction to all who have seen and heard it. The beauty and finish of the workmanship, added much to the value of the Piano. We selected it [that of April] Lynch & Comien's Pianos, because we thought it the best, and we have not been disappointed.

MEDICAL, ETC.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER.
Every year increases the popularity of this valuable Hair Preparation which is due to merit alone. We can assure our old patrons that it is kept fully up to its high standard; and it is the only reliable and perfected preparation for restoring GRAY OR FADED HAIR to its youthful color, making it soft, lustrous, and silken. The scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean. It removes all eruptions and dandruff, and, by its tonic properties, prevents the hair from falling out, as it stimulates and nourishes the hair-glands. By its use, the hair grows thicker and stronger. In baldness, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, and will create a new growth, except in extreme old age. It is the most economical HAIR DRESSING extant, as it requires fewer applications, and gives the hair a splendid, glossy appearance. A. A. HAYES, M.D., State Assayer of Massachusetts, says, "The constituents are pure, and carefully selected for excellent quality; and I consider the HAIR RENEWER preparation for its intended purposes."
Sold by all Druggists, and Dealers in Medicines.
Price One Dollar.

Buckingham's Dye
FOR THE WHISKERS.
As our Renewer in many cases restores the hair long after all other means care, to restore gray or faded Whiskers, we have prepared this dye

TO IRELAND.

Like the Mother of Love,
From the white sea foam you rose,
'Mid the passionate love of your friends,
And the tear of your lasting foes.
Hope placed on thy brows its crown,
And its glory adorned thee posted
And Freedom gave from his side the glaive
To bind on its awful boards.

And from over the boundless earth,
And across the flashing seas,
The praise of this Holy Land
Was wafted upon the breeze:
As birds in a warmer clime,
They fled to their wingéd ships
Sages, poet, and priest, on the words to feast
That fell from thy learned lips.

And high from thy towers flamed
That light thy forefather gave—
On the mind a pillar of fire,
And a beacon upon the wave;
And, numbered with hope and love,
Thy children the nations sent forth,
And where'er they came they spread that flame,
And blessed from South to North.

Then rotared the warrior's bow—
By his vengeful a banner forgot!
And Freedom's unarmed hands
Were as thought-compelling as not,
And as Love's undying name came Over God was the Nation's creed!
And every wave was a Nation-ark's grave:
For Youngmen's Ulion is dead!

Wast woe! that we cannot blot
The records of centuries o'ers!
For the blood and the tears you shed
Leave their sisters in the latest times,
But worst of the heritage is
That he hand hath been imbrued,
In the wrong heart ofest of our Brotherhood,
Is that monster, Ingratitude!

For amid those foreign hands,
When the bell tolled peace on earth,
And they knelt at sacred shrines,
And rose from a crossed birth,
There, wrapped as we turned and taught,
'Neath Piety's fair disguise,
Some turned their gaze, with the Serpent's wile,
To rum our Parnisus!

Thirds to their gold and to their blood,
Thirds to their sword they were to sell;
But on the heart of our Isle
Remember we all too well!
Broken by wonders of fate,
The spirit of Evil when!—
Thou mockery, curse of a Nation's tears
Is penance for all her sins.

Oh thee, whose thy sons were slain
By the fatal, livegard brand,
Wert choking of thy mothers woe,
Like those, thou mock!
Over into the marble tears
Of Pity, whose fountain is thy love
Is rousing the flood of life.

—Irishman.

Religious Thought in England—Monsignor Capel on the Ritualists.

LONDON, May 16.—The English public has, during the last week, devoted a great part of its attention to a single discussion. The discussion has been set to motion by a Catholic dignitary, although the phase of religious thought under discussion calls itself Protestant. In some years ago there were, broadly speaking, but two great parties in the Church of England—the High Church party, which clung somewhat tenaciously to the past, and had a liking for ritual, and the Evangelical or Low Church party, which had little respect for authority, and leaned towards Calvinism on the subject of ritual. These two parties have of late years been subdivided into two others. From the High Church party have sprung the Ritualists, who carry respect for authority and ritual to lengths never dreamed of by High Churchmen. And from the Low Church party have sprung Broad Churchmen, whose disrespect for authority and use have carried their love of free interpretation on Scriptural subjects, and on confessions which profess to embody it, shrink from as dangerous latitudinarianism.

The position of the Ritualists is somewhat peculiar one. They are not Catholics, though they but a hopeless contradiction. Setting aside the Catholic Church and the Greek city, they yet staunchly affirm their Protestantism. Like the Dissenters, they repudiate the authorities of the Church as in some way divinely appointed, and, therefore, with the Church of England, implicitly renounce obedience. Yet in almost every diocese in England they have open issue with the Bishops of their Church. In outward form, at least, the Ritualists were supposed to be more reverential to Catholics. They believe in seven sacraments in place of two. Confession and Transubstantiation offered no difficulty to them, and their ceremonies were impressive and elaborate. These things might have led to the supposition that Ritualists would be regarded with some kind of favor by Catholics. The speculation has been very rudely dispelled this week, and he by whom it has been dispelled has been a prominent Catholic. The Ritualists in seven sacraments in place of two. Confession and Transubstantiation offered no difficulty to them, and their ceremonies were impressive and elaborate. These things might have led to the supposition that Ritualists would be regarded with some kind of favor by Catholics. The speculation has been very rudely dispelled this week, and he by whom it has been dispelled has been a prominent Catholic. The Ritualists have

FATHER BURKE'S

LECTURE ON

"The Irish People in Their Relation to Catholicity."

(Continued from last week.)

Now, my friends, let me ask you, what did the Irish people fight for, for six hundred years? For three hundred years they fought with the Danes; for three hundred years they fought with England. The Danes invaded and desolated the whole land; the English, three successive Harry the Eighths—taking it down to the present—landed in Ireland and spread destruction and desolation upon it. This Irish people fought for six hundred years; what did they fight for? They fought for six hundred years for something they had never seen; they never saw Christ in the Blessed Eucharist, because he was hidden from them under the sacramental veils of time and of ages; they never saw the Mother of the God of Heaven; they never saw the glorious upon the Cross; and yet, for that Christ on the Cross, for the Saviour in the Tabernacle and for the Mother of Purity in Heaven, and the angels and saints, they fought these six hundred years. They shed their blood until every acre of land in Ireland was red with the blood of the Irishman, that was shed for his religion and for the Church. What does this prove? Does it not prove that, beyond all other races and nations, the Irish character is able to realize the Unseen and so to substantiate the things of faith as to make them for us more substantive than things, than property, than land, than education, than life? Ah! any man who goes out and says of an army ready to give up every inch of land it possess; I am ready to go into exile; I am ready to be sold as a slave in the Barbadoes; I am ready to be trampled under foot or to die for Christ, and for the Church, or how, though I never saw him;" that man is preëminently a man of faith. The Irish nation, for 600 years, answered the Saxon and the Dane thus: We will fight until we die for our God who is upon our altars.

Now, I ask you to find among the nations of the earth any one nation that ever asked to suffer confession, robbery and exile and death for their faith, but the Irish people. In one man, for 600 years! When you have found that nation, when you are able to say in the annals of the world did that, and such another people did that, and to prove it to me I will give up what I said—namely, that the Irish are the truest formed in character and in their faith of any people in the world. As soon as you are able to prove to me that any other people ever stood so much for their faith, I stand overpowered; but until you prove it, I shall say the Irish people and race are the m st Catholic on the face of the earth.

Now, my friends, if I want any proof of the Irish faculty of realizing the Unseen, why, my friends, I have it as well. The Irish child, as soon as he arrives at the age of reason, has an innate faculty of realizing God's unseen. When he come out of the back door and looks into the field, he imagines he sees a fairy on every bush. If he sees a butterfly upon a stalk in the field, he thinks it is a Lepreehaun. If a raindrop, since a boy growing up, studying Latin; having made up my mind to be a priest—I was about 15 or 16—I knew that, having made up my mind to be a priest—I was a child and I was a boy—there was a certain old archway to Bowling Green, in Galway, to which there was attached a residence. I know there are some here that will remember it. It was near the place where Lynch, the Mayor, had put his son, hundreds of years ago, near the Protestant churchyard, and told that he had made his son. At any rate, grown as I was, learning Latin, knowing everything about Latin and Greek, and having made up my mind to be a priest—I was never able to pass under that arch after nightfall without fear and trembling for faith. If you will—this Irish superstition is a faith. Remember, this is a subject of study, not superficially of a spiritual character—exists, there is a proof that there is a character formed to realize the Unseen.

Now, my friends, consider the next great impress of the Christian character, as stamped upon the Irish people. The Apostle says, "we are saved by hope." This people of ours, with supreme confidence in the divine promises of God, in the certainty of their fulfilment, a confidence that never shakes, that never loses itself, that never loosens its hold upon God, that never, for an instant, yields to depression or despair. I ask you if that virtue is found stamped upon any Irish character? Tell me, first of all, as I wish to prove it, during this thousand years fighting for Ireland, I never heard of a day in the history of our nation when Ireland lost courage and her shield? That nation was never routed or beaten so as to be defeated on many a field, it has been dragged in the dust, in the dust stained with the blood of Ireland's best and most faithful sons; it has been washed in the accursed waters of the Boyne; it has never had the nation, for a single hour, hesitated to lift that prostrate banner, and fling it out to the breeze of heaven, and proclaim that IRELAND WAS STILL FULL OF HOPE.

Scotland had as glorious a banner as ours. The Scotch banner was hauled down upon the plains of Culloden, and the Scots, chivalrous as their fathers were, never raised that flag to the mast-head again; it has disappeared. It is no longer "Ireland and Scotland" or "England," as it used to be; it is "Great Britain and Ireland." Why is it "Great Britain and Ireland?" Why is it not simply Great Britain? Why is the sovereign called the "Queen of Great Britain and Ireland?" Because Ireland refused to give up her hope; and Ireland never acknowledged that she was ever anything else except a nation.

Well, my friends, it was that principle of hope that sustained our fathers during those thousand years they kept their faith. And the word of Scripture as recorded in the book of Daniel is true, that the Jews were banished into Babylonish captivity—when the people of every nation came to the banks and said, "Why should you be persecuted on account of your God? Give him up. Why do you refuse to conform to the laws and usages of the people around you? Give up your God. Don't be making idols of yourselves." The Jews said, "speak not so; for we are the children of the saints; we know not any God but the true God. We never forsaken those who never change their faith in Him." This is the inspired language of Scripture and well the Irish knew it; and therefore as long as Irishmen kept their faith to their God and their altar, so they nearly and very constantly refused to lay down their hope. The Christian character is made up of hope as well as of faith and of love. If Ireland laid down her hope in despair, that high note of Christian character would never be in her. The Irish people never knew they were beaten. Year after year—one day out and another day in—whilst the nations around were amazed at the bull-dog tenacity of the people with two ideas—nationality, that they were Catholic and a Nation—Ireland never lost sight of her hope. What followed from this? What was the consequence of this? Enshrined in the national heart and in the national aims, there has been, wherever the Irishman exists, there has been the glory upon his head of the man whose courage is the hour of danger could be relied upon. Every nation in Europe has had a taste of what Ireland's courage is. They fought in the armies of Germany, in those Austrian armies, where ten thousand Irishmen and Irishmen with Patrick Sarsfield at their head. Did they ever turn their backs and run away? Never. At the battle of Ramillies, when the French were beaten, and they were flying from the English, the English in the heat of their pursuit met a division of the French army. Ah! that division was the Irish Brigade. They stopped them in the full tide of their victory, and they drove them back and took from the spoils of their hands and marched off after the French army. If any of you go to Europe it will be worth your while to go to an old Flemish town called Ypres. In the cathedral you see it and flags and banners flying about. If you will ask the sexton to explain those flags to you (perhaps you will have to give him a sixpence); he will come to one of these flags and say, "that was the banner the Irish took from the English in the very hour of their victory at Ramillies." King Louis was going to turn and fly at the battle of Fontenoy; but Marshal Saxe told him to wait for five minutes until he should see the Irish. "Your majesty don't be in such a hurry; wait a minute; it will be time enough to run away when the Irish are beaten." Lord Clare he said: "There are your men and there are the Saxons." The next moment there was a harsh hoarse cheer heard over the field. In the Irish language they cried out, "Shanneher Lamh agus Buadh" "Sarsfield and Victory!" That old column of Englishmen melted before the Irish sword, and the Irish soon made them in the ditch when the sun shines upon it. When a man loses hope he loses courage. He gives it up. "Oh, all is lost," he says; "there is no use going on any further." But as long as a man keeps his courage up, with the lion in his heart, so long you may be sure there is some grand principle at the bottom of him. Turn it, you will see it almost "hoped against hope." I say that comes from our Catholic religion—the Catholic religion that tells us: "You are down to day—don't be afraid; hold on; lean upon your God. You will be up to-morrow."

THE THIRD GRAND FEATURE OF THE CHRISTIAN IS LOVE;

A love both strong and tender; a love that first finds its vent in God, with all of the energies of the spirit and the heart and soul and going straight for God; crushing aside the world as it were in the very impetuous of men, and in faith and hope and love, making straight for God. Trampling down the world, the man of love goes straight to God, he will allow nothing to intercept the love of his heart which God calls upon him to make, he is ready to make it; for the principle of love is unselfishness. Accordingly, never did her God call upon Erin for a sacrifice that Erin did not make it. Just sent to Ireland the messenger of His wrath, the wretched Elizabeth. She called upon Ireland for Ireland's liberty and Ireland's land; and the people gave up both rather than forsake their God. God sent Ireland another Elizabeth in Oliver Cromwell—a man upon whom I could not lay an additional curse, for any conceivable curse that could be laid upon him would be but a feather to an additional curse upon Oliver Cromwell would be like throwing an additional drop of water on a drowned rat. Cromwell called upon the Irish people, and said: "Become Protestants or I will have your possessions, your wealth. Remain Catholic, and take your choice—Hell or Connaught.'" Ireland made the sacrifice; and, on the 25th day of May, 1651, every Catholic escaped to the Irish coast, to the Shannon, and went into the wild waters of Connaught rather than give up their faith. William of Orange came to Ireland, and he called upon the Irish to renounce their faith or submit to a new persecution—new penal laws. Ireland said: "I will fight against injustice as long as I can; but I will not, when the arm of the nation is paralyzed, and I can no longer wield the sword, one thing I will hold in spite of earth or hell, and that is my most glorious Catholic faith." If they did not love their God they could have done this! If they did not prize their faith, would they have preferred it to their liberty, their wealth and their very lives? No, no! Patrick sent the love of God and the Virgin Mother deep into the hearts of the Irish; and in our Irish spirit, and in the blood of the nation it has remained to this day. Wherever an Irishman, true to his country, true to his religion exists, there do you find a lover of the Immaculate Mother of God.

More than this, their love for their neighbor shows this in two magnificent ways—the fidelity of the Irish husband to the Irish wife, and the Irish son to the Irish father and mother, and of the Irish father to his children. Where is there a nation in which those ties are more magnificently brought out? England told Ireland, a few years ago, that the Irish husbands might not have their Irish wives. Nothing was heard from one end of the land to the other but a loud shout of "No." Oh, listen to that! So a man can separate from his wife! The curse of Cromwell on ye!" England told the fathers of Ireland that it was a felony to send their children to school. And yet never did the Irish fathers neglect the sacred duty of education. When, actually, it was found that a man was teaching his children at school, he was liable to a fine and imprisonment. In spite of the imprisonment and the fine of their hard earnings, the people, who never have been serfs, refused to be the servants of ignorance, and Irishmen and sirs are educated nation. In the worst day of our persecution—in the worst day of our misery—there was one thing we always respected in the land next to the priest; and that was the "poor scholar;" with a book under his arm, perhaps with but three halfpence worth of clothes upon him going from one farm house to the other, with the "God save all here!" He got the best of the house, the best of the roasted piece in the straw chair. And the children were all called in from the neighboring houses and from the village. He would spend a week from one house to another. Every house in Ireland was turned into a school-house at one time or another. Hence I have known men, old men of my own family, who remember 1782. I have seen them, when a child in their old age, and these men, brought up in the days of penal misery, with its misery, with its inforced ignorance, were first class controversialists. They knew how to read and write; they knew Dr. Gallagher's sermons by heart. There was no Protestant Bishop or Protestant Minister in Ireland that could hold his ground five minutes before them; and the probability was that after having convinced his reason and opened his eyes to the truth, they were equally prepared to blacken both his eyes.

The nation's love, the people's love for that which was next to their God, the very next, is the love of a man for his country.

IS THERE ANY LAND SO LOVED AS IRELAND BY ITS PROPET

Sarsfield, dying upon the plains of Landen; is only a fair type of the ordinary Irishman. There was many a good man, an heroic a man, in the ranks of the Irish Brigade that fell that day as Sarsfield, who in full career of victory, at the head of Lord Clare's Dragoons, following the Irish Brigade, fell from him; William of Orange in their ranks flying and showing the broad of his back to Sarsfield, a sword in hand, gleaming like the sword of God's justice—the Irish hero was in full chase, when a musket ball struck him in the earth, and he fell dying from his horse. The blood was welling out hot from his very heart; he took the full of his hand of his heart's blood and raising his eyes to heaven he cried: "Oh, that this was shed for Ireland!" A true Irishman! Woe's was the nation that was ever so served! In the three hundred years of persecution, in political warnings and protocols; there are Irish ambassadors at the foreign courts; learn what they have to say before you trample upon us." This is what I mean. I am not a slave on a plantation; I am an Irishman. I am not afraid to say: "I don't care if I went under the very nose of Queen Victoria and Judge Keogh."

And now, my friends, you know that, whatever way a priest may begin his lecture, when he goes through it he always ends with a kind of exhortation. In the name of God, let us make a resolution here to-night, to be all that I have described to you—that an Irishman ought to be—and leave the rest to God.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

ENGLAND.

The Lock.

Miss Harriet Martineau and five hundred other women have presented a petition to Parliament praying that the cat-o'-nine-tails should be abolished. In the document the petitioners say: "Your petitioners have learned that a bill is now before you, having for its object to extend the punishment by flogging to certain cases of brutal attacks upon women and children. Your petitioners rejoice in the thankfully welcoming this evidence that attention is being directed to the flagrant inadequacy of the punishment inflicted for such offences, utterly repulsive the proposed extension of a penalty to be sent for a protection to their sex, regarding it as certain to increase the brutal, cruel and unmanly spirit from which such crimes invariably spring." We have a great respect for Miss Martineau and some of her excellent ladies, but on a matter of this kind we should prefer to be guided by Mr. Anstey, or Mr. Serjeant Ballantine, than be cat is wholesome; no ruffian who has once been scourged ceases to be a bully and a coward. Flogging, be inhuman, pray let the garroters and wife-beaters take the inhuman punishment of criminal courses and give up their inhumanity first.

Monsignor Capel on Ritualism.

On Sunday last Monsignor Capel delivered the fourth of his series of lectures on "Conversion made by the present movement towards Catholicism." In his two first lectures, Monsignor Capel was very members of the Church of England. A sixth of the priests of the Church of England, he estimated, had brought up under the influence of Anglicanism. No week goes by (says Monsignor Capel) without my receiving, three, four or five persons of the Ritualist party into the Church. And this is not by any canvassing of ours. They are persons with whom we have no relations until the moment they come to us, and real earnestness is strikingly characteristic of them. Monsignor Capel, in the remainder of his lecture, insisted that the objections raised to conversions were illogical and theologically faulty. Every soul had an individual existence, and would stand by itself. Ritually before God's judgment-seat. We ought to follow the light of conscience, submitting neither fortune, nor parents, nor worldly influence, nor dependence upon any clergyman or bishop, from following what our conscience dictated.

FRANCE.

Fenian Sensation.

"In the course of the debate in the French Legislative Assembly, a few weeks since, a strange statement was made about the Fenians. In the course of his speech M. Hontier, alluding to the purchase of rifles, said that M. Motta told Gen. Thomas that there existed in England a new conspiracy of Fenians, who have arms concealed, and that M. Motta knew where to buy them, and to bring into France 185,000 rifles!' We opine that if there be one truly more astonished at this statement than another it will be the Fenian, or—what is left of it.

The Dominican Martyrs.

The last week in May was celebrated in Paris with all the solemnities of religion, the anniversaries of the murdered Dominicans of Arcueil and the martyred Archbishop. On the 24th May, just a twelvemonth after the 24th May, just a twelvemonth after the 24th May, just a twelvemonth after

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 6.

June:
—Sunday—Sixth Sunday after Pentecost (commemoration of St. Paul. Solemn Mass of St. Peter and Paul.
July:
—Monday—Octave of St. John Baptist.
—Tuesday—Visitation of the B. V. M. ob. Procession and Martinmass, MM.
—Wednesday—Octave of St. Peter and Paul.
—Thursday—Of the Octave.
—Friday—Of the Octave.
—Saturday—Octave of St. Peter and Paul.

THE MONITOR.
PER ANNUM
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....JUNE 29, 1872.

THE EDITH O'GORMAN IMPOSTURE.

Now that the "Escaped Nun" has delivered her last lecture and betaken herself to some other locality, we feel, we can without running the risk of being misunderstood, or of having our intentions misrepresented, indulge in a few comments upon some matters relating to her infamous diatribes. Knowing the antecedents of the wretched creature as we did, being thoroughly acquainted with the incidents of her vagrant career as reported in the secular press, we were well aware of the character of her discourses. When a woman has abandoned virtue and taken up with shame, she invariably endeavors to prove the reality of her sex as bad as herself, for that is the worst she can possibly say of them. The miserable outcast from society seeks by what she take revenge upon the virtuous, who shrink from her, by declaring their purity to be a hypocritical fraud. In like manner Edith O'Gorman sought to satisfy her rankle against the Nuns who refused to take her back into the Convent, whence her own vicious propensities had impelled her to fly, by describing them to the world as fiendish, designing and unchaste. So, long before she reached San Francisco, before she had the opportunity of opening her budget of immoralities in presence of a fashionable audience, we entertained the conviction that her lectures were simply a rehash of all the slanders against the fair fame of religious men and women which have been current among a certain class of society during the last four centuries.

We were not mistaken. We found out that her pretended "revelations" were one and all copied from stories which were invented many years ago. That her lectures did not surprise us in the least, inasmuch as they contained nothing new, no statement the falsity of which had not been clearly demonstrated. We do not, however, acknowledge it, the public of San Francisco astonished us very much, and astonished us most disagreeably. We had not the slightest idea that a hundred people, claiming to be respectable in character, could be found in our city to listen to her. In some of the Eastern cities she could not procure a hall wherein to deliver her addresses; in other places she could not muster an audience; she was almost everywhere denounced as an impostor, and shunned as if she were something positively unclean. We fancied that San Francisco was not lacking in liberality, in good taste or in respect for decency; and we believed Miss O'Gorman would reap no dollars by coming here. The crowded audiences at Platt's Hall proved how vastly we had underrated the morbid and prurient bigotry which was latent in the community.

There is no conceivable excuse for the persons who attended her lectures. They were guilty of gross violation of Christian charity in listening to infamous tales about their Catholic neighbors, who seek only to live in harmony and friendliness with them. They were guilty of a scandalous breach of decorum in being present at the recital of immoral and lascivious stories. It would scarcely lessen their offence if Miss O'Gorman's personal character were free from stain, and every word she uttered were absolutely true. What, would be the name in Heaven, would be thought of the fathers and mothers who would go themselves, or, more horrible still, permit their young and innocent children to go to hear an account of life in a house of ill-fame? Would it be any excuse or justification for them to plead that the woman lecturing knew all about the subject and would only state facts? As there was not a man, nor a woman, nor a boy, nor a girl who did not proceed to Platt's Hall knowing and believing that the "Escaped Nun's" lectures were to be something of that nature. Indeed they would, one and all, old and young, have been deceived and disappointed if they were treated to anything else. Now we would put the question, what must be the character of the people capable of such abandonment of modesty, of such utter shamelessness?

The recognized rules of public decorum are, we know, rather lax in this country. It is permitted here to do and say things which elsewhere would be punished by ostracism from respectable society. Yet we were under the impression that the line dividing propriety from impropriety was drawn somewhere inside going to listen to immoral "revelations," even though they had references to convert life. It may be that we are wrong; but if we are, so much the worse for the purity and innocence of the young girls of California. There are other points of view, less striking perhaps, but still very forcible, whence Miss O'Gorman's auditors do not appear in a creditable light. The "Escaped Nun" has been roundly convicted of mendacity, and her imposture has been most mercilessly castigated by the liberal press. Nevertheless thousands of men and women are to be found in San Francisco willing to pay money for the gratification of listening to wretched fictions, from which others, more intelligent, or more decent it must be, turned away in disgust. Any human being capable of attaching credence to the "worn" story, and the similar tales narrated so glibly by "Mrs. Professor Auffray," should surrender all claim to be considered rational. Again, the history of her alleged seduction constantly varies, contradicting by turns herself, her sisters and her legal advisers in that famous lawsuit which was compromised for the enormous amount of three hundred dollars.

In short all her lectures stand out prominently as audacious compounds of contradictions, absurdities and glaring fallacies. But they are quite good enough, quite decent enough, and quite reliable enough for a large section of San Francisco.

We were about to say "Protestants," but we recoil from doing so. It would, we feel certain, be doing cruel injustice to the great bulk of our Protestant fellow-citizens and fellow-countrymen to confound them with the shameless individuals who availed themselves of Edith O'Gorman's lectures with such avidity. We are heartily sorry to learn that there are so many prurient and nasty-minded bigots in San Francisco, nevertheless we have the consolation that they are not out-numbered twenty fold by those who, if they do differ from us in creed, differ honorably and fairly, giving us credit for as much intelligence, sincerity and love of freedom as they profess themselves.

We shrink almost instinctively from drawing invidious comparisons, yet a regard for justice compels us to say that it was not thus the Catholics of San Francisco, or any other city, would have behaved under similar circumstances. It were an easy task, indeed, to contrast a series of lectures dealing with the scandals occurring in Protestant religious circles, because the ground work might be clipped from a file of the daily papers in a couple of hours; in fact an annually plenteous crop of these unpleasantly colored weeds could be gathered at the present time, as they show up thickly and frankly all over the Union. Supposing, for the instant, that a Catholic woman had had industry enough to collect all those stories of clerical defalcations, seductions, adulteries, and such like delinquencies, and went through the country "lecturing" thereupon, inciting people to anger and hatred of Protestants; what, we ask frankly, would be the reception awarded her by our coreligionists? In not one single town or city in all America could twenty Catholics of any class in society be got together to listen to such a disturber of the public peace; every right-minded man with denunciations of her; the press would hold her up to public scorn and ridicule; every righteous-minded person would shun her presence. The result would soon be that she would reap no dollars by coming, being a golden harvest from her nasty "revelations," she would find herself repudiated and disowned on all hands, and compelled to seek some more honest way of earning the decent means of earning a living. For this conduct Catholics would require no praise whatever, as they would only act in accordance with the promptings of two motives very powerful with them—one a desire to discountenance immoral exhibitions, the other a wish to maintain friendly relations with their Protestant fellow-citizens. Accordingly we are not saying too much, or urging our case too far, when we insist that if those who attended the "Escaped Nun's" lectures had been animated with proper feelings, with the feelings we have a right to expect from them, they would have remained at home and wished as little to go to Platt's Hall last Monday and Wednesday evenings as they would to walk into a pest-house.

But the record of the Sisters of Charity is not yet forgotten by the large-hearted and generous people of San Francisco. The memory of their heroic devotion when a terrible pestilence was smiting down its victims by the hundreds has surely not died out, and it must be more than usually vivid just now when, unfortunately, the probabilities are that their services may soon be required again unless God, in His great mercy, avert the plague which threatens our city. When the parents quitted their children, when the children fled from their parents, when husband abandoned wife, and wife left husband rather than run the risk of the small-pox infection, when nurses for the unhappy plague victims could not be procured, the Sisters of Charity volunteered, and fulfilled the duties of their terrible task with a devotion that nothing could surpass and that words cannot possess powerless to describe.

Can it be that while the record of the generous gratitude of the people is yet inscribed in the archives of our State, and men are living who can testify to their heroism, the fair fame of Sisters of Charity can be blasted by the filthy ravings of a wretch who admits she used to curse the Superior that sent her to the bedside of the afflicted? Never! Never! At least not until human nature in California is recast into some new and monstrous mould!

FATHER LAVELLE'S CHURCH.—Some months ago we invited subscriptions to the fund for the building of Father Lavelle's church, and received the following responses: From Dr. J. F. Gibbon, ten dollars, from Martin J. Conklen five dollars, from Mrs. Julia Reynolds two dollars and a half, making in all seventeen dollars and fifty cents. This small sum we still hold, being almost ashamed to send it to the publication for California. Trifling as it is, we shall either return it to the givers or send it on without much more delay. Catholics here ought be in this State enough West of Ireland men, and men appreciating the character of Father Lavelle, to make up something like a respectable contribution for his church. It is really a reproach that so little should have been collected. We trust those who subscribed will understand our reason for not forwarding the money long ago, and now we await further instructions from them.

PERSECUTION OF CATHOLICS.

It is a strange thing, but true nevertheless, that there is scarcely a civilized country in the world where the Church is not undergoing trial or tribulation of some sort. Probably in the United States alone is it completely free from governmental control and persecution. Yet even there we astonish the senseless fanatics who are constantly crying out against what they call the aggressive tendencies of the Papacy; but a review of the several European and American nations will conclusively establish its truthfulness.

To make a beginning at the very centre of Catholicity, nobody can say that the Church is free in Italy. The Pope has been despoiled of his dominions by a lawless invasion, and is secluded in the Vatican to all intents and purposes as a prisoner. So little care have the usurping authorities of his person, that they allow the very dregs of the populace roam through the streets of the Eternal City, singing songs inciting to the assassination of the Pontiff and all who revere him. Every day ecclesiastical property is seized, and the religious who own it are turned adrift to make a living as best they can. In Austria the policy of the State has long been an attempt to make the Church a mere department of government, subject in all things to the civil power. Not a bishop can be appointed or act without permission of the Emperor, and the most important communication from Rome dare not be read in the churches without license from some official. In Prussia the case is even worse, because the government, being Protestant, is more severe, and it is only recently that a bill has been passed to expel the Jesuits. In many Germany States and even the Swiss Republic, faithfully imitate this repressive policy.

Catholicity has, perhaps, gained something by the fall of the Empire and the establishment of a Republic in France, because, although more license may be accorded to its enemies, it has been in great measure freed from the heavy incubus of ministerial supervision, and the advantage rather more than compensates for the disadvantage. Nevertheless, the Church does not possess complete liberty, inasmuch as it is a reproach to a man to be a practical and conscientious Catholic. In Spain, King Amadeo copies the conduct of his father-in-law Victor, and shows profound worthy father in laity, and self-sacrifice during the late Civil War, does his utmost to oppose and persecute it. The fact that many priests have laid aside their ecclesiastical habit and taken up arms as partisans of Don Carlos sufficiently indicates what is their opinion of the Sardinian rule.

Portugal has been for years swayed by secret societies, and therefore has one strong hatred of religion, so we need say no more about it. Belgium, too, has been smitten with the secret society plague, and the Catholics of that country, perhaps better than any others in the world, can understand the saying that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," inasmuch as they are constantly struggling to maintain their rights. Unless a very great change has taken place within the last few years, it is a high crime, punishable by exile and confiscation of property, for any inhabitant of Sweden or Norway to become a Catholic. Every one who reads the newspapers must be acquainted with the ecclesiastical condition of Poland, under Russian rule, for the tyrannies practiced upon the gallant and faithful Poles are constantly being exposed and condemned. In Turkey, under the sway of the Sultan, Catholicity is tolerated, and not long ago a distinguished prelate declared there was more genuine religious freedom under Mahomedan government than under the laws of any of the so-called Catholic powers.

In England, although many of the penal laws have been swept away, still a number of the disabilities remain unrepealed, and religion yet excludes a man from State offices of certain grades. This is in accordance in law, but the dreadfully intolerant spirit of the people renders it operative in many tradesmen and artizans. He used all that ability wrote. Practically, a Catholic is excluded from every position of trust, and treated as though he existed on mere sufferance. In Ireland, where the Church is the deadly enemy of the people are Catholics, a most abnormal state of things appears. To save appearances, or to reward recreancy to the national cause, the government appoints Catholics to a few subordinate positions in the civil service, but preference is always shown to Protestants. Some time ago, the majority of the judges were Catholics, and English liberality was praised all over the world; but that happened merely because, in consequence of the Repeal agitation, the Independent Opposition movement and the Fenian excitement, the Government had on hands an unusual number of quasi-Catholic lawyers, who had earned promotion by betraying the trust of the people. But all the fat offices were held by Protestants, and the overwhelming majority of the magistrates, grand jurors and all those who really rule the country, belonged, and yet belong, to some of the thousand "reformed" faiths.

It would only be waste of time to talk about the South American States; suffice it to say that in none of them is the Church free from civil interference; and, of course, there is nothing to be said about those countries, such as India, China, etc., where idolatry prevails. We now come to the United States. Here, indeed, the Church is free—that is, free as far as the absence of any penal or restrictive laws from the statute book can make it so. Yet, in the tone of the press, in the opinions guiding society, there is a vast amount of active anti-Catholicism. What chance, we ask, would a Catholic have of being elected President, even if he were the ablest, wisest and best statesman in the Union? Hundreds of thousands would vote against him and in favor of the veriest rogue and carpet-bagger that ever cursed a nation rather than see a "papist" at the head of this Republic! Every day we hear the spread of Catholicity ridiculed as if it were a pest or a plague, and fanatics wear themselves out in trying to check its growth.

We have positive information that even now in this very State and in this very city efforts are being made to start a secret society, having for its object the extension of Catholics from office and from social and political influence. Agents have gone round to persons who were connected with the old Know-Nothing movement, and to others whose opinions were supposed to be strongly anti-Catholic, asking them to join such an organization. In some cases that have come to our knowledge, these apostles of discord have been met with a most curt and peremptory refusal, but in the greater number we have no doubt whatever they succeeded. Now, all these evil-minded men can do is to disturb the harmony of our social relations and set citizen against citizen in most unchristian warfare. They cannot prevent any man from becoming a Catholic who is so disposed; they cannot prevent any Catholic from voting just as it suits their own views; they cannot pass a single enactment upon the statutes; in short, they can do nothing but the devil's work of creating bad fellowship among different classes of the community.

They imagine they do their mischief in secret, and that while plotting against the peace of Catholics, they can carry a fair face and pretend to be the best of neighbors. In this they tell their own souls a lie, and grossly deceiving themselves; they can play no such treacherous game, for they will be exposed when the right time comes, and then it will be found out whether the two classes—Catholic and Protestant—can see who they are and deal with them in the proper kind of way. There is no country on the face of the globe where Catholics unfoist or annoy any persons on account of their religious principles; on the contrary, they are everywhere displaying the most untroubled liberality—and they receive a suitable return or not!

THE MALLOW ELECTION.

An election forcibly illustrating the strength of the national sentiment has just taken place in the county of Cork, Ireland. The affiliate to the county of Mallow, the result of which we find reported in the Dublin Irishman, of June 8th. Candidates for the honor of representing that ancient borough in Parliament were plentiful, six or seven being in the field at once; but finally the struggle was narrowed down to a fight between Mr. John George McCarthy and Mr. Felix M. Munster. Both contesting gentlemen were known as firm Home Rule, Religious Education, Vote by Ballot, Political Amnesty and Municipal Reform, so that there was not much room for choice between them in these respects. Mr. McCarthy was an Irishman, and was specially a Catholic, and with all his opinions, being a near relative of the parish priest, Father John McCarthy, a man of unbounded popularity among the citizens. Moreover he was an outstanding the head of the Catholic Young Men's Society in Cork, and the author of a clever pamphlet on Irish Self-Government. Mr. Munster was an Englishman, son of a wealthy Catholic gentleman, and had no relations whatever with the town he sought to represent. Thus it will be seen that all the advantages were on the side of Mr. McCarthy, and that, according to the usual practice in such matters, he ought have beaten his opponent without much difficulty. Nevertheless he was defeated, after an exceedingly sharp contest, by a majority of eight or thereabouts!

The reason which induced the Mallow voters to prefer an Englishman to a fellow-countrymen, both professing the same political principles, were of the nature we are about to describe: Mr. John George McCarthy, in his capacity of President of the Young Men's Society, had acquired considerable influence among the young tradesmen and artizans. He used all that ability wrote. Practically, a Catholic is excluded from every position of trust, and treated as though he existed on mere sufferance. In Ireland, where the Church is the deadly enemy of the people are Catholics, a most abnormal state of things appears. To save appearances, or to reward recreancy to the national cause, the government appoints Catholics to a few subordinate positions in the civil service, but preference is always shown to Protestants. Some time ago, the majority of the judges were Catholics, and English liberality was praised all over the world; but that happened merely because, in consequence of the Repeal agitation, the Independent Opposition movement and the Fenian excitement, the Government had on hands an unusual number of quasi-Catholic lawyers, who had earned promotion by betraying the trust of the people. But all the fat offices were held by Protestants, and the overwhelming majority of the magistrates, grand jurors and all those who really rule the country, belonged, and yet belong, to some of the thousand "reformed" faiths.

It would only be waste of time to talk about the South American States; suffice it to say that in none of them is the Church free from civil interference; and, of course, there is nothing to be said about those countries, such as India, China, etc., where idolatry prevails. We now come to the United States. Here, indeed, the Church is free—that is, free as far as the absence of any penal or restrictive laws from the statute book can make it so. Yet, in the tone of the press, in the opinions guiding society, there is a vast amount of active anti-Catholicism. What chance, we ask, would a Catholic have of being elected President, even if he were the ablest, wisest and best statesman in the Union? Hundreds of thousands would vote against him

IN MEMORIAM.

It is our sad and painful duty to announce the death of Patrick Hussey, one of our subjoinees, to which may be superadded that he was a practical Catholic.

Hussey was a native of county Kilmoon, Ireland; his earlier years were spent under the parental roof, imbibing the principles of sound morality and true religion which so distinguished his amiable parents, and to which he ever remained inviolably attached throughout the varied vicissitudes of his chequered career.

Hussey was also a practical Catholic, as he could not be saved without it. No man can say he is the son of God unless the compass of mercy be upon him. No man can have love of God unless he keeps the golden gates of that heaven to himself with the key of mercy. It will be the crucial test whereby you shall be found deserving of eternal glory that the counterpign of mercy is on your forehead and the works of charity are to your path.

THE GREAT MANNER OF CHARITY TO BE FOUND IN OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST.

What are the attributes of His charity? I answer principally four. First of all, the charity in Christ was a constant and abiding charity; secondly, it was compassionate and tender—a most loving charity; thirdly, it was active and efficacious—a working charity; fourthly, it was universal, embracing all and including in its wide sympathy bond—a catholic charity. Consequently, in Christ both the young and the old repose their confidence, and the married the calm repose of their domestic circle. Blessed with a large family, encouraged the other in the pious virtues which render the Church home an earthly paradise—a prelude Heaven. Mr. Hussey was of a religious disposition, charitable almost to a fault. Duty-ridden in the fulfilment of his obligations, he was a stranger to the feasts of the fellow and orphan, the sad. His sympathies made themselves at Asylums, and other charitable and institutions were the recipients of his generous contributions. Amidst all his perplexities and cares necessarily with large families, Hussey was always found time to awake daily at Mass frequently to receive Holy Communion. Duty-ridden in the fulfilment of his family, devoutly recite his morning and evening prayers in the midst of his and his little ones. Oh! that our Catholic parents would, in this, imitate his noble example, sanctified love, and mestic concord would be the result of that Divine love and compassion. There Magdalen rushed to His feet as He sat at table. They came to Him at the time that He was supping with Lazarus, just as Nicodemus came "at the midnight hour." He was always open to the poor. St. Mark says they did not give Him time even to eat bread—to eat His meals. And He left everything behind to console the He ever turn away from them and say there is no rest for Me or Thy poor for your sake Me?" Did he ever show the slightest uncertainty or uncertainty in His mercy? By no matter who came to Him, or at what time or place, or under what circumstances, He was always equal to Himself. That charity, that mercy which made Him seem thus was the business of His life, until the people's Peddler of Judea was laid in the Sepulchre of Joseph of Arimathea. Ought to the work of mercy the infinite mercy of God.

Not only, however, was

THE CHARITY OF CHRIST CONSTANT,

But it was also a most tender and compassionate form of love. Purely beloved Lord, what was it? It was a glimpse into the inner heart of our Lord. Here it is that we see the infinite compassion and tenderness of His love. In His most invariably surrounds such act of His mercy with every circumstance of tenderness and love. For example, we find Him lifting up the helpless and the lame; again, He is cleansing the leper or raising the dead; at another time confounding the pride of the Pharisees, by the example of His humanity; at another time—the greatest work of all—when He received the sinner with all her sins upon her, and in these words: "Thy sins are forgiven." He sent her forth pure as an angel before the Throne of God.

THESE ARE THE FOUR PRINCIPAL ATTRIBUTES

Of that charity which existed in the heart of Jesus Christ. When Christ our Lord established His Church, He expressly declares to us that He founded her in all charity, in all love, in all compassion and truth. He expressly declares to us that whatever He was His Church was to be. It has been written of that Church because of My beauty that was upon thee;" and the Church, in return, is ever ready to follow this when He bid us to Discipline: "All Heaven and earth is given to Me; and now I say to you, Go ye therefore and do I send you; as I am the true light that enlighteneth all that come into the world, so are ye sent to spread that light; and the gates of hell shall never prevail against you." The Church, in the fulfilment of that, having power to forgive sins, so I say to you whatsoever you shall forgive shall be forgiven them!"

(Concluded next week.)

OUR COLLEGES.

ACADEMY OF NOTRE DAME, SAN JOSE.

The twenty-first annual commencement of this flourishing institution took place last Tuesday in the large hall of the Academy. In compliance with a general order issued some years ago from the parent house in Belgium, the annual exhibitions of the colleges of the Order of Notre Dame throughout the world are now conducted privately. This custom has many reasons to recommend it, and we are pleased to learn that it has been followed in all the institutions of other female academies. At Notre Dame, on Tuesday, there were about eighty visitors present, clergymen and special friends of the Academy, besides the members of the community, while the pupils themselves numbered one hundred and fifty. The students displayed great proficiency in their various studies.

The night of the 17th inst. will be, for some time, remembered in Santa Barbara. Lobero's Theatre, though large and commodious, was crowded to excess, as the people expected to witness some grand performances. They were not disappointed. The students, dressed in different costumes, civic and military, went through the entire programme in a manner which reflected the highest credit not only upon themselves, but upon the institution to which they belonged; they spoke and acted their dialogues and dramas with a proficiency that would do credit to professionals. The following were the dialogues and dramas: "The Village Lawyer" (a dialogue), "Ilard to Suit All" (a dialogue), "Pizarro" (a drama), "Los dos Rivales" (a dialogue—original), and "Maurice, the Wood-cutter" (a drama). It was the grandest display of juvenile talent that was ever exhibited in Santa Barbara. Many of the performers retired from the stage loaded with bouquets for the audience was well supplied with "Flora's lovely daughters." The parents of the pupils who received these tokens of appreciation would be delighted if they were present on the occasion; it showed that talent is highly appreciated in Santa Barbara. The music was highly applauded, and the entire course of exercises, with the distribution of premiums, ended the entertainment, giving the utmost satisfaction to all present, after having continued more than four hours. The exhibition of the Franciscan College for 1872 has left a pleasing impression upon the minds of the people that will not be easily effaced. Immediately after the exhibition had been concluded, the pupils took their departure for their respective homes, to spend the vacation till the first Monday in August, on the day on which the College will reopen.

It is with pleasure I can state that the building is undergoing many repairs and alterations, to render it better adapted for the purpose to which it is devoted. The new Superior of the Community, the Very Rev. Father Mono, is a man of energy and progress, and everything will flourish under him. Besides the natural advantages of the place, there is a staff of efficient, experienced and trained teachers, each of whom is thoroughly competent for the department to which he is assigned. Every circumstance taken into consideration speaks well for the future of the College, so that parents who are anxious to have their sons well trained and educated, at the lowest terms, should send them to the Franciscan Friary of Santa Barbara. The small sum of $150 for board and tuition, is certainly within the reach of many parents; and should the neglect to avail themselves of the opportunity, their responsibility before God will be great. It is needless to urge upon Catholics the importance of education; they know it well. The only thing that can be done, is to remind them of their obligations. Great is the account they will have to render to God, if they neglect it. Great, indeed, is the duty of which devolves upon parents and guardians, who are entrusted with the priceless gift of youth. "What things a man shall sow, those also shall he reap."

T. MARTIAS.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL, VALLEJO.

The examination and exhibition of St. Vincent's School, Vallejo, took place on the 13th inst., and was a most successful affair. This institution now affords sound instruction to over three hundred children, most of whom are educated gratuitously by the good Sisters of the Order of Notre Dame. The school-room was specially fitted up for the occasion, and beautiful flowers tastefully grouped hanging every where in festoons and wreaths. The pupils were, of course, attired in their best, and presented a most attractive appearance. The music and literary exercises were really first-rate, showing that both pupils and teachers had their hearts and souls in their work. All present left highly pleased, and must have gone away impressed with the conviction that no city in America need seek for more careful and conscientious instructors of youth than the Sisters of St. Dominic.

Forsyte.

His Grace Archbishop MacHale laid the foundation stone of a convent and new chapel at Castlebar on May 1st.

On Monday, 20th May, S. M. de Pazzis Joseph Sinnott made the sol.mn vows of religion in the chapel of the Sisters of Mercy in this town, the Right Rev. Dr. Furlong presiding, and Very Rev. P. C. O. Shiels acted as Master of the Ceremonies. —Wexford People.

Lord Robert Montagu.—This nobleman, who once was a member of the Catholic Church has virtually deprived him of his seat for Huntingdon, a new election having reserve as the Conservative Minister who pressed upon Mr. Disraeli five years ago a measure for a project for a local Irish legislature.—Nation.

On Sunday, May 19th, the Most Rev. Dr. Kelly had the investiture-scarves of the new church of St. Patrick, Cross-roads, Killeyleagh, conferred upon the Very Rev. Edward Loughrey, C. C., Banagher, formerly of Strabane, was the preacher on the occasion, and a large number of people assembled to hear the sermon of this gifted and eloquent divine.

On the 24th, the beautiful ceremony of Reception took place in the Convent of the Presentation, George's Hill. The name of the young lady who received the white veil is Miss Ellen Dundon (in religion Sister Mary Evangelista Joseph), second daughter of Edward Dundon, Esq., Rathmines. There was a large audience of clergy and laity, including the Very Rev. Monsignor Forde, who officiated.

On the 26th, two young ladies were received into the Ursuline Convent of Cashel by his Grace the Most Rev. Dr. Leahy, Archbishop of Cashel. The names of the ladies are Miss M'Cready, daughter of E. M'Cready, Esq., Annerley square, Dublin, called in religion Sister M. Cecelia, and Miss Ryan, daughter of T. Ryan, Esq., Sandyville Cahercouch, county Limerick, called in religion Sister Mary Columba. The sermon was preached by his Grace the Archbishop.

The Presentation Convent at Drogheda was, on the 28th, the scene of the highly impressive ceremonies connected with the profession of one young lady and the reception of another into that valuable order. The Most Rev. Dr. M'Veigan officiated, and received the vows of the postulants. The young lady who was received into the order was Miss Kavanagh, daughter of Professor Kavanagh, of the Catholic University; and the young lady who made the profession was Miss Walsh, also of Dublin. —Dundalk Democrat.

Elevated.—Mr. Thomas A. Scott, President of the Pennsylvania Central Railroad, is also President of twenty-six other railroads. He controls 7,000 miles of railroad, and receive to his salary account $170,000 per annum. He began as a brakeman.

Reporter—What, as an experienced Detective, is your opinion of her?

The Detective—I would not like to express an opinion except as to her professions. I think she is an promigated impostor Other little things corroborate the facts which I have told you. — Evening Post, June 25.

Another "Escaped Nun."

St. Louis, June 7, 1872.

Editor Freeman's Journal:—Edith O'Gorman has visited us, proposed several lectures, all of which proved failures, and departed. A gentleman who passed her on the street and did not know her, had his attention arrested by the extreme sadness of her expression. Her unconscious did not escape from sunken eyes. Such is the dread picture from behind the mask of hypocrisy. Another "Escaped Nun" has come and gone, and is now, we trust, safe from the Trappists of France.

I know something of her history. About 1859 she was sent to the Convent of the Good Shepherd of this city, to become a Magdalen, and began with her usual thousand dollars, together with diamonds, the accumulations, if her own statements can be taken, of her shame in late Confederacy. In her first furor she would surrender all to Him, their very sight reminding her of scenes she wishes to forget. After a few months she changed her mind as to becoming a Magdalen, and left, and they were all repaid to her, where the diamonds and beads, the thousands have gone I know not. The Convent took her receipts and she went her way to France to enter a Trappist Convent. Her stay there was short. It was with this fact in mind that a reporter of the Post, meeting Detective Thos. Sheridan on the street, asked him what he had that week in charge.

The Detective—Nothing that you would publish.

Reporter—How do you know we wouldn't publish it? Tell me of it and see.

The Detective—Well, last Thursday morning I got up at about about 5 o'clock, and went into my office, in Dunbar's building down on California street. I stepped into Lady's saloon on my way, and while there chatting with the barkeeper and porter and one other man,

A WOMAN ENTERED THE SALOON, and requested to have her bottle filled with brandy. She looked as if she was suffering from a severe drink, and almost on the verge of delirium tremens. She received her bottle filled up towards the Russ House. Her appearance drew some excited comment, and I inquired who she was. No one knew, except the gentleman present, and he said she was Miss O'Gorman, "the escaped nun," who lectured the evening previous.

Reporter—Have you any other reason for believing her to be Miss O'Gorman?

The Detective—Yes, or I would not have told you what I have. When I notice persons once I know them ever afterwards; and I went to hear that lecture that evening, paying my fifty cents to pass the doorkeeper, just to see if

IT WAS SHE WHO GOT THE BRANDY,

And I did found it was.

Reporter—That is a singular statement, although it accords with reports regarding her drunkenness, which I have heard from the East. But what seems most strange to me is that there are two men in the Russ House where she stops, why she did not get her liquor there.

The Detective—That struck me as singular, and I went up to find out what time they opened in the morning, and found that they were never open until after six o'clock; so that she could not have got her bottle filled at half past five, which was about the time she went into Lady's.

All the grain crops in the Santa Clara, Gilroy, San Juan, Salinas, and in the narrow coast mountain valleys will produce heavily.

BORN.

CARROLL.—At Portland, Oregon, June 16, to the wife of William Carroll, a son.

MARRIED.

O'CONNOR—LYONS—In this city, June 24, at St. Patrick's Church, by Rev. Father Power, Joseph O'Connor to Miss Maggie F. Lyons.

HEALY—GUILFOYLE—In Jacksonville, June 1, by Rev. Father Blanchet, Jeremiah Noonan to Dora Guilfoyle, all of Jacksonville.

BOURG—DUMONTETTI—In this city, June 20, by Rev. Father Valentini, James Bourg to Miss Mary Dumontetti.

DIED.

MURPHY—In this city, June 21, James Murphy, a native of county Cork, Ireland, aged 58 years.

CASHMAN—In this city, June 21, John Cashman, a native of Ireland, aged 56 years.

CARRIGAN—In this city, June 21, John Carrigan, a native of Ireland, aged 56 years.

O'KEEFE—In this city, June 21, David Patrick, son of Mary and Maurice O'Keefe, aged 2 years, 7 months and 9 days.

CROWLEY—In this city, June 21, Eliza, daughter of Lawrence and Kate Crowley, a native of Millstreet, county Cork, Ireland.

PHELAN—In this city, June 21, Ann, daughter of Patrick and Mary Phelan, aged 1 year 7 months.

CONWAY—In this city, June 21, Ellen Cronin, infant daughter of Timothy Conway, a native of Kinsale, county Cork, Ireland, aged 10 months.

CASHMAN—In this city, June 21, Bernard Lee, a native of Ireland, aged 56 years.

AHERN—In this city, June 24, Jeremiah Ahern, a native of Ireland, aged 56 years.

DOYLE—In Sacramento, June 19, Thos. Doyle, aged 40 years.

MCCARTHY—In Stockton, June 20, Mary Alice, daughter of Dennis and Maria McCarthy, aged 2 years and 6 months.

CLEARY—In this city, June 21, Mrs. Mary Cleary, aged 36 years and 10 months, mother of Thomas J., Mary A., Annie and Jane McCleary, of this city.

QUINN—In Santa Cruz, June 16, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Quinn, aged 1 day.

MCMAHON—In this city, suddenly, June 9, Lucy A., daughter of W. J. and Mary McMahon, aged 1 year 10 months and 9 days.

DUMOULIN—In this city, June 24, Julia, only daughter of Mrs. Rose O'Leary, a native of Cork, Ireland, aged 18 years and 6 months.

DOWLING—In Washington, D. C., June 13, Captain Thomas Dowling, a native of Ireland, aged 70 years.

CRONIN—In Santa Cruz, June 16, Daniel Cronin, aged 26 years, a native of Cork, Ireland.

The deceased was undertakers from this title by the injury occasioned from the fall from a house. He was from the moment of the accident helpless in the possession of his mind and memory, and was fully aware of his approaching end. He died strong in the assurance of his faith and the consolations of religion. Father Pallard attended him every day occasionally visit this part of the diocese, was present at the last moments of the unfortunate accident, and gave surrounding care and attention to the deceased. The funeral took place from the residence of the deceased's brother-in-law, the Messrs. Logan, and from the Church of the Holy Cross, and was largely attended by the most prominent citizens of Eastern Nevada.

Subscriptions Received.

Subscriptions received this week:

| | |
|---|---|
| Bonner—Mrs. James Downey | $1 00 |
| Bonner—Mrs. Catherine Baldwin | 2 00 |
| Oroville—Mrs. Mary Ann Hall | 2 00 |
| Orange Valley—James S. Byrne | 2 00 |
| " —Mrs. Mary Byrne | 2 00 |
| Placerville—Rev. Father Nagle | 2 00 |
| Placerville—Mrs. Mary Fallon | 2 00 |
| Butter Creek—Michael Wade | 2 00 |
| Butter Creek—Mrs. Mary Wade | 2 00 |
| Jamestown—Henry Cotter | 2 00 |
| Big Oak Flat—J. D. Murphy | 2 00 |

New Advertisements.

PETER DEMPSEY,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
No. 6 Montgomery Block.

CURE FOR LIGHTNING RODS.
SWEEPS THEM OFF,
AND CLEARS the HOUSE SPEEDILY,
TRY IT.
L. L. BUTCHER & SON, Proprietors,
Jobbers in Hardware, 109 Front street.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA.—In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco. Northwest corner of Montgomery and Jackson streets. In the matter of the estate of JOHN CUNNINGHAM, deceased. Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, the Executor named in the last will and testament of JOHN CUNNINGHAM, deceased, has filed in said Court his petition praying for the probate of said will and for letters testamentary thereon, which will be heard by said Court, in the Courtroom of the said Court, in the City and County of San Francisco, on Monday, the 8th day of July, A. D. 1872, at 10 o'clock A. M. of said day. Dated San Francisco, June 25, 1872. JAMES C. FLOOD, Executor of the last will and testament of JOHN CUNNINGHAM, deceased.

JAMES C. PENNIE, [L.S.]
Attorney for the Executor of the last will and testament of the said deceased.

GEORGE L. WEDEKIND,
Notary Public.
Pierce, Detweiler, Attorney for Plaintiff. Jan. 20

Bacon & Company
Formerly Towne & Bacon,
Have the largest office
5 Do the best work 5
More promptly
6 Than 6
Any other
Printing firm.
You can prove it
By giving them a Job
At the well known Office,
536 Clay Street.

AD MULTOS ANNOS.

The eightieth birthday of Pius IX. has passed since our last issue, and the organ of the League of St. Sebastian cannot do better than mark its recurrence—not by barren wishes and empty words, but by a renewal of its vows of allegiance to the throne and person of the venerable and Holy Pontiff, whose wonderful and stormy Pontificate has well-nigh reached twenty-six years of mingled joy and sorrow, such as no other Pope has lived to know.

The League of St. Sebastian represents the "party of action" of the Catholic body in these various lands. English, Irish and Canadian soldiers of Montana and Porta Pia were its founders; and whoever may falter or fail in the present evil days, their loyalty to the Holy See is and must ever be "mens reperta," as it has been proved "mens pura." The scoffs of the infidel press, the dentice and tremors of the weak and timid Catholics, are not for them; and their substance as a body is a standing act of faith in the resurrection of the temporal power.

It is, then, with no mere complimentary phrases, no ordinary congratulations, they approach the Pontifical throne on this anniversary, but with a firm and earnest resolve to let no worldly or personal considerations stand between them and any service they can render to the cause of Pius IX., each according to the talents God has given him. They are the vanguard of the Catholic youth of this country, and by the sheer force of their enrollment are a record of the cause in a special and unreserved manner.

The long and wonderful reign of the Holy Father has now reached within a year (in the month of May) of the limit fixed by the venerable servant of God, Anna Maria Taigi. In the process of her beatification it is distinctly stated that she and Pius IX., whose elevation she had long before announced, would reign twenty-seven years and a little more, and that he would see at least the opening days of that great and wonderful decade of the Church, foretold by countless saints and favored children of the Church. The words of this holy woman has been so completely verified hitherto that it would be rash to reject the unfulfilled portion of them, especially when they are so full of encouragement and consolation to all lovers of the Holy See; the more so as the limit a most ancient tradition assigns to all the Popes since St. Peter has already, by the Divine permission, been happily passed. The existence, seems now, more than ever, to have entered into the supernatural order of things; and his mission has never been so great, his royalty so venerable, as now, crowned as it is with the snows of eighty winters, filled, as with the winter heaven of Bethlehem, with virgory to God, and good will to men.

Human speculations on the future of the Papacy fail to grapple with the giant realities of the time; the craft of the statesman, the hate of the enemy of Christ, the analysis of the Philosopher, all fall short of comprehending the attitude of the Holy Father in his captivity. It is only the Christian who sees it, and who can see it because he and his brethren are the living witnesses and inner sources of inspiration his unwavering faith in the glorious and triumphant future for the Holy See, whether it be in the person of the actual Pope or his successor. In "Ultimus Romanorum" is probably for St. Malachy, who, in concert, with "a holy king of France, a pious aristocracy, a holy clergy, and a holy people," announced as belonging to the prophecy of Pirus, will restore the Latin patriarchate of Rome, and reconstruct Christendom.

Whoso lending undue faith to these fantasticlaims other pious traditions, handed down from remote ages, we cannot deny that, as the Master tells us, no great event has befallen the Church, but it has been heralded by holy persons and preceded by supernatural signs. Those signs are not wanting at the present moment in Belgium, Germany, and France, a land baked in the sun and in a great social or religious crisis, far more terrible in its circumstances than those of the first French revolution, followed by a sudden and almost miraculous change, and by a triumph of the Church so wonderful that it will surprise all persons, even, and realize the reign of Christ on earth, the policy of every state being based on His laws.

We cannot recall the anniversary of the 13th of May without expressing our faith in at least the general tenor of these pious prognostics. We know that the dome of heretings, which has never failed in a most visible manner to strike the principal foes of religion, has never been heard of in the terrible a degree since the sack of Rome by the Constable of Bourbon, as by those who are the pulse of the Palace of the Vicar of Christ and insult his glorious old age. We know that the prayer of the Church for Peter in prison broke his chains, and brought down an angel to liberate him, and we refuse to abandon our confidence in the power of God. We know what befell Heliodorus and Sennacherib when their pride and impiety drew the archangel who slew the Assyrian hosts only unto the signal to do so much in defense of God's cause. We know how struck and the measure of iniquity is full. The watch is long and weary and trying to the faithful nation to those who love the Church, and nowhere can it incline so painful a tension as in a Protestant country. A Catholic can scarcely be one in the full sense of the term, applied to the civilized world at the moment and religious attitude required by this principle, without incurring absolution and the impression of being a traitor to them. To the vulgar world, truth is a mere opinion, a name, honor a shadow. The armed intrusion of treaties, the negation of international right, the basest perfidy under the mask of diplomacy, has been, and is still accepted in its results, as it was in its execution, with general sympathy and approbation; and an honest man, were he a pagan, must find himself out of joint with the blase swaying society in the present day.

When we enter the supernatural order, the difference is naturally still more accentuated, so that a Catholic who has the courage to speak in language befitting a Christian must be considered a religious bigot, a down as something little removed from a heretic. If he go a step further and declare that the interests of God's Church and Christian society may require him to leave home and country and risk his life in a Church's quarrel, he is necessarily set down as one; and this is a hard lot to many, when it comes moreover from persons professing to be Catholics, but whose moral fault, of not heing what they should be, is by a constant study of hostile journalism, and by persistently taking the popular and un-Catholic side, a total measure of right and wrong.

Neither risk nor fatigue will serve Pius IX. at the actual moment; but we can, at least, firmly resist the influence of Protestant opinion, and in a country where the tone of our mind, resulting from the acceptance of the false doctrine of expediency, or the cowardly doubt we hear often expressed of the ultimate issue of our cause. We can rise to the current of passing events the movements that will favor the restoration of the temporal power, even indirectly, and we can give them our active help and sympathy. We can take count of our resources for future action, and have them in readiness; and, setting aside national distinctions, we can learn to recognize a brotherhood of arms with our fellow Catholics in other countries, and so oppose by means borrowed from the enemy, the miracle solidarity of the revolutionary camp.

Every new circle for the practical purposes of furthering the Pope's cause established in the provinces, will be a religious force in case of need, and a center of devotion to the Holy See. Every line written in its defence, every courageous word spoken at the cost of human respect in Protestant society, is so much effective work done for Pius IX., and which if it does not influence events, will at least very greatly influence the formation of a healthy and vigorous public opinion among Catholic children of Montana and Porta Pia were its founders; and whoever may falter or fail in the present evil days, their loyalty to the Holy See is and must ever be "mens reperta," as it has been proved "mens pura." The scoffs of the infidel press, the dentice and tremors of the weak and timid Catholics, are not for them; and their substance as a body is a standing act of faith in the resurrection of the temporal power.

It is, then, with no mere complimentary phrases, no ordinary congratulations, they approach the Pontifical throne on this anniversary, but with a firm and earnest resolve to let no worldly or personal considerations stand between them and any service they can render to the cause of Pius IX., each according to the talents God has given him. They are the vanguard of the Catholic youth of this country, and by the sheer force of their enrollment are a record of the cause in a special and unreserved manner.

The long and wonderful reign of the Holy Father has now reached within a year (in the month of May) of the limit fixed by the venerable servant of God, Anna Maria Taigi. In the process of her beatification it is distinctly stated that she and Pius IX., whose elevation she had long before announced, would reign twenty-seven years and a little more, and that he would see at least the opening days of that great and wonderful decade of the Church, foretold by countless saints and favored children of the Church. The words of this holy woman has been so completely verified hitherto that it would be rash to reject the unfulfilled portion of them, especially when they are so full of encouragement and consolation to all lovers of the Holy See; the more so as the limit a most ancient tradition assigns to all the Popes since St. Peter has already, by the Divine permission, been happily passed. The existence, seems now, more than ever, to have entered into the supernatural order of things; and his mission has never been so great, his royalty so venerable, as now, crowned as it is with the snows of eighty winters, filled, as with the winter heaven of Bethlehem, with virgory to God, and good will to men.

Human speculations on the future of the Papacy fail to grapple with the giant realities of the time; the craft of the statesman, the hate of the enemy of Christ, the analysis of the Philosopher, all fall short of comprehending the attitude of the Holy Father in his captivity. It is only the Christian who sees it, and who can see it because he and his brethren are the living witnesses and inner sources of inspiration his unwavering faith in the glorious and triumphant future for the Holy See, whether it be in the person of the actual Pope or his successor. In "Ultimus Romanorum" is probably for St. Malachy, who, in concert, with "a holy king of France, a pious aristocracy, a holy clergy, and a holy people," announced as belonging to the prophecy of Pirus, will restore the Latin patriarchate of Rome, and reconstruct Christendom.

Whoso lending undue faith to these fantasticlaims other pious traditions, handed down from remote ages, we cannot deny that, as the Master tells us, no great event has befallen the Church, but it has been heralded by holy persons and preceded by supernatural signs. Those signs are not wanting at the present moment in Belgium, Germany, and France, a land baked in the sun and in a great social or religious crisis, far more terrible in its circumstances than those of the first French revolution, followed by a sudden and almost miraculous change, and by a triumph of the Church so wonderful that it will surprise all persons, even, and realize the reign of Christ on earth, the policy of every state being based on His laws.

We cannot recall the anniversary of the 13th of May without expressing our faith in at least the general tenor of these pious prognostics. We know that the dome of heretings, which has never failed in a most visible manner to strike the principal foes of religion, has never been heard of in the terrible a degree since the sack of Rome by the Constable of Bourbon, as by those who are the pulse of the Palace of the Vicar of Christ and insult his glorious old age. We know that the prayer of the Church for Peter in prison broke his chains, and brought down an angel to liberate him, and we refuse to abandon our confidence in the power of God. We know what befell Heliodorus and Sennacherib when their pride and impiety drew the archangel who slew the Assyrian hosts only unto the signal to do so much in defense of God's cause. We know how struck and the measure of iniquity is full. The watch is long and weary and trying to the faithful nation to those who love the Church, and nowhere can it incline so painful a tension as in a Protestant country. A Catholic can scarcely be one in the full sense of the term, applied to the civilized world at the moment and religious attitude required by this principle, without incurring absolution and the impression of being a traitor to them. To the vulgar world, truth is a mere opinion, a name, honor a shadow. The armed intrusion of treaties, the negation of international right, the basest perfidy under the mask of diplomacy, has been, and is still accepted in its results, as it was in its execution, with general sympathy and approbation; and an honest man, were he a pagan, must find himself out of joint with the blase swaying society in the present day.

When we enter the supernatural order, the difference is naturally still more accentuated, so that a Catholic who has the courage to speak in language befitting a Christian must be considered a religious bigot, a down as something little removed from a heretic. If he go a step further and declare that the interests of God's Church and Christian society may require him to leave home and country and risk his life in a Church's quarrel, he is necessarily set down as one; and this is a hard lot to many, when it comes moreover from persons professing to be Catholics, but whose moral fault, of not being what they should be, is by a constant study of hostile journalism, and by persistently taking the popular and un-Catholic side, a total measure of right and wrong.

Neither risk nor fatigue will serve Pius IX. at the actual moment; but we can, at least, firmly resist the influence of Protestant opinion, and in a country where the tone of our mind, resulting from the acceptance of the false doctrine of expediency, or the cowardly doubt we hear often expressed of the ultimate issue of our cause. We can rise to the current of passing events the movements that will favor the restoration of the temporal power, even indirectly, and we can give them our active help and sympathy. We can take count of our resources for future action, and have

The Archbishop of Westminster on Devotion to Our Lady.

The feast of Our Lady Help of Christians was solemnly observed at St. Mary's Orphanage, London, which is under the care of the Very Rev. D. Todd. The Archbishop preached immediately after Vespers. Having spoken of the feast of Our Lady Help of Christians, which the Church observed on that day, the preacher proceeded to point out the real nature of the devotion paid by Catholics to the Mother of God. Those who objected said that there was no warrant in revelation for the Catholic practice, but the truth was that it sprung from the very essence of the faith. There was one thing certain, and that was that the Catholic Church paid no divine homage to our Lady. Devotion to her, as the Mother of the Creator, continued the Archbishop, is the result of faith. God, from all eternity, foreseen that sin and death would come into the world; but He also saw that a remedy would be restored. The first Adam and the first Eve were both human, but the second Adam and the second Eve were the Creator and a creature — God and His Blessed Mother. By a special grace the Blessed Mother of the Son of God was exempted from sin. To make free from sin was the least grace that could be conferred upon her. Let us remember that it was of her substance that God took our humanity, when He was at the same time perfectly God and perfectly man. The Apostles preached the Son of God born of a woman. Consider how the Lord foretold respecting the perfect Kingdom, that whenever the gospel should be preached she should be made known. The words Mother of God gave us a more title of honor than Queen, and the definition of a doctrine. If our Lord was not the Mother of God there must have been two separate persons, and the blood of her Son would not have suffered for the salvation of mankind. God placed her in the highest place that a creature could occupy. We ought to honor her as the result of the grace which He communicated to her. Nothing that has either stained, or ever profaned will receive back as a present. She will be born again certainly, whenever Our Emmanuel comes to judge the world; he compelled to the brief of restitution. Such is what we always await thanks for no more; and when the day shall come when sun in purchase presents for the Holidays, will be found. Our Blessed Lady will then be manifested in her glory. Preparations are being made for the Fall; also at San Jose over six competitors. It is understood that the Santa Clara Fair will not interfere with any other fair over the state. Premiums are given to those who get up clubs.

Lawful Dissent in the Church. — Read your Holy Father (see every subscription) by mail. address

REV. WILLIAM BYRNE, Boston, Mass.

New and Important Publications.

THE LIFE, PROPHECIES & REVELATIONS

—OF THE—

VENERABLE MARY ANNE TAIGI.

Her recently supposed connection with the prophecy of the 5 days' Darkness, will make the life of this venerable woman of absorbing book at this time.

VERONICA;

OR,

Devotions to the Holy Face of our Lord.

With prayers and indulgences.

THE SECRET, MYSTERIES AND HYMN BOOK, with 32 beautiful illustrations of the Mass; the most perfect book for offering yet published.

CATHOLIC WORKS and articles of every description, for sale at the lowest prices, by the trade or single copy.

EUGENE CUMMISKEY, Publisher,

1017 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

jan1

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL,

CORNER FIRST AND BRYANT STS.

SAN FRANCISCO.

THIS INSTITUTION IS UNDER THE MANagement of the Sisters of Mercy.

JAMES MURPHY, M. D. ..... Visiting Physician.
L. C. LANE, M. D. ..... Visiting Surgeon.
F. A. A. BELINGE, M. D. ..... Resident Physician.

TERMS:

Payable monthly in advance for board, medicine, attendance, etc.:

In the wards ..... $10 per week.
In private rooms ..... 15 "
Lying-in wards ..... 15 "
Undenominational cases, $16 extra.
Medical and surgical cases make a patient leave before the expiration of the month.
Prescribed Medicines are all supplied in pay in advance. de17

WINNER'S NEW SCHOOLS

FOR THE

PIANOFORTE, CABINET ORGAN, GUITAR,

Clarinet, Violin, Flute, Flageolet, comding but 75 cents each, are just published, and for sale at the music store of

WINNER & CO.,

Corner Chestnut and Third streets, Philadelphia.

Charming Song, "THE HATES AJAR. Thomas. 60c.

The above books and piece sent, post-paid, on receipt of price.

GEYER, DITSON & CO., Boston.
C. H. DITSON & CO., New York.

QUITE AN ATTRACTION

AT

MRS. RIORDAN'S

MILLENARY EMPORIUM,

193 Kearny Street.

Gr One door from the corner of Sutter street. 'GB

The latest assortment of EUROPEAN and NEW YORK STYLES—selling at the lowest prices. Please call and examine for yourselves. mh30

To My Friends and the Public.

BEING ABOUT TO RETIRE FROM BUSINESS I offer my entire stock of Diamonds, Watches, Clocks and Jewelry, gold and silver Plated Ware, at prices which will surprise all those who wish to purchase presents for the Holidays, will be found on fire. My store and his premises will be refused.

Please call all the Stock, Pictures and good will of the store, or will retain the goods at private sale. Store to be rented. Apply on the premises to

D. A. O'CONNELL,
135 Third street, near Howard.

EBERHART & LACHMAN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CALIFORNIA SPARKLING WINES.

SWEET AND DRY CHAMPAGNES, Sparkling Moselle and Claret Wines, Angelica, Muscatel, Madeira, Port, Sherry, Claret, Mosel, Virginal, Rose, Sweet and Dry Catawba, Sic, Hock, Burgundy, Brandies, 1 to 5 years old. All our Wines and Brandies are made exclusively from Mountain grapes. Principal depot, corner of First and Market streets, San Francisco.

A YOUNG SQUARER.—A VICTIM OF EARLY indiscretion, causing nervous debility, premature decay, &c., having tried in vain every advertised remedy has discovered a simple means of self-cure, which he will send free to his fellow-sufferers. J. H. REEVES, 78 Nassau street, New York. mh15-ly

MISCELLANEOUS.

LYNCH & COMIEN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

Overstrung, Grand, Square & Upright

PIANOS.

WAREROOMS,

Nos. 204, 206, 208, 210 and 212 Broadway NEW YORK.

THESE PIANOS ARE UNSURPASSED FOR their Elastic Touch, Singing quality, full, round and powerful Tone, great Durability, and, in short, everything that renders a PIANO PERFECT.

Description and Prices.

(The Pianos will be delivered in San Francisco at the above prices.

No. 1—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, rosewood case, carved legs and lyre ..... $700
No. 2—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, rosewood case, carved legs and lyre ..... 650
No. 3—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, serpentine moulding, carved legs and lyre ..... 600
No. 4—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, serpentine moulding, beveled top, carved legs and lyre ..... 550
No. 5—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, serpentine moulding, beveled top, carved legs and lyre ..... 500
No. 6—7 Octaves. Large round corners, finished back like French Grand, carved legs and lyre, three mouldings, beveled top ..... 450
No. 7—7¼ Octaves. Grand ..... 400

These Instruments are all in Rosewood Cases, beautifully polished.

UPRIGHT PIANOS.

Seven Octaves. Rosewood case ..... $400
Very fine. Rosewood case ..... 350

PARLOR ORGANS AND MELODEANS, of all sizes and styles, in handsome cases.

TESTIMONIALS.

Below will be found a few of many letters sent us complimentary of these Pianos:

[From Mrs. General W. T. Sherman.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 21, 1870.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: I have very much pleased with the Piano you made for me. It is much admired by persons who have heard it, for its fine quality of tone and heart it, for its fine tone, delicacy of touch, and elegant finish. I have always considered your Pianos among the best, and since it has been in our parlor, and all pronounce it a fine instrument. We certainly are charmed with it. I shall most certainly recommend it to my friends who may want to purchase. I am very truly yours, &c., ELLEN R. E. SHERMAN.

The original of the above letter can be seen at this office.—Ed. MONITOR.

[From the World-renowned Artist, Camilla Urso.]

NEW YORK, May 27, 1870.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: After having your Pianos a few days in my house, I congratulate you on the achievement you have made in the construction of your Pianos, and it gives me much pleasure to recommend them to the public. Yours truly, CAMILLA URSO.

[From Rev. J. Shea, S. J., President of St. John's College, Fordham.]

FORDHAM, N. Y., June 4, 1870.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: It gives me pleasure to state that the Pianos which we have purchased from you have given entire satisfaction to our Professors and Pupils in Music. Yours very truly,

J. SHEA, S. J., President.

[From the Sisters of Charity, Academy of Holy Cross, Forty second street, New York.]

Having Lynch & Comien's Piano in use for a long time, it gives us pleasure in recommending them as superior instruments for the parlor and concert hall.

[From Mrs. James Sadlier, 29 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.]

Mrs. James Sadlier has great pleasure in certifying to the superior excellence and durability of the Pianos manufactured by Messrs. Lynch & Comien, of this city. She has had one of them in use in her family for the last three years, and has found it a perfect instrument—mellow, rich, and sweet in tone.

[Extract of a Letter from the Superior of Sisters of Charity, Academy of Mount St. Vincent on the Hudson, Westchester County, New York.]

I have much pleasure in stating that the Instrument has been universal satisfaction to the Sisters and pupils of the Academy. Its brilliant tone and elasticity added much value to its true, which is rarely found in Pianos of the present day. Its touch is perfect and delightful. The tone improved daily up to the present time, and is now, after two years' use, even more than it—left school. Whilst the Piano remained in the parlor, it was an object of curiosity to all visitors. I am, sirs, sincerely yours in Christ,

SISTER ST. JOSEPH.

The Piano that I bought for my daughter of Lynch & Comien's manufacture, has given perfect satisfaction in tone, and decidedly cheaper than any of our make. Our Sisters can testify to its merits.

CHAS. DONKERY, San Francisco.

23. Circulars and full particulars can be obtained at The Monitor Office. 1713

The Celebrated Trotting Stallion GLADIATOR,

BY GEO. M. PATCHEN, JR.,

Will serve a limited number of mares at his ranch, CLIFFORD'S stable, Napa City, Napa county, at the following rates: To insure, $100; to insure and stand, $75; to stand, $50. Season commencing April 1st, 1872, ending August 1st, 1872.

Terms for the Season, $30, in U. S. Gold coin.

DESCRIPTION.

GLADIATOR is a light bay horse with black points, star and snip, and white hind feet; stands 15 hands 3 inches in height on the fore, stands sixteen hands high, and weighs 1,100 pounds; is finely formed, with a clean, flat leg, good bone and muscle, and excellent disposition. He is a horse of great beauty, and his colts are remarkable as the greatest it has ever effected.

PEDIGREE.

GLADIATOR was sired by a horse old last May; was sired by the celebrated Trotting Stallion, Geo. M. Patchen, Jr., by Geo. M. Patchen, Sr., by Commodore Wells Ball, Brooklyn to California by James Whitcomb, Lyons, Wayne county, New York; he by Commodore Stallion, Green Mountain, of Vermont.

The dam of Gladiator, Jr., was sired by the celebrated Trotting Stallion, George M. Patchen, Dam by Pop Bellfounder, sire of Lodi, Kentucky Boy, and other celebrated trotters. Gladiator, Jr., is a handsome dark bay gelding of 1064 Eclipse. Messenger was sired by Old Messenger, he by Mambrino, dam by Turf—Hegelian—Starling—, dam by Bagwell, he by Bagwell—Mother of Mary—Newcastle's Tim—Byerly Turk; the dam of Messenger was sired by Engineer—Irish Grey—Old Partner—Mason Arab—Tafolet Barb—Place's White Turk—Natural Barb.

Gladiator, Jr., is a very handsome horse, and is also fast and will be found distinguished for his speed. Since it has been in our parlor, and all pronounce it a fine instrument. We certainly are charmed with it. I shall most certainly recommend it to my friends who may want to purchase. I am very truly yours, ELLEN R. E. SHERMAN.

The original of the above letter can be seen at this office.—Ed. MONITOR.

[From the World-renowned Artist, Camilla Urso.]

NEW YORK, May 27, 1870.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: After having your Pianos a few days in my house, I congratulate you on the achievement you have made in the construction of your Pianos, and it gives me much pleasure to recommend them to the public. Yours truly, CAMILLA URSO.

[From Rev. J. Shea, S. J., President of St. John's College, Fordham.]

FORDHAM, N. Y., June 4, 1870.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: It gives me pleasure to state that the Pianos which we have purchased from you have given entire satisfaction to our Professors and Pupils in Music. Yours very truly,

J. SHEA, S. J., President.

[From the Sisters of Charity, Academy of Holy Cross, Forty second street, New York.]

Having Lynch & Comien's Piano in use for a long time, it gives us pleasure in recommending them as superior instruments for the parlor and concert hall.

[From Mrs. James Sadlier, 29 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.]

Mrs. James Sadlier has great pleasure in certifying to the superior excellence and durability of the Pianos manufactured by Messrs. Lynch & Comien, of this city. She has had one of them in use in her family for the last three years, and has found it a perfect instrument—mellow, rich, and sweet in tone.

[Extract of a Letter from the Superior of Sisters of Charity, Academy of Mount St. Vincent on the Hudson, Westchester County, New York.]

I have much pleasure in stating that the Instrument has been universal satisfaction to the Sisters and pupils of the Academy. Its brilliant tone and elasticity added much value to its true, which is rarely found in Pianos of the present day. Its touch is perfect and delightful. The tone improved daily up to the present time, and is now, after two years' use, even more than it—left school. Whilst the Piano remained in the parlor, it was an object of curiosity to all visitors. I am, sirs, sincerely yours in Christ,

SISTER ST. JOSEPH.

The Piano that I bought for my daughter of Lynch & Comien's manufacture, has given perfect satisfaction in tone, and decidedly cheaper than any of our make. Our Sisters can testify to its merits.

CHAS. DONKERY, San Francisco.

23. Circulars and full particulars can be obtained at The Monitor Office. 1713

The Celebrated Trotting Stallion GLADIATOR,

BY GEO. M. PATCHEN, JR.,

Will serve a limited number of mares at his ranch, CLIFFORD'S stable, Napa City, Napa county, at the following rates: To insure, $100; to insure and stand, $75; to stand, $50. Season commencing April 1st, 1872, ending August 1st, 1872.

Terms for the Season, $30, in U. S. Gold coin.

DESCRIPTION.

GLADIATOR is a light bay horse with black points, star and snip, and white hind feet; stands 15 hands 3 inches in height on the fore, stands sixteen hands high, and weighs 1,100 pounds; is finely formed, with a clean, flat leg, good bone and muscle, and excellent disposition. He is a horse of great beauty, and his colts are remarkable as the greatest it has ever effected.

PEDIGREE.

GLADIATOR was sired by a horse old last May; was sired by the celebrated Trotting Stallion, Geo. M. Patchen, Jr., by Geo. M. Patchen, Sr., by Commodore Wells Ball, Brooklyn to California by James Whitcomb, Lyons, Wayne county, New York; he by Commodore Stallion, Green Mountain, of Vermont.

The dam of Gladiator, Jr., was sired by the celebrated Trotting Stallion, George M. Patchen, Dam by Pop Bellfounder, sire of Lodi, Kentucky Boy, and other celebrated trotters. Gladiator, Jr., is a handsome dark bay gelding of 1064 Eclipse. Messenger was sired by Old Messenger, he by Mambrino, dam by Turf—Hegelian—Starling—, dam by Bagwell, he by Bagwell—Mother of Mary—Newcastle's Tim—Byerly Turk; the dam of Messenger was sired by Engineer—Irish Grey—Old Partner—Mason Arab—Tafolet Barb—Place's White Turk—Natural Barb.

Gladiator, Jr., is a very handsome horse, and is also fast and will be found distinguished for his speed. Since it has been in our parlor, and all pronounce it a fine instrument. We certainly are charmed with it. I shall most certainly recommend it to my friends who may want to purchase. I am very truly yours, ELLEN R. E. SHERMAN.

The original of the above letter can be seen at this office.—Ed. MONITOR.

[From the World-renowned Artist, Camilla Urso.]

NEW YORK, May 27, 1870.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: After having your Pianos a few days in my house, I congratulate you on the achievement you have made in the construction of your Pianos, and it gives me much pleasure to recommend them to the public. Yours truly, CAMILLA URSO.

[From Rev. J. Shea, S. J., President of St. John's College, Fordham.]

FORDHAM, N. Y., June 4, 1870.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: It gives me pleasure to state that the Pianos which we have purchased from you have given entire satisfaction to our Professors and Pupils in Music. Yours very truly,

J. SHEA, S. J., President.

[From the Sisters of Charity, Academy of Holy Cross, Forty second street, New York.]

Having Lynch & Comien's Piano in use for a long time, it gives us pleasure in recommending them as superior instruments for the parlor and concert hall.

[From Mrs. James Sadlier, 29 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.]

Mrs. James Sadlier has great pleasure in certifying to the superior excellence and durability of the Pianos manufactured by Messrs. Lynch & Comien, of this city. She has had one of them in use in her family for the last three years, and has found it a perfect instrument—mellow, rich, and sweet in tone.

[Extract of a Letter from the Superior of Sisters of Charity, Academy of Mount St. Vincent on the Hudson, Westchester County, New York.]

I have much pleasure in stating that the Instrument has been universal satisfaction to the Sisters and pupils of the Academy. Its brilliant tone and elasticity added much value to its true, which is rarely found in Pianos of the present day. Its touch is perfect and delightful. The tone improved daily up to the present time, and is now, after two years' use, even more than it—left school. Whilst the Piano remained in the parlor, it was an object of curiosity to all visitors. I am, sirs, sincerely yours in Christ,

SISTER ST. JOSEPH.

The Piano that I bought for my daughter of Lynch & Comien's manufacture, has given perfect satisfaction in tone, and decidedly cheaper than any of our make. Our Sisters can testify to its merits.

CHAS. DONKERY, San Francisco.

23. Circulars and full particulars can be obtained at The Monitor Office. 1713

MEDICAL, ETC.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring to Gray Hair its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. It soon restores faded or gray hair to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed; but such as remain can be saved by this application, and stimulated into activity, so that a new growth of hair is produced. A thick set of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. The restoration of vitality it gives to the scalp also prevents the formation of dandruff, which is often so unpleasantly and offensive. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre, and a grateful perfume.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.,
Practical and Analytical Chemists,
LOWELL, MASS.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Among the great discoveries of modern science, few are of greater value to suffering humanity than this effectual remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A trial of its virtues, throughout the land and other countries, has shown that it does surely and efficiently control them. The testimony of our best physicians, of all classes, establishes the fact, that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the sufferings members of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most eminent Judges, on the Bench, have also resigned to its power, and cases of Consumption, which, by this dreadful disease, are pronounced by skeptic, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, except by those who have witnessed them. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves innumerable lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived approach of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become fortunately not so often cured, if neglected. Under large need this dreadful foe, and is certain to be withstood. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable. For, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centred on them. It acts speedily and surely against pulmonary colds, preventing sound and health-restoring sleep, so as will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured.

Originating in the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, no cost or toil is spared in making every faith in its utmost possible perfection. It may be confidently relied upon as possessing all the virtues it has ever exhibited, and capable of producing cures as unquestionable as the greatest it has ever effected.

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.,
Practical and Analytical Chemists.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE.

INSURANCE.

FIRE AND MARINE INSURANCE.

UNION INSURANCE COMPANY

OF SAN FRANCISCO.

THE CALIFORNIA LLOYDS.

ESTABLISHED IN 1861.

Nos. 416 and 418 California Street.

Cash Capital, - - - - $750,000 Gold.
Assets Exceed, - - - $1,000,000 Coin.

FAIR RATES,
PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF LOSSES, SOLID SECURITY

DIRECTORS:

SAN FRANCISCO.

J Mora Moss — N D Ellis,
James Otis, — James Rolfe,
Bernard Reid, — Charles Leidig,
R J Oman, — John Parrott,
Wm Sherman, — Milton S Latham,
W W Montague, — L Sachs,
Daniel Meyer, — D Donovan,
Wm Norris, — Joseph Brandenstein,
Wm Schultz, — Joseph Seligman,
Charles Ednier, — Lawrence Peet,
Joseph Sadler, — Geo. H Howard,
W. C. Ralston, — Alexander Weill,
D. Lawrence Pool, — George D Johnson,
A. Weill. — F. C. Lindenberger, and 10:20 P.M.

SACRAMENTO.
Edward Cadwalader.

J P Hoaglan — L A Booth.

MARYSVILLE:
C Cunningham — Peter Decker.

PORTLAND, Or.:
Henry Failing.

J G Kittle — H M Newhall.
Reed Benjamin — James Phelan.

STOCKTON:
C. H. HASKIN, Secretary. — A. H. TOWER, Gen'l Passenger and Ticket Agt.
GEO. T. BOHEN, Surveyor.

CHAS. D. HAMM, Secretary.
N. G. STETSON, Vice-President.

COMMERCIAL INSURANCE COMPANY

OF CALIFORNIA.

OFFICE IN SAN FRANCISCO:

No. 435 CALIFORNIA STREET.

THIS COMPANY IN NOW PREPARED TO INsure Merchandise against FIRE, MARINE, and Inland Navigation risks.

DIRECTORS:

W W Dodge — Wm Norris,
Claus Spreckels, — James Semple,
Michael Reese, — Wm Sherman,
M F Jones, — Chas Main,
Selden A Wright, — Donald McLennan,
W B Cumings, — W B Hooper,
C P Huntington, — Edward Martin,
James M Harney, — Sacramento:
Wm Alvord, — H C Dibb,
C W Jones, — H B Crocker,
A W Jones, — Wm H Mills,
Peter Donahue, — C F Dillman,
John D Wise, — Thomas Bonnell,
Chas J Stevenson,

C. W. KELLOGG, President.
H. G. MOSHER, Secretary. ap15

UNDERTAKERS.

J. O'KANE.

Manufacturer and Importer of

SADDLES & HARNESS

Fine Horse Clothing, etc., etc.,

No. 313 KEARNY STREET,

Between Bush and Pine streets.

Repairing done with promptness and dispatch. Orders promptly attended to. ma25-ly

TROY BELLS.

Old Established Troy Bell Foundry,

TROY, N. Y. (Established 1826.)

A LARGE ASSORTMENT OF CHURCH, Academy, Factory and other Bells, made of copper and tin, warranted satisfactory, and mounted with our New Patent Rotary Yoke—the most recent and desirable Bell Stand in use. For prices and catalogues apply to

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,
West Troy, New York.

se15-1yeow

MENEELY'S BELL FOUNDRY,

WEST TROY, NEW YORK.

Established in 1826.

CHURCH, ACADEMY, FACTORY AND OTHER Bells, made of copper and tin, warranted satisfactory, and mounted with our New Patent Rotary Yoke—the most recent and desirable Bell Stand in use. For prices and catalogues apply to

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,
West Troy, New York.

mp15

TRAVELERS' GUIDE.

C. P. R. R.

Commencing Monday, April 29th, 1872,

And until further notice, Trains and Boats will

LEAVE SAN FRANCISCO.

7.00 A. M.—Overland Express Train for Sacramento, Marysville, Red Bluff, Colfax, Auburn and Colusa.

3.00 P. M.—Express Train for Stockton, Merced and Sacramento.

4.00 P. M.—San José Passenger Train, stopping at all Way Stations.

6.30 P. M.—Overland Emigrant Train, through Sacramento and Auburn.

7.30 A. M.—Steamer New World (from Broadway Wharf), connecting at Vallejo with Trains of California Pacific Railroad.

4.00 P. M.—Sacramento Steamer (from Broadway Wharf), connecting at Vallejo with Trains of California Pacific Railroad.

2.00 P. M.—Steamer Antelope, from Broadway Wharf, connecting at Benicia with Train for Sacramento.

8.00 P. M.—Steamer Yosemite (from Broadway Wharf), connecting with Express Train for S. J. & V. R. R. for Gravesburg, Intermediate points, returning to San Francisco at 7:30 P.M.

OAKLAND BRANCH.—Leave San Francisco, 7:00, 8:00, 9:00, 10:00, 11:30 A. M., 1:30, 3:30, 4:00, 5:00, 6:00, 7:00, 8:30, 9:30, 11:30 P. M. Leave Oakland, 6:00, 7:00, 8:00, 9:00, 10:00, 11:00 A. M., 12:00 M., 2:00, 3:00, 4:00, 5:00, 6:00, 7:00, 8:00, 9:00, 10:00 P. M.

Leave Broadway—6:30, 6:00, 7:30, 8:30 and 11:00 A. M., 1:30, 3:30, 4:30, 5:30, 6:30,

TELEGRAPHIC!

Eastern.

NEW YORK, June 21.—A World's special from Geneva says: In an interview to-day with a World correspondent, Charles Francis Adams said: "I adhere to the principles laid before the Cincinnati Convention, and would accept the Baltimore nomination if the platform be good and the other associations; but I will never be wire-pulled into place. I am deeply concerned for State rights in future."

NEW YORK, June 24.—Hon. Robert Roosevelt has addressed a letter to the New York State delegates to the Baltimore Convention, giving his reasons for supporting Greeley, and arguing that the Democratic party will be dissolved unless Greeley is endorsed at Baltimore.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The Convention called by Judge Stello at the Fifth Avenue Hotel to-day was held in secret, no reporters having been admitted. It transpired, however, that ex-Governor Cox spoke, endeavoring to harmonize on Greeley. Addresses urged the nomination of Adams. After a long debate, the question of nominating a ticket was decided in the affirmative, when Cox withdrew from the Convention. A platform was adopted denouncing Greeley and the Cincinnati Convention, and pledging Free Trade to the support of their own policy under all circumstances.

CINCINNATI, June 22.—The nomination of Groesbeck to the Presidency by the Free Trade Democracy excites little comment. There is an impression that if the nomination is endorsed at Baltimore he will accept, but will not allow his name to be used against the Democrats.

MONTGOMERY (Ala), June 22.—The Democratic Convention adjourned yesterday after appointing delegates to Baltimore and adopting a resolution that the National Democratic Convention ought not, under existing circumstances, to make any nominations in opposition to the Cincinnati candidates. Ripheus Baker and J. J. Jolly were nominated as Congressmen at large.

SPRINGFIELD (Ill.), June 24.—The Democratic Convention resolved that the Cincinnati platform, with Greeley's letter, affords common ground on which Liberal men of all parties can constantly unite in opposition to the present Government, and the delegates to Baltimore are instructed to act as a unit in the spirit of the foregoing.

TRENTON, June 26.—The New Jersey Democratic Convention to-day pledged itself to abide and support the nominee of the Democratic National Convention. Gov. Randolph said that a more suitable nomination and more acceptable candidate to Democratic voters than Greeley could not be found.

SPRINGFIELD (Ill.), June 26.—Senator Trumbull addressed an immense meeting in State House Square this evening. He arraigned at length the opposition, the unwarranted interference with the rights of States, and a military spirit which impelled the Government to use its power in its own person. Such tendencies he pronounced to be full of danger to the people, whose rights and liberties, by being gradually abstracted, were in danger of being lost entirely.

Father Tom Burke has arrived in Memphis, Tenn.

EUROPE

MADRID, June 23d.—Olazaga' band of insurgents in Navarre, have surrendered.

In his manifesto issued yesterday, the Duc de Montpensier asserts the right of exQueen Isabella's son, Don Alphonso Carlos, Prince of the Asturias, to the Spanish throne, and declares that when the proper moment arrives he will zealously and proudly support his son's claims to Alphonso.

MADRID, June 23d.—The affair of Dr. Howard has been officially arranged by Minister Bulwer and Senor Martos, Minister of Foreign Affairs. Howard's friends consent waives the question of the claim of Dr. Howard to American citizenship.

ROME, June 25.—The Pope to-day received several of the members of the General Executive Club of this city. In the course of his remarks on the occasion, he made use of the expression, "Although the persecution of Catholics has commenced in Germany, but their display of courage under the affliction which the present German Government that persecution of the Church is fully. The Church," he said the Holy Father, "remains triumphant. We have aided Bismarck how it is that once-contented German Bishops have, according to the expressed belief of the German Government, been suddenly transformed into turbulent conspirators. No reply has yet been received. Let us pray to our Father in Heaven that no enemy fall that will help to cripple the overthrow of Colossus."

BERLIN, June 26.—The Federal Council has approved the amendments by Parliament to the bill proscribing Jesuits, and the bill becomes law.

MINING NEWS.

AMADOR.—The Keystone mine continues to smoothly yield without diminution, never falling below $40,000, and frequently going beyond that objectionable.

CALAVERAS.—The Calaveras Chronicle of the 23d says: The tide in mining affairs still sets toward the West Point district. Travel in that direction, large as it has been and is, increasing, and new discoveries in quartz are being made almost daily.

A man named Harper, who for a number of years past has resided in the vicinity of the Jesse Marsh, and spent most of his time prospecting for quartz, has recently discovered a ledge of immense richness. Parties who have seen specimens of the rock say it beats anything of the kind they ever saw.

INYO.—A strike is reported in Mellonegh's mine, situated on the Belmont side of the mountains. All the furnaces are in operation, producing more bullion than the transportation contracts call for—900 tons per month.

NEVADA.—We learn, says the Grass Valley Union, that the Blue Point Mining Company, whose hydraulic works are situated on the ancient river channel that passes through Mooney Flat, Scales' Hotel and Cherokee, Butte county, and Smartsville, Timbuctoo and vicinity, has recently washed up their annual clean-up after a 65 days' washing. They took out $90,000.

The Transcript says the Erie Company at Granitville struck a five-foot ledge on Friday last, which is the richest of any rock that has ever been found in that district. There is a very large seam of gold running through the ledge, and scarcely a piece of the rock but shows the gold.

SHASTA.—The Yreka Journal of the 19th says: In addition to the very flattering news from Little Humbug, heretofore reported, we have to state that, so far as washing up has been prosecuted on said Humbug, the returns are all that claim owners could wish.

SOLANO.—The Vallejo Chronicle of June 20th has the following: We learn that work has been totally suspended on Brownlie's quicksilver mine, although there are prospects that it will be resumed at an early day by other parties. Work, however, is to be commenced immediately on the Joe Wilson mine, situated about a mile and a half northeast of the Vallejo Sulphur Springs, and the necessary tools, materials, etc., for operations are now being forwarded to the ground. A smelting furnace will be erected at the mine, the work on which will be initiated some time next week.

Nominations.

All the men in Beartown are doing pay work in dry diggins, and the deep diggings are obstructed by high water.

Priests in Politics.

Only those who know Ireland as Mr. Keogh once knew it, can form an idea of the lamentable condition to which the majority of the people, especially in the rural districts, have been reduced through a system of misgovernment: and they are agreed that one of the most important and indispensable duties of an Irish priest, under existing circumstances, is to advise his flock on the political questions of the day, because for Ireland there are no leading questions solely political in their bearings. Some English Catholics, who join in the general chorus, and talk glibly of "the interference of priests in politics," simply do so because they know next to nothing of the true bearings of the case. Faith and morals are so mixed up with the political questions which agitate Ireland, that whoever are the interests of Creed and Fatherland, that religion and true nationality may almost be termed synonymous. Therefore we hold that so long as the judicious interference of the clergy in politics is calculated to save the simple peasantry — "their country's pride" and strength, but too liable to become its weakness, by unwittingly furthering the designs of political knaves—just so long must "interference" remain a conscientious obligation. Were the Irish priests to stand aloof from politics at this moment they would be guilty of a gross dereliction of duty. But it is difficult to distinguish, beyond the possibility of misconception, between working for a principle, and seeming to work only for a man. The adverse critic is ever anxious to overlook that the man is but the exponent as the advocate of the principle. Parties will be formed, and must be formed during the best of contest, according to individual temperament, until there is a fusion of the opposing elements of personal interest. This is always made much of, as the Galway experiences prove, but it redounds to the honor of the priests of Ireland to have so used their weighty influence, through good and evil report, that the ordinance of the measure remains unshaken. Why do they retain almost a monopoly? It is open to the representatives of an Irish race and foreign interests to beat them out of the field by using the same honorable weapons; and so to deserve confidence, where they have long attempted in vain to enforce Saxon confidence. The priests of Galway did "interfere" in the sence indicated, and therefore maintain that they are free from amounting to "ecclesiastical despotism," was as fully within their Constitutional right as the landlords. The representatives now of the two parties are the Marquis of Clanricarde and the Archbishop of Tuam. Can there be a doubt as to which has the people of Galway behind him? Or as to which of the candidates would be most trusted and priests and landlords been caged until the result were known? Protestant writers, who are strong on the subject of priestly insolence and tyranny, appear to ignore the fact that Catholic laymen are, in secular matters, peculiarly jealous of clerical interference—thus making a sort of set-off for doubtful obedience in things spiritual. Against "insolence," as defined in John Bull's dictionary, they would be determined as any Protestant in the realm; and it is manifestly unfair to import into any argument words which in their use in a illegitimate sense and contrary to the acknowledged definition of any writer known to the taste of the superficial cockney, yet, as the representative of the Saturday Review and Fine writing has its attractions, even when it verges on the ridiculous; the journal devoted to it, and which boasts the largest circulation in the world—of which fools are the majority—is not to be condemned to be intelligible even in its exaggerations. The priests of Galway may or may not have advanced "arrogant" pretensions as a man, with the slightest regard for facts, would characterize them as "collegiate lordchinals," or "chartered libertines," when there lives are a standing protest against the Irish priest in the former definition, and Mr. Justice Keogh's adverse decision points the absurdity of the latter. Again, "anti-immoral atmosphere of lay violence and spiritual abuse" must be something beyond the ken of even an efficient Sanitary Commissioners. No one breathing hasany conception of what it means. The man who sits upon the throne of justice is promoted above his fellows, not to air his own credulous, or to gratify private individual spite, but solemnly inhaled: 34 prize—A lady's poplin silk dress. Each rail prize" ticket is sure to win a prize.

Recacelled.

Cheering news comes to us from Derry, in the North. Factious feelings have long prevailed there, stimulated and kept burning for sectionering purposes. The bells of the city may now toll the knell of such rancors, and with a joyous peal announces the advent of a happy era.

Hogben is the herald of the good tidings. He might have come in a less irresponsible one name; he could not have had a better message.

There is something classic in the narrative of the news, Just as Homer sings how wrath-stood Achilles rose and spake, so the Ulsonian reporter records that "Stubinspector Hogben rose, and, addressing their worships said:"

What he said was this: "Your worship, I have an application to make with reference to band-playing in this city. On Saturday evening last a band played down through the city and round the Shipquay place, and played along the Strand road as far as Pennyburn. I have been making inquiries, and I find there was no instructions to that effect. The crowd was very small, and I understand the opposite party were mixed together, and appeared to be on very good terms." A magistrate (Mr. O'Neill) interrogatively exclaimed:

"The Apprentice Boys and the Bogside party?"

Hogben solemnly and shortly answered "Yes."

Delight was displayed upon the magisterial countenances at this intelligence.

The Mayor announced that the edifying conduct of the philharmonic factions was taken by the magistrates "as a proof that the two parties were somewhat reconciled, and that they may get leave to play." Quarrelling should not be revived. "Then," he proceeded, "we can all live in amity with each other."

Bye-gones should be bye-gones. All could then meet together without party feeling, and every section of the people have their amusement. The gardens of one of the city institutions would be thrown open to all the bands, which could play each in its turn. Harmony henceforth replaces discord.

With all our hearts say we. It is high time that the evil feelings of the past be forgotten, whilst its good is remembered—

"Rusty the swords our fathers bequeathed,
William and James are turned to clay."

Irishmen surely have other work to do than to quarrel over the graves of two English princes, neither of whom cared a jot for the welfare of Ireland. James involved Irish Catholics in an English quarrel; William sealed the destruction of the commerce and manufactures of Irish Protestants. Whatever England may think of them, both of them harmed Ireland.—Irishman.

Wholesale Market Report.

MONITOR OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, June 27, 1872.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export only a moderate inquiry has existed, at a decline. We quote as follows: Extra at $7 12½@7 50, and superfine, at $6 @6 75; interior and Oregon brands—Extra at $6 25@6 12½ in sks $ 100 lbs.

WHEAT—The market has been quiet but firm, as a slight decline in prices, since our last weekly review. At the close we quote the range at $1 @$1 37½ @ 50 lbs.

BARLEY—The demand has continued fair for this grain during the week under review. Sales of ordinary coast to choice bay brewing at $1 @$1 07½. Quotable at the close at $1 @$1 10 @ 100 lbs.

OATS—The market has remained quiet, at unchanged rates, during the past week. Ordinary to choice seed at $1 @$1 12½ @ 100 lbs, which is the range at the close.

RYE—No transactions have been fair during the seven days, with a fair demand. Quotable at the close at $1@$1 05 for ordinary mild oat to choice wheat lb sks.

STRAW—Quotable at $4@$5 50 ₱ ton for cargo lots

CORN—Market quiet at $1 @$1 05.

CORN MEAL—Quotable at $1@$1 10 ₱ 100 lbs from mill.

BEANS—We note a fair demand, and the following are the jobbing rates: Bayo, $1 80; Butter, Pea, $2 50; Lima, $3 @$3 25; Red, $1 @$1 50; Pink, $1 @$1 50 ₱ 100 lbs. At auction we quote the range at $1 90@2 75 for new ₱ 100 lbs.

POTATOES—Quotable at $1 @$1 25 ₱ ctl.

MIDDLINGS—We quote feed at $17 50 @ ton from store.

BUCKWHEAT—Dull at $1 75 @100 lbs.

BRAN—Quotable at $15 @$16 ₱ ton.

ONIONS—We quote Yellow at $2 @ Chanay, 50@c; Almonds, 50@c; Peanuts, 10@c; Walnuts, 20@c; Filberts, 25@c; Pecans, 25@c; Hickory nuts, 10@c; Cocoanuts, $8 @$10 ₱ 100.

HONEY—We quote Los Angeles Comb at $1 @$1 50@1 lb.

BEESWAX—We quote at 25@c ₱ lb.

HIDES—We quote California dry 12½@13c; Salted, 10@c; Kips, 10@c; Calf, 12½@13c.

TALLOW—Quotable at 7@c ₱ lb.

WOOL—The market continues to be inactive state. We quote Fall Mendocino at 25@c; Humboldt, 24@c; Coast, 20@c. Spring is nearly neglected.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California choice, in kegs and roll, 27@c; fresh roll, 21½@27c; packed, 18@20c; Eastern firkin, 20@27½@c. We quote Fresh Roll at 30@c; Pickled Roll, 25@c; Eastern firkin, 20@27½@c.

EGGS—California, 20@c ₱ dozen.

CHEESE—California, at 12½@13c ₱ lb; Oregon, 12½@13c; Eastern, sage-colored Scotch, 16@18c, do cheese, 15@16c.

LARD—California, 12½@13½c ₱ lb; Oregon, none in the market; Eastern, in tcs, 12½@13c; do in cases 14@15c.

FRESH MEATS.

BEEF—For first quality, 7½@8c ₱ lb; for second do, 7@8c; third do 5@6c ₱ lb.

VEAL—Large, 7@8c ₱ lb.

MUTTON—At 5@6c ₱ lb.

PORK—Dressed, 8@9c ₱ lb.

LIVE STOCK—Fat cows, 3@3½c; fat steers, 3½@4c; fat bulls, 2½@3c; fat calves, 4@5c; fat sheep, 4@5c; fat hogs, 6@7c; on foot, grain fed, 5@6c.

POULTRY AND GAME.

POULTRY—Live, large, per dozen, $10@12; Spring Chickens, 11@3 Roosters, $7@10 ₱ dozen.

GAME—Quail, $1 @$1 50 ₱ dozen.

GEESE—Tame at $12@15 ₱ dozen.

DUCKS—Tame, Canvas-back, dressed 25c ₱ lb.

Hare—$1@1 50 ₱ doz.

Rabbits—$1 @$1 50 ₱ doz.

Retail Prices of Poultry and Game.

TURKEYS—Live, 20@c ₱ lb; dressed, 25@c.

CHICKENS—Large, $1 each.

CHICKENS—Small, $1 @$1 50 each.

HARE—$2 ₱ each.

RABBITS—$1 @$1 50 ₱ doz.

PIGEONS—Tame, $1 @$1 ₱ doz.

Use no other preparation but Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer for improving the growth and restoring the color of the hair.

BOTH ARE BAD AT RENT.

The single-thread ravening stitch and the insecure non-elastic back-stitch are both alike nuisted for the Catholic literature of the "Kenmara cloister." Like Davis we desire to see "art applied to express Irish thoughts and belief. To make music sound in every parson's ear. To captivate the eye with the manufacture, and have our poetry and history sit at every hearth."

Aid us, brothers and sisters, to make the National Drawing a success.

Aid us to save brave ones from ruin. Coöperate with the great and distinguished names who have identified themselves with us, and under whose patronage we seek to demonstrate Ireland's appreciation of the gratitude to

"GALLANT TIPPERARY."

N. B.—A complimentary ticket is presented with each book of twenty tickets, and those who will purchase of the publishers five books (one pound's worth) for the general drawing, will receive a ticket for a special drawing of "all prizes," the first prize in which is a Bank of Ireland ten pound note; 2d prize—A handsome gilt tea service; 3d prize—A lovely inlaid: 34 prize—A lady's poplin silk dress. Each rail prize" ticket is sure to win a prize.

Recacelled.

Cheering news comes to us from Derry, in the North. Factions feelings have long prevailed there, stimulated and kept burning for sectionering purposes. The bells of the city may now toll the knell of such rancors, and with a joyous peal announces the advent of a happy era.

Hogben is the herald of the good tidings. He might have come in a less irresponsible one name; he could not have had a better message.

There is something classic in the narrative of the news. Just as Homer sings how wrath-stood Achilles rose and spake, so the Ulsonian reporter records that "Stubinspector Hogben rose, and, addressing their worships said:"

What he said was this: "Your worship, I have an application to make with reference to band-playing in this city. On Saturday evening last a band played down through the city and round the Shipquay place, and played along the Strand road as far as Pennyburn. I have been making inquiries, and I find there was no instructions to that effect. The crowd was very small, and I understand the opposite party were mixed together, and appeared to be on very good terms." A magistrate (Mr. O'Neill) interrogatively exclaimed:

"The Apprentice Boys and the Bogside party?"

Hogben solemnly and shortly answered "Yes."

Delight was displayed upon the magisterial countenances at this intelligence.

The Mayor announced that the edifying conduct of the philharmonic factions was taken by the magistrates "as a proof that the two parties were somewhat reconciled, and that they may get leave to play." Quarrelling should not be revived. "Then," he proceeded, "we can all live in amity with each other."

Bye-gones should be bye-gones. All could then meet together without party feeling, and every section of the people have their amusement. The gardens of one of the city institutions would be thrown open to all the bands, which could play each in its turn. Harmony henceforth replaces discord.

With all our hearts say we. It is high time that the evil feelings of the past be forgotten, whilst its good is remembered—

"Rusty the swords our fathers bequeathed,
William and James are turned to clay."

Irishmen surely have other work to do than to quarrel over the graves of two English princes, neither of whom cared a jot for the welfare of Ireland. James involved Irish Catholics in an English quarrel; William sealed the destruction of the commerce and manufactures of Irish Protestants. Whatever England may think of them, both of them harmed Ireland.—Irishman.

Irishmen surely have other work to do than to quarrel over the graves of two English princes, neither of whom cared a jot for the welfare of Ireland. James involved Irish Catholics in an English quarrel; William sealed the destruction of the commerce and manufactures of Irish Protestants. Whatever England may think of them, both of them harmed Ireland.—Irishman.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.,

NO. 7

Montgomery St.,

HAVE.....

THE BEST SELECTED STOCK

OF.....

DRY GOODS

IN.....

THE PACIFIC COAST,

AND ARE RECEIVING

NEW GOODS FROM NEW YORK

DAILY.

Buyers will find it to their advantage to examine our Stock.

STOCK OF DRY GOODS,

Which comprises every variety and class of Goods in our line, and at Prices which Defy Competition.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.

No. 7 MONTGOMERY STREET.

my17-6m

NOTICE! NOTICE! NOTICE!

The Public are Respectfully Informed

THAT THE

GREAT SEMI-ANNUAL

CLEARANCE SALE

—OF—

DRY GOODS

—AT—

J. J. O'BRIEN'S,

606 MARKET STREET,

IS NOW DRAWING TO A CLOSE, AND ALL who intend to avail themselves of the extraordinarily low prices now offered had better call immediately, for

50 Cents on the Dollar!

We will offer during the next week

75 pieces Heavy French Printed Silks, all colors, 24 inches wide, at $1 a yard; reduced from $1 50.

24 pieces Plain Colored Silks, $1 a yard; reduced from $1 50.

One entire stock of Black Silks reduced fully 50 per cent.

50 pieces Fine French Printed Lawns, 12½ cents a yard; reduced from $1 25.

48 pieces Fine Lawns, 10 cents; 12½ a yard, which is the range at the store.

Ladies' Hemstitched Linen Handkerchiefs, 12½ cents a yard; reduced from $1.

96 pieces White Bleached Japanese Pongees, 37½ cents a yard; reduced from 75 cents.

One entire stock of

SPRING DRESS GOODS

Reduced to half price, consisting of several thousand yards, at 12½, 15, 20 and 25 cents a yard.

A splendid line of Black Alpacas, from 12½ cents a yard upward.

24 pieces best Black Pollard, 62½ cents a yard; reduced from $1.

12 pieces Plaid, Black and Striped Grenadines, from 30 cents a yard upward.

All kinds of Fancy and STRIPED SHAWLS, new styles, from $1 50 upward.

All kinds of Linen Goods reduced in half price.

Ladies' and Gents' Linen Collars and Cuffs, the best part warranted fast colors.

Ladies' Linen Suits, 3 pieces in a suit, for 12½ cents a yard upward.

1 case Ladies' Colored French Piqué, 25 cents a yard; seems as is sold for 50 cents.

600 pieces Ribbons, from 37½ to a yard upward.

1,000 White and Colored Marseilles Spreads, from $1 upward.

1,000 dozen all-linen Napkins, $1 a dozen; reduced from $2.

600 dozen all-linen Doilies, 62 cents a dozen; reduced from $1 25.

2,000 all-linen Towels, 12½ cents each; reduced from 25 cents.

75 pieces Heavy Scotch Table Diaper for 37½ cents a yard; reduced from 62½.

600 pieces Heavy Linen Crash, 8 cents a yard; reduced from 12½ cents.

1,000 pieces 4-4 Irish Linen, 33 cents a yard; reduced from 50 cents.

100 pieces Nottingham Lace, 25 cents a yard; reduced from 62 cents.

60 pieces Plaid Flannel Shirting, 12½ cents a yard; reduced from 25 cents.

3 bales all-wool White Flannel, 18 cents a yard; worth 25 cents.

200 pieces Brown and White Cotton Flannel, 18½ cents a yard; worth 25 cents.

1,000 pairs Ladies' Kid Gloves, $1 a pair; reduced from $2.

1,000 pairs Ladies' Balbriggan, 12½ cents; reduced from $1.

500 pairs Ladies' Kid Gloves, $1 75 a pair; reduced from $2 50.

1,000 pairs Joseph's Undressed Kid Gloves, slightly soiled, 75 cents a pair; reduced from $1.

All makes of American Prints, 10 cents a yard.

A large lot of Ladies' and Gents' Underwear, slightly soiled, half price.

A call respectfully solicited.

J. J. O'BRIEN,
606 Market Street,
Near Montgomery.

my17-6m

INSURANCE.

JULIUS MOSES
General Agent
310 CALIFORNIA
SAN FRANCISCO

THE

GERMANIA

LIFE INSURANCE CO.

Is the ONLY Company issuing ABSOLUTE NON-FORFEITABLE and INCONTESTABLE Policies.

No application for paid up Policies required; a limitation of time.

WM. P. HUMPHREYS,

CIVIL ENGINEER and SURVEYOR

Office, Nos. 33 and 34 Montgomery Block.

C. MOODY,

DRUGGIST and CHEMIST

Dealer in PURE DRUGS and MEDICINES, Toilet and Fancy Articles and Perfumery.

Pure Wines and Liquors for Medical Purposes carefully compounded.

900 and 902 KEARNY STREET,

my11 SAN FRANCISCO.

SCHOOL BOOKS,

PRAYER BOOKS,

TOY & JUVENILE BOOKS.

ALL THE TEXT BOOKS USED IN THE CATholic and Public Schools of California on view for School Trade.

RYAN'S OLD STAND,

No. 40 Fourth street, near Jesse.

Parents and guardians of limited means will find to their advantage to trade where no advantage to be taken, and all goods sold at the lowest living rate. A fine assortment of Prayer Books for the Holy Season. Orders by publishers, to which standard prices will be given.

The MONITOR always on hand. my18 ly

SULLIVAN, FRATINGER & CO.

14 Montgomery Street,

Have just received a large assortment of

CHILDREN'S

BRAIDED PIQUE SUITS,

WITH OVERSKIRT,

Which they are selling at the following prices:

2 YEARS OLD.....$ 5
3 YEARS OLD.....6
4 YEARS OLD.....7
5 YEARS OLD.....8
6 YEARS OLD.....9

ALSO, A HANDSOME LINE OF

Child ren's Linen Dresses and

With every other article ranging from $1 to $6 upwards.

A GREAT

CONSOLIDATION SALE

—OF—

BOOTS! SHOES

BOOTS! SHOES

—AT—

NOLAN'S,

No. 11 Third Street.

HAVING REMOVED MY ENTIRE STOCK of Boots and Shoes from No. 13 to 11 Third street, I am now offering the same at Auction for sale each afternoon at 2 o'clock, and each evening at 7½ o'clock, the entire assortment of Boots and Shoes now on hand, consisting of a full line of

| | |
|---|---|
| Ladies' French Kid Button Boots | Pegs |
| Ladies' Cloth and Kid Button Boots | C. M. |
| Ladies' Black and C. F. Balmorals, only | " |
| Ladies' Black and Tinsel Kid Tie, Cheap | " |
| Ladies' French Kid Slippers | " |
| Ladies' Cloth and Kid Slippers | " |
| Ladies' Black and Colored Kid Gaiters | " |
| Misses' and Children's Kid Slippers | " |
| Misses' and Children's Kid Gaiters | " |
| Misses' Kid Button Boots | " |
| Misses' Kid Pox Balmorals | " |
| Misses' Cloth and Kid Balmorals | " |
| Misses' French Calf Shoes | " |
| Misses' Kip Brogans | " |
| Children's Kid Pox Balmorals | " |
| Children's Cloth and Kid Balmorals | " |
| Children's Rio Goat Slips | " |
| Infants' Shoes, Cloth Tops | " |
| Infants' Shoes, No. 10c. and | " |
| Infants' Shoes, No. 12c. and | " |
| Men's Fine Calf Button Boots | Pegs |
| Men's Fine Calf Balmorals | " |
| Men's Fine Calf Congress Gaiters | " |
| Men's Custom made Boots for Country Retail Trade | " |
| Men's Kersey Congress Gaiters | " |
| Men's Kersey Balmorals | " |
| Men's Brogans, 100 | Sewed |
| Men's Brogans, 100 | Pegs |
| Men's Kersey Congress Gaiters | " |
| Men's Kersey Balmorals | " |
| Boys' Calf Boots, 12 | Sewed |
| Boys' Calf Boots, 12 | Pegs |
| Boys' Kersey Boots, 12 | " |
| Boys' Congress Gaiters, 12 | " |

Come early in order to avoid the rush. Great bargains will be offered.

NOLAN'S MAMMOTH SHOE STORE,

NOLAN'S, NO. 11 THIRD STREET,

NOLAN'S, NO. 11 THIRD STREET.

RUCKUS BUILDING.

FIRST SHOE STORE FROM MARKET STREET.

my17

THE GETTYSBURG

KATAKYNE WATER is sold at the following rates: The following rates: Three-gallon demijohns, $3 each; five-gallon demijohns, $4 each; ten-gallon demijohns, $7 each. If straightened for cash, or if ordered in quantities of not less than five gallons, the price will be reduced to $3 per demijohn. Address all orders by mail or express to the Agents, Tappan Brothers, Gettysburg, Pa. Tappan Brothers, Gettysburgers supplied for their own use with Katakyne Water, and will be glad to receive orders for it. Address as above.

ADDRESS OF THE GALWAY LANDLORDS.

Now stand together, landlords all,
Of Galway, far and wide;
A fate is on the march to suite
At your ancestral pride.
Strange prophecies are whispered round—
A fear is in the air
Say men are equal if they do
What honest men should care:
That birthlords are no more than men,
Alike they own the sod—
That serfs are equal with their lords
Before the eyes of God.
When priest and peasant dare to prate
About the voter's right,
The time that ye should rise and show
What is a landlord's might.
We've erewhile held the tenants' seats
In hands that answered well!
And in that service good we've made
This land on earth a hell,
And shook the empire to its base,
Until in full assault came—
The hand of fate upon the wall
Had traced the words of fear.
Our tidings around have greatly changed.
The people strong have grown—
Let us still stand, and crushing rise
The changeless men alone!
The signs that flame 'gainst the mere—
The sun recognizes these—
Inferno not as that God above
May hear a people's cross.

For we as serfs are His elect—
To us he wealth He gave;
The land our sires won by the sword—
Our laws we've forced from slave!
Still tenants' consciences we'll hold
Obedient to our gods,
And priests may pray or preach or rail—
The Judge is on our side
Save Catholics in golden chains
Our triumph will adorn,
While remnants of Kromlech Erc will show
How due to ancient scorn.
The well-fed priest will kiss our hands,
The bishop pounded meat
But when the goodly work is done
We'll crush them from our sight.
Dublin Nation. D.G.M.

FATHER BURKE'S

LECTURE ON

"CHRISTIAN CHARITY."

(Continued from last week.)

But among the many gifts He bestowed upon Eve, there was one her dear charity and mercy which we have just seen was so perfect in the heart of our Lord. Therefore, at St. Paul tells us, Christ loved His Church, and gave His life that He might present her to Himself perfect, beautiful, glorious, not having spot, wrinkle, stain, nor any such thing, but all perfect in her supernatural beauty and so, wholly to be the spouse of Jesus the Son of God. Among these beauties was the beauty of charity, like His own—because it is written, "I will espouse thee in faith, in justice, in judgment, and in mercy and in commiseration." How, therefore, can mercy and charity not be a distinctive of that Church was to be the Bride of Christ. So, therefore, when we go back to her history, we must find upon her records that attribute of charity like to His. Do we find it? Ah, my dear friends,

MERCY AND CHARITY WERE UNKNOWN TO THE WORLD

Until Jesus Christ founded His Church. Mercy and charity were unknown to the world. The world had benevolence in the sense of generosity, but charity is the noblest gift of the world's history tells us of many acts of grand benevolence performed, of many acts of charity by the Pagans of old; we are told of many instances in which they showed their generosity and their heart was touched and of many in which they were generous and self-sacrificing in their charity; but where was their love—their charity? Nowhere! all these are fair and beautiful adornments of the natural character, but they (though they are not supernatural) they are not. Divine, nor are they the mercy which Jesus Christ shall require of the soul which enters into the kingdom of His bliss. Why? Because, my beloved brethren, as Jesus Christ our Lord speaks, in a charity which must spring from faith and be animated by hope springing from faith, and by love, because, as the Apostle says, "And now abideth faith, hope and charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity." Unless faith be there pointing out the way of all our charity, it may be generosity, it may be kindness of heart, it may be what you will; but it is not Christian charity—for faith alone tells us to guide our charity! Our faith tells us that we are bound to man only because of God; that we do homage to him in no matter what disguise we find Him. Our faith teaches us to be blessed in our charity that minister to Him, for they shall be ministered to by Him.

Now, where shall we find Him so that our ministration shall reach Him? In Heaven He commands our adoration; but we cannot minister to Him in our mercy. In the blessed Eucharist he commands our purity of soul, and we can minister to Him; but we cannot minister to Him in our mercy. There is one form—and only one on earth—which Christ chooses to present Himself so that He becomes an object of mercy, and that is when he disguises Himself in the form of the poor and needy; and then I say unto you he wants us ye have done it unto one of these little ones ye have done it unto Him. And in the day of Judgment His sole test to the souls of the just, "I was hungry and ye brought me not to eat. And they said to me: I was naked and ye clothed Me; I was sick and ye lifted up my head and visited Me." And when the just said say "Where, oh Lord! did we see Thee hungry and feed Thee, or poor and relieve Thee?" Then the Lord shall say to the just one, "Dost thou recognize Jesus?" "Oh, yes Lord, I know them. I saw them on earth fainting, dying, sick and in their misery." Then He will say: "I swear to you whatsoever you did to these, you did it to me."

BEHOLD, THEN, WHAT FAITH TEACHES US.

Faith establishes the principle—that in serving the poor we minister to unto Jesus Christ—that in the ministering to the poor we are working out our own salvation, for our salvation depends on working out Him within us. What does our hope tell us concerning this work of mercy? Our hope tells us in the promise that although God has made of future glory and bliss to man, is all bound up with the condition of mercy. What do you hope for? Pardon for your sins; the highest mercy of God. God tells us in the Scriptures, "Redeem your sins by alms, and cover your iniquity by mercy to the poor." Do you look for-want to see eternal light and glory? Jesus says, "Deal thy bread to the hungry and bring the harborless into thy house. When thou seest a naked one, cover him; and despise not those own flesh. Then shall thy light break forth in the darkness; then shall thy justice go before thy face and the Lord shall fill thy soul with brightness and give thee everlasting rest." What wonder, then, that the very point to which every Christian man is tending—namely, the moment of judgment—when every Christian man is taking himself, "shall I pass through that golden gate, into the inner glory of God, or shall I be cast away into the flames of hell for ever?" Oh, awful moment! Oh, fearful question! Yet, in the moment when our fate shall hang in that balance which lies before us all, which no man can escape, is that terrible ordeal which every man among us must pass through, our Lord will say, "Show Me your mercy. You wish to pass into my glory; show Me how you have purchased it by works of mercy to the poor. I was hungry and you gave Me not to drink; I thirsty and you gave Me not to drink; sick and you would not visit Me nor confess Me; for as often as you have not refused the unto the poor you have refused it unto Me. Depart now, then, accursed, into everlasting flames." Oh! how sacred is the exercise of that charity and mercy the moment we see it through the eye of faith and hope; and unless it is this seen through the eyes of faith and hope, it may be a base virtue, but it is not the divine virtue of charity.

Now, this virtue, exalted and divine, do we find in the very first days of the Church. She alone could elevate this charity of which I speak. And why? Because she alone has the knowledge of Jesus Christ—she alone can recognize Him—she alone has the commission to preach His word and to evangelize His name unto the nations—she alone has the treasure surpassing all others—of His own Divine presence in her bosom. Therefore, she alone can create the virtue which acknowledged the claims of Him in the poor, and strikes a chord in His through them. From the first days of the Church's existence do we find that mercy shining upon her. During the first 300 years of the Church's existence, when to be a Catholic meant sentence of death; when Christians were obliged to hide their catacombs and tomb—for to show themselves was to meet sudden destruction—even then, the record of the Church tells us, whenever some great Roman was converted or whenever some great family of Rome received the light, the very first thing they did—the very impulse of their new religion—was to call an auction and dispose of everything they had; and then, when the money was lying there in a little great heaps of gold and silver, to call in the poor and distribute all to them. When St. Laurence was in his dungeon awaiting death, they told the Roman Governor that he was a deacon of the Christian Church and bald all the immense riches which it was whispered that they had hidden. They lied in that day about the poverty of the Church just as we hear their lies now, and say that we prizes are always trying to get the people's money. When the Governor heard this, he called his prisoner and said to him, "Lying man, it is true that this Christian Church to which you belong possesses great riches [treasures]" "Perfectly true." "Then," he said, "I will give you your life on one condition; that you bring all the treasures of the Church and hand them to me." St. Laurence went out and gathered the blind and the lame and the poor together and the poor and the sick, and brought them all, hundreds of them, before the Governor, and said, "Behold the treasures of the Church to which you belong possess great riches [treasures]" "Perfectly true." "Then," he said, "I will give you your life on one condition; that you bring all the treasures of the Church and hand them to me." St. Laurence went out and gathered the blind and the lame and the poor together and the poor and the sick, and brought them all, hundreds of them, before the Governor, and said, "Behold the treasures of the Church to which you belong possesses

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINS JULY 13.

July 7—Sunday—Seventh Sunday after Pentecost. Most Precious Blood of our Lord.
8—Monday—St. Elizabeth, Queen of Portugal, widow
9—Tuesday—St. Benedict Joseph Labre, Confessor.
10—Wednesday—The Seven Brothers, and St. Rufina and Secunda, M.M.
11—Thursday—St. Leo II., Pope and Confessor; St. Pius I., Pope and Martyr.
12—Friday—St. John Gualbert, Abbot; St. Nabor and Felix, Martyrs.
13—Saturday—St. Anacletus, Pope and Martyr.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....JULY 6, 1872.

AID FOR THE HOLY FATHER.

On our sixth page we publish the pastoral letter of his Grace the Archbishop which was read in the churches last Sunday. It deals with two very important matters. In the first of which alone we shall direct a few remarks at present. His Grace calls for aid for the Sovereign Pontiff who, in consequence of the unrighteous intervention of the so-called Kings of Italy, finds himself in great measure dependent upon the charity of the faithful. We hope the response to this appeal will be such as to reflect high credit upon the devotion and liberality of the San Francisco Catholics.

When the Pope was master of his legitimately inherited dominions, and was permitted to administer his temporal affairs in peace, he never sought pecuniary assistance from any one. Whatever was left of his moderate revenues, after paying the expenses of the most rigidly economical government in the face of the earth, was spent in providing for the wants of the Church and in responding to the calls of charity. It is truly wonderful how much his little purse was able to do with an income which is far surpassed by that of many men engaged in trade. When one considers that the spiritual wants of about twelve hundred and fifty millions of people, scattered over all over the world, had to be provided for; that discipline had to be maintained throughout the mightiest and most widespread organization ever known, or to be known, on the globe; that constant communication had to be kept up with the remotest parts of Christendom—in brief, when one considers the immense amount of business involved in the government of the Catholic Church, it becomes a source of astonishment how the necessary expenses could be met out of the scanty revenues of the Pontifical States.

Yet all this and even more was done. Pius IX. found something to spare wherewith to alleviate the sufferings of the poor and afflicted of all countries. Now, however, things are very much changed, and changed for the worse. Without any cause of quarrel, without the least excuse for justice, without even the formality of a declaration of war, Victor Emmanuel marched his legions into the Pope's dominions; overcame the resistance of the few soldiers in the Pontifical army, bombarded and captured Rome, and thus took possession of the States of the Church. The additional infamies perpetrated since then in the name and by his authority we need not enumerate. Our readers know well enough how the Robber King "confiscated" the property of bishops, priests, monks and nuns, sold it, and turned the proceeds into his own depleted treasury; how he seized upon churches and ecclesiastical buildings of every kind to use them for his own purposes; how he used every mean stratagem to defeat and persecute the Holy Father on every side; how he drove him from Rome. All these his Holiness bore with dignity, and as became one of those revolutionists who chant the praises of his murder, and promise eternal gratitude to the man bold enough to exorcise Pius IX. Moreover, the Sovereign Pontiff is absolutely penniless, being deprived of all resources, save and except the loving gifts of his faithful children. Some time ago, indeed, the Italian Government enacted the solemn farce of decreeing "a liberal allowance" (out of his own money) to him; but, of course, it never was paid, and it would not be accepted if it were offered. The Pope certainly would not degrade himself by taking any money from his unscrupulous and unchristian plunderers. The Italian Government is utterly bankrupt; every year its expenditure exceeds its income, the deficit has already reached an enormous sum, and really it could not give the Pope a single dollar unless it deprived some of its other creditors of an equal amount. But the agreeing to grant this wealthy Pontiff, whom they had ruthlessly despoiled, an annual allowance was a patent sham—a trick to deceive the world, which has fortunately not succeeded.

These things being so, the duty of Catholics is so plain that it seems superfluous to indicate it. They are bound before God and in conscience to supply the Holy Father with means to carry on the government of the Church and the work of the salvation of souls. The Church, though its existence and final triumph are guaranteed by the word of God, has to depend for its propagation and sustenance, at least in a considerable extent, upon human agencies. Thank heaven, these will never be wanting! In the midst of all the troubles and trials which afflict the Vicar of Christ, it is a consolation to behold with what eager love his children of all tribes and all peoples pour out their offerings before him. We trust that the Catholics of San Francisco will show the world that they are inferior to none in their attachment to the Holy See or in willingness to make sacrifices for the honor and glory of God. It will afford the collection for the Pope has been a splendid success—a success of which even the "land of gold" will have good reason to feel proud.

AN UNFAIR COMPARISON.

A correspondent, who does not make its acquainted with his name, finds fault with one assertion made in the article which we wrote last week on the Edith O'Gorman lectures. We said, in substance, that Catholics would not, under similar circumstances, copy the conduct of those who went to listen to the "Escaped Nun." Our correspondent, who is evidently not a Catholic, imagines he makes a point against us by telling how our coreligionists flocked to hear "a certain Mr. Dillon Eagan," who, "for reasons known and unknown," came to the resolution of joining the Catholic Church.

Our correspondent balances the one against the other. This is really most unfair, and we believe a little reflection would convince him of the fact. There is no parallel whatever between the two cases. With Mr. Dillon Eagan's reasons public or private, for abandoning the Episcopal Church we have nothing to do; we should prefer not being called upon to make any defence of them. Moreover, that individual editor, or rather, to speak more correctly, is proprietor of, a newspaper, in the columns of which he can, if so disposed, give details of his conversion, "reasons and reasons for his change." But we have something to do with those who went to hear him lecture, inasmuch as their flair fame is not long to be dear to us.

No person for a moment suspected that the convert from Episcopalianism would speak indecently, or so as to shock the sensibilities of the most scrupulous. All knew that he intended merely to discuss theological matters in a controversial fashion, though he could hardly say anything new upon the subject; and, to a point, he did not. The sum and substance of his discourse was that nowhere but in the Catholic Church could be find the principle of legitimate authority or of harmony of doctrine. He did not utter a disrespectful word of his former co-religionists, as men or as Christians. Still less did he charge them with being guilty of crimes he has been special of which humanity might shudder, or with being abominable hypocrits in their religious practices. He maintained that Episcopalianism was untaken in their religious practices. He maintained that Episcopalianism was untaken in their religious practices. He maintained that Episcopalianism was untaken

AID FOR THE HOLY FATHER.

Pastoral of Archbishop Alemany.

TO THE CLERGY AND LAITY OF THE DIOCESE OF SAN FRANCISCO:—Dearly Beloved: The occasion of our Union seems to demand of us to address you the following considerations: The affairs of the Holy City wake up deep and universal concern. The eyes of the world, both Christian and anti-Christian, are turned to Rome, but with varied hopes and feelings. The Catholic watches the progress of events, and learns with grief the progress of opinion. The schools of sound doctrine are harassed or closed; the teachers of moral principles are set aside, the retreats of holy virgins are nearly gone; religious houses have been seized by brute force, while the inmates of others linger out a sad existence in dread of the moment which will force them to chose an equal fate, and in which, robbed of their homes and means of subsistence, they shall be cast into the streets. We learn, with unmitigated pain, how the sacred images are impiously dragged, the holy temples sacrilegiously profaned, and the most solemn mysteries scoffed at, even within the churches, while no price can be said to adjust personal safety; and, the Sovereign Pontiff himself the father of two hundred millions of Christians, is deprived of liberty, the enemies of the Church and of social order exult over these events, and assemblies their anti-Christian conventicles in the very centre of Christianity, form their plots for the complete overthrow, if it were possible, of every vestige of Christianity. Such is their office conferred on them by the enemy of God and man.

But what is the part of the true Christian? What is the duty of every Catholic throughout the whole world under such an opposite and irreligious system? For he is from us to look with an eye of infidelity upon on the outrages perpetrated on our country, on our Church and its august, good, our Sovereign Pontiff. As Christians, we form part of a most noble society, being supernaturally children of God, made partakers of the divine nature and joint heirs with Christ of the kingdom of heaven. This society, being a visible body, must have a visible head. Christ cannot be the Head of the Church in a visible manner, since he withdrew his visible presence from it at his glorious ascension into Heaven; and if He wished His Church to be visible, as we must, have constituted in it a visible head; was Vicegerent, or representative, or Vicar. "It is a constant fact (says Balmez) that no society great or small can subsist, without the chief directing and governing it. In the family there is the authority of the father; in the town, and provinces there are magistrates and governors; in nations, if monarchies, there is a king; if republican, there is a president, a council, etc., that is to say, a chief under one name or another. The Catholic Church, therefore, being a society spread over the entire world, with its doctrines, its customs, its laws, could it possibly be without a chief? It would be contrived that Jesus Christ would have constituted His Church in such a way as to have left it no authority to govern it? Could He have had less foresight and good will than we, legislators, who, in giving their laws to a people, never forget to create an authority that would see to their observance? It may be said, perhaps, that for that purpose bishops have been appointed; but it is necessary to consider that the authority of each bishop is limited to his diocese; consequently, in matters appertaining to the whole Church, if there were not the authority of the bishops, we would have no competent authority. At every step arises disputes on faith and morals, at every step new definitions on the very foundation of discipline would be universe; whither could the faithful people have recourse, if Christ had not set on earth His vicar, in the person of the Roman Pontiff?" Christ said to His Church: "There shall be but one fold under one shepherd." Thus the institution of a visible Church as one fold, necessarily implies the existence of a visible shepherd protecting and directing his flock to the pastures of sound doctrine and guarding it from the presence of wolfs of error. As without a shepherd the sheep would scatter and wander unprotected till they would meet with their ruin, so, without a universal visible pastor, in the fold of Christ, each bishop would wander at discretion and substitute error for faith. He may believe to baptize as a true spiritual regeneration, or vice versa as a mere ordinance or token producing no moral effect in the soul; or he may admit a sacrament as a serious performance; he may determine at discretion, whether the Eucharist is the real body and blood, soul and divinity of Christ, or simply a piece of wheat bread; he may view matrimony as a sacrament, implying an indissoluble bond, or as a contract at will between two parties at a time or between many at once; he may hold that the entire Bible was revealed, or he may make extensive additions as he may or may not judge to have been written without inspiration, or he may pronounce the Holy Scriptures a great book, a book though rather not reliable in points of fact and mythical in its character; he may declare the resurrection or the divinity of Christ to be untenable; he may consider the Church to be the House of God, in which the faithful are to meet to receive the divine worship prescribed by him, or he may dispense himself and make a Church of his own, or worship God where and when and how he pleases.

Such must be, and are the natural results; such the sad wanderings of a flock without a Shepherd, realizing the saying, "strike the shepherd, and the sheep of the flock shall be dispersed." But the Catholic Church holds, that the identity of Christianity implies identity of belief and necessarily salvation division; it must have but one fold, it must be one, body and one soul by one spirit of truth and directed by one visible head. And as that head is the successor of St. Peter, the Bishop of Rome, we naturally feel that the oppression of the Roman Pontiff is our own, and that a blow aimed at him is aimed at the whole Church. Consequently we all should have recourse to the means within our reach for Christians against the oppression of the first Pope. We should make public and united cry, seeing for the conversion of the erring, the prosperity of the Church and the deliverance of the Holy Father. We must appeal to the Holy Apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul, to intercede to St. Jerome, that he not be indifferent to our petitions, but joining their to ours will present them before the throne of the Most High, the head of that Church, which they planted with so many labors and watered with their blood. We should also invoke the powerful intercession of St. Joseph—the patron of the whole Catholic world. And in a particular manner we should have recourse to the immaculate heart of Mary, whose merciful and powerful intercession with her Divine Son has always been felt by the Church. When Christendom was dismally tried by the strong arm of the Turks, and Christian civilization was on the eve of being superseded by Mohammedanism, the sainted Pope Pius V., miraculously revealed the victory of the Christians at Lepanto and the triumph of the Church through the intercession of the Mother of God, whom he then proclaimed and styled in the liturgy of the Church as the "Help of Christians." When Pius VII. was robbed by brute force of his Pontifical States, and, notwithstanding the most unequivocal guarantees of protection, his churches and clergy were persecuted and himself made a prisoner at home, and then ignominiously dragged from Rome to Savona and Fontainebleau; when, to all appearance, the prophecy of the enemies of the Church seemed to have becomes a reality—namely, that Rome had seen the last Pope—the Apostolic exile prayed and betook of the protection of the Mother of God, and those prayers did not prove in vain; for through her intercession the Pontiff believed, after a few years' trial, Heaven delivered him from the bands of his enemies, and he made his glorious re-entry to the Vatican amidst the most enthusiastic demonstrations of joy, both in Rome and throughout the world.

Another equally violent storm is raging over Rome at present, and its fury is not abating. What Pius VII. said to the faithful, "have courage and pray," is repeatedly enjoined on us by Pius IX. We should, therefore, redouble our humble and fervent supplications to God, we should frequently recite the Rosary to the Blessed Virgin, and with special appeal to the most tender and Sacred Heart of Jesus, reminding Him of the great storm which is trying the barque of Peter, and imploring Him to command the disturbing elements and to restore a great calm. And as a proof of our filial piety we should join the rest of the Catholic world by making a holy offering to the Holy Father, for which purpose we direct that on Sunday after next the clergy in charge of the churches of this diocese will receive the collection for the Peter's Pence, which will be sent by us to the Sovereign Pontiff, as a testimony of our profound and devoted love.

Observance of the Sabbath.

Moreover, we feel that we should use this opportunity to call your attention to a grave duty, which, no doubt, is faithly observed by many, but thought of too lightly by some arising to be Christians and by others in making no such claims, and that is the sanctification of the Lord's day. It may appear strange that we should blame the non-observance of the non-Christian; yet even such are concerned. All mankind belongs, and destined to happiness without end. And as such they can and ought to read the large book of the universe, which was obviously directed by a most intelligent mind, and is evidently governed by a divine hand, and that nothing short of a superhuman power could have preserved it invariably from the incursions of enemies, who crumble into dust one after the other, while the Church stands secure, ever fresh and vigorous, unchanging and immortal, the same yesterday, to day and forever, like its divine Founder. It is true that nations like—this divine spirit of truth—must ought to convince the world. ing of sin for his remaining in his unbelief. And it is not unreasonable to say that even here among nations there is a visible sanctity of the Church, enter its sacred edifice and worship God in it, especially on the Christian festive days.

But if such be the duty of the non-Christian, the same becomes far clearer and more binding in those professing Christianity. Enlightened by the heavenly torch of divine revelation, the Christian not only sees God as the Creator of all things, the immense ocean of being whose name is "He who is," and from whom everything that exists derives its being and perfection; but he sees Him also as the author of a still more admirable and endearing benefit: the work of the redemption, accomplished by the Son of God, not as at the creation by a simple fiat or expression of his will, but through the greatest humiliations, the most excruciating sufferings, the most ignominious and painful death, endured by him on of pure love for us; and this great work of our redemption may be said to have been terminated and happily accomplished on the glorious Sunday of Christ's resurrection. Consequently, the double benefit realised by the Christian lays him under the double obligation of offering to God a perfect sacrifice, for which four things are required—namely, adoration in the first place, thanksgiving and petition, God being the supreme Lord of all, should be adored by all rational creatures; He alone having the almighty power to forgive sin, we sinners should offer him the sacrifice of a contrite and humble heart; He being also the incomparable benefactor who gave us the world at the creation and His Son at the redemption, should receive from our grateful hearts the sacrifice of thanksgiving; and, finally, being the giver of all good gifts, He should receive the sweet incense of our humble supplications.

Thus the holy Scriptures, almost at every page, call our attention to the obligation of offering to God such religious homage. They declare that, since of Him, and by Him, and in Him are all things, we ought to be glory forever; that since He alone is and replenishes us with all His good things, we should give Him glory with a good heart; that we should not forget the joyous revelry of Egypt, but should bless Him with all the powers of our soul; for its forgetful of all our infinities, healeth all our diseases, and redeemeth our lives from destruction; that God is great and greatly to be praised from the rising to the setting sun from henceforth and forever; and that through Christ we should always offer to God a sacrifice of praise. They proclaim to us the sanctity and majesty of God as a supreme attribute that the very angels standing before Him veil their faces as if terrified enough to rest their glances on Him; that they are constantly singing to Him canticles of praise; that the very highest, the Seraphim, cover themselves before His throne of glory; and that all the heavenly spirits, whose number is myriads of myriads are inviting us all to join them in their hymns of praise, saying, "To Him who sitteth on the throne and to the Lamb, praise, and honor, and glory, and power, for ever and ever."

It is, therefore, obvious, both from reason and revelation that man are bound to offer to God the homage of adoration and glory in their minds and their hearts, the study of His divine perfections, of His benefits and laws; and that according to true Christian love most consecrate their souls to Him with acts of praise and thanksgiving, prayer and the most ardent love. It is equally evident, that man cannot generally discharge this obligation as social being, if the assembling of the faithful, ordained by God, to appear in an action brought against Him by the enemies of Christianity, have all been vain, and have only served to prove that its efficacy was have been proved by a divine hand, and that nothing short of a superhuman power could have preserved it invariably from the incursions of enemies, who crumble into dust one after the other, while the Church stands secure, ever fresh and vigorous, unchanging and immortal, the same yesterday, to day and forever, like its divine Founder. It is true that nations like—this divine spirit of truth—must ought to convince the world. ing of sin for his remaining in his unbelief. And it is not unreasonable to say that even here among nations there is a visible sanctity of the Church, enter its sacred edifice and worship God in it, especially on the Christian festive days.

But if such be the duty of the non-Christian, the same becomes far clearer and more binding in those professing Christianity. Enlightened by the heavenly torch of divine revelation, the Christian not only sees God as the Creator of all things, the immense ocean of being whose name is "He who is," and from whom everything that exists derives its being and perfection; but he sees Him also as the author of a still more admirable and endearing benefit: the work of the redemption, accomplished by the Son of God, not as at the creation by a

---

* Address Demonstrated, ch. 27.

† Is. 14: 16.

‡ Mat. 16: 18.

§ Is. 19: 9, 9.

---

AN ANTI-CATHOLIC PAPER.—The Catholic World takes the following item of news from a recent number of a leading New York publication:

"The proposition is under consideration to establish in this city (New York) a new anti-Catholic paper, partly devoted to opposing the religious tenets of the Roman Catholic Church, but still more than supposed attempts to secure political control in this city. It will support the ultra Protestant position of the Bible in the public schools, and will be backed, it is expected, by a large subscription among the three or four secret anti-Roman Catholic societies that exist in this country."

Is this to be the organ of the new Know Nothing party now in process of organization by "the powers that be" at Washington.

---

BANKING.

HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY

Office—Northeast corner of Montgomery and Market streets.

OFFICERS:

President.....M. D. SWEENY.
Vice-President.....C. D. O'SULLIVAN

DIRECTORS:

M. D. SWEENY | M. J. O'CONNOR.
C. D. O'SULLIVAN | P. MARTIN.
JOHN SULLIVAN. | GUSTAVE TOUCHARD.
E. J. TOBIN. | JOS. A. DONOHOE.
PETER DONAHUE.

Treasurer.....EDWARD MARTIN
Attorney.....RICHARD TOBIN

Remittances from the country may be sent through any Express Co., Post Office Order, or any reliable banking house; but the Society will not be responsible for the safe delivery. The deposits of the Society must accompany the first deposit. A proper pass book will be issued to the party for whom the deposit is made.

Deposits received from 10½ upwards.

OFFICE HOURS—From 9 A. M. to 3 P. M.

JOS. A. DONOHOE, | EUGENE KELLY
President. | Vice-President.

DONOHOE, KELLY & CO.
SAN FRANCISCO.

EUGENE KELLY & Co.
NEW YORK

BANKERS.

EXCHANGE ON

NEW YORK, LONDON, AND IRELAND.

BANK OF IRELAND.....DUBLIN.

Payable at all the Branches.

AND IN EVERY COUNTY TOWN IN IRELAND.

HOTELS.

Removal.

THE SECOND STREET HOUSE

Has Removed to 115 Second street,

Northeast corner of Mines. Furnished Rooms to let with or without board, on the most reasonable terms. Call and examine.

M. O'NEIL, Proprietor.

CENTRAL HOTEL

614 AND 616 SANSOME STREET,

Between Broadway and Pacific.....San Francisco

THIS NEW, LARGE AND COMMODIOUS Hotel has been thoroughly renovated by the well known proprietor, M. FARRELL, late proprietor of the Occidental Hotel, and will be kept by him on the same liberal principles that secured for it the liberal patronage of the public for so many years. There is a first-class table, and the bar is supplied with the choicest brands of liquors and cigars. Free coach to and from the house. Passengers and baggage conveyed to the House FREE; also from the House to the boats and cars.

M. FARRELL, Proprietor.

CITY OFFICE—No. 11 Third street.

RAILROAD HOUSE

Corner of Sansome and Pacific streets, San Francisco, is now opened by

P. CASSERLY.

Late of the Transcript House, and will be happy to receive his friends and the public in general.

The House is situated in the most central place, with Elevator, Baths and all other modern improvements. Private entrance for ladies, who will be met either single or in parties.

The best attendants will be found at the counter and conveyance of Boarders.

Board and Lodging per week.....$5 to $7

There is a fire-proof Safe in the House, where money and valuables can be kept at the risk of the proprietor.

☞ Free Coach in the House.☜

P. CASSERLY, Proprietor.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA.—IN JUSTICES' Court of the City and County of San Francisco. Between Corner of Montgomery and Jackson streets. E. CUMMINS & CO., PLAINTIF, residents of said City and County, vs. DAVID MALONEY, Defendant, a non resident of said City and County. Action brought in the Justices' Court of the City and County of San Francisco, and Complaint filed in the office of the Clerk of said Court.

The People of the State of California, to DAVID MALONEY, Greeting: You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff, in the Justices' Court of the City and County of San Francisco, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within three days (exclusive of the day of service) after service of this Summons. The said action is brought to recover of you the sum of two hundred and seventy two 30,100 dollars, gold coin of the United States, agreed to you and to the Justices' Court of the City and County of San Francisco, and Complaint filed in the office of the Clerk of said Court.

And you are hereby required to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said Plaintiff will take judgment for the said sum of $272 30,100 dollars, gold coin of the United States, and damages. The action has been so agreed, and you are required to appear for trial before E. F. BARBIER, Esq., one of the Justices of said Court.

In the name of the People of the State of California, greeting: Make legal service and due return hereof. Given under my hand, this 6th day of May, A. D. 1872. By order of

JAMES C. PENNIE, U. S.

Presiding Justice of the Peace of the City and County of San Francisco.

ROBERT L. WEDEKIND,

Attorney for Plaintiff. 1st Pub. June 22.

Silver-Plated, PORCELAIN-LINED

ICE PITCHERS,

OF THE FINEST DESIGN AND QUALITY.

Being the largest manufacturers of

SILVER-PLATED TABLE WARE

IN THE WORLD.

We keep indestructible and finest standards.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.,

(c) 209 Broadway, New York

GROCERIES, WINES AND LIQUORS

WILLIAM B. DOLAN,

103 Third Street.....San Francisco,

Importer and Dealer, Wholesale and Retail in French Wines and Brandies,

AND

Irish Whiskey,

Imported direct from Ireland.

HE HAS ALSO ON HAND A LARGE AS-sortment of California Wines of every description, which he will dispose of, in lots to suit the trade, for the convenience of families.

All orders left at the store, 103 Third street, will be promptly attended to, and delivered free of charge in any part of the city. 1719

JOHN FLANAGAN & CO.,

Importers and Jobbers of

Fine Brandies, Wines, Liquors, etc.,

No. 604 Battery street,

San Francisco.

Foreign Liqueurs in bond. Fine Brandies, Holland Gin, Port, Claret, etc., sold in quantities to suit the purchaser. Also, fine wines in native California Wines and Brandies. feb 10

M. H. KELLY. JOHN EGAN.

Kelly & Egan,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

FINE WINES AND LIQUORS

No. 604 Battery street,

Near Jackson. San Francisco.

E. Commins & Co.

(Successors to P. Riley & Co.,)

WHOLESALE LIQUOR MERCHANTS

and

No. 805 Front street.

A. P. HOTALING & CO.,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

WINES AND LIQUORS.

AGENTS FOR THE J. S. CUTTER

OLD BOURBON WHISKY,

C. P. MOORMAN & CO., DISTILLERS,

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY.

OWING TO THE DESERVED REPUTATION of this celebrated brand of Whisky, unprincipled persons have sent out a spurious article now, engaged in counterfeiting the imitations of the same, under the popular name of CUTTER, and the unsuspecting citizen purchases and not the bogus, represented to them as the genuine article.

To guard as far as possible the public against fraud of this character, we would call the trade and consumers that this is the only genuine brand of CUTTER Whisky, and that we are the sole Agents for the same on the Pacific Coast.

A. P. HOTALING & CO.,

311 Jackson street, San Francisco.

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.

SULLIVAN, KELLY & CO.,

Northwest corner Pine and Front Sts.,

Where they offer for sale

THE LARGEST STOCK OF

PAINTS,

OILS,

Glass,

ETC., ETC., ON THE PACIFIC COAST,

AT THE LOWEST MARKET RATES.

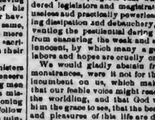
101, 103 and 105 FRONT STREET,

110 PINE STREET. tf



Premium Cutler.

First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1871
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1870
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1869
First Premium of Mechanics' Institute in 1868
First Premium of Mechanics' Institute in 1867
First Premium of Mechanics' Institute in 1866
First Premium of New Orleans, 1870.

M. PRICE,

FOR HOME-MADE CUTLERY,

STORE: 618 KEARNY ST., bet. Pine and

FACTORY: 10 STEVENSON STREET,

SAN FRANCISCO.

☞ Razors, Scissors, Shears, etc., made to order and warranted. Particular attention paid to Infirmary Instruments. Every article guaranteed to be as represented. Orders promptly attended to. 1699

POLL TAX

Now Due.

AND PAYABLE AT THE

ASSESSOR'S OFFICE

OR TO A DEP TY.

mh1

NOTICE TO TAX-PAYERS.

UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE REVE-nue Law passed by the last Legislature of this State, all taxes remaining unpaid on the 1st day of July next, and it is imperative upon me to levy a penalty of twenty-five per cent. upon all taxes not paid on or before that date.

I hereby request all citizens and tax payers to come forward and pay their taxes before the 1st day of July, in order to make room for a large number now in transit.

Will and Must be Sold,

No bargains may be expected. You can assure your self of the truth of this statement by a personal examination. The stock consists of a very variety. From the FINEST SILK HAT to a 98 cent FELT.

All who have their trade marked will not touch the

His Hats are fair when others fade,
They look prettier than the rest;
If perfect shape and giant stands
Those from DESMOND the Hatter.

C. DESMOND, A New Montgomery St.,

mh16 Under the Grand Hotel.

AVOID QUACKS.—A VICTIM OF EARLY indiscretion, causing nervous debility, premature decay etc., having tried in vain every remedy advertised, has discovered a simple means cure, which he will send free to his fellow-sufferers. Address NATHANIEL MAYFIELD, Station D, Bible House, New York.

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORporated according to the laws of the State of California, and which has been in successful operation for the Twenty first Annual session, will be re-opened on the 1st of AUGUST, 1871. The course of instruction embraces the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once.....$ 10 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter.....60 00
Washing, per quarter.....7 50

Physician's fees (unless it may be preferred to pay the bills in case of sickness) per quarter.....2 50

Piano, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges, but there is no extra charge for the French, Spanish or German Languages, or for Fancy Sewing and Fancy Needlework.

The bonds are required to be made half yearly in advance. Pupils will find it much to their advantage to be present at the opening of the session.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers,

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical Course receive the degree of B. A. (Bachelor of Arts), B. S. (Bachelor of Science), Master of Accounts.

The Commercial Course has been established for the benefit of those who desire to acquire a practical education in as short a time as possible.

The Junior Department is conducted on the plan adopted in the College, one own language, special attention being paid to Reading, Writing, Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric are pursued in connection with the Elementary Studies.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

For board, bedding, tuition, washing and mending.....$200 00
Entrance fee, to be paid only once.....10 00
Graduation fee.....10 00

DAY PUPILS.

Junior class.....$40 00
Senior class.....60 00

Music, vocal and instrumental, drawing and modern languages, will form extra charges. The two sessions of the Scholastic year commence respectively on the 15th of August and the 15th of January.

For further particulars regarding the College to be addressed to the Secretary, Rev. P. ANTHONY.

Very Rev. P. HENNESSY, Superior.

jy15

DAY SCHOOLS

FOR

Boys and Girls.

THE SISTERS OF MERCY HAVE JUST OPened a commodious School building on the corner of Bryant, where little will be received at the following rates, payable monthly in advance:

A Boys' School is being prepared on Rincon Hill, to be opened on the 1st of August, for the reception of boys under the age of seven years.

Both Schools will be opened on the 15th June, 1871.

SISTER MARY JOSEPH,

Superior of Sisters of Mercy.

San Francisco, May 17, 1871.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN SAN Barbara, a short distance from the sea. It is most delightfully located. The air is pure, the grounds are extensive, and the building is large and well ventilated.

The system of education embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education.

TERMS:

(Invariably half in advance)

Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, etc., per month.....$20 00
Piano, and use of instrument, per month.....2 00
Use of bed.....1 00
Not extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needle Work.

For further particulars apply to

SISTERS OF CHARITY,

jy20 Santa Barbara, Cal.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

DEGREES CONFERRED

IN

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,

SANTA BARBARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THE SIXTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUtion will open on the 15th of August next. St. Francis, will commence on the first Sunday of August.

The object of the institution is to give a good English, Mathematical, Classical and Philosophical education, at the lowest possible rate—a want long felt in California, and which will be a great advantage to the ranch of all.

TERMS.

Entrance Fee (to be paid but once).....$10 00
Tuition, Board and Washing, per session, of about five months.....150 00

Music, French and German form extra charges.

Use of Bed and Bedding, per session.....$10 00

Physician's fees (unless it may be preferred to pay the bills in case of sickness) per quarter.....2 50

Payments must be made half yearly in advance.

Parents will pay for medical attendance, and apothecary's bills.

Money will not be advanced by the College; for the same, Parents and guardians are requested to do. Pupils will find it much to their advantage to be present at the opening of the session.

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE,

Cal.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers,

Santa Clara, Santa Clara county, Cal.

INDUCTED BY THE PRIESTS OF THE COLlege of Santa Clara, and by the Christian Brothers.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN A PLEASant part of the county of Santa Clara, between San Jose and San Francisco, and is easily accessible by the railroad cars, which stop at the College every day. The grounds are extensive, and the building is large and well ventilated.

The course of studies is classical, scientific and commercial. Special attention is given to those destined for teaching the natural sciences.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

For board, tuition, washing and mending.....$200 00
Entrance fee, to be paid only once.....10 00
Graduation fee.....10 00

DAY PUPILS.

Junior class.....$40 00
Senior class.....60 00

Music, vocal and instrumental, drawing and modern languages, will form extra charges. The two sessions of the Scholastic year commence respectively on the 15th of August and the 15th of January.

For further particulars regarding the College to be addressed to the Secretary, Rev. P. ANTHONY.

Very Rev. P. HENNESSY, Superior.

jy15

C. DESMOND,

PRACTICAL HATTER,

No. 5 New Montgomery Street,

GRAND HOTEL BUILDING.

IN CLOSING OFF HIS LARGE AND EXTENsive stock of Hats and Caps, preparatory to the annual stock taking, C. DESMOND will offer his entire stock of goods at a large reduction in order to make room for a large invoice now expected.

Will and Must be Sold,

No bargains may be expected. You can assure your self of the truth of this statement by a personal examination. The stock consists of a very variety. From the FINEST SILK HAT to a 98 cent FELT.

All who have their trade marked will not touch the

His Hats are fair when others fade,
They look prettier than the rest;
If perfect shape and giant stands
Those from DESMOND the Hatter.

C. DESMOND, A New Montgomery St.,

mh16 Under the Grand Hotel.

PIUS II.

The 16th of the month will be the two-hundredth anniversary of the election of Pius the Ninth to the See of St. Peter. Who can forget the burst of enthusiasm which rose and of Europe to the other, greeted the newly-elected Pontiff, filling all with unwonted excitement, and hope here? The anti-Catholic world was not fairly by surprise. Never had the prince of a Pope been hailed with such universal acclamation and joyful feel-ing. Never before had the Vicar of Christ to possess such wonderful influence men's minds. The last years of Gregory the Sixteenth had been marked by many events; nothing had called forth special outburst of those sentiments of devotion and love towards the Holy See, even in the coldest times, cease not in Catholic hearts. Calm had been sought to drown his voice with volleys of sarcasm and abuse.

Blessed be God, who in times of such peril has given us so holy and so fearless a Pontiff. May he long continue to watch over the many dangers wherewith we are beset! May he live to see the final triumph of the Church; and, with the Saints in well-earned reward, may we ha l his sus-tenance during life, and his benediction at the hour of our departure!—Westminster (London) Gazette, June 8.

Foreign ambassadors are continually arriving in Paris. A new mission has been opened at the Hotel du Helder. The mission of his immediate suites of the Yussuf, and are Prince Hassan, son of the sultan; Prince Yussouf, Ibrahim Khan, interpreter of Turkish; and several English officers, each of whom are bringing to London presents to offer to Queen Victoria from the sovereign of Yunnan lies between the empire of China and Burmah, and is governed by a Mussulman chief, and has received all the traditions of costume and manners.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LYNCH & COMIEN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

Overstrung, Grand, Square & Upright

PIANOS.

WAREROOMS,

Nos. 204, 206, 208 and 210 Broadway

NEW YORK.

THESE PIANOS ARE UNSURPASSED FOR Their Elastic Touch, Singing quality, full, round and powerful Tone, Great Durability, and, in short, everything that renders a PIANO PERFECT

Description and Prices.

(The Pianos will be delivered in San Francisco at the Prices given.)

No. 1—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, plain legs, carved trusses.....$ 375
No. 2—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, moulding on pilaste, carved legs and trusses.....410
No. 3—7 Octaves. Very large front, round corners, serpentine moulding, carved legs and trusses.....450
No. 4—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, serpentine moulding, beveled top, carved legs and trusses.....450
No. 5—7 Octaves. Four large round corners, serpentine moulding, beveled top, carved legs and trusses, three mouldings.....470
No. 7—7 Octaves. Grand.....600

These Instruments are all in Rosewood Cases, beautifully polished.

UPRIGHT PIANOS.

Seven Octaves—Black Walnut case.....$ 600
Seven Octaves—Rosewood case.....650

PARLOR ORGANS AND MELODEANS, of all sizes and styles, at manufacturers' prices.

TESTIMONIALS.

Below will be found a few of many letters sent as complimentary to our Pianos:

From Gottschalk, Prof. W. T. Thompson,

NEW YORK, May 27, 1870.

Messrs. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: I am very much pleased with the Piano you made for me. Every lover of music will be delighted with it, admired by all who have seen and heard it, for its fine tone, choice of touch and lasting qualities. Our most musicians and distinguished persons have called upon it and have been pleased with it, and pronounce it a fine instrument. We ourselves are charmed with it. I shall recommend you to my friends in my travels. Wishing much success to you, I am very truly and respectfully yours, GOTTSCHALK.

The original of the above letter can be seen at this office. Ed. MONITOR.

[From the World-renowned Artist, Camilla Urso.]

NEW YORK, May 27, 1870.

Messrs. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: After giving your Pianos a fair trial, I am happy to consider them as the achievement you have made. Your instruments possess rare merits, and it gives me pleasure to recommend them to the public.

Yours truly, CAMILLA URSO.

[From Rev. J. Shea, S. J., President of St. John's College, Fordham.]

FORDHAM, N. Y., March 4, 1870.

Messrs. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: I have much pleasure in stating that the instrument I have purchased from you has given entire satisfaction to our Fr. and Professors and Pupils in Music.

J. SHEA, S. J., President.

From the Sisters of Charity, Academy of Holy Cross, 138 West Twenty-third street, New York.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: The Piano we have purchased from you is a splendid instrument—full, rich, and sweet in tone. We take great pleasure in recommending it to the public.

Yours truly, SISTER SUPERIOR.

Mrs. Jeanne Sadlier, 31 West Thirty-eighth street, New York:

Mrs. Jeanne Sadlier has much pleasure in stating that the instrument purchased from Messrs. Lynch & Comien's Piano is one we fully admire, and we consider it a really good instrument—mellow, rich, and sweet in tone.

[Extract of a letter from the Superior of Sisters of Mercy, Buffalo, N. Y.]

I have much pleasure in stating that the instrument purchased from Messrs. Lynch & Comien's Piano is one we fully admire, and we consider it a really good instrument—mellow, rich, and sweet in tone.

[Extract of a letter from the Superior of Sisters of Mercy, Buffalo, N. Y.]

I have much pleasure in stating that the instrument purchased from Messrs. Lynch & Comien's Piano is one we fully admire, and we consider it a really good instrument—mellow, rich, and sweet in tone.

Having used Pianos of different makers, I am happy to say that Messrs. Lynch & Comien's Pianos is the one we like best for its fine tone and touch, and we feel confident that it will prove satisfactory to purchasers.

Yours truly, SISTER SUPERIOR.

Mrs. Jeanne Sadlier, 31 West Thirty-eighth street, New York:

Mrs. Jeanne Sadlier has much pleasure in stating that the instrument purchased from Messrs. Lynch & Comien's Piano is one we fully admire, and we consider it a really good instrument—mellow, rich, and sweet in tone.

[Extract of a letter from the Superior of Sisters of Mercy, Buffalo, N. Y.]

I have much pleasure in stating that the instrument purchased from Messrs. Lynch & Comien's Piano is one we fully admire, and we consider it a really good instrument—mellow, rich, and sweet in tone.

Having used Pianos of different makers, I am happy to say that Messrs. Lynch & Comien's Pianos is the one we like best for its fine tone and touch, and we feel confident that it will prove satisfactory to purchasers.

Yours truly, SISTER SUPERIOR.

From the Sisters of Charity, Academy of Holy Cross, 138 West Twenty-third street, New York.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: The Piano we have purchased from you is a splendid instrument—full, rich, and sweet in tone. We take great pleasure in recommending it to the public.

Yours truly, SISTER SUPERIOR.

Mrs. Jeanne Sadlier, 31 West Thirty-eighth street, New York:

Mrs. Jeanne Sadlier has much pleasure in stating that the instrument purchased from Messrs. Lynch & Comien's Piano is one we fully admire, and we consider it a really good instrument—mellow, rich, and sweet in tone.

[Extract of a letter from the Superior of Sisters of Mercy, Buffalo, N. Y.]

I have much pleasure in stating that the instrument purchased from Messrs. Lynch & Comien's Piano is one we fully admire, and we consider it a really good instrument—mellow, rich, and sweet in tone.

Having used Pianos of different makers, I am happy to say that Messrs. Lynch & Comien's Pianos is the one we like best for its fine tone and touch, and we feel confident that it will prove satisfactory to purchasers

MY BEAUTIFUL CHILD.

AFTER THE MANNER OF "BEAUTIFUL SNOW."

Beautiful child by the mother's knee,
Be the mystic future what will there be?
A demon of sin, or an angel station—
A poisonous Upas, or immortal Hygeia—
A spirit of evil, flashing down
With the lurid light of a fiery crown—
Or gilding it with a shining track,
Like the morning star that ne'er looks back—
Undistinct dreamer that ever smiled,
Which will thou be, my beautiful child?

Beautiful child, in my garden bowers,
Friend of the butterflies, birds and flowers!
Mate in the sparkling crystalline stream,
Dweak of fresh in thy fairy eye beam,
Was there ever a whiter soul than thine
Worshipped by love in a mortal shrine!
My heart then best sheltered for three sweet years
From watchers of hope through mists of tears—
Mine beyond which the many smile,
With its hale of glory's name all the while.

Beautiful child, in thy look is given,
A gleam serene—not to earth, but to heaven!
With thy half-tale-ups and prattling tongue,
Would thou couldst ever thus be young!
Like the Rapid scrals of the mocking birds,
From mute to last thy voice is heard;
Now often in the garden nooks thou'rt found,
With flowers thy curly head around,
And kneeling beside me with flower so quaint—
Oh! who would not dote on my infant saint!

Beautiful child, what thy fate shall be,
Providence is wisely hidden from me;
A fallen star may not leave my side,
And of sorrow and shame become the bride,
Redeeming, redeeming through the cold street,
With a curse behind and before thy feet;
Ashamed to live and afraid to die,
Famine, no friend, and a pitiless sky;
Merciful Father! my brain goes wild—
Oh! keep from evil as my innocent child!

Beautiful child, may'st thou soar above,
A warning cherub of joy and love!
A drop on eternity's mighty sea,
Blessed in life's beautiful tree—
Floating, flowering evermore,
In the eternal light of a golden shore;
And as I gaze on thy calm bloom
And thy radiant face, they depart my gloom
I pray to Providence that thou may'st be
And His love protect my beautiful child.

AN HONEST METHODIST.

What need he or we care for Catholic doctrine? Surely, Piety and not of Genuine Catholicism.

Protestants might well take lessons from Catholics in some things!

1. In Organized Christian Work. The Jesuits patrols its parish. He knows the people. He looks after the poor. He has got up educational institutions in the rules and regulations of the Church. He provides especially for the sick and the dying. After all, where has Protestantism been such comfortable hospitals and systematized charity as Romanism can show in our cities?

We have frequently been called to visit Protestant patients in Catholic hospitals, by manner to their own request; and we have been received by the managers with genuine Christian courtesy and permitted to read the Bible, to converse, and to pray with the Romanist under the kindest encouragement—and all this inside Roman walls. Patients, picked up by these Samaritans, have always allowed their choice of religious advisers. If they make no choice, or if they feel indifferent, as is frequently the case, then the priest is sent for to instruct and comfort. Patients need to be taught their personal knowledge, and may more prejudiced disavowal of be truth entered into the heart. Let us learn much more also to be accounted for in the judgment. We have found the priests uniform in their kindness. That is a wiser and more Christian economy than that of many Protestants who will have nothing to do with a Romanist.

Romanism may have grievous faults and open superstitions, but its plan of touching and reaching the masses, of bringing and holding them within the pale of the Church, of forbearing with sinners, of nailing common interests and of looking after the wants of the poor, of the sick and dying, so commend themselves to angels and men.

If a Methodist were to go into a house of ill-fame, and be wounded in some city far from home, too chances to one that he would be fed and find a friend for his life.

Sons of Charity in some Catholic hospital—and one chance to ten thousand in a Protestant would have to lie on a pillow or a plate.

While Protestant brick and mortar go extraordinary lengths to have the doors open for fashion on the Sabbath, Roman Catholic money and material proffer comfort to the afflicted, the poor, the sick, for all, and open every day, with tender hearts and helping hands for the sick of every disease, and the wounded and maimed from any cause. We should take a practical lesson in Christian love from our enemies. And if they are really doing God service, let us not hinder by any sneer, or by any slight upon their motives. Let us say and charge to talk; while it is costly and self-denying to work.

2. In Devotion. Roman Catholicism are not more fair-weather Christians. If the church is working-house never leaves our side. And of sorrow and shame become the bride, endeavoring, observing through the cold street, With a curse behind and before thy feet; Ashamed to live and afraid to die, Famine, no friend, and a pitiless sky; Merciful Father! my brain goes wild— Oh! keep from evil as my innocent child!

Beautiful child, may'st thou soar above,
A warning cherub of joy and love!
A drop on eternity's mighty sea,
Blessed in life's beautiful tree—
Floating, flowering evermore,
In the eternal light of a golden shore;
And as I gaze on thy calm bloom
And thy radiant face, they depart my gloom
I pray to Providence that thou may'st be
And His love protect my beautiful child.

AN HONEST METHODIST.

What need he or we care for Catholic doctrine? Surely, Piety and not of Genuine Catholicism.

Protestants might well take lessons from Catholics in some things!

1. In Organized Christian Work. The Jesuits patrols its parish. He knows the people. He looks after the poor. He has got up educational institutions in the rules and regulations of the Church. He provides especially for the sick and the dying. After all, where has Protestantism been such comfortable hospitals and systematized charity as Romanism can show in our cities?

We have frequently been called to visit Protestant patients in Catholic hospitals, by manner to their own request; and we have been received by the managers with genuine Christian courtesy and permitted to read the Bible, to converse, and to pray with the Romanist under the kindest encouragement—and all this inside Roman walls. Patients, picked up by these Samaritans, have always allowed their choice of religious advisers. If they make no choice, or if they feel indifferent, as is frequently the case, then the priest is sent for to instruct and comfort. Patients need to be taught their personal knowledge, and may more prejudiced disavowal of be truth entered into the heart. Let us learn much more also to be accounted for in the judgment. We have found the priests uniform in their kindness. That is a wiser and more Christian economy than that of many Protestants who will have nothing to do with a Romanist.

Romanism may have grievous faults and open superstitions, but its plan of touching and reaching the masses, of bringing and holding them within the pale of the Church, of forbearing with sinners, of nailing common interests and of looking after the wants of the poor, of the sick and dying, so commend themselves to angels and men.

If a Methodist were to go into a house of ill-fame, and be wounded in some city far from home, too chances to one that he would be fed and find a friend for his life.

Sons of Charity in some Catholic hospital—and one chance to ten thousand in a Protestant would have to lie on a pillow or a plate.

While Protestant brick and mortar go extraordinary lengths to have the doors open for fashion on the Sabbath, Roman Catholic money and material proffer comfort to the afflicted, the poor, the sick, for all, and open every day, with tender hearts and helping hands for the sick of every disease, and the wounded and maimed from any cause. We should take a practical lesson in Christian love from our enemies. And if they are really doing God service, let us not hinder by any sneer, or by any slight upon their motives. Let us say and charge to talk; while it is costly and self-denying to work.

3. In Devotion. Roman Catholicism are not more fair-weather Christians. If the church is working-house never leaves our side. And of sorrow and shame become the bride, endeavoring, observing through the cold street, With a curse behind and before thy feet; Ashamed to live and afraid to die,

Dr. Newman in the Oratory Pulpit.

The Birmingham Daily Mail has been recently publishing an interesting series of pen-and-ink sketches of the style and personal appearance of some of the most prominent of the preachers of Birmingham, and giving them to its readers under the title of "Pulpit Photographs." The last of the series has just been printed, and its subject is the great and venerable ecclesiastic whose name we have given above. Easter Sunday last was one of those rare and longed-for occasions, and it was then that the writer in the Birmingham Mail took his "photograph." The High Mass of the glorious festival has just begun, and presently, proceeds the photographer,

A striking figure, habited in cassock and surplice, and wearing the inevitable biretta, left the choir, bowed reverently to the altar, and came a few paces down the church. It was Dr. Newman going to the pulpit, which is fixed against one of the pillars of the nave. As he comes the whole congregation turns to him with affectionate interest, and the few strangers present regard him with much the same feeling, stimulated by natural curiosity. Those who saw him for the first time could not but instinctively feel themselves in the presence of a man of special mark. Physically, even, Dr. Newman is notable. He is now 70, but at a little distance he does not look much over 50. His form is tall, yet unthinned by time, hangs carelessly across his forehead is still in full flow of dark hair, which is somewhat hides the loftiness and breadth of the brow. The face and frame are thin and delicate, but the features, framed into the ascetic shape; but the keen flash of the eyes frequently belies, though small and deep set, shows whatever austerities may be practiced—and we doubt if these are severe as they have not visibly left upon the natural quickness and humor of the man. There is an eager questioning air about him, combined with a great sense of strength, this produced by the massive forehead, the large, sensitive nose and the thin, firm mouth (the mouth somewhat resembling an eagle's), but redeemed by the softer expression of features as a whole. He remembers—which is full of quiet humor and kindly malice—the whole work of mouth that tells a man's character, recollects as to himself and his ideas of truth, yet tolerant of others, and regards them more than instead of persecuting. Indeed, you see in the face generally, and especially in the eyes of the man, the truth of a sentence which Dr. Newman wrote once of himself: "Neither at this nor at any time of my life, nor now when I am fancied, could I have cut off a Puritan's ears; and I think the case of a Spanish auto de fe would have been the death of me." One sees this in the lines of the face—lines which are plenty of them—and every movement of the man, as he sets quickly towards the pulpit, with the head of lowly bowed forward, and a slight falter in the gait; and seeing it, one attends the more carefully to the simple, and partly from veneration of his character and his rank, and partly from the clinging influence of ancient associations—does wishes for a moment, to be the acolyte who precedes him, and then stands aside to let him pass. What is the text? The writer is ashamed to say that he forgets it—the result of a habit received in early life, when (however heavily the weight remember) nothing seemed measure, nor persuasion, nor the promise of a coveted reward, could induce the boy to forget a text unbroken. But the loss of the text in this case is made up by the completeness of the sermon in the manner in which it was delivered. Dr. Newman retains all the old slivery resources of his voice, and enough of its strength and quality—penetrating without shrillness, and sonorous without heaviness—are audible, for instance, clear and bell-like, to the very door of the church. Here is another thing which the writer heard when speak in public—the last time was on the famous occasion when, standing in the pulpit, and with folded hands and impassive countenance and thrilling tones he denounced and defended the doctrine on "The Protestant Use." His tones are not as full and rich as they were then—age "stalls" upon the strongest of us, and the finest fools of speakers—but after a moment or two the sense of difference is lost, and one seems to be listening once more to the orator in his prime. The manner of the sermon was perfect. Little or no action—for he remembers that, coming from where he does, the first time he heard Dr. Lynch preach the ascetic stage) but the keen flash of the eyes frequently belies, though small and deep set, shows whatever austerities may be practiced—and we doubt if these are severe as they have not visibly left upon the natural quickness and humor of the man. There is an eager questioning air about him, combined with a great sense of strength, this produced by the massive forehead, the large, sensitive nose and the thin, firm mouth (the mouth somewhat resembling an eagle's), but redeemed by the softer expression of features as a whole. He remembers—which is full of quiet humor and kindly malice—the whole work of mouth that tells a man's character, recollects as to himself and his ideas of truth, yet tolerant of others, and regards them more than instead of persecuting. Indeed, you see in the face generally, and especially in the eyes of the man, the truth of a sentence which Dr. Newman wrote once of himself: "Neither at this nor at any time of my life, nor now when I am fancied, could I have cut off a Puritan's ears; and I think the case of a Spanish auto de fe would have been the death of me." One sees this in the lines of the face—lines which are plenty of them—and every movement of the man, as he sets quickly towards the pulpit, with the head of lowly bowed forward, and a slight falter in the gait; and seeing it, one attends the more carefully to the simple, and partly from veneration of his character and his rank, and partly from the clinging influence of ancient associations—does wishes for a moment, to be the acolyte who precedes him, and then stands aside to let him pass. What is the text? The writer is ashamed to say that he forgets it—the result of a habit received in early life, when (however heavily the weight remember) nothing seemed measure, nor persuasion, nor the promise of a coveted reward, could induce the boy to forget a text unbroken. But the loss of the text in this case is made up by the completeness of the sermon in the manner in which it was delivered. Dr. Newman retains all the old slivery resources of his voice, and enough of its strength and quality—penetrating without shrillness, and sonorous without heaviness—are audible, for instance, clear and bell-like, to the very door of the church. Here is another thing which the writer heard speak in public—the last time was on the famous occasion when, standing in the pulpit, and with folded hands and impassive countenance and thrilling tones he denounced and defended the doctrine on "The Protestant Use." His tones are not as full and rich as they were then—age "stalls" upon the strongest of us, and the finest fools of speakers—but after a moment or two the sense of difference is lost, and one seems to be listening once more to the orator in his prime. The manner of the sermon was perfect. Little or no action—for he remembers that, coming from where he does, the first time he heard Dr. Lynch preach the sermon is part of the action—but a fastened attention to the text or theme of style; so thought indeed of style at all. If there was art, it was the highest kind which conceals art; all was natural, easy spontaneous; the language colloquial sometimes; the sentences short, with exquisite finesse, and very simple; the method singularly clear in opening, developing, and sustaining those dreadful helps of "three heads and an application"—Cerberus with an added head—but which seem essential to most sermons. There was scarcely an attempt at argument in the sermon—at least in the sense in which it was said of Lord Mansfield that "Murray's statements are argumentative," the statements of Dr. Newman are compelled by the force of his reasoning; strong, forcible, convincing by persuasion; and, above all, clothed with an air of personal conviction—a firmness that it passed into the calmness of absolute confidence.

Was it a successful sermon? Well, it was not what is called a great discourse, not like those which used to hold an audience breathless and spell-bound at St. Mary's; or like some of those which, on special occasions, Dr. Newman has preached in the Oratory. It was a plain sermon suited to the day, an exposition of the lessons of the resurrection of Easter as a symbol of the victory of life over death, of good over evil, of truth over falsehood, meaning weakness over superstitious strength. As the final words of the preacher died away, and the strain of the Mass rose once more in solemn cadence, the strangeness of the present received the memories of the past. The veil of many years drew itself, the Oratory faded into space, and the towers and spires of Oxford seemed again to fill the air.

CATHOLIC ITEMS.

Eastern.

A Protestant clergyman of Boston has ordered 100 copies of Father "Tom" Burke's great temperance discourse for distribution among his people.

At St. Mary's church Chillicothe there were one hundred persons confirmed on Sunday, June 18th, by Archbishop Purcell. Of the confirmed, four were converts.

The fifty-fifth anniversary of Archbishop Neale's ordination to the priesthood at the Baltimore Cathedral on Sunday last. He died June 18th, 1817, and was buried beneath the chancel of the Visitation Convent, at Georgetown, D. C.

The magnificent church of the Dominican Fathers, of Louisville, Ky., it is expected will be completed by the first of September next, when it will be dedicated to divine service. Father Burke, the renowned orator, is to preach the dedication sermon.

Patrick Walker, known as Brother Clement, a Tyrannical Brother, died on the 7th, at St. Francis' Monastery, in Butler street, Brooklyn, from hemorrhage of the lungs. Deceased was born in Castleconner, County Kilkenny, Ireland, and was 30 years of age.

Mrs. Moore, a daughter of Judge Van Trump, of Lancaster, and Gen. Kirby Smith, a distinguished officer during the late war, were lately received into the Church—the former making her first Communion at St. Martin's Convent and the latter as the Cathedral.—Cincinnati Telegraph.

Brother Francois Xavier, Superior of the branch of the Order of Trappists which has been settled in the Township of Lasgivis, in the adjoining Province, for some years past, writes to Le Courrier du Canada, that owing to the severity of the climate, which has killed three of the brothers and prostrated others, he was compelled to close the establishment and return to France. The value of the accumulated property of this branch of the Trappists is estimated at $20,000, and this has been made over to the Archbishop of Quebec to be applied to religious purposes.—Montreal True Witness.

The Very Rev. John Moore, D. D., succeeds the late Dr. T. Bermingham as Vicar-General of the Diocese of Charleston, S. C. Dr. Moore is a native of Ireland, and was educated in the celebrated College of the Propaganda, in Rome, where he passed the usual examination before the professors of that Institution, and had the degree of doctor of divinity conferred upon him. In this college he was ordained a priest in the year 1850, and soon after, in the same year, he came to Charleston. Dr. Moore is well known and highly esteemed in that city. He is a theologian of eminent ability, and of most correct knowledge in both moral and dogmatic theology; and his appointment as Vicar-General is highly lauded, and has given general satisfaction throughout the diocese.

Rev. John McIlroy, S. J., the venerable nonagenarian, is now at Georgetown, College, having a weakness for Baltimore, and falling inevitable in this powerfully-built clergyman at his advanced age, he has been remarkably well and strong and as robust as at any time for the past ten or fifteen years. His memory is remarkably tenacious, and in early years he discoursed fluently of events that transpired here sixty or even seventy years ago, and his public lectures, sermons, and incidentals as readily as if they related to our own day. Father McIlroy was we believe, the first pastor of Trinity Church in this town—at least, it is nearly sixty years since he was ordained a priest, having been born in 1781. Since his arrival many persons have been to the College to pay him their respects and congratulate him on his prolonged existence, after a career of great usefulness.—Georgetown Courier, June 1st.

CATHOLICITY AT THE DALLES.—Most Rev. Archbishop Blanchet, accompanied by Rev. Father Giorda, superior of the Jesuit missions of the Rocky Mountains, arrived at the Dalles on Friday evening, 7th inst. On the following Sunday a mission was inaugurated with a High Mass, celebrated by his Grace, assisted by Very Rev. J. B. Brouillet, V. G. of Walla Walla, assistant priest, Rev. Father Giorda deacon, and Rev. P. Mackan sub-deacon. After the Gospel Father Giorda gave an instruction on the Gospel of the Good Shepherd, after which the sacrament of Confirmation was administered, before which ceremony, the Most Rev. celebrant spoke upon the grace conferred by the same. After Vespers in the evening he gave a text upon another instruction upon the duties of persons confirmed.

During the mission, which lasted five days, three Masses were celebrated every morning in the Catholic church, and sermons delivered by Father Giorda and Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament given in the evening. Confessions were held in the morning and evening.—Oakdale Sentinel, June 22.

MOUTH'S MIND FOR THE LATE FATHER JOHN GRIFFIN.—A correspondent of the Boston Pilot, writing from Old Adam's Acre, under date of July 16, says: On the 12th inst. there took place at St. Francis' Church, of this town, another of those sad but consoling ceremonials which are of such frequent occurrence in the Catholic Church, viz., the Office for the Dead and High Mass for the repose of the soul of one of our departed priests — Father John Griffin. Well did we know him when he was but an acquired in the humble sphere in which he lived, Lowell, Ireland, and by his affability and child-like kindness of heart endeared not only to his Professors but to every one of his fellow-students. He was then called to the Sacred Ministry, straight as a dance, and healthy as one of the stout oaks of his own native Ireland. Shortly after his ordination "missionary life" in California broke down that buoyant spirit, shattered that once vigorous constitution, and left him helpless in the vineyard of the Lord. In vain did he cross the Atlantic and return to his Bishop; in those Eastern States to recuperate his health which he had lost amid the fogs of California, but the fell disease, for its prey, and brought him a few weeks ago to an early grave. Father Griffin was born in the County Kilkenny, parish of Kilmacow, at a place called Lisdowney. At the age of 16 he was sent to St. Kyran's College, in his own native diocese, where he remained for five years. Catholic training which enabled him afterwards to distinguish himself in the Irish College, Paris, where he was ordained in the year 1860, and since then the good Bishop of Grass Valley can lay claim to the services of his zeal and efficiency in the cause of God and the advancement of the holy religion. On the occasion above referred to the Requiem Mass was chanted by the Rev. Charles Lynch, the reverend pastor of North Adams, assisted by the Rev. James Heaney as Deacon, and Rev. James Reardon sub-deacon. The Rev. William Sheehan, the distinguished Pastor of West Troy, N. Y., officiated as Master of Ceremonies. The panegyric, at the request of Father Griffin's numerous friends, was delivered by the Rev. P. J. Sheehan, of Pittsfield. Seldom have we heard such a touching, eloquent and heart-felt tribute paid to the memory of departed worth; in fact it drew tears from all that were present, and stamped the orator as a very effective pulpit preacher. Besides the clergymen already mentioned, there were in the sanctuary Rev. Thomas Keeling, D. D., Hoosick, N. Y.; Rev. M. P. Renehan, Troy, N. Y.; Rev. Walter Hennebery, Pittsfield; Rev. Mr. Smith, Holyoke, and Rev. Denis Ryan, of Bennington, Vt. Those who knew poor Father Griffin well, and many of them came a long way to be present on this melancholy occasion, will join in the prayer that his soul rest in peace. Amen.

We regret deeply to announce the death of the Rev. Michael Brady, P. P., which took place at his residence, Upper Lirah, Meadone, county Cavan, on Friday morning after an illness of four months, during which he bore with true resignation the will of God.—Anglo Celt.

Wholesale Market Report.

MONITOR OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, July 6, 1872.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, with sales for export only a moderate inquiry has existed, at a decline. We quote as follows: Extra at $4 75@5 25, and superfine, at $4 50@4 75; interior and Oregon brands—Extra at $3 75@4 12½ to sale $ 100 lbs.

WHEAT—The market has been quiet but firm, at a slight decline in prices, since our last weekly review. At the close we quote the range at $1 60@1 65 $ 100 lbs.

BARLEY—The demand has continued fair for this article, and prices have ruled steady. Sales of ordinary coast to choice bay brewing at $1 00@1 05. Quotable at the close at 1 00@1 05 $ 100 lbs.

OATS—The market has remained quiet, at unchanged rates, during the past week. Ordinary to choice sold at $1 50@1 65 $ 100 lbs, which is the range at the close.

MAY—The receipts have been fair during the past seven days, with a fair demand. Quotable at the close at $9@18 for ordinary wild cut to choice wheat $ ton.

STRAW—Quotable at $8@8 50 $ ton for cargo lots

CORN—Market quiet at $1 45@1 55.

CORN MEAL—Sales at $1@1 10 $ 100 lbs from mill.

BEANS—We note a fair demand, and the following are the jobbing rates: Bayo, $1 50; Butter, Pea, and small White, $2 50; Pink, $1 50 $ 100 lbs.

POTATOES—At the close we quote the range at $1@1 25 $ 100 lbs.

BRAN—Quotable at $17 $ ton from mill.

MIDDLINGS—We quote Feed at $27 50 $ ton from mill.

BUCKWHEAT—Dull at $1 75 $ 100 lbs.

HAY—Sales at $11@$14 $ ton.

BEANS—We quote Flat at 3c. Canary, 3@3c; Alisike, 10@10c; and Mexican, 3@3½c.

HONEY—We quote Los Angeles Comb at $13 100@15.

BEESWAX—We quote at 27@30 $ dozen.

HIDES—We quote California dry 12½@13½c, and salted 10@11c.

TALLOW—We quote at 6@6½c $ lb.

WOOL—The market continues in an inactive state. We quote good Spring at 30@32c; choice; extra wool; Fall scarce and nearly neglected.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California fresh, 29@30c; fresh roll, 22½@25c; pickled, 19@20c; Eastern fresh, 20@21c; Eastern pickled, 18@19c; Oregon, 18@19c.

CHEESE—California, 13½@13½c $ lb.; Oregon, none in the market; Eastern, to sale, 13½@15c; do in store 15@16c.

FRESH MEATS.

BEEF—For first quality, 6½c $ lb; for second do, 5@6; third do 5@5½ $ lb.

MUTTON—4 to 6c $ lb.

LAMB—6 to 7c $ lb.

PORK—Dressed, grain-fed, 7½ to 8c; no fat, grain fed, 6½ to 7c.

POULTRY AND GAME.

POULTRY—Hens, large, $4 50@5; Spring Chickens, $4@5; Roosters, $3@3 50 $ dozen.

GAME—Quail, $1 50@2 $ dozen.

GEESE—Tame at $3@3 50 $ dozen.

DUCKS—Tame, $3@3 50; Wild, dressed 3@ 50 $ dozen.

Retail Prices of Poultry and Game.

GEESE—Tame, $4@5 $ pair.

CHICKENS—Large, $1 each.

TURKEYS—Young, $1@1 50 each.

HARE—$1 each.

RABBITS—50c $ each.

PIGEONS—Tame, $1 $ dozen.

Our druggists keep for sale Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer, the best preparation ever made for restoring the vitality and color of the hair.

A RIPPING ANNOUNCEMENT.

An old style lock stitch sewing machine company advertises an attachment called a ripper, but the public know by experience that ripping is a bad way of unfastening a seam. The twisted loop, or Wilcox & Gibbs seam, is the only one that can be unlocked without ripping and locked again if necessary.

Success Based Upon Merit.

It is a subject of general remark, among both consumers and dealers in medicines, that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the American remedy for coughs, colds, and consumption, which has attained a popularity based on merit, in the same length of time, as has Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This standard remedy is having been more largely advertised than any other medicine in the world, but its unsurpassed excellence, which, as found in the fact that it is the most reliable, speedy, and effectual remedy for all kinds of coughs, colds, and throat and lung diseases, that has ever been known to mankind, and has given it the unbounded confidence and esteem which it now universally receives. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral counteracts the tendency of consumption, breaks up the most severe colds, relieves the most violent paroxysms of coughing, and induces refreshing sleep, and by its timely use in the early stages of these complaints, invariably cures them. Its composition is such that no evil effects can follow from its use in any quantity. Its sugar coating preserves it in any climate, and renders it pleasant to take. Being the best, it is the cheapest cough medicine that can be purchased, as it costs no more than worthless preparations. Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass., and sold by druggists everywhere.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.,

NO. 7

Montgomery St.,

HAVE.....

THE BEST SELECTED STOCK

—OF—

DRY GOODS

—OF—

THE PACIFIC COAST,

AND ARE SHOWING

NEW GOODS FROM NEW YORK

DAILY.

Buyers will find it to their advantage to examine our

STOCK OF DRY GOODS,

Which comprises every variety and class of Goods in our line, and at

Prices which Defy Competition.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.

No. 7 MONTGOMERY STREET.

NOTICE!

NOTICE!

NOTICE!

The Public are Respectfully Informed that

THE GREAT SEMI-ANNUAL

CLEARANCE SALE

—OF—

DRY GOODS

—OF—

J. J. O'BRIEN'S,

606 MARKET STREET.

TO NOW DRAWING TO A CLOSE, AND ALL who intend to avail themselves of the extraordinary bargains offered had better call immediately, for not one effers a second time.

50 Cents on the Dollar!

We will offer during the next week

1 piece Heavy French Printed Cambrics, all colors, $1 a yard; reduced from $1 25.

10 pieces Plaid Colored Silks, $1 in 3 yard; reduced from $1 25.

One case Remnants of Black Silks reduced fully 40 per cent.

50 pieces Fresh Poplin (solid for Irish), 37½ cents a yard; reduced from 50 cents.

50 pieces Fine Irish Poplin (Double), $1 25 a yard; well worth $1 75.

10 pieces Silk Gabardine Stripe, 62½ c. a yard; reduced from $1.

50 pieces Silk Gabardine Japanese Poplins, 37½ cents a yard; reduced from 50 cents.

One entire stock of

SPRING DRESS GOODS

Reduced to half price, consisting of several thousand yards, at 12½, 15, 18 and 25 cents a yard.

A splendid line of Black Alpacas, from 25 cents a yard upward.

75 pieces best Black Paillard, 62½ cents a yard; reduced from $1.

15,000 yards Plain Black and Striped Grenadines, from 25 cents a yard upward.

A beautiful assortment of STRIPED SHAWLS, new styles, from $1 50 each upward.

All our Brocade Shawls reduced 25 per cent.

Ladies' Fine Kid Gloves, 4 Buttons, for 12½ cents a pair; warranted first class.

Ladies' Fine Kid Gloves, 8 Buttons, 50 cents a pair; reduced from $1.

Ladies' Corded French Pique, 25 cents a yard; reduced from 37½ cents.

Ladies' Corded French Pique, 37½ cents a yard; reduced from 50 cents.

Ladies' Fine Kid Slippers, 50 cents a pair; reduced from $1 25 upward.

Ladies' Fine Kid Slippers, Button Boots, 75 cents a pair; reduced from $1 25.

Ladies' and Misses' Toilet Slippers, 25 cents a pair; reduced from 50 cents.

Misses' Scott Vamp Balmorals, 50 cents a pair; reduced from 75 cents.

Misses' Fine Kid Shoes, 50 cents a pair; reduced from 75 cents.

Misses' Fine Calf Shoes, 75 cents a pair; reduced from $1.

Children's Kid Pat Balmorals, 25 cents a pair; reduced from 50 cents.

Children's Fine Goat Balmorals, 37½ cents a pair; reduced from 50 cents.

Infants' Shoes, 10c, 15c, and 20c a pair; reduced from 25 cents.

Just received 500 pairs Gents' Fine Calf Boots, at $3 50 a pair; reduced from $5 and $6.

Gents' Boy Sole Calf Boots, 3 50 a pair; reduced from $5.

Gents' Screwed Congress Gaiters, 3 50 a pair; reduced from $5.

Gents' Screwed Congress Boots, 3 50 a pair; reduced from $5.

Gents' Screwed Congress Gaiters, 2 50 a pair; reduced from $4.

Gents' Brogans, 100 screwed, 2 50 a pair; reduced from $4.

Gents' Screwed Congress Gaiters, 2 50 a pair; reduced from $4.

Boys' Copper toe Boots, $1 50 to $2 50.

Boys' Calf Boots, $2 50 to $3.

Boys' Fine Screwed Shoes, $2 50 a pair.

Boys' Congress Gaiters, $2 50; screwed.

Come early to avoid the rush. Our stock is reduced.

NOLAN'S MAMMOTH SHOE

HOUSE,

NOLAN'S, NO. 11 THIRD

NOLAN'S, NO. 11 THIRD

CUCKLES BUSHED

FIRST SHOE STORE FROM MARKET

CHILDREN

BRAIDED PIQUE SUITS,

WITH OVERSKIRTS,

Which they are selling at the following prices to children:

1 YEARS OLD.....
2 YEARS OLD.....
3 YEARS OLD.....
4 YEARS OLD.....
5 YEARS OLD.....

ALSO, A FASHIONABLE LINE OF

Children's Linen Dresses and Suits,

GERMANIA

LIFE INSURANCE CO.

Is the ONLY Company issuing ABSOLUTE NON-FORFEITABLE AND INCONTESTABLE Policies. No application for paid up Policies required. Limitation of time.

WM. P. HUMPHREYS,

CIVIL ENGINEER and SURVEYOR,

Office, Nos. 12 and 14 Montgomery Block,

C. MOODY,

DRUGGIST and CHEMIST,

Dealer in PURE DRUGS and MEDICINES, Toilet and Fancy Articles and Perfumery, Pure Wines and Liquors for Medical Purposes carefully compounded.

200 and 202 KEARNY STREET,

my11 SAN FRANCISCO.

SCHOOL BOOKS,

PRAYER BOOKS

TOY & JUVENILE BOOKS.

ALL THE TEXT BOOKS used in the Public and Public Schools of California on hand.

RYAN'S OLD STAND,

No. 49 Fourth street, near Jessie.

Parents and guardians of limited means will do well to call at the store where no advertising is done, and all goods sold at the lowest living profit. A few assortment of Prayer Books has just been received from the publishers, to which especially called.

The MONITOR always on hand.

SULLIVAN, FRATINGER & CO.,

14 Montgomery Street,

Have just received a large assortment of

CROCKERY,

GLASS AND PLATED WARE,

Which they are selling at the lowest rates.

THE GETTYSBURG

CATALYSINE WATER!

The Subscribers are now prepared to supply the above celebrated Water. Three parts of this Water will dissolve more Uric Acid than any other known remedy. It will not only relieve but cure Gravel, Stone in the Bladder, Rheumatism, Gout, Dyspepsia, Diabetes, Nervousness, Neuralgia, Sick Headache, Female Complaints, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Fever Sores, Scurvy, Dropsy, Jaundice, Diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder, Liver, Stomach, Blood, Skin, Nervous System, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Bad Digestion, or Disordered Secretions.

Pamphlets containing certificates of cures, and directions for use, sent free to any address.

Price, $1 50 per gallon, or $1 per half gallon. Sold by druggists generally.

Orders addressed to the Proprietors, Gettysburg, Pa., will receive prompt attention.

GO TO

M. O'CONNOR'S

Stall No. 1, Grand Central

IF YOU WANT THE

BUTTON, etc., in the

Boxable prices.

THE MONITOR:
A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO
Irish and Catholic Literature
AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.
PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY
LYONS & BARRY
JOHN T. BARRY.
M. LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.
OFFICE—313 PINE STREET, between Montgomery and Sansome sts. (Rooms 7, 7 and 8, up stairs.)
All communications, whether relating to the editorial department should be addressed "Editor MONITOR."

THE ONLY IRISH and CATHOLIC JOURNAL IN CALIFORNIA.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):
One Copy, per annum.....10s
Three Copies, per year.....$1 00
Six Months.....2 25

ADVERTISING RATES:
1 Inch.....$1 50 | 1 square, 4 months..$10 00
1 month.....1 00 | " 6 months..12 00
2 months.....2 00 | " 8 months..15 00
3 months.....3 00 | 1 year.....25 00
The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

THE FRANCISCAN MARTYR.

For The Monitor.

Of hero-band that bear the purpled

O view-throng that wear the livery of the band hath plucked the branch from Tri-umph's mystic tree.

ngical note [ed] in suffring's crimson sea, ted pure shining ranks for him, for him who ayed on the Paschal Tree.

Louis's sons, ithful, whose calm re-

ather lowly breast; robust and shelter safe and

Assisi's chevied brow, because their ord had bowed
Poverty of the thorns that once His ad crowned.

the mocking street, the insult and the ungry, the path of pain, the likeness of Loyola's sons' bright heirlooms to rest.

ose the Crucified in each sample greet,
Francesco hung, "Mio Signore, Mio from celestial shores saw wholeborn ave not to faithful one the Master's ministered to these ye ministered."

—San Francisco Se Rawsay, one of the exiled Parish priests of Ireland, who has been appointed Parish priest of Kilmacow, the native parish of the tyrannical revolutionary government

Joseph's refuge in our city, and received with hospitable shelter after their weary wanderings, has been appointed Chaplain to the Sisters of Mercy, and will take up his residence with the convent, and also new asylum with the Sisters of Mercy, and also new asylum with the Sisters of Mercy, and also new asylum with the Sisters of Mercy

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

ENGLAND.

A Londoner on the Yankee Quorum.

The American four-cared crew that crossed the Atlantic to "chaw up" the Londoners got "pretty considerably well licked, we guess," on shore. They were like schoolboys beside their powerful and good-humored antagonists. In fact, London can say to-day what Atalanta may now say with her namesake in dear, pure, delicate Mr. Swinburne's poem:

Had thee; but I win nanny face and feet
Thou boastward, and am gone out of mine eyes.

No matter; we respect them Yankees; they are pluck'y fellows to have traveled so far to get so hollow a " whipping." But could we good-natured friends have obliged them nearer home? Seriously, we consider this Atalanta crew an indifferent crew, with a bad style of rowing and a big idea of itself. But Brag, we know, is always a good dog till he meets Isbrfnal.—Observer, June 15.

The Young Men's Societies and Keogh's Judgment.

It affords us real pleasure to know that the Young Men's Societies are alive to the responsibility that rests on them as Catholic Associations at the particular time, and that the Liverpool branches are determined not to let the opportunity pass without receiving their emphatic protest against Judge Keogh's disgraceful language, in reference to the illustrious John of Tuam, and the venerable Bishops, Bishops and priests, and (Catholic laymen of Galway—and, by implication, the entire Catholic hierarchy and priesthood of Ireland. St. Anthony's branch, we are proud to see, has nobly led the way; and on last Sunday evening—the no faltering voice, but in deep emotive, proclaimed their indignation and disgust of Keogh's harangue.—Cath. Times, June 15.

A San Francisco Man in London.

There is a satirical journal in London called the Bigtera (a weak parody of its Parisian prototype), the wit of which consists in accumulating libels upon its head. The journal is alive, but no one is afraid for its scraggy wopd-scratches and its distempered dramatic criticisms. It has engaged Mr. Hinds, late of the San Francisco News Letter, to write a weekly article for it under the caption "The Yankee Critic." He was witty in Frisco, because to travesty Holy Writ is considered funny there; but he is coarse and dreary here, which proves the eminence of Swains, autium non omnibus, etc., is not always true.—London Observer, June 15.

A Dissenter Compelled to Pay a Rate to Support a Church of Anglican Doctrine.

At Southwark, on Tuesday, Mr. Smith, fishmonger, Railway Approach, London Bridge, and Mr. Joseph, Tooley street, in the parish of St. Olave's, Southwark, were summoned for refusing to pay a rate legally made under the "Sewers Rate" for the support of the rector of the parish Mr. Phillips attended to support the complaint, and informed the worship that the summonses were taken out under a special Local Act of Parliament, entitled the St. Olave's, Southwark, Rectory Act, for the maintenance and support of the rector of the parish. Mr. Partridge thought the Church-rate Act annulled such proceedings. Mr. Phillips produced the Church-rate Act, and explained to his worship that there was a special clause omitting the Local Act from its operation. If his worship examined the Rectory Act, he would see that the trustees retained the power of making a rate to uphold and support the rector, whose stipend was £600 per year. Mr. Partridge asked what was the rate complained in the parish. Mr. Phillips replied £712 4s. 6d., and after the payment of the assessment, collection charges and all necessary expenses, the surplus, if any, was to be applied to the relief of the poor. He produced the minute-book ordering the rate to be made, the rate book signed by three justices of the peace, and other documents to show that the rate was made legally. Mr. Smith's rate amounted to 14s. 7d., and Mr. Joseph's to 14s. 7d. John Gearing, collector, appointed by the trustees, said he had made repeated calls at the defendants for the rates, and they refused to pay. Mr. Smith admitted he refused to pay. He rented his shop from the railway authorities, and they were rated; consequently, he was not going to pay. Besides, he objected to pay such a rate. He did not like the Local Act, and even if he did it would be hard to compel him to support a clergyman he did not like. His was a Nonconformist, and he objected to that £600 a year was a deal too much when so many gallon out-doors connected with the parish did not amount to more than thirty or forty people. Mr. Partridge said he had no option to make the order for the payment of the several sums and costs.—London Observer, June, 15.

News.

A London correspondent of the Vienna Gazette informs that paper that "England is the paradise of Catholicism." "The most dangerous new dogma," he says, "has nothing to fear from an Old Catholic opposition, and the most moderate attempt to begin a Jesuit debate in the House of Commons is at once cried down. The Ultramontane fight here under the mask of Liberalism, and the Liberals are afraid to satie champions of public freedom. With the help of the Irish Brigade, which forms an important element of the Liberal majority in the Lower House, and to whose votes support Liberal Ministries have, for the last twenty years, owed their existence, Ultramontanism in England has not only attained a certain popularity, but has become a power in the State. The lowest and the highest classes of society are Catholic and the Protestant middle-class seems to have lost all the freedom of action and accuracy of judgment which are required for a successful struggle against the Jesuit phalanx. The aristocratic Ritualists are noting but Catholics in disguise, not having sufficient courage or logical consistency to cast off their Protestant dress, though the change from Catholicism to Anglicanism after the Reformation was superficially carried out that there is no great difficulty in returning to the bosom of the Catholic Church. The Liberal party, too, has become so discredited by its former violent policy, that now, when it really has a good reason for raising the country in a struggle against the Papal power, its cries of alarm only inspire ridicule or contemptuous indifference. That Gladstone, who by his family connections and personal sympathies, has confidential relations with the Ritualists, treats the Catholic members in the Lower House with even more favor than his Liberal predecessors in office, is daily growing more evident. In a word, Ultramontane Catholicism has never been better off in England than now, when it is fighting for existence in all other countries."

GERMANY.

Frightful Murder of a Priest.

A shocking murder has just been committed at Wilna, Lithuania. Monsignor Toupalski, rector of the training school for young priests, suddenly disappeared, and with him one of the students who acted as his secretary. A search in the residence of the missing man led to no indication, but a few days later the secretary was arrested at Mariampol, a frontier town, wearing the clothes of the prelate, and having in his possession a box containing the head, arms and legs of the deceased. He admitted that he had poisoned his master, cut up the body, the trunk of which he had thrown into a river, and having stolen a sum of 70,000 roubles (£. 75c. each), had taken the road to Kowno, with the intention of escaping into Prussia. In order to throw the police off his tracks he had alighted from the railway at Josli, and pursued his way to the frontier in a cart. There he was arrested at the moment when he was hiring a carriage to take him away.

ITALY.

The Amanti on the Papal Gendarmes.

The trial of the ruffians engaged in the disturbances which occurred on the 7th of April commenced on Tuesday, 11th June. The Papal gendarmes, who were obliged to be protected by the authorities from the violence of the infuriated populace, were the witnesses. The prisoners denied that they gave any provocation to the gendarmes, who also had been attacked by bishops and priests, and (Catholic laymen of railway—and, by implication, the entire Catholic hierarchy and priesthood of Ireland. St. Anthony's branch, we are proud to see, has nobly led the way; and on last Sunday evening—the no faltering voice, but in deep emotive, proclaimed their indignation and disgust of Keogh's harangue.—Cath. Times, June 15.

A San Francisco Man in London.

There is a satirical journal in London called the Bigtera (a weak parody of its Parisian prototype), the wit of which consists in accumulating libels upon its head. The journal is alive, but no one is afraid for its scraggy wopd-scratches and its distempered dramatic criticisms. It has engaged Mr. Hinds, late of the San Francisco News Letter, to write a weekly article for it under the caption "The Yankee Critic." He was witty in Frisco, because to travesty Holy Writ is considered funny there; but he is coarse and dreary here, which proves the eminence of Swains, autium non omnibus, etc., is not always true.—London Observer, June 15.

A Dissenter Compelled to Pay a Rate to Support a Church of Anglican Doctrine.

At Southwark, on Tuesday, Mr. Smith, fishmonger, Railway Approach, London Bridge, and Mr. Joseph, Tooley street, in the parish of St. Olave's, Southwark, were summoned for refusing to pay a rate legally made under the "Sewers Rate" for the support of the rector of the parish Mr. Phillips attended to support the complaint, and informed the worship that the summonses were taken out under a special Local Act of Parliament, entitled the St. Olave's, Southwark, Rectory Act, for the maintenance and support of the rector of the parish. Mr. Partridge thought the Church-rate Act annulled such proceedings. Mr. Phillips produced the Church-rate Act, and explained to his worship that there was a special clause omitting the Local Act from its operation. If his worship examined the Rectory Act, he would see that the trustees retained the power of making a rate to uphold and support the rector, whose stipend was £600 per year. Mr. Partridge asked what was the rate complained in the parish. Mr. Phillips replied £712 4s. 6d., and after the payment of the assessment, collection charges and all necessary expenses, the surplus, if any, was to be applied to the relief of the poor. He produced the minute-book ordering the rate to be made, the rate book signed by three justices of the peace, and other documents to show that the rate was made legally. Mr. Smith's rate amounted to 14s. 7d. John Gearing, collector, appointed by the trustees, said he had made repeated calls at the defendants for the rates, and they refused to pay. Mr. Smith admitted he refused to pay. He rented his shop from the railway authorities, and they were rated; consequently, he was not going to pay. Besides, he objected to pay such a rate. He did not like the Local Act, and even if he did it would be hard to compel him to support a clergyman he did not like. His was a Nonconformist, and he objected to that £600 a year was a deal too much when so many gallon out-doors connected with the parish did not amount to more than thirty or forty people. Mr. Partridge said he had no option to make the order for the payment of the several sums and costs.—London Observer, June, 15.

News.

A London correspondent of the Vienna Gazette informs that paper that "England is the paradise of Catholicism." "The most dangerous new dogma," he says, "has nothing to fear from an Old Catholic opposition, and the most moderate attempt to begin a Jesuit debate in the House of Commons is at once cried down. The Ultramontane fight here under the mask of Liberalism, and the Liberals are afraid to satie champions of public freedom. With the help of the Irish Brigade, which forms an important element of the Liberal majority in the Lower House, and to whose votes support Liberal Ministries have, for the last twenty years, owed their existence, Ultramontanism in England has not only attained a certain popularity, but has become a power in the State. The lowest and the highest classes of society are Catholic and the Protestant middle-class seems to have lost all the freedom of action and accuracy of judgment which are required for a successful struggle against the Jesuit phalanx. The aristocratic Ritualists are noting but Catholics in disguise, not having sufficient courage or logical consistency to cast off their Protestant dress, though the change from Catholicism to Anglicanism after the Reformation was superficially carried out that there is no great difficulty in returning to the bosom of the Catholic Church. The Liberal party, too, has become so discredited by its former violent policy, that now, when it really has a good reason for raising the country in a struggle against the Papal power, its cries of alarm only inspire ridicule or contemptuous indifference. That Gladstone, who by his family connections and personal sympathies, has confidential relations with the Ritualists, treats the Catholic members in the Lower House with even more favor than his Liberal predecessors in office, is daily growing more evident. In a word, Ultramontane Catholicism has never been better off in England than now, when it is fighting for existence in all other countries."

News.

Lanza has had to sustain an attack from a quarter against which he was and is the least protected. The Communal Council of Naples had, it appears, voted the erection of a monument in honor of Marzini, which the Prefect of Naples thought proper to annul. Signor Lanza in an unpropitious moment approved of the prefect's decision, and the consequence has been a storm from the Left, which the unfortunate Minister has shown himself unable to abide. In the words of Cairoli, who is called the Gambetta of Italy, "nothing must be permitted that injures the revolutionary programme;" and that is expressed in one word (perverted from its rightful meaning)—progress. The violation of public and private right, the establishment of terrorism in the place of reason, the spoliation of the Church, the removal of obnoxious persons by means of the Marzinian dagger, these, and a thousand other similar tyrannies, of which unhappy Italy is the helpless victim, are all expressed by the word progress, interpreted "according to the next new dictionary." The action brought by Mgr. Merode against Prince Humbert was tried before the Correctional Tribunal of Milan, on the 18th ult, and resulted in a verdict which explores the fabulous sums have already been offered by visitors to secure seats during the trial. Need we state that the majority of these gobe-mouches are our own dear country-

IRISH INTELLIGENCE.

The New Governor of Canada.

Lord Dufferin was entertained at a public dinner in Belfast on Tuesday evening, June 18th, on the eve of his departure for Canada, of which British dependency he has been appointed Governor-General. Here was a large gathering of distinguished people, including the Lord Chancellor, the members of Parliament for the city and county, the mayors of the various local bodies, and gentlemen of different creeds, religious and political. The Mayor presided. Replying to the toast of his health, Lord Dufferin said: "In one respect alone was his connection with Canada of a sad character, and that was from the knowledge that from his earliest entry into public life, neither from fear nor favor, neither from a love of applause, nor from the dread of standing counter to any dominant tide of popular sentiment, had he ever turned aside from advocating what he believed to be fair, just and right." Speaking of the functions of his new office, his lordship said: "At all events there was one function of his great office which was a labor of love, and to the discharge of which he knew he should not be unequal —that which would consist in presenting himself to their fellow-countrymen across the Atlantic as the embodiment and representative of that deep sympathy—of that strong and unobstructed flow of mutual affection with which all classes and parties regard the inhabitants of the great Australian Side by side, the Dominion of Canada, along a frontier of more than two thousand miles, extends the territory of a kindred race, who were working out their own destiny under institutions somewhat though differing in some of their outward aspects from our own, have been elaborated by the wisdom of their forefathers, the love of freedom, that capacity of self-discipline, which characterizes the English-speaking race."

Jury Reform Denied.

A Bill to deprive the Crown of the power of packing Juries in criminal cases in Ireland, which power is now in full force and Majesty's sergeants-at-law, is something calculated to make one rub his eyes, and ask if it be a dream or reality. Yet this was the avowed object of a measure, the second reading of which was moved June 11th in the House of Commons by Sir Colman O'Loghlen. The learned gentleman proposed by the bill to adopt the English mode of selection of jurors in criminal as well as in civil cases, and to give the prisoner an equal number of challenges with the Crown. Lastly, after quoting evidence from the Government, he promised to bring on the Bill next session after next, until it should become law. The bill was supported by Mr. Maguire, Mr. Synan, Mr. Sergeant Armstrong, Mr. Callan, Mr. Henry, Mr. Brunn, and other members, while the Attorney-General for Ireland, Mr. Bagwell, Sir F. Heygate, and others. In a division, the numbers were: for the second reading, 57; against it, 124. The bill was therefore rejected by a majority of 137.

Historical Parallels.

The passages in the first of the two following columns are taken from a pamphlet printed by "James Duffy, 7 Wellington quay, Dublin," in 1851, "for the present," and sold by William Keogh, Esq., M. P., q. v., at the banquet given to him by the Catholics of Dublin, on the 25th of October, 1851." Mr. Keogh had then been re-fed office under the Crown, and his party had not yet begun to appear in public on the probability of his taking it. The passages in the second column are from a pamphlet published by "James Duffy, 7 Wellington quay, Dublin," in 1872, "for the present," and sold by William Keogh, Esq., M. P., q. v., at the banquet given to him by his constituents in Athlone, on the 24th of October, 1872." Mr. Keogh had not then been off office under the Crown, nor had he made any solemn declarations that he was not going to take office on it. The passages in the second column are taken from reports of a speech delivered by Mr. Keogh, q. v., in the House of Lords, on Monday, May 27, 1872, in protesting against the return of Captain Nolan for county Galway, on this second occasion Mr. Keogh had appointments to the position of one of Her Majesty's Judges in the Court of Common Pleas, Ireland:

| | |
|---|---|
| MR. KEOGH ON ITALIAN AFFAIRS IN 1851. | MR. KEOGH ON THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY IN 1872. |
| "I see here the venerable head-priest of my Church—the first among them—the successor of the Apostles—the illustrious Archbishop of Canterbury—(hear, hear)—fully lower which flows from the pride of the priesthood—(hear, hear)—the pride and the glory of the Reformation, about the beginning of January, 1871, administered a courteous but well deserved reproof of two barrow-brawling bullying benefactors in the Church of St. Ignatius. The offenders rejoined that they were guilty of no public safety in plain clothes, and constrained the Marquis to accompany them forthwith to the neighboring police station. The inspector on duty had, however, the good sense to perceive that his subordinates were in the wrong and directed their prisoner to be set at liberty. The affair was forgotten, until a week ago, when the two bullies—benefactors, whose benevolence leaders of late have been very lailing—were summoned before the Criminal Tribunal to answer a charge of having, in 1871, interfered with two police officers in the execution of their duty. There was not the shadow a proof on the Government side; and for the second time the prosecution fell to the ground. The inconvenience was, it may be, trifling, and the reasonableness of the prosecution a mere formality; but surely some restraint ought to be put upon prefects and other State and functionaries who are only too glad to annoy their political adversaries with arbitrary and vexatious persecutions of this sort.—Register, June 15. | "Is England a defender of the faith? Is she the mother of duties on corn is she a Christian? Is she a Catholic?—a conspiracy against the Pope? Is she in order to put money into the pockets of the Protestant hearthless, the most thrifty of the Irish Catholics, to tax the clergy on the fare of the land?" |
| MR. KEOGH ON POPULAR DEMONSTRATIONS IN 1851. | MR. KEOGH ON THE RESOLUTIONS OF THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY MEETING IN 1872. |
| "I desire to see the people governed for the benefit of the people—governed not from the people for their benefit—governed not by themselves, solely for their own benefit, but for the benefit of the whole people." | "I will fight for my religion against the world, scouting and defying the world, and I have the confidence of the people of Ireland, I am sure, when solemn summons be made, that they will not fail me." |
| MR. KEOGH ON RELIGION IN 1851. | MR. KEOGH ON RELIGION IN THE PRESENT DAY. |
| "I will fight for my religion against the world, scouting and defying the world, and I have the confidence of the people of Ireland, I am sure, when solemn summons be made, that they will not fail me." | "I will fight for my religion against the world, scouting and defying the world, and I have the confidence of the people of Ireland, I am sure, when solemn summons be made, that they will not fail me." |
| MR. KEOGH ON THE CATHOLIC BISHOPS IN 1851. | MR. KEOGH ON THE CATHOLIC BISHOPS IN 1872. |
| "The Catholic Bishops are the natural guardians for the rich as well as the poor of the faith during our relation. There the whole machinery—old and new—is in operation to secure independent religious education, and that system which, in my opinion, was the best—which, I am sorry to say, is now in danger of being destroyed—the system established and found that out from under Infidel influence." | "The Catholic Bishops are the natural guardians for the rich as well as the poor of the faith during our relation. There the whole machinery—old and new—is in operation to secure independent religious education, and that system which, I am sorry to say, is now in danger of being destroyed—the system established and found that out from under Infidel influence." |
| MR. KEOGH ON THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY IN 1851. | MR. KEOGH ON THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY IN 1872. |
| "His Lordship then proceeded to say that he was not a Protestant, observing with regard to the Archbishop of Canterbury, denouncing the Pope, that he was a gentleman for his part, he had often met his Holiness, and he would not rather prefer to have the Archbishop of Canterbury as the head of the Catholic religion." | "His Lordship then proceeded to say that he was not a Protestant, observing with regard to the Archbishop of Canterbury, denouncing the Pope, that he was a gentleman for his part, he had often met his Holiness, and he would not rather prefer to have the Archbishop of Canterbury as the head of the Catholic religion." |
| MR. KEOGH ON POPULAR DEMONSTRATIONS IN 1851. | MR. KEOGH ON THE RESOLUTIONS OF THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY MEETING IN 1872. |
| "I desire to see the people governed for the benefit of the people—governed not from the people for their benefit—governed not by themselves, solely for their own benefit, but for the benefit of the whole people." | "I desire to see the people governed for the benefit of the people—governed not from the people for their benefit—governed not by themselves, solely for their own benefit, but for the benefit of the whole people." |
| MR. KEOGH ON RELIGION IN 1851. | MR. KEOGH ON RELIGION IN THE PRESENT DAY. |
| "I will fight for my religion against the world, scouting and defying the world, and I have the confidence of the people of Ireland, I am sure, when solemn summons be made, that they will not fail me." | "I will fight for my religion against the world, scouting and defying the world, and I have the confidence of the people of Ireland, I am sure, when solemn summons be made, that they will not fail me." |
| MR. KEOGH ON THE CATHOLIC BISHOPS IN 1851. | MR. KEOGH ON THE CATHOLIC BISHOPS IN 1872. |
| "The Catholic Bishops are the natural guardians for the rich as well as the poor of the faith during our relation. There the whole machinery—old and new—is in operation to secure independent religious education, and that system which, in my opinion, was the best—which, I am sorry to say, is now in danger of being destroyed—the system established and found that out from under Infidel influence." | "The Catholic Bishops are the natural guardians for the rich as well as the poor of the faith during our relation. There the whole machinery—old and new—is in operation to secure independent religious education, and that system which, I am sorry to say, is now in danger of being destroyed—the system established and found that out from under Infidel influence." |

There is much more of a similar style on this side and on that, "but for the present we fancy we have given more than sufficient of this curious and somewhat nauseous stuff.—Freeman.

Address to the Holy Father.

At a meeting held on Thursday, June 14, in St. Kevin's Chapel, Marlborough street, the following address to be presented to the Sovereign Pontiff on entering upon the twenty seventh year of his Pontificate, was agreed to, and signed by the clergy of the diocese:

"Most Holy Father,—Your children from this remote region, Ireland, come once more, casting themselves at your feet, to greet you on the auspicious day of your exaltation to the chair of Peter. We come to relieve the anxieties of your heart, gratitude, our veneration, and our filial love. We behold in you not merely the visible head of the Church, but the Vicar of Jesus Christ, and father of all the faithful, but a Pontiff chosen especially by Heaven in the present evil times, and blessed with a fruitfulness of an supreme, that almost seems to equal the days of Peter, to preserve the Church in a conflict perhaps the most terrible that it has ever yet sustained. We behold in you a pilot gifted from on high with unfailing courage, with vigilance, and a far-seeing power of vision to guide the Barque of Peter amid the gloom and perils of the storm in which has now for so long a period raged around it. We behold in you a true pastor, stricken like your Divine Master for the flock, and prepared to lay down your life for its welfare. When we consecrate your fidelity, your magnanimity and unyielding fortitude, we find ourselves irresistibly surpassed in every trial; we find our faith enlivened, our hope confirmed, our charity intensified by the example of your own. Faith and hope are as unshaken as the solid rock, and your charity is that which is stronger than death, and which no floods of sorrow or tribulation can extinguish. Continue, great Pontiff, even to your present years to serve the Church committed to your care, and to labor for the welfare of souls, and the consummated your sacrifice. Successor of Peter, continue to support as the Rock the edifice which Christ has reared upon Him. Continue, universal Father, to gather in cherish and support your dear children. Most legitimate and most beloved of Sovereigns, continue to challenge by your virtues and your noble deeds the veneration of the world, even of your enemies; teach by your example the nations and rulers whom you behold around you, to reign with justice and submission to the great King, whose vicegerent you are on the throne and guardians of their people. Endure, then, O Father and Pontiff, as you have endured, the contradiction of sinners; let your children will be heard; the omnipotent will arise from his slumber; that voice shall be heard that commands the winds and the sea; calm will be restored to the Church, and a joyful peace shall smile over the face of the nations, over which you be summoned to receive that bright unfading diadem that Solomn O'Loghlen. The learned gentleman proposed by the bill to adopt the English mode of selection of jurors in criminal as well as in civil cases, and to give the prisoner an equal number of challenges with the Crown. Lastly, after quoting evidence from the Government, he promised to bring on the bill next session after next, until it should become law. The bill was supported by Mr. Maguire, Mr. Synan, Mr. Sergeant Armstrong, Mr. Callan, Mr. Henry, Mr. Brunn, and other members, while the Attorney-General for Ireland, Mr. Bagwell, Sir F. Heygate, and others. In a division, the numbers were: for the second reading, 57; against it, 124. The bill was therefore rejected by a majority of 137.

Historical Parallels.

The passages in the first of the two following columns are taken from a pamphlet printed by "James Duffy, 7 Wellington quay, Dublin," in 1851, "for the present," and sold by William Keogh, Esq., M. P., q. v., at the banquet given to him by the Catholics of Dublin, on the 25th of October, 1851." Mr. Keogh had then been off office under the Crown, and his party had not yet begun to appear in public on the probability of his taking it. The passages in the second column are from a pamphlet published by "James Duffy, 7 Wellington quay, Dublin," in 1872, "for the present," and sold by William Keogh, Esq., M. P., q. v., at the banquet given to him by his constituents in Athlone, on the 24th of October, 1872." Mr. Keogh had not then been off office under the Crown, nor had he made any solemn declarations that he was not going to take office on it. The passages in the second column are taken from reports of a speech delivered by Mr. Keogh, q. v., in the House of Lords, on Monday, May 27, 1872, in protesting against the return of Captain Nolan for county Galway, on this second occasion Mr. Keogh had appointments to the position of one of Her Majesty's Judges in the Court of Common Pleas, Ireland:

| | |
|---|---|
| MR. KEOGH ON ITALIAN AFFAIRS IN 1851. | MR. KEOGH ON THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY IN 1872. |
| "I see here the venerable head-priest of my Church—the first among them—the successor of the Apostles—the illustrious Archbishop of Canterbury—(hear, hear)—fully lower which flows from the pride of the priesthood—(hear, hear)—the pride and the glory of the Reformation, about the beginning of January, 1871, administered a courteous but well deserved reproof of two barrow-brawling bullying benefactors in the Church of St. Ignatius. The offenders rejoined that they were guilty of no public safety in plain clothes, and constrained the Marquis to accompany them forthwith to the neighboring police station. The inspector on duty had, however, the good sense to perceive that his subordinates were in the wrong and directed their prisoner to be set at liberty. The affair was forgotten, until a week ago, when the two bullies—benefactors, whose benevolence leaders of late have been very lailing—were summoned before the Criminal Tribunal to answer a charge of having, in 1871, interfered with two police officers in the execution of their duty. There was not the shadow a proof on the Government side; and for the second time the prosecution fell to the ground. The inconvenience was, it may be, trifling, and the reasonableness of the prosecution a mere formality; but surely some restraint ought to be put upon prefects and other State and functionaries who are only too glad to annoy their political adversaries with arbitrary and vexatious persecutions of this sort.—Register, June 15. | "His Lordship then proceeded to say that he was not a Protestant, observing with regard to the Archbishop of Canterbury, denouncing the Pope, that he was a gentleman for his part, he had often met his Holiness, and he would not rather prefer to have the Archbishop of Canterbury as the head of the Catholic religion." |
| MR. KEOGH ON POPULAR DEMONSTRATIONS IN 1851. | MR. KEOGH ON THE RESOLUTIONS OF THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY MEETING IN 1872. |
| "I desire to see the people governed for the benefit of the people—governed not from the people for their benefit—governed not by themselves, solely for their own benefit, but for the benefit of the whole people." | "I desire to see the people governed for the benefit of the people—governed not from the people for their benefit—governed not by themselves, solely for their own benefit, but for the benefit of the whole people." |
| MR. KEOGH ON RELIGION IN 1851. | MR. KEOGH ON RELIGION IN THE PRESENT DAY. |
| "I will fight for my religion against the world, scouting and defying the world, and I have the confidence of the people of Ireland, I am sure, when solemn summons be made, that they will not fail me." | "I will fight for my religion against the world, scouting and defying the world, and I have the confidence of the people of Ireland, I am sure, when solemn summons be made, that they will not fail me." |
| MR. KEOGH ON THE CATHOLIC BISHOPS IN 1851. | MR. KEOGH ON THE CATHOLIC BISHOPS IN 1872. |
| "The Catholic Bishops are the natural guardians for the rich as well as the poor of the faith during our relation. There the whole machinery—old and new—is in operation to secure independent religious education, and that system which, in my opinion, was the best—which, I am sorry to say, is now in danger of being destroyed—the system established and found that out from under Infidel influence." | "The Catholic Bishops are the natural guardians for the rich as well as the poor of the faith during our relation. There the whole machinery—old and new—is in operation to secure independent religious education, and that system which, I am sorry to say, is now in danger of being destroyed—the system established and found that out from under Infidel influence." |

There is much more of a similar style on this side and on that, "but for the present we fancy we have given more than sufficient of this curious and somewhat nauseous stuff.—Freeman.

Address to the Holy Father.

At a meeting held on Thursday, June 14, in St. Kevin's Chapel, Marlborough street, the following address to be presented to the Sovereign Pontiff on entering upon the twenty seventh year of his Pontificate, was agreed to, and signed by the clergy of the diocese:

"Most Holy Father,—Your children from this remote region, Ireland, come once more, casting themselves at your feet, to greet you on the auspicious day of your exaltation to the chair of Peter. We come to relieve the anxieties of your heart, gratitude, our veneration, and our filial love. We behold in you not merely the visible head of the Church, but the Vicar of Jesus Christ, and father of all the faithful, but a Pontiff chosen especially by Heaven in the present evil times, and blessed with a fruitfulness of an supreme, that almost seems to equal the days of Peter, to preserve the Church in a conflict perhaps the most terrible that it has ever yet sustained. We behold in you a pilot gifted from on high with unfailing courage, with vigilance, and a far-seeing power of vision to guide the Barque of Peter amid the gloom and perils of the storm in which has now for so long a period raged around it. We behold in you a true pastor, stricken like your Divine Master for the flock, and prepared to lay down your life for its welfare. When we consecrate your fidelity, your magnanimity and unyielding fortitude, we find ourselves irresistibly surpassed in every trial; we find our faith enlivened, our hope confirmed, our charity intensified by the example of your own. Faith and hope are as unshaken as the solid rock, and your charity is that which is stronger than death, and which no floods of sorrow or tribulation can extinguish. Continue, great Pontiff, even to your present years to serve the Church committed to your care, and to labor for the welfare of souls, and the consummated your sacrifice. Successor of Peter, continue to support as the Rock the edifice which Christ has reared upon Him. Continue, universal Father, to gather in cherish and support your dear children. Most legitimate and most beloved of Sovereigns, continue to challenge by your virtues and your noble deeds the veneration of the world, even of your enemies; teach by your example the nations and rulers whom you behold around you, to reign with justice and submission to the great King, whose vicegerent you are on the throne and guardians of their people. Endure, then, O Father and Pontiff, as you have endured, the contradiction of sinners; let your children will be heard; the omnipotent will arise from his slumber; that voice shall be heard that commands the winds and the sea; calm will be restored to the Church, and a joyful peace shall smile over the face of the nations, over which you be summoned to receive that bright unfading diadem that

SWITZERLAND.

Civil Intolerance.

Father Segesserhim of St. Gall in Switzerland, according to strict conformity with his priestly duties, has excluded from confession and communion all those who declare their disbelief in the doctrine of Papal Infallibility. But in the State Constitution there is a clause which shall suffer any injury in his civil and constitutional rights on account of his faith in the Infallibility. An argument is held, therefore, that, as Catholics, the citizens have the right to go to confession and communion, and that the priest has no right whatever to exclude any one. We don't see the force of the argument that makes rebellion to one's religion a civil and constitutional right"—nay, more, a duty to guard the equality of the conscience of each individual before the faithful. Take a Protestant case in point: If Queen Victoria were to turn Catholic to-morrow she forfeits her civil and constitutional "right" to reign over England.—Universe, June 15.

FRANCE.

Associations of Catholic Workmen.

A number of young laymen of the gentry in Paris have been doing a very good work. They have been organizing an association for the establishment of Catholic Working-men's clubs. The first of these clubs has been opened in the centre of Belleville, an unpromising locality enough, but the club is said to have already become flourishing. The local committee, according to a letter in the Bien Public of Ghent, is a man whose history is curious. He is a working-man by trade, and bears the appropriate name of Crepin. It seems that he managed, at some time or other, to give offense to Raoul Rigault, who, as soon as he was installed as prefect of police, put him in prison first at Mazas, and afterwards at La Roquette. Here M. Crepin made the acquaintance of a Dominican friar, and entered into many conscripts. Then come those theeves, the Jesuits, who have taken away the library of the Roman College from the Ministers and Deputies. Then comes that other lot of thieves, the Academy, who have robbed the deputies of the Angelica Library with its eighty-six thousand volumes, and two thousand hundred manuscripts! Then come the Dominican Fathers, who have stolen the Cisterian Library from the Deputies of the Oratory, who have stolen the Villicellan Library; and last of all the Franciscans, who have taken the Corsini Collection. "We are despoiled," Pervari was crying out, and he wished to call the conservatives of all existing in Rome, saying, "We want a bill of suppression of all these orders of priests for morality's sake. And not only do I want to do away with the convents, but also with the churches; for there are seven hundred churches, and there are splendid monuments of art, works of our immortal artists, and these we want to decorate and adorn the poor halls of this Chamber." The "bogey Cossack" was again on the same day, and with great energy, of a second breach in the concordat. The first breach was made, by General Cadorna, near Porta Pia, on the 20th of September, 1870, with sixteen great pieces of cannon. The fruit of that easy victory was the possession of the Eternal City. With that the Pope deprived of his temporal power, and confined as a prisoner in the Vatican. But that was not enough, and a second breach is now inquired about by the Deputy Centi. He addressed the Minister of Justice as follows: "I, the Deputy of the Province of Rome, to whom the question chiefly belongs, did my best to open the breach in Porta Pia; now is your task, as you are an honest official that I am in politics and struggle, to destroy it and to pass triumphantly over it. I mean that the law concerning the suppression of the religious orders should be applied to this Province of Rome; and by this second breach we shall properly begin both the suppression and the dissolution of the Spiritual Power of the Pope. To destroy the convents, to confiscate the Church property and the Church plate, to expel the priests, this is that which will not fail to complete our glorious breach of Porta Pia."

FRANCE.

Arrival of Catholic Workmen.

A number of young laymen of the gentry in Paris have been doing a very good work. They have been organizing an association for the establishment of Catholic Working-men's clubs. The first of these clubs has been opened in the centre of Belleville, an unpromising locality enough, but the club is said to have already become flourishing. The local committee, according to a letter in the Bien Public of Ghent, is a man whose history is curious. He is a working-man by trade, and bears the appropriate name of Crepin. It seems that he managed, at some time or other, to give offense to Raoul Rigault, who, as soon as he was installed as prefect of police, put him in prison first at Mazas, and afterwards at La Roquette. Here M. Crepin made the acquaintance of a Dominican friar, and entered into many conscripts. Then come those theeves, the Jesuits, who have taken away the library of the Roman College from the Ministers and Deputies. Then comes that other lot of thieves, the Academy, who have robbed the deputies of the Angelica Library with its eighty-six thousand volumes, and two thousand hundred manuscripts! Then come the Dominican Fathers, who have stolen the Cisterian Library from the Deputies of the Oratory, who have stolen the Villicellan Library; and last of all the Franciscans, who have taken the Corsini Collection. "We are despoiled," Pervari was crying out, and he wished to call the conservatives of all existing in Rome, saying, "We want a bill of suppression of all these orders of priests for morality's sake. And not only do I want to do away with the convents, but also with the churches; for there are seven hundred churches, and there are splendid monuments of art, works of our immortal artists, and these we want to decorate and adorn the poor halls of this Chamber." The "bogey Cossack" was again on the same day, and with great energy, of a second breach in the concordat. The first breach was made, by General Cadorna, near Porta Pia, on the 20th of September, 1870, with sixteen great pieces of cannon. The fruit of that easy victory was the possession of the Eternal City. With that the Pope deprived of his temporal power, and confined as a prisoner in the Vatican. But that was not enough, and a second breach is now inquired about by the Deputy Centi. He addressed the Minister of Justice as follows: "I, the Deputy of the Province of Rome, to whom the question chiefly belongs, did my best to open the breach in Porta Pia; now is your task, as you are an honest official that I am in politics and struggle, to destroy it and to pass triumphantly over it. I mean that the law concerning the suppression of the religious orders should be applied to this Province of Rome; and by this second breach we shall properly begin both the suppression and the dissolution of the Spiritual Power of the Pope. To destroy the convents, to confiscate the Church property and the Church plate, to expel the priests, this is that which will not fail to complete our glorious breach of Porta Pia."

FRANCE.

Arrival of Catholic Workmen.

A number of young laymen of the gentry in Paris have been doing a very good work. They have been organizing an association for the establishment of Catholic Working-men's clubs. The first of these clubs has been opened in the centre of Belleville, an unpromising locality enough, but the club is said to have already become flourishing. The local committee, according to a letter in the Bien Public of Ghent, is a man whose history is curious. He is a working-man by trade, and bears the appropriate name of Crepin. It seems that he managed, at some time or other, to give offense to Raoul Rigault, who, as soon as he was installed as prefect of police, put him in prison first at Mazas, and afterwards at La Roquette. Here M. Crepin made the acquaintance of a Dominican friar, and entered into many conscripts. Then come those theeves, the Jesuits, who have taken away the library of the Roman College from the Ministers and Deputies. Then comes that other lot of thieves, the Academy, who have robbed the deputies of the Angelica Library with its eighty-six thousand volumes, and two thousand hundred manuscripts! Then come the Dominican Fathers, who have stolen the Cisterian Library from the Deputies of the Oratory, who have stolen the Villicellan Library; and last of all the Franciscans, who have taken the Corsini Collection. "We are despoiled," Pervari was crying out, and he wished to call the conservatives of all existing in Rome, saying, "We want a bill of suppression of all these orders of priests for morality's sake. And not only do I want to do away with the convents, but also with the churches; for there are seven hundred churches, and there are splendid monuments of art, works of our immortal artists, and these we want to decorate and adorn the poor halls of this Chamber." The "bogey Cossack" was again on the same day, and with great energy, of a second breach in the concordat. The first breach was made, by General Cadorna, near Porta Pia, on the 20th of September, 1870, with sixteen great pieces of cannon. The fruit of that easy victory was the possession of the Eternal City. With that the Pope deprived of his temporal power, and confined as a prisoner in the Vatican. But that was not enough, and a second breach is now inquired about by the Deputy Centi. He addressed the Minister of Justice as follows: "I, the Deputy of the Province of Rome, to whom the question chiefly belongs, did my best to open the breach in Porta Pia; now is your task, as you are an honest official that I am in politics and struggle, to destroy it and to pass triumphantly over it. I mean that the law concerning the suppression of the religious orders

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 20.
July—
11—Sunday—Eighth Sunday after Pentecost. St. Bonaventure, Bishop, Confessor and Doctor.
12—Monday—St. Henry, Emperor, Confessor.
13—Tuesday—S. S. of Mount Carmel.
14—Wednesday—St. Alexius, Confessor.
15—Thursday—St. Camillus of Lellis, Confessor. SS. Symphorosa and Companions, Martyrs.
16—Friday—St. Vincent of Paul, Confessor.
17—Saturday—St. Jerome Emiliani, Confessor. St. Margaret, Virgin and Martyr.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....JULY 13, 1872.

THE BALTIMORE CONVENTION.

The Baltimore Convention has accomplished its mission in a most satisfactory manner. It has nominated Greeley and Brown, and made the Cincinnati platform its own. Thus all doubts have been removed, and Democrats know the men they have to support in the forthcoming campaign. It is a source of pride to us to be able to assert that THE MONITOR was the first paper in California to decidedly pronounce in favor of the candidates selected by the chiefs of the Peoples party. We saw clearly enough that only by means of an alliance with the Liberal Republicans could the Radical phalanx be broken, and the nation freed from the reproach of a corrupt and incompetent administration. We did not hesitate to express our opinion, and enunciate the arguments in favor of it. We did not wait to receive a sun from any man, or from any party, but gave utterance to our sentiments in a completely independent way. Now it is certainly a consoling and gratifying reflection to think that the best and wisest politicians in the country hold our views, and make profession of our principles. Other journals will take them up now, of course, and support them very earnestly, because they are stamped with the approval of the whole Democratic party; but THE MONITOR stood by them when they were only recommended by their own intrinsic rigid and truth.

The action of the Baltimore Convention has thrown consternation into the Radical camp. Grant's organs are now talking about the "revolution" which has been wrought, they say, in the Democratic platform; and they are cracking some melancholy jokes about the "suicide" committed by the Democratic party. But their hilarity is a hollow sham invented merely to conceal their dismay. All along they hoped that the Baltimore Convention would make an "independent nomination," that is to say, such a nomination as would enable them to create popular prejudice by means of the old slanders against Democracy, and thus secure Grant's reélection. The adoption of Greeley and Brown has literally wrenched these weapons from their grasp, and left them not only incapable of attack but absolutely defenseless. How wanderfully ridiculous, for example, do the diatribes of Mr. Swift, so long inaugurated the Radical campaign in our city the other evening, read at the present time. There was a day when they might excite to anger, now they but call forth a laugh. They appear as intensely indolicrous as any stump oration that ever proceeded from the lips of a burnt cork minstrel, being about as truthful and nearly as attractive.

The fact is that the nomination has utterly destroyed the Republican party, cut the ground clear away from its feet and left it no foothold. It is impossible for the Radicals to put forward a single honest claim to popular support which does not belong in an equal degree to the Democracy. All that rubbish about "secession," and "slavery," and non-recognition of the constitutional amendments, and payment of the Confederate debt, has been swept off with a cyclone that rages in the gulf which separates the gloomy past from the glorious future. We donot exaggerate when we say that Republicanism has been annihilated. Its soul is fled, and it lies upon the face of the country a corpse with the odore of putrefaction emanating from it. The offices of the undertaker are all it requires, and they will be all administered in November next: till then we must bear with its effluvia as best we can. All that made it respectable, all that formed its intellect, all that gave it respectful consideration, has fled from it and are rallying to the support of the Baltimore nominees.

Summer, Trumbull, Schurz, are the men who gave character to Radicalism; their attitude now cannot be mistaken. How are they compensated for such men as Cameron, Butler, Cooking, and the gallant Spy of Nevada? In truth there can be no mistaking the forces which will stand opposed to each other in this campaign. One side, under the banners of Democracy, will be arrayed all that the nation possesses of worth, honesty and patriotism; on the other, under the flag of Radicalism, will be ranged all that we are cursed with in the shape of incompetency, roguery and sottishness. Of the result of such a contest there can hardly be any reasonable doubt. Greeley will be triumphantly elected and all left for Useless Grant will be to nibble his nails together and make a bee-line for Knight's Landing!

---

John P. Jones, Wm. Sharon and Jas. W. Nye are Republican aspirants for the United State Senate in Nevada. Thos. H. Williams and John Gartlee are willing to go if the Democrats carry the State. Jim Nye hopes to slip in by luck as a compromise candidate. Storey county, in which lies Virginia City, will be the stronghold of the campaign.

---

School Books—H. O. Bateman, Catholic Bookseller, 321 Kearny street, corner of Sutter, has just received a large stock of Public School Books, suited to the new books, which he is selling at New York prices

SUFFERING FOR CONSCIENCE SAKE.

Last week when noticing the arrival in our city of the Dominicans and Franciscans exiled from Guatemala by General Rufino Barrios, we observed that we would return to this subject. It seemed to us that the tyrannical act of the South American leader was only an episode in the great persecution which revolutionists and imperialists are now waging against the Church of God, and that, therefore, in order to fully comprehend it, it ought to be viewed together with certain events which are transpiring in Europe. We ask our readers to consider for a moment how Catholicity is attacked at the same time, and in the same fashion, by two antagonistic parties. The so called Republicans of Europe and Southern America assault it on the grounds that it is the friend of despotism and the foe of liberty. Hence we so often hear the declaration: "To be truly free we must sweep away the Church." On the other hand imperialists, supporters of absolute monarchy, persecute it on the pretext that it strives to destroy authority and introduce disorder.

But this is not at all a paradox, because it is simple enough to understand why Catholicity should be hated and feared by men of extreme views. Those whose "liberty" real'y means license, who seek to abolish the fundamental principles of Christian society, who would make atheistic communism supreme among nations, must naturally dislike a power which maintains the laws of God and upholds the cause of order. The Church defends the right of every man to possess in peace his legitimately acquired property: it upholds the sanctity of marriage and the inviolability of family ties: it asserts the divine right of religion to direct every man's conscience. It must, then, inevitably come into conflict with the men who deny and repudiate these things. Again, those who hold that religion should be only a department of government; who maintain that the secular power should control the Church; who believe that the canons of the councils were created for nothing better than to subserve the interests of self-styled "royal houses," have good reason to dread the power which insists upon the independence of conscience and the freedom of mankind.

These are the reasons why Barrios, the Republican, and Bismarck, the Imperialist, both oppress the Church and persecute its religious. They avail of the same pretexts and use the same means to effect their object. According to Bismarck, the Jesuits are conspiring against the German Empire, and he seeks to thwart their designs by depriving them of the rights of citizenship, and driving them from their native land. According to Barrios, the Dominicans and Franciscans were plotting against the stability of his government, and he ships them off to the United States without a cent in their pockets. There are some persons here who cannot understand how such arbitrary and tyrannical acts could excite the hostility of any ruler, and they think that these monks and priests must have been guilty of some great crime, or else they would not have been interfered with. Such individuals, however, do not take into consideration the intense hatred of religious life which has always characterized tyrants and revolutionists alike.

The fact is, that the persecuted ecclesiastics, American and European, have been guilty only of the "crime" of loving and serving Almighty God and reprobating infidel principles. They have been accused of "plotting" against the established authorities. This is an offense defined and duly provided for in the statutes of every civilized country; it is neither a new nor an unknown form of crime. Why then were not the alleged offenders tried for it in a court of law, so that all men might judge of the extent of their criminality? Why but because they not confronted with their accusers and heard in their own defense? The answers to these queries are plain enough: because they were guilty of no infraction of the laws of the country: because they had no accusers but the irreligious fury of their persecutors; because no evidence that could stand the test of examination could possibly be produced against them. The expedient of pronouncing them guilty without the agency of either Judge or Jury simplified matters very much. As the victims were Catholic priests and monks, it was not likely that very much noise could be made about the injustice done to them. To provide, however, for those who might be inclined to cry out against such tyranny, the plea of conspiracy was devised.

It answers admirably. We find "the free press of a free people" accepting the pretext and endorsing the persecution of unoffending men, merely because they belong to the Church of God. If they were traitors, merchants or professional men, or even genuine revolutionists, like the French Communists or Mexicans, the world would sympathize with them, and the great powers would feel called upon to remonstrate; but they are only priests, only ministers of God, and the nineteenth century philosophers all cry out, "Serves them right—what right have they to devote their lives to God; why did they not turn their attention to making money?" How great is Mammon and how numerous are his votaries!

---

PRESENTATION.—At a meeting of the Knights of the Red Branch, held at the Hall of the Irish Confederation on Thursday evening, July 11, Mr. John C. Talbot, on behalf of the members, presented Mr. M. F. Cummings with a magnificent gold watch and chain as a token of their appreciation of his efforts in the cause of Ireland's National Independence.

---

COLLECTIONS in aid of the Holy Father were taken up in most of the churches of this archdiocese last Sunday.

THE NEXT PAPAL ELECTION.

It is certainly not in good taste either for Christians or Pagans to wish the death of any one. Yet the Pope's enemies, both monarchical and republican, are evidently anxious that he should die as speedily as possible. Further purposes he has already lived too long, as he would confer a great favor on them by shutting off this mortal coil" without any more delay. Some of them want to abolish the Papacy altogether as an impediment to "progress;" others want to remodel it in accordance with the requirements of the "spirit of the age;" all want to make it something different from what it is now, and has been for over eighteen centuries. But they are such nice scrupulous and considerate people that they actually are prevented from laying hands upon the institution by the presence of the aged and feeble Pio Nono! There are, to be sure, a few Italian cut-throats who make themselves hoarse with crying out through the streets of Rome

"Rendete quella mano
Che Pio Nono ammazzo."

but the majority of the revolutionists only wish him to die quietly and so comfortably as can be in his bed. Still this Pontiff, who has long since exceeded the three score and ten years allotted to man, unfeelingly persists in enjoying excellent health and showing as much vigor and activity as many men twenty years his junior. All Roman correspondents are expected to write something about the "health of the Pope" at least once a week, and in order to comfort their readers, they invariably credit him with some disease certain to carry him off before the aspiration of ten days. Sometimes he has bad legs, very bad legs indeed, has the paralysis, the gout, and they are just about to begin to commence to fall him as the correspondent writes. Sometimes the disease is in the stomach, the Pope cannot eat, and of necessity he must die in a short time. Again his brain is affected, particularly when he expounds the chicanery of plotting politicians, and the world knows a man with a diseased brain cannot linger long in this vale of tears. The ten days pass away and the Pope is still present in the flesh. He walks lightly and rapidly; he eats every thing set before him heartily; and his intellect is clear, sound and bright as ever. He does not even appear to be affected by any remorse for the cruel havoc he plays with the predictions of the penny-a-liners and the hopes of the Revolutionists. Yet he is old, and in the course of nature must die in a few years anyhow, and of this consoling reflection his enemies cannot be deprived. Relying on this they have determined upon the plan of action they will pursue as soon as he has passed to his reward. The Republican revolutionists will, if they can, proceed to the election of a successor—pot if they can't—by might as well try to prevent the sun from rising. The Monarchical revolutionists will endeavor to secure the election of a Pope who will be completely subservient to them, who will obey their behests, and make the Church of God a servant of the secular power. These will "use their influence" with the Cardinals, will exhaust all their "cuteness" and all their "diplomacy" in order to effect their purpose in case an objectionable person should be chosen. The French, Spanish, German and Italian Governments claim to have a veto, and they will exercise it if they can. We were told by telegraph the other day that Prince Bismarck intends to claim one for his royal master as successor of the old German Emperors; if he does, we suppose that King Amadeo of Spain to lend him his. The Prussian Minister is dreadfully anxious that a Pope of pro-Teutonic sympathies should be elected. The Catholic world, with three thousand things would ensue if the next Pontiff had any leaning towards the French. Now cannot all these Kings, Emperors and Presidents mind their own business and let the Church alone? Why should they use for selfish and political purposes a privilege which was granted in the ages of Faith to Catholic potentates, and is now exercised by them in a manner destructive in the extreme to the Church? They talk about Catholicity clinging to medieval traditions, and yet they now avail of one in order to trammel the Church. But we are not the slightest fear that their abominable intrigues will succeed. We know that the Cardinals are faithful and many reputible guardians of the Church, and we are confident will find a way to frustrate the machinations of the enemies of the Vicar of Christ. The following extract from the London Tablet will explain to our readers the nature of the veto power against the independence of the Church:

THE VETO IN A FUTURE CONCLAVE.—The Roman correspondent of the Tablet alludes to a report that the Empire is seriously meditating a claim to the veto in a future Conclave. The Liberta, a paper usually supposed to be confidential organ of Rouher, mentions the rumor, and warns the objection that it is inconsistent with the Holy Roman Empire, but as Apostolic King of Hungary, that Austria exercised the veto. Both Governments claim the privilege being merely a concession for reasons of expediency to three great Catholic Powers. The Journal de Rome affirms that the intrigue in question is actually on foot, and declares that if the German Empire cannot succeed in its claim, it will ass the veto of a friendly Power. It remains to be seen whether this would be now conceded by the Pope, but it is difficult to perceive how it could be refused, if, for instance, that a veto by the present Spanish Government would be accepted by the Sacred College. The object of those who have now raised the question, is, of course, to reserve for themselves a possible successor to the Holy Father, or to throw a doubt upon the next election to the Holy See. We may be quite easy on both heads. Even if the three vetoes were exercised, such could only be exercised once, and, under the most favorable circumstances, three candidates only could be excluded. And as to the validity of an election being questioned, the Episcopate throughout the world is now drawn to such a character that the attempt would result in an ignominious failure, even if Divine Providence permitted any pirate for it, which, after all, is not so certain. The last election, for instance, was not rapidly made for any vote to be exercised. But a pamphlet, attributed to an Italian diplomatist, and published at Munich, takes quite another line. The author thinks that Italy, if she could establish her right to a veto, should not exercise it, as it is incompatible with the maxim of "a free Church in a free State." And he is further of opinion that the other Powers would be well satisfied to forego their claims, as they no longer any interest in excluding each other's candidates, and have, by their public policy, lost all right to interfere in the Conclave. It was on this ground, he says, that Pius IX. did not invite any of the Catholic Governments to the Council, and he concludes that the next election will be "free," and that it will lead to "a satisfactory solution of the Roman question," which, in the sense of the writer, we take leave to doubt.

THE COMMITTEE OF ONE HUNDRED.

The Committee of One Hundred are thoroughly ventilating the Railroad question if they are doing nothing else. The arguments in favor of the Central Pacific, in favor of the Atlantic Pacific and in favor of an independent San Francisco railway, have all been put forward and examined. If there be wisdom in multitude of counsel, the result of all this discussion must be perfection of the Railroad question, for a great deal of time has been wasted, and that much of the talk indulged in was altogether needless. One thing, however, has been thoroughly established—the necessity of there being a railroad of some description. Having established the fact that we must have a railroad, the Committee of One Hundred have only to call a Mass Meeting to ratify their decision, and then they can proceed to the election of the Directors. Having got a railroad, and having got it by the exercise of the franchises of the people, the people will be entitled to the control of it, and will be able to make it something different from what it is now, and has been for over eighteen centuries. But they are such nice scrupulous and considerate people that they actually are prevented from laying hands upon the institution by the presence of the aged and feeble Pio Nono! There are, to be sure, a few Italian cut-throats who make themselves hoarse with crying out through the streets of Rome but the majority of the revolutionists only wish him to die quietly and so comfortably as can be in his bed. Still this Pontiff, who has long since exceeded the three score and ten years allotted to man, unfeelingly persists in enjoying excellent health and showing as much vigor and activity as many men twenty years his junior. All Roman correspondents are expected to write something about the "health of the Pope" at least once a week, and in order to comfort their readers, they invariably credit him with some disease certain to carry him off before the aspiration of ten days. Sometimes he has bad legs, very bad legs indeed, has the paralysis, the gout, and they are just about to begin to commence to fall him as the correspondent writes. Sometimes the disease is in the stomach, the Pope cannot eat, and of necessity he must die in a short time. Again his brain is affected, particularly when he expounds the chicanery of plotting politicians, and the world knows a man with a diseased brain cannot linger long in this vale of tears. The ten days pass away and the Pope is still present in the flesh. He walks lightly and rapidly; he eats every thing set before him heartily; and his intellect is clear, sound and bright as ever. He does not even appear to be affected by any remorse for the cruel havoc he plays with the predictions of the penny-a-liners and the hopes of the Revolutionists. Yet he is old, and in the course of nature must die in a few years anyhow, and of this consoling reflection his enemies cannot be deprived. Relying on this they have determined upon the plan of action they will pursue as soon as he has passed to his reward. The Republican revolutionists will, if they can, proceed to the election of a successor—pot if they can't—by might as well try to prevent the sun from rising. The Monarchical revolutionists will endeavor to secure the election of a Pope who will be completely subservient to them, who will obey their behests, and make the Church of God a servant of the secular power. These will "use their influence" with the Cardinals, will exhaust all their "cuteness" and all their "diplomacy" in order to effect their purpose in case an objectionable person should be chosen. The French, Spanish, German and Italian Governments claim to have a veto, and they will exercise it if they can. We were told by telegraph the other day that Prince Bismarck intends to claim one for his royal master as successor of the old German Emperors; if he does, we suppose that King Amadeo of Spain to lend him his. The Prussian Minister is dreadfully anxious that a Pope of pro-Teutonic sympathies should be elected. The Catholic world, with three thousand things would ensue if the next Pontiff had any leaning towards the French. Now cannot all these Kings, Emperors and Presidents mind their own business and let the Church alone? Why should they use for selfish and political purposes a privilege which was granted in the ages of Faith to Catholic potentates, and is now exercised by them in a manner destructive in the extreme to the Church? They talk about Catholicity clinging to medieval traditions, and yet they now avail of one in order to trammel the Church. But we are not the slightest fear that their abominable intrigues will succeed. We know that the Cardinals are faithful and many reputible guardians of the Church, and we are confident will find a way to frustrate the machinations of the enemies of the Vicar of Christ. The following extract from the London Tablet will explain to our readers the nature of the veto power against the independence of the Church:

"Rendete quella mano
Che Pio Nono ammazzo."

THE VETO IN A FUTURE CONCLAVE.—The Roman correspondent of the Tablet alludes to a report that the Empire is seriously meditating a claim to the veto in a future Conclave. The Liberta, a paper usually supposed to be confidential organ of Rouher, mentions the rumor, and warns the objection that it is inconsistent with the Holy Roman Empire, but as Apostolic King of Hungary, that Austria exercised the veto. Both Governments claim the privilege being merely a concession for reasons of expediency to three great Catholic Powers. The Journal de Rome affirms that the intrigue in question is actually on foot, and declares that if the German Empire cannot succeed in its claim, it will ass the veto of a friendly Power. It remains to be seen whether this would be now conceded by the Pope, but it is difficult to perceive how it could be refused, if, for instance, that a veto by the present Spanish Government would be accepted by the Sacred College. The object of those who have now raised the question, is, of course, to reserve for themselves a possible successor to the Holy Father, or to throw a doubt upon the next election to the Holy See. We may be quite easy on both heads. Even if the three vetoes were exercised, such could only be exercised once, and, under the most favorable circumstances, three candidates only could be excluded. And as to the validity of an election being questioned, the Episcopate throughout the world is now drawn to such a character that the attempt would result in an ignominious failure, even if Divine Providence permitted any pirate for it, which, after all, is not so certain. The last election, for instance, was not rapidly made for any vote to be exercised. But a pamphlet, attributed to an Italian diplomatist, and published at Munich, takes quite another line. The author thinks that Italy, if she could establish her right to a veto, should not exercise it, as it is incompatible with the maxim of "a free Church in a free State." And he is further of opinion that the other Powers would be well satisfied to forego their claims, as they no longer any interest in excluding each other's candidates, and have, by their public policy, lost all right to interfere in the Conclave. It was on this ground, he says, that Pius IX. did not invite any of the Catholic Governments to the Council, and he concludes that the next election will be "free," and that it will lead to "a satisfactory solution of the Roman question," which, in the sense of the writer, we take leave to doubt.

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS—THE NEW ALMADEN MINE.

We have repeatedly expressed our conviction that these United States would never get one nickel cent in settlement of the Alabama claims. England has not the remotest intention of paying anything, and she would never have agreed to arbitration unless she were assured beforehand that she would not be called upon for money. She is busily engaged in getting up counter-claims or off-sets, and if one-tenth of them are pronounced valid, America will have to hand over a round sum before she obtains a quittance. Subjoined is a history, extracted from the Alta, of a single item which would about balance the entire Alabama claims as they stand at present. It is interesting to us Californians, inasmuch as the property, about the ownership of which the Geneva Conference is called upon to decide, is situated in our State, and our Courts have given judgment in the matter long ago. The claim is indirect enough certainly, but it is only this country which is debarred from presenting and for settlement. We might as well observe here that the Grant organs throughout the Union actually indulged in felicitations at the rejection of the "indirect damages" claims as if it were a glorious triumph for this Republic. They congratulated themselves that an obstacle in the way of arbitration had been removed, meaning evidently dresses with the Cross of the Legion of Honor. On whose behalf the authorities to interfere with the poor.

[Martin Hanley Carey was arrested and convicted in Dublin, towards the end of 1865, for the misdemeanor charge of "treason felony." The evidence adduced against him consisted of one of the subsidized informers, swore that he was connected with the revolutionary movement, yet he was interested to five years' penal servitude. Rigors of confinement told upon the unfortunate man, and he became temporarily deranged, and in consequence of which he was released after the first anniversary and, under the care of his friends, was conveyed to Ireland. During the Fenian disturbances of 1867 he was again arrested and imprisoned for a short time, but was released without trial. He was elected a member of the Irish Parliament for Cashel in the intense delight of the entire population. The police thought it high treason that the counterfeit presentment of their arch foe should be exhibited in the shop windows, they removed their diversion with the effigy, and finally burned it in the open air of the city. If these are the men upon whom England depends for keeping Ireland in subjection, we cannot speak highly of her discretion. The Tipperary militia are as much a farce as the fellows as can be found in the world, for pluck and physique they are simply unsurpassable; but their "loyalty" to Queen Victoria is decidedly shaky. We are confident that many of them are sworn Republicans. When the standard of independence is raised, they will make their strength felt in a way that will bake her Most Gracious Majesty open her eyes.

An appropriate sequel to the Commencement Exercises of the Catholic school of San Jose' some mention of which was made last week; was a searching comprehensive examination on Sunday June 30, of the pupils classes as to their proficiency in Christian Doctrine. The result was most gratifying to parents, friends and visitors. For some time such was the excellence of the answering that it was somewhat difficult to determine the respective merits of the pupils. At length the premiums were satisfactorily awarded. Among the most valuable were a gold medal, awarded to Miss Frances Auld, and an elegant and valuable bible, awarded to Master Thos. Sullivan. It is understood that other premiums are contemplated by means of which the Catholic school of San Jose shall be raised to the first rank.

SADDLER THE SUICIDE!

KEOCH THE RENEGADE

Revelations of Irish Political Life Years Ago!

Next week we shall commence the publication in the columns of THE MONITOR of the startling novel now appearing in Dublin Nation entitled "Saddler the Suicide" or the Lacrys of Rathcore." The story of course, founded on the strange career of the Tipperary Bank, and as its personages are "still" living, Anglo, Ali O'Flaherty, Vincent Scully, and a prominent politicians of that time. Writer must have been thoroughly acquainted with the history of his tale's sketches their peculiarities with a master hand. Full of incident and striking as the story cannot but be acceptable to readers.

Funeral of a Fenian Leader.

DUBLIN, July 9.—The funeral cloak of Martin Hanley Carey, a Fenian leader who died recently, took place to-day, throwing himself into the river while temporarily insane. Guilds and societies took place to-day on the occasion of imposing demonstration on the part of the Fenians. Four thousand persons, all of the working class, belonging to the Irish National Federation in this city and vicinity marched in procession to Glasnevin, the cemetery, where the remains were interred. The processionists were headed by the Artillery Band, and all were in full dress with the Cross of the Legion of Honor. On whose behalf the authorities to interfere with the poor.

[Martin Hanley Carey was arrested and convicted in Dublin, towards the end of 1865, for the misdemeanor charge of "treason felony." The evidence adduced against him consisted of one of the subsidized informers, swore that he was connected with the revolutionary movement, yet he was interested to five years' penal servitude. Rigors of confinement told upon the unfortunate man, and he became temporarily deranged, and in consequence of which he was released after the first anniversary and, under the care of his friends, was conveyed to Ireland. During the Fenian disturbances of 1867 he was again arrested and imprisoned for a short time, but was released without trial. He was elected a member of the Irish Parliament for Cashel in the intense delight of the entire population. The police thought it high treason that the counterfeit presentment of their arch foe should be exhibited in the shop windows, they removed their diversion with the effigy, and finally burned it in the open air of the city. If these are the men upon whom England depends for keeping Ireland in subjection, we cannot speak highly of her discretion. The Tipperary militia are as much a farce as the fellows as can be found in the world, for pluck and physique they are simply unsurpassable; but their "loyalty" to Queen Victoria is decidedly shaky. We are confident that many of them are sworn Republicans. When the standard of independence is raised, they will make their strength felt in a way that will bake her Most Gracious Majesty open her eyes.

---

BEAUTIFUL IRELAND.—The Nashville Gazette says: We know, of course, of Ireland as called the "Emerald Isle," that the color of the emerald is green, but never had a correct conception of why it was so, and where in the world seen such verdure as it charms us to look upon in the rural districts of that land. The grass, the bushes, the hedges of young grain, ever with breezes creep like playful sprites beautiful in the passage, and the steep of the purest wool; the rolling up into mist-shrouded mountains, all with thick and smooth, velvet green. But Ireland is also called Flowery Isle. Tender aspect in Ireland, I believe, where Nature can find an excuse for it, than her dainty flowers in the gardens and in the meadows. We very well remember the first time the great blooming rhododendron, the smallest flowered that ever sprung forth from a green, exuberant furze, so richly yellow, color that might charm the eye of the sickworm delights several thousands of trees, "to drop a tear," as the poet says, "upon the violet scented pink, and sweet white variety, adorns the gardens of the parterres, flowers of every variety, clamber to hide the bare moral wall, and the hedges of North Sea are fringed and embroidered with flowers and if you search deeply in the valleys you will find little, well nigh invisible, flowers, that, falling from the sik

[From the Dublin Nation of June 15.]

"CROMWELL FOUGHT AND CROMWELL AGAIN!"

By the Author of "The Cromwellian Settlement of Ireland."

I must leave it to my countrymen to choose between the cry of "Cromwell for ever and Cromwell again!" which the Orangemen of Ulster (at all events, of the county of Armagh) will well understand, or that of "Ill for Cromwell!" which Judge Keogh, who is a Connaught man and such a lover of Cromwell, will more obligingly prefer. Unless, indeed, they should resolve to adopt neither, but, using another Orange cry, slightly altered, shall be rather inclined to shout "To hell with Cromwell!"

Now, in order to help them in the selection, they shall have some account of this English hero. Not that they are quite ignorant of him: for, though dead for others, he survives for us, not merely in our ruined castles, ruined churches, and ruined nation, which, deprived by Cromwell of its native and naturalized gentry, (a deed repeated at the end of 20 years by taking away their Parliament,) has ever since raged wildly and madly like the one-eyed giant Polyphæmus with his eye out; but Cromwell lives, I say, and breathes in the latest legislation of the English Parliament against the Irish.

"MORTUUS NIT ALIIS—CROMWELLUS, SED MIHI VIVIT."

Though dead for others, Cromwell survives for us! as the Irish said at the Restoration, on finding their Cromwellian tyrants confirmed in power and in the best lands and liberties they had robbed them of. And not merely surviving, but in some respects outdone by the present Parliament in injustice. For, while it has plagiarized the Kinsogue Law, in leaving the Irish of a barody where one of by pressing and robbing and praying and murdering colonels or captains was slain, Cromwell allowed the Irish inhabitants to appeal by writ-of-error and plead that they had raised the Hue and Cry (though their indignant sovereign charged that they often sent in the wrong way and those who perhaps had done the deed seemed to be busiest in the pursuit). But in the present Kinsogue Law for quartering police on the Irish of the neighborhood of a murder, there is no such limitation. In the respect the Kinsogue Law for quartering police on the Irish of the present day are (1 say) more unjust and cruel than the Irish Cromwellian ordinance, revived in the year 1665, they have, however, just enacted a clause and more malicious one, taken from the later Penal Laws, or Laws for strengthening the Protestant interest in Ireland, in they found that the former law had no other during 25 years in producing informers, just as no Protestant discoverer came forward until they were promised the lands held by the Papists as the reward of their discovery, the neighborhood is, by this law, to provide for the widow of a murdered lord of a Cromwellian land lord. Private gain thus promotes the services of this law, and prompts her to arrest the penalty. For penalty it is; not love of the Cromwellian gentry or English Parliament for the widow. If it were, why not compensate her out of the Consolidated Fund? Because a record of innocence are made to suffer out of pure vengeance; for there is no escaping the penalty, even if the neighbors were to catch and convict the assassin.

This is spite and malice and worse (if any again) than Cromwell; for he gave twenty-eight days for finding and producing the criminal, and he kept in the standing army of Irish police, half soldiers, half spies, with power to break into farmers' dwellings in the dead of night, among their sleeping wives and daughters, to search their beds for papers, and empowered to take up and torture men, by force of imprisonment, to answer the questionings of any inquisitive or suspicious landlord, prompted by the pimping policeman.

To not this enough for Judge Keogh? Or would he have Cromwell's whole code resuscited, and revive his legislation against priests as if he has been enhanced against the peasants? Already the English press is calling out for the prosecution of the great patriarch and Archbishop of the West, his safeguard, and his clergy. And as the Judges, notorious through Ireland for their complaisance to arbitrary power, lately allowed the Attorney General, prosecuting a Priest at the order of the House of Commons, to send him before a foreign jury, contrary to the statute of Edward of 700 years, the noble private may be sent to be tried before a jury in subservient Dublin. or in jugged Orange Belfast: or, if need were, the Parliament might push an Act through both houses in three days to try him in London, like Archbishop Plunket, and make another martyr of him—a Thomas a Becket of Ireland. For this is not in the penal days, when none but Protestants are or pretended. Protestants were forced, the Government never could obtain a verdict against priests or friars; and in 1717, in order to a reinforcement of juries there was an Act passed making the forty-shilling Protestant freeholders of the county capable of trying offences in the City of the Tribes.

By this it appears that what the Judges found no difficulty in doing in 1858, neither the Judges nor yet the Parliament itself shared venture on in 1717. For this law is not observed as the constant practice—namely, that the privileges of the Constitution are taken away as soon as they come to be used for the protection of the Irish. Witness the Jury Law and its vexes, to be laid, according to the Constitution, in the place of the offence, abolished by the new Penal Laws. Witness the Habeas Corpus Act, no longer requiring the intervention of Parliament to suspend it, but left to the good pleasure of the Lord Lieutenant, whereby the Constitution stands actually suspended. Yet had Irishmen like Brogulan the watchmaker of that English bloodhound, the corresponsent of the Pall Mall Gazette, vW. S. G.)," whose letters in February, 1870, (with the applications of the Cromwellian landlords of Meath and Westmeath,) lavished the Coercion! "We have three forms of crime to deal with in Ireland (says this "W. S. G."), agrarian outrages, Fenianism, and sedition. The suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act is exactly the remedy required, especially if the Suspending Act contains a clause (which, no doubt, it will) empowering the Government to suppress and seize all incendiary publications. A hundred prisoners (and probably three moderate six dozenths) would suffice to quiet the country and alarm the malefactors, of whom (for example) I have heard men who love to rest, do not love to pine for a few months in Mountjoy, or for a few years at Bermuda. The simultaneous execution of a hundred warrants would show us how hollow and bonafide is the prevalent disquiet of justice, and it might also make us pause before we restored our Grand Palladium Act to a country so little fitted to enjoy it."

But the Gladstone Government have even out-Cromwelled Cromwell. Instead of suspending the Habeas Corpus Act, they have given to the Lord Lieutenant (that is to the Cromwellian landlords, to their spies and the police on whose suggestions he acts), the power, as I have said, of suspending the Constitution. And instead of seizing incendiary publications he can seize the printing presses and the property of sinners' proprietors. And in such haste were the Parliament to pass this Bill, that the House of Commons actually gave the Lord Lieutenant power to break into any newspaper office in Ireland without one word of notice, and carry off presses, types, paper and manuscripts, and all they find, a power they qualified for very modestly by requiring him to give one warning.

So much for the Cromwellianism of the present day. Let us turn for a moment to the past, and see if we have any more reason to join the Judge in his praise of Cromwell.

That Cromwell was a good Englishman might be supposed from the universal admiration he is at present held in by England's Sons. But this worship of him is of late days there has been created a Trinity of Gods for England, consisting of Henry the Eighth, Cromwell, and King William the Third—to whom we may add that Blessed Virgin, Elizabeth!—and the chief merit of all of them is the blood they spilled in Ireland: but the greatest of these is Cromwell, as having spilt the most Irish blood. I have heard an Irish Catholic before now (of course of the landlord class) praise Cromwell, much in the Judge's strain. But I will, for the Judge's sake, deemiug it a proof of the following truth:

"And, like the world, men's jobbernowls
Turn round with every point it veers,
And what they're confidently told
By some one else can be controll'd."

In other words, always hearing Carlyle's foolish praises of him, and promising himself to be hearing of some of them, "tried hisen the Cavaliers!" For this they had left the tail of one of their horses, and stripped her naked to the middle, and for three days and three nights, with a new cruelty with their cart-whipe that her body was cut to the bone—the torment being so great that the cat himself (so far as bodies would allow her) to the ground: but that they dragged her along, in so much that her legs were so torn that the flesh was worn from the bones. In this miserable plight they left her, equally celebrated (for temporary account) the poor soul lay for a few days and died of her wounds.

And the soldiers did not hesitate after the battle of Naseby (June, 1645), to massacre the Irish Orgolian the women and Englishwomen, some of them women of equality, on the pretence they were Irish: for the Parliament had forbidden quarter to any of the King's soldiers from Ireland, though Protestants, or to their followers, coming to his aid in England.

After this it may seem trivial to mention their further deeds, as the solemn monuments of piety and history in England are inexcusable, violating the monuments of the dead, and hacking the arms hangings, in the choirs with the figure of Christ and his Apostles. Against another statue of him in the frontispiece of the sixth page of the first four folio editions of Shakespeare, ing when they did hit it in the face or head.

Of Sir William Walker and his men, on the 13th December, 1642, bursting into Winchester Cathedral with drums beating and colors flying, their matches lighted, when some of their horsemen rode up through the church to the choir. They tore to pieces the tombs of the ancient Kings of England, and the troopers broke the stained glass of the windows with their boots, and afterwards rode habited in surplices through the town.

Of how in July, 1643, the soldiers quartered in Westminster Abbey broke the altar rails, and put on the singing men's gowns, and in contempt ran up and down the church, playing "hare and hounds;" he that wore the minister's surplice being hare, the other hounds. How they drank and smoked at the altar, and committed such beastliness as cannot with decency be mentioned.

These were all friends and fellow-soldiers of Cromwell; as were also those of the city of Waterford, who twenty years afterwards (though they then had laid by their long coats and broad swords), on the first Sunday after the Restoration, the bishop being then to preach for the first time in public in the pulpit with human entrenchment, and the font likewise—nearly breaking his heart—a practice they repeated six years after to his successor (Bishop Gore), on the like occasion, who found his way strewed with the same defilement. It is he that tells the tale.

No such deeds as these, or those of Sir Michael Livesays and Sir William Walkers, were ever charged against "the brainless, mindless instruments of ecclesiastical despotism," as the Judge has thought fit to characterize the fiercest minded and noblest people in the world, the most charitable and amenable, but (mark it well!) the highest spirited and the least tolerant of insult.

At this very time, Griffith Williams, Bishop of Ossory, robbed, according to his own account, of all the Liberal Lands of the Bishopric, by a set of Ana-baptist tinkers and tailors, broken English tradesmen, followers and colonels of the perfidious rebel and regicide, Colonel Axtell, as he calls them, so as there was not so much land left him about Kilkenny as would feed a goose—declared that, were it not for Gustave Adolphus (that very year of his religion (who supported him he had rather live in a poor cottage in his own country (Wales) than a bishop among such a crew as Cromwellian Anabaptists and other worse sectaries that infested Ireland.

[Concluded next week.]

MISCELLANEOUS FOREIGN NEWS.

CHIEFLY COMPILED FROM CONTINENTAL JOURNALS

The Court of appeal at Versailles refused to remit the sentence of Fimbert and Magnier, condemned to death by the council of war.

The Academy of Inscriptions and Belles-lettres at their sitting on the 8th inst., by a majority of 24 votes against 14, awarded the second prize to Mr. Leon Gautier, for his beautiful publication of the «Song of Roland." This is the third time that M. Gautier has been honored by this flattering distinction.

Spain, under the regime of the son of Victor Emmanuel, is imitating the (brevity (?) of Bismarck and his colleagues in respect to religious orders. In the Cortes, on the 8th inst., a motion for the suppression of them was thrown out by a large majority. How long is Catholic Spain to endure the indignities and sufferings heaped upon her? It would be a blessed day for her if a rebellion, or a sea-mark for sectaries to sail by.

Nor did his action belie his countenance. "At the siege of Hillsborough, three miles south of Buckingham (4th March, 1644), Cromwell and 1000 rebels stormed it at several places at once, and took Sir Alexander Denton (the master of the house) prisoner, with Colonel Hungerford and his common soldiers, whereof, as their own pamphlets boasted (says Mercurius Aulicus) they put sixty to the sword. The very children had their clothes torn from their backs, and the grandmother even not by the common soldiers, but; by Captain Taylor and other captains strip'd, most naked, their nailes pulled out of their heads, socks and shoulders, to the very elbows, their hands burnt even with the muskets, themselves dragged about, and then made to march up to their knees in dirt, the soldiers reviling them, and commanded marching, calling them 'Ammonite sow-women.' From thence, by favor of their kindred (for such were some of the chief of these rebels) they were allowed a cart to carry them to Aylesbury, where the cart-wrights' old patch coats for hoods and scarfs, while having robbed them of all their own. The men, many of them, were put to the shift of a bundful of straw for their shirts, their nakedness remaining barefooted to Padbury church; and there they were to wander also stript; and a poor man, for lending him but a coat and a bottle of straw to lie upon, was called a 'cavalering rogue,' and promised a plundering next day." The minister of the parish, Mr. Oakley, was cut in the head with a rapier; and though a sick and infirm man, was marched with the rest through the streets of Aylesbury as a show—the rebels making jest of his infirmities, and saying, "Because he was lean they pulled off his shoes and stockings, to save him a grazing."

But they served other women far more mercilessly than these ladies. On their march towards Gloucester, as they passed through Chipping Norton, a troop of the ladies said in the hearing of some of them, "Hired bines the Cavaliers!" For this they first laid the tail of one of their horses, and stripped her naked to the middle, and for three miles marched with her as scornfully with their cart-whipe that her body was cut to the bone—the torment being so great that the cat himself (so far as bodies would allow her) to the ground: but that they dragged her along, in so much that her legs were so torn that the flesh was worn from the bones. In this miserable plight they left her, equally celebrated (for temporary account) the poor soul lay for a few days and died of her wounds.

And the soldiers did not hesitate after the battle of Naseby (June, 1645), to massacre the Irish Orgolian the women and Englishwomen, some of them women of equality, on the pretence they were Irish: for the Parliament had forbidden quarter to any of the King's soldiers from Ireland, though Protestants, or to their followers, coming to his aid in England.

After this it may seem trivial to mention their further deeds, as the solemn monuments of piety and history in England are inexcusable, violating the monuments of the dead, and hacking the arms hangings, in the choirs with the figure of Christ and his Apostles. Against another statue of him in the frontispiece of the sixth page of the first four folio editions of Shakespeare, ing when they did hit it in the face or head.

Of Sir William Walker and his men, on the 13th December, 1642, bursting into Winchester Cathedral with drums beating and colors flying, their matches lighted, when some of their horsemen rode up through the church to the choir. They tore to pieces the tombs of the ancient Kings of England, and the troopers broke the stained glass of the windows with their boots, and afterwards rode habited in surplices through the town.

Of how in July, 1643, the soldiers quar-

Local Manufactures at the Dublin Exhibition.

We extract from the Irish Times the following references to articles exhibited by local firms in the department for textile fabrics at the Dublin Exhibition: There are many fine specimens of Irish woolen goods in the Exhibition, among which may be specified the now universally celebrated double warp, all-wool tweeds, and the finished Saxony tweeds from the blarney manufactory of Messrs. Martin Mahony and Brothers, which are in variation for clothing the gentleman, the farmer, and the artisan. Among these is a newly-introduced tweed termed "Masaniello," consisting of a mixture of Australian with Irish wool, and possessing the strength of the former coarse article and the peculiar fineness and pliancy of the latter. The character of the production is that it is easy and loose in wear, but gives a dressy appearance. They also exhibit other specimens of double-warp, all-wool tweeds, in the various styles of sharp, color, and pattern, one a light grey being particularly admirable for its delicate coloring, and sensitive fineness of material. The navy blue yatching serge will be found a very desirable material for complete suits during what may be hoped is to be a genial summer; and there are many things which go to prove that well-directed Irish enterprise can accomplish much for the resuscitation of this branch of manufacture. Messrs. Mahony state that they seek no patronage but that first class as received by them of the propriety of introducing the "fine tweed" manufacture into Ireland; and they have been awarded a bronze medal in the International Exhibition of 1862 at London. Within the past few years the demand for the present stage of perfection has been made, and the result is that Irishmade tweeds are now to be had in the English metropolis and other worse sectaries that infested Ireland.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LYNCH & COMIEN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

Overstrung, Grand, Square & Upright

PIANOS.

WAREROOMS,

Nos. 934, 936, 938 and 940 Broadway,

NEW YORK.

THESE PIANOS ARE UNSURPASSED FOR Their Elastic Touch, Singing quality, full, round and powerful Tone, Great Durability, and, in short, everything that renders a PIANO PERFECT

Description and Prices.

(The Pianos will be delivered in San Francisco at the prices given.)

No. 1—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, plain legs, carved trusses ..... $450
No. 2—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, moulding on pilloth, carved legs and trusses ..... 450
No. 3—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, serpentine moulding, carved legs and lyre ..... 450
No. 4—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, serpentine moulding, beveled top, carved legs and lyre ..... 450
No. 5—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, serpentine moulding, handsomely carved legs and lyre, three moulding, beveled top, carved legs and lyre ..... 470
No. 6—7½ Octaves. Four large round corners, finished back and front, handsomely carved legs and lyre, three mouldings, beveled top ..... 500

These Instruments are all in Rosewood Case, beautifully polished.

UPRIGHT PIANOS.

Seven Octaves—Black Walnut case ..... $600
Seven Octaves—Rosewood case ..... 650

PARLOR ORGANS AND MELODEANS, of all sizes and styles, at manufacturers' prices.

TESTIMONIALS.

Below will be found a few of many letters now in complimentary to our Pianos:

[From Mrs. General W. T. Sherman.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 21, 1870.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: I am very much pleased with the Piano purchased of you. It is a beautiful instrument, very compact, and is considered by all who have seen it a perfect beauty. Many good musicians and distinguished persons have called since it has been in our parlor, and all pronounce it a fine instrument. We ourselves are charmed with it. I shall most certainly recommend it to my friends who may wish to purchase. I am very truly and respectfully yours, ELLEN T. E. SHERMAN.
106 J street.

[The building of new Capitol has been at this office.—Ed. Monitor.]

[From the North-restwood Artist, Camilla Urso.]

NEW YORK, May 27, 1870.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: I have given your Pianos a fair trial, I am happy to congratulate you on its perfect success. For a public artist, your Instruments possess rare merits, and it gives me much pleasure to recommend them to the public. Yours truly, CAMILLA URSO.

[From Prof. Sandford, Jr., President of St. John's College, Fordham.]

FORDHAM, N. Y., June 4, 1870.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: It gives me pleasure to say that the Piano which we bought from you has given entire satisfaction to our Professors and Pupils in Music. Yours very truly,
JOHN SANDFORD, Jr., President.

[From the Sisters of Charity, Academy of Holy Cross, Forty-second street, New York.]

Having Lynch & Comien's Pianos in use we take great pleasure in recommending them as musical. If not superior, to those of any other manufacturer.

[From Mrs. James Sadlier, 198 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.]

Mrs. James Sadlier has very great pleasure in certifying to the superior excellence and durability of her Piano manufactured by Messrs. Lynch & Comien, which she has had in constant use in her family house for over nine years, and it still a really good instrument, and gives entire satisfaction.

[Extract of a Letter from the Superior of Sisters of Charity, Emmitsburg, Md.]

I have much pleasure in stating that the instrument has given entire satisfaction to those who have used and heard it. The beauty and finish of the workmanship, the richness of tone, and the power of the instrument recommend it to all who may wish to purchase.
SISTER M. B. BRADFORD

GENERAL NOTES.

The Isle of Wight is to be the selection of Prince Bismarck.

Count Moltke is said to be pursuing military preparations with the greatest activity.

The Bavarian regiments are to be supplied each with twenty mitrailleuses of a new construction, terribly destructive.

Mrs. Martin, authoress of the new novel "Ethel Mildmay's Follies," is the daughter of the Irish Chief Justice Monaghan.

Twenty Canadian riflemen will be sent to Wimbledon next month to represent the Dominion at the meeting of the National Rifle Association.

Marshal Serrano's conduct in reference to the Carlists, which has been so freely canvassed of late, was definitely approved by a formal vote of the Senate recently.

The Hurrussee Embassy bring some splendid presents for the Queen, among them a gold necklace of beautiful workmanship, weighing several pounds.

An Irish M. P., representing a small borough, has, it is said, netted eight sweepstakes of £200 each and £60,000 on the result of the Derby, principally from backing Strabar to Flurry for a place.

A marriage has been arranged between Don Augusta, brother of the King of Portugal, and the Princess Maria Isabella, daughter of the ex-Queen of Spain, and widow of the Count de Girgenti.

Dick Whittington's statue erected where he heard, like Irving, "Those Bells," has been removed, and sold to a publican, who has had Dick stuck up over his door at Highgate, and repaired.

The Czar will soon have his complete wire to North India. No wood being at hand in the Kirghiz steppes, the Turkestan line of wires from Tashkend to Fort Markie will be mounted on brick pillars.

It is asserted that Prussia has addressed to the Luxembourg Government an ultimatum demanding an immediate decision on the proposal made by the German Government for working the Luxemburg railways.

The right of the 3d Bufis to pass through the City with drums beating and fixed bayonets we are informed arises from their having originally formed part of the Hessian trained bands," and as descendants of that force they in consequence enjoy that privilege.

The death is announced of Lady Grace Vandeleur, daughter of the second Earl of Mayo, at Kilrush House, Clare, on the 3d ultimo. The deceased lady, we see by Debrett's Peerage, married in 1835, Crofton Moore Vandeleur, Esq., M. P. for Clare, and Colonel of the Clare Militia.

One of the most amusing and popular books recently published is "Modern Turkey," by J. Lewis Farley. The "means," about Turkish women are particularly interesting, and may be recommended as useful and instructive to the Women's Rights body.

It is reported that at Preston, on Monday and Tuesday, the 3d and 4th ult., from fifty to sixty of the children were taken to the police-station on each day. In nearly every instance the children were lost in consequence of the drunkenness of the mother. Many of the women were "very respectable."

Among the names of the gentlemen who passed the recent examination in Hindu and Mahomedan law and the law of India in British India, held by the Council of Legal Education in Lincoln's-inn hall for admission to the bar, we observe that of Mohammed Mubidduddin, a prince of the Mysore family, one of the most wealthy and influential Mahomedan families in India.

Five seats have to be filled up in the French Assembly. The votes were taken on Sunday, and, as far as the results are yet known, the following seem likely to be the successful competitors: M. Deregranchi, Republican, for the Department of the North; M. Jules Bernl, also Republican, for the Somme; M. Paul Bex, Radical, for the Yonne; and M. d'Abbatucci, Bonapartist, for Corsica. M. Deregranchi's election is looked upon as a great triumph for Moderate Republican opinions.

Germany is looking far into the future with reference to Alsace and Lorraine. The Government will, for directing the introduction of the Imperial Constitution, have divided the country into second reading. The ground taken was that these provinces were not yet ripe for the Federal Constitution in its entirety, and especially that the preliminary question of nationality would have first to be settled. The Crusetle General would enter on their functions in the course of the current year.

Sir Charles Dutton Price, second baronet, expired at Jersey on the 19th of May last. He was born in 1800, and succeeded his father, Sir Rose, in 1834. His remains at present have been of a somewhat eccentric character, as his death, which took place on the 19th of last month, was only just announced, and we see by Debrett's Baronetage that, in 1850, he was in England, and was not directly heard of by any member of the family for more than twenty years, although they had reason to believe he was alive.

The Archeological Society of Liège has just been engaged in getting certain marbles made at a spot called Jupille. The remains of an important Gallo-Roman habitation have been discovered, and a number of walls have furnished fragments of a remarkable mosaic, views of various kinds in fine clay, writing-stylus, hair-pins, some coins, and a large quantity of Roman tiles. Some of the objects are extremely curious, and we are excited such general interest that the digging are to be continued on a more extensive scale.

The death of the Duc Alexandre Edmond de Talleyrand Perigord is announced, at the age of 85. The Duke has already first, the Duchess Dorothee de Sagan, in Courland, and his second wife was the widow of Mr. Hugh McDonell of the house of Glengarry. The eldest son of the Duke inherited, on the death of his mother, the Sagan estates, and his son obtained from Napoleon III. the restoration of the title of Duke of Montmorency. The youngest son of the Duchess Dorothee inherited the estate of Dunoch Wertemberg, in Courland.

One of the bishops of the Anglican Establishment, recently quoted, in the midst of a severe debate on Convocation, the old motto of some friend of his, that over the fireplace of his study should be inscribed "Mangling does here." a witty Southern retort of strong anti-revision tendencies recommended that the motto on the revision report should be preceded by the prayer to be used by persons "at sea." Lastly, a prelate, on being told that he ought never to "wait for twenty-one days," replied that such was the exact period of incubation of a not over-brilliant member of the ornithological family.

A few days ago, a poor Piedmontese corporal was carried in his last resting-place, in the Père Lachaise. Not a single friend accompanied the coffin: three mourners, however, followed—an Italian greyhound, a poodle, and a shaggy little terrier, whom it had been found impossible to drive away from the body of their dead master! Arrived at the cemetery, the gate was shut in the faces of this touching little procession, whom, she bowling piteously to no purpose, they strove to soften the hearts of the grim undertakers by standing upon their hind-legs and waltzing; after three or four turns they went through their whole pantomimic repertoire. After which, finding all their pitiful efforts of no avail, they planted themselves in front of the gate, whining and gazing sunplicantly in the face of the gate-keeper, and, not before a full hour had elapsed did the three poor doggies leave their post, with heads hanging and tails between their legs, in all probability to be taken nightly care by some charitable soul.

One day last week a lady and gentleman of position were married in Cheltenham, and posted to Ross to spend the honeymoon. A relay of horses—four greys—was sent from Gloucester to Huntley, and some wag set afloat a rumor that the horses were to take "Sir Roger" to a meeting of his friends in Ross. It happened to be the annual meeting of the Huntley Club, and a magistrate, who was chairman, announced at the dinner-table that "Sir Roger" would be there at 5 o'clock. At that hour up dashed bride and bridegroom. Their carriage was besieged; cheers were given again and again for "Sir Roger." It happened, however, that the bridegroom was "boarded like the pard," and slim, and thus the mistake soon revealed itself. The gentleman and his newly-made wife were at first evidently as much astonished as annoyed; but when the mistake was explained to them they entered into the joke, and enjoyed it immensely. As they left they were heartily cheered, and all happiness was wished them.

CATHOLIC ITEMS.

Several conversions have taken place lately in Rome, especially among the American ladies.

Bishop Gibbone, of North Carolina is seeking pecuniary aid for his feeble diocese among the wealthy Catholic churches of Philadelphia.

Right Rev. Bishop Wood, of Philadelphia, has appointed Rev. John W. Gerdemann, pastor of St. S. Pontificus Church in that city, Secretary for the German.

Rev. Joseph A. Hainz, has been transferred from the pastoral charge of St. Patrick's Church, Pottsville, Pa., to that of St. Sebastian's, Frank, Philadelphia.

Bishop Wood has purchased Bolmar's boarding-school and property in Westchester, Pa., and is refitting it as one of the academy of the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

Rev. John E. Haire, late pastor of St. James Church, Cadyville, N. Y., has been called by Bishop Hallman to be Secretary and Chancellor of the diocese of Ogdensburg.

Rev. Daniel O'Connor, late of St. Patrick's, but more recently of St. Theresa's Church, Philadelphia, has been appointed pastor of St. Mary's Church, at Mahanoy Plane, Schuylkill county, Pa.

The solemn blessing of the corner-stone of the new Catholic Church at Mt. Holly, New Jersey, took place on Sunday, 23d of June. The ceremony was performed by the Rt. Rev. J. Roosevelt Bayley, who preached on the occasion.

"The Knights of St. Columbkille" is the title of a new religious association lately organized in Washington, D. C. The name may have a connection with the legendary St. Columbkille, the "Dove of the Cell," was one of the brightest among the glorious Irish saints. Rev. R. A. Maguire has accepted a request to act as chaplain of the new association.

Bishop McQuaide, of Rochester, N. Y., in moving for a reform in funerals. In his Cathedral, Sunday, he said: "I am determined that hereafter not more than twelve hacks would be allowed in a funeral procession, nor would more be allowed on Sunday if they could be conveniently arranged for any other day; and further-more that priests would not be allowed henceforth to indulge in eulogies of the dead.

The Most Rev. Archbishop McCloskey has appointed the Rev. John Lynch, lately ordained at St. Paul's Seminary, Troy, N. Y., to assist the Rev. Dr. Brann, in the administration of the parish of St. Elizabeth, Washington Heights. The Rev. Dr. McSweeney, of St. Peter's Poughkeepsie, has come to have the efficient aid of the Rev. William Joseph Kelly in attending to the spiritual wants of his large flock. The parish of St. Joseph's, Van Twiller-fifth street, will be the scene of the first missionary labors of the Rev. Henry Gordon.

DEATH OF REV. THOS. HADDIGAN, P. P.—In the near little parish church, the spires of which rise high above the fir and beech trees which, like sentinels, keep constant guard before it, in the cemetery adjoining its walls, was deposited on Wednesday, June 19th, all that was mortal of the amiable and generally priest of Aughrim and Knockmoy. The "Abbey," as it is called, in Ammina is but a little known locality in its historic associations. One might read on the coffin lid, as the remains lay on the cast'ejine frontlets, like those of other days, the Rev. Thomas Haddican, P. P., died June 19th, aged 38.—Dublin News.

In the magnificent new Cathedral at Thurles, on Sunday, June 23, the Most Rev. Archbishop Leahy, advanced the following named st udents of Thurles College to the order of priesthood: Rev. Michael Ryan, son of Mr. Ryan, Esq., who had formerly studied in Thurles College, and subsequently in the University of Louvain, Belgium; Rev. John Power, diocese of Cashel and Emly; Rev. Thos. Mackey, diocese of Raphoe and Emly; Rev. Florence McCarthy, diocese of Cork; Rev. Laurence Roche, diocese of Dubuque, United States; Rev. Jas. O'Shea, diocese of Dubuque, United States. Rev. W. Moore was previously advanced to the order of subdeaconship of the latter diocese. The ceremony was witnessed by eighty of their late fellow-students from St. Patrick's College, Thurles.

It may not be generally known, says the Charlotte, N. C., Democrat, that a sister (Hannah) of Daniel Boone, the pioneer of Kentucky, is living in Cabarrus county, N. C. She has remarkably good health, is now 85 years old, and bids fair to reach a hundred.

The ex-Empress and his cousin, Prince Napoleon, have had a violent quarrel at Chislehurst. The Prince reproached the Empress with his inactivity, while his latter expressed his preference for a patient, expectant policy. The scene, it is said, was a very lively one, and was followed by a complete rupture between Plon-Plon and the men of "great intelligence."

If you have a cold hanging from the nose, effensive or otherwise, partial loss of the sense of smell, taste or hearing, eyes watering or weak, feel dull and stupid or confidence, pain or pressure in the head, take cold easily, you may rest assured that you have the catarrh. Thousands annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, terminate in consumption and rest in the grave. No disease is so common more deceptive, or less understood by physicians. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is a perfect specific for catarrh or cold in the head. Sold by druggists

"Doomed to Death."

Prince Humbert has been to Berlin on a pious errand—nothing less than to stand godfather to a Lutheran baby.

It matters little what an excommunicated, imcdicted man may choose to do in the way of violation of the canons; that Church which has cut him off from her communion and delivered him over to Satan. Neither does the question of good or bad taste displayed by the Berlin Lutherans in their election of an outlawed Catholic for the responsibility of godparent affect us very much. The contents of the Catholic Church may prove themselves excellent Lutherans for all we care on the contrary, but what does concern us is the political importance which naturally is attached to the fact of an Italian prince of an old Catholic house joining himself in a sort of relationship with the "representative of that Protestantism" which alone cost all the shedding of the noblest Catholic blood in Christian for many for eight or nine generations of men.

Prince Humbert and Marguerite, his wife, have been received with public honors, both at Berlin and Potsdam, and all the world sees in these festivities a token that the alliance between Italy and Prussia is signed and sealed.

For a long time a party by no means weak has existed on the other side of the Alps, that has openly professed its belief that the accidental alliance between Italy and Prussia, which took place in 1866 ought to assume a more permanent character, and that it was for the interest of both countries to render the alliance eternal, whenever one was endangered it should cause something or more than a mere armed neutrality upon the part of the other. The sad catastrophe of France in 1870-71 has greatly tended to the strengthening of an Italian-Prusso confederacy. Italy is now without doubt, and quite to the delight of Signor Sella and his fellow-conspirators, the ally of Germany. Prince Frederic Charles passed his winter in Rome, and was singularly honored by the Piedmontese usurper during his stay. Humbert has returned the compliment, and the two nations reconciled with the praises of him whom the Italians call the bel re of his own country. Poor France finds herself like the "hare with many friends" in the fable; so many ready to help her in the name of her majesty and strength, not one to stand by her in the dark hour of her evil fortune. The strange English neutrality of 1870, and the Prusso-Russian alliance of the same date, made it evident that if it was difficult upon here and elsewhere as a cold political necessity that she who had averted from Europe an incursion of barbarians, who in the Crimea had saved England from destruction, and in the Spanish Peninsula had rescued Piedmont in her death-grapple with Austria, should be abandoned in her own direct need by those to whom she had every right to turn, and from whom the most extraordinary assistance and the same could in the new enterprise, individuals and private associations combined to contribute subsidies, but they become owners in the stock of the road.

The Fair of the California Vine Growers and Wine-makers' Industrial Association, which will be held in Sacramento in connection with the State Fair, commencing the 19th of September, and continuing until the 28th. Two thousand dollars is offered in premiums ranging at about fifty dollars each. The association will hold a business meeting at Sacramento on the 25th of July.

Let the bald and grey use Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer if they desire as good a head of hair as in youth.

Wholesale Market Report.

MORTON GREEN, San Francisco.]

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export only a moderate inquiry has existed, chiefly for the use of grain-fleets. Extra at $4@5 25, and superfine, at $3 25@3 50; Oregon and Oregon brands—Extra at $5 25@5 50; do $4 75@5 00.

WHEAT—The market has been quiet but firm, with a slight increase in the demand for milling wheat. The sales were as follows: 1,000 centals at $1 70; 1,000 do at $1 75; 1,000 do at $1 77½; 1,000 do at $1 78; 1,000 do at $1 79; 1,000 do at $1 80; 1,000 do at $1 82½; 1,000 do at $1 85; 1,000 do at $1 87½; 1,000 do at $1 90; 1,000 do at $1 92½; 1,000 do at $1 95; 1,000 do at $1 97½; 1,000 do at $2 00; 1,000 do at $2 02½; 1,000 do at $2 05; 1,000 do at $2 07½; 1,000 do at $2 10; 1,000 do at $2 12½; 1,000 do at $2 15; 1,000 do at $2 17½; 1,000 do at $2

(From the Dublin Nation.)

SADLEIR, THE BANKER;

OR, THE # LACEYS OF RATHCORE.

A TALE OF IRISH LIFE.

CHAPTER I.

The pleasant farmsteads of the Laceys—a family who derived their origin from some of the brightest and boldest blood in Munster—reposed in the hazy glow of the tender autumnal moonlight. The woods and hills of Rathcore were bathed in the mellowing beams of the "planet of night," as she weaved her mystic nodes through the heavens. Sounds of falling streams and moaning winds filled the delightful valley, whose abrupt sides shielded the cot and fields of the Laceys from the bitter blasts of winter and the storms blown over the Waterford mountains, with a delicious gurgling music. Peace reigned in the sky; peace reigned on the tranquil, beautiful earth; peace reigned everywhere, but where it never reigns—in the breasts of men torn by complicated agonies of remorse.

Then the moonlight, growing fitful and cold, died out, and "pleasant day" crept up toe on the misty mountain top." As the sun rose, pouring a flow of gold and violet through vale and meadow, and acres of cornland, nigh ready for the sickle, the beauty of the scene was revealed in its unapproachable picturesque richness of outline and detail.

Great clouds of mist rolled up from the valley, and hung in light wreaths like crests at the base, and finally rested on the scalps of the hills. It was a goodly sight. A goodlier sight was the house wherein dwelt the Laceys—a Tipperary race who had given up priests to the altar, authors to literature, pilgrims to the sea and martyrs to Ireland.

Imagine a square-built house, of something like fortalice pretensions, flung on a saddle against a dense background of beeches and firs. The walls are whitewashed, the creepers that run and roll down in a torrent of variegated color over and across the rustic porch take ornaments the principal door. The windows are sky and nature—in keeping with the fortalice pretensions—but an air approaching elegance pervades them in the dainty arrangement of net curtain and blind, and the stainless cleanliness of the glass. There is a flower-stand within the great parlor casement. Only a woman's excellent taste could have grouped together those harmonizing prisms of flowers and delicate leaves of the cresses, which latter, though content to nestle on the humble earth, deserve to be gold-rimmed trees.

Kate Lacey was the first person who descended to the little beautiful parlor, where the Laceys were wont to assemble at morning. A sweet girl was this black haired and blue eyed Irish art seldom, if ever, seen out of Ireland—a delicately-moulded creature with a complexion of the purest and elastic grace of motion—a flexile way of moving from object to object, she would have fastened the gaze of an artist who had made the study of pure form his specialty.

Tom Lacey soon joined his sister at the breakfast table, and was directly followed by her father, a fine, Tipperary gentleman, whose hair hung in white masses over his temples.

"We are to have a companion at breakfast, Kate," said Richard, as he drew a chair to the table. "A noble fellow is the new member. He is a sincere patriot, a burns for the wrongs of his country, and who yearns to redress them."

"A visitor!" exclaimed Kate, as she arrested the spoon which she was loading with tea. "And pray, father, who is he?"

"A man, my dear, destined to make his name in the world. He is a lawyer, and a friend to Irish prisoners. Did you ever hear of Mr. John Sadleir?"

"Why, everyone has heard of Sadleir," cried Tom Lacey, as he threw his hat on the sofa, and brushed quickly the dust off his coat, preparatory to sitting down to breakfast; "he is not only an attorney, but he's a patriot. Look at the magnificent air of eloquence in which he vindicates our nationality, and our right to be a free people. Look at them, and believe him if you can."

"Ah! he's a man in the right direction," murmured old Lacey. "That fellow will make a name that will live when you and I are forgotten. By the way, Kate, I only took five minutes to your mother's time, to make tea."

"Such a long falling back on something older than ourselves," cried Tom, as he flung himself into a chair, and set to devouring the heap of fresh cream which his sister had thoughtfully procured for him. "The Nation says that it is the duty of the Irish people to look back on the past, and learn wisdom from it. Well, I'll not let the dead past bury its dead. I'd like to bury the two together. Now, do you know what—I have no faith in this Mr. John Sadleir. Have you ever seen a lawyer that did not deceive?"

"You are most uncharitable, Tom," said Kate. "There you have sat against my lawyer jacket, and he'll require a thousand years to raise the pile. Wretch! I am not going to join in your outbreak against the whole Mr. Sadleir, for I real his address to the electors, and I am sure that he is a good Catholic and an honorable Irishman!"

"Did you see what the Nation said about him, his antecedents and his colleagues?" inquired Tom. "Oh, we are in for it again —a patriot is to be sold once more. And Mr. John Sadleir will lead the van of the betrayers."

"Hush," said Mr. Lacey, with imposing gravity, "there are times to talk, and times when silence becomes a virtue. A young man's judgment may be true at times and it may be wrong. My dear boy, yours is a rong this time."

"Indeed it is wrong—most wrong," said Kate, whose fervent patriotism would not allow her to question the honesty or sincerity of any man who came to the front within the ranks of Ireland" on his lips. "Oh, dome," Miss Lacey, because I perceive—I pray pardon the familiarity — that imaginative combination of mobile brow and open eye which betoken a sensitive and receptive intellect, and I prefer to appeal to the discretion in which your genius lies to say other."

"Thank you. I have lived to see this day, and to hear those words," cried Mr. Lacey.—"Kate, Kate, it is gratifying to hear such a compliment paid to you by so eminent a patriot as my friend Mr. Crowe."

Miss Lacey blushed all over. She had no words to thank Mr. Crowe for the fine eulogies he had so lavishly bestowed on her. As she poured out more tea, a soft, subdued gleam of pleasure brightened her eyes, and her hand trembled ever so lightly.

Tom Lacey looked on displeased and amazed with his sister. He had a vivid recollection of '48, and though he gracefully remembered the gallant stand then made for the rights of the people, he remembered that the attempt was disgraced by the defection of one or two ecumenical who rose to opulence and position on the ruins of the popular liberties.

"I don't like to say a word, under my father's roof, about these people," whispered Tom to Kate, "but I cannot believe these men. Observe the scowl that darkens that man's face"—here he pointed to Sadleir. "If there be not ruffianism behind that countenance, I am a Russian, and a dragoon into the bargain."

"I think you can be very cruel when you wish," was the reply. "Look at the priest, think of Mr. Sadleir, and see what they write about Mr. Crowe. I consider you very unfair, Tom."

"Very well. I suppose I was born to be misunderstood."

Said Mr. Crowe in his best of manners:

"May I hope I have said nothing which could be offensive to Miss Lacey—Miss Kate Lacey, as she gave me the delightful privilege of calling her?"

"No, sir," answered Kate, with a whole world of confused prettiness animating her sweet Irish face. "It is good to be praised by those whom you trust."

"Upon my soul, Kate, that epigram charms me. Our countrywomen have such a way of saying things, that it is a positive loss some qualified reporter is not present to record them. Madame de Sael was a smart conversationalist, in her way. Were she alive now she would find it an obvious duty to yield place to Mademoi selle Lacey."

Kate's color rose higher than ever. She was at a palpable loss to know what to do or say in the presence and under the compliments of the judicial-looking Mr. Crowe. A priest brought her to the old-fashioned four-legged quare piano which did duty for a side-board, and a book-rest, in the dusky corner of the room. Her eyes wandered over the flower stand, and across the lawn, and to the gate that opened on to the road bordered by poplars, whose leaves had turned cinamon in the burning heat of the harvest weather.

Her heart leaped as she looked out in the dreamy intelligible way which is the joy of many half-conscious existences. Up the path came a noble-looking young man of some five-and-twenty summers, booted and spurred, and evidently fresh from the saddle. A broad-chested, powerful youth, with sinews as hard and tough as the ribbings on the surface of a statue, he might have stood as the model for the Irish Slaf slee (to Pythons).

"O, Dick," sae said, when he entered the room, and held out both her delicate hands in welcome, without allowing it to run to waste in the barren fields of English speculation."

"And I'll be the first depositor," said Mr. Lacey, rising to his feet, and clasping Mr. Sadleir's hand. "Ah, my good sir, my good countryman, you have come to our rescue in a moment of the greatest difficulty. You are the man in the gap. Ireland will remember this for you through all time."

Mr. Sadleir was affected to tears. Mr. Crowe retired behind his bandkerchief, and Tom looked very much as if he envied Mr. Prendergast, whose joyous emotion was visible in his flushed cheek and strangely bright eye.

"That will be a splendid job, John," exclaimed Prendergast, as the pair of them left the house. "How often does the devil favor you with so fine an inspiration? A bank! Fancy having a bank!"

"A bank is a very useful thing, do you know," suggested Mr. Sadleir.

"To be sure," groaned Crowe, and I never wanted its assistance worse. Could you lend me half a sovereign?"

(To be Continued.)

The Holy Father, after celebrating all early Mass in his private chapel, and afterwards, as is his custom, assisting at a Mass celebrated by his private chaplain, received in audience the Very Rev. P. Bonaventure Pontillo, Commissary-General of the Franciscans in Mexico. He presented to the Sovereign Pontiff, as a pledge of the devoted loyalty and affection of the faithful Catholics of that country, the sum of 20,000f.

(From the Dublin Nation of July 8th.)

"CROMWELL FOR EVER: AND CROMWELL AGAIN!"

By the Author of "The Cromwellian Settlement of Ireland."

Such was Cromwell and his officers and men; and, thorough-paced in such bloody and cruel work exercised to their own countrymen and country women, they came to Ireland.

The first stage here was Drogheda. That town surrendered on many pounds of wellb eaten, on promise of quarter. On second thought, Cromwell held it for the advancement of the English interests in Ireland to take advantage of the surrender thus obtained and put massacre the whole inhabitants and garrison, the latter consisted of the flower of English veterans, and a large body of Irish troops—without mercy, in cold blood. Such a scene is better realized by a single instance than a general description. We have an account of one action not cry from an eye-witness, but an actor in the very deed, related as done by his own hand. It is recorded by Anthony Wood, the biographer and historian of Oxford.

Anthony Wood's eldest brother, Thomas Wood, a Master of Arts of the University of Oxford, was a captain in Colonel Henry Ingoldsby's troop at the siege of Drogheda by Cromwell, and returned (says Anthony Wood) from Ireland to Oxford for a time to take up the arrears of his studentship at Christ Church, and to visit his friends and other colleges. At which time, being often with his mother and brethren, he used to discourse with them concerning the sadness and storming of Drogheda, where in he himself had been engaged. He told them that it continues Anthony, "that 3,000 at least, besides some women and children, were, after the town was taken by storm, and afterwards all the town, put to the sword on the 11th of September in the aforesaid time Sir Arthur Ashton, the governor, had his brains beat out and his wooden leg bestowed upon him. Which he continues Anthony, "that when they were in the heat of the execution of the soldiers to make their way up to the top of the church steeple in companies, and up to the towers where the enemy had fled, each of the assailants crying out for a general fire and with a buckler of defence when they ascended the steps to keep themselves from being shot at."

"After they had killed all in the church of St. Lawrence, they went into the vaults underneath, where all the flower and choicest of the women and ladies had fled for refuge in caverns, and, in those recesses, "a most handsome virgin, arrayed in costly and gorgeous apparel, kneeled down on her knees to Wood with tears and prayers to save her life; and being struck with a present fear, he took her by the hand to lead her out of the church with intentions to preserve her; but a soldier, perceiving his intentions, thrust up his sword—into the middle of the virgin's body."

Such was Cromwell and his officers and Wood's plainer language. What (it will be said) must have been the provocation which could find this beautiful and trembling creature, who trusted in his protecting arm, thus cruelly and inhumanly treated by his brute of an Englishman, as to drive him to such a step? Provocation there was for him and for his countrymen, for the whole Irish people, of course, he struck him in horror and disgust at the deed he had done. He left the vaults and the church; "I can't guess what I would refuse to do for Ireland, or for the sake of it."

Such was Cromwell and his officers and men; and, thorough-paced in such bloody and cruel work exercised to their own countrymen and country women, they came to Ireland.

The first stage here was Drogheda. That town surrendered on many pounds of wellb eaten, on promise of quarter. On second thought, Cromwell held it for the advancement of the English interests in Ireland to take advantage of the surrender thus obtained and put massacre the whole inhabitants and garrison, the latter consisted of the flower of English veterans, and a large body of Irish troops—without mercy, in cold blood. Such a scene is better realized by a single instance than a general description. We have an account of one action not cry from an eye-witness, but an actor in the very deed, related as done by his own hand. It is recorded by Anthony Wood, the biographer and historian of Oxford.

Anthony Wood's eldest brother, Thomas Wood, a Master of Arts of the University of Oxford, was a captain in Colonel Henry Ingoldsby's troop at the siege of Drogheda by Cromwell, and returned (says Anthony Wood) from Ireland to Oxford for a time to take up the arrears of his studentship at Christ Church, and to visit his friends and other colleges. At which time, being often with his mother and brethren, he used to discourse with them concerning the sadness and storming of Drogheda, where in he himself had been engaged. He told them that it continues Anthony, "that 3,000 at least, besides some women and children, were, after the town was taken by storm, and afterwards all the town, put to the sword on the 11th of September in the aforesaid time Sir Arthur Ashton, the governor, had his brains beat out and his wooden leg bestowed upon him. Which he continues Anthony, "that when they were in the heat of the execution of the soldiers to make their way up to the top of the church steeple in companies, and up to the towers where the enemy had fled, each of the assailants crying out for a general fire and with a buckler of defence when they ascended the steps to keep themselves from being shot at."

"After they had killed all in the church of St. Lawrence, they went into the vaults underneath, where all the flower and choicest of the women and ladies had fled for refuge in caverns, and, in those recesses, "a most handsome virgin, arrayed in costly and gorgeous apparel, kneeled down on her knees to Wood with tears and prayers to save her life; and being struck with a present fear, he took her by the hand to lead her out of the church with intentions to preserve her; but a soldier, perceiving his intentions, thrust up his sword—into the middle of the virgin's body."

Such was Cromwell and his officers and Wood's plainer language. What (it will be said) must have been the provocation which could find this beautiful and trembling creature, who trusted in his protecting arm, thus cruelly and inhumanly treated by this brute of an Englishman, as to drive him to such a step? Provocation there was for him and for his countrymen, for the whole Irish people, of course, he struck him in horror and disgust at the deed he had done. He left the vaults and the church; "I can't guess what I would refuse to do for Ireland, or for the sake of it."

But Mr. Cowan believed that it was his duty to go to the front, and he went. He left Inlis to do as he did. Have we not seen in maintenance of this intense patriotism, that the Irish people, the hundreds, dragged on board ship, and never let out of the railway carriages, from the hours they left Cork, reached their cruel prison in London? Never accepted from one another even the slightest assistance? Have they the lowest needs at nature? Men of education and position, and of the highest refinement, left to the monkeys to gaze on, and compelled to clean the prison privies, mixed with burglars, garroters, and the scum of London? Is not this a fact?

Have we fame lions?" said one of the brutal English turnkeys to O'Donovan Rossa. But they never tamed Amy and Mitchel Henry, or Pigott, or Gray, or Duffy through millions of Irish breasts. For thirty-five years has been recalling all the names, with hands tied behind his back like the terrible prison of "Little Father," and he has never been able to sit or stand at rest, and fed on bread and water, imagine the horrors of the situation, and the condition of a man in those circumstances performing the calls of nature, being unable to undo the flap of his pantaloons, or wipe tears from his eyes, or blow his nose, or even to spit. Yet he expressly stated by the late Sir Robert Peel, on bringing in the Act making it a capital offence to levy war on the maxims of the Constitution, as long as noblemen and gentlemen feared for their lives, that the purpose of the Treason-Felony Act was to take from the Irish the right of meeting in public assembly to discuss their wrongs, and equal them with robbers and burglars. But Parliament, which can do anything, refused to make it a capital offence of sex—all ties are burst when the "English interest" is at stake.

See them, to support the "English interest," flogging women in Jamaica, the hanging of boys and girls in India, the gallows and wire! Although the executioners (it is true) flung them down and called for their liquor to "cut." When they found it would kill the women. "They took down my corpses in order that I might undergo the trial. A few years before and they would have turned them the other way to labor. After flogging they rubbed in pickle. It was in the family-way, and very near after the "Old-Cat-o'-nine-tails" darling of the English—which they cling to after every other thing is forgot—his throne was driven from their cole as brutalizing the people who suffer it, or witness it, or make use of it in their punishments. Let me offer them a suggestion, and it is this: That, just as the bloody-leger that felled Wat Tyler, and the first chief justice the City of London's coat of arms, they might substitute for our ground-ivies here the standard of England (where it seems strangely out of place amid that collection of lions, leopards, and other savage beasts) the bloody English "Cat." We have never forgotten how Lord Cornwallis ordered General Morris tested their instructions to magistrates suprising them that the Fenians had a right to be tried by their peers, and sent to them that flogging was among the punishments they might inflict. Let us not remember the foul of the English press for the lash to be applied to the Fenians.

Who but remembers the bloody orders of General George Neill, (he not the murderer, one of the women and children at Cawnpore, but all those engaged in the rebellion against the English should be upon their head of the murdered, before being hanged, in order that the certainty of hell which was taught them by the priests of the rebels should be allied to their torments.

At each miscreant, after sentence of death, two runs this devilish order of 20th of July, 1857: will be taken down to the house in question under a guard, and be forced into cleaning up a small portion of the blood stains. The task will be made as revolting to his feelings as possible; and the process was repeated until was the last in forcing devoted loyalty and affection of the faithful Catholics of that country, the sum of 20,000f.

This English Protestant's heart by the unostentatious charity, their reverence for their clergy, their respect for their superiors, their real independence, notwithstanding their secrecy of manner, their Oriental nationality, and their country's sad of all inducements to apostacy. And, perhaps, after all, it is only the infinitesimal merit of the noblest and purest principles of mankind, and of virtues that are fondly supposed to be the gift of education and refinement, I believe that the Irish people are more favored by the latter gods than by the former.

While another Englishman (not to mention our country's friend) could find in the mass of the poorer Irish many a one to be ranked among the men of England, and, perhaps, after all, the best apology he made for the cruel government of his country by the English, is that Englishmen take their own craven rural drudges to the hangman of the high-spirited, conquerable Irish.

Shall I, then, for fear of being laughed at, refuse to give my own experience of the sensible between Gambetta and Simon appears to be serious; let us be prudent; it is necessary to know when will pass in publishing, under the form of go obscene novel, a statement that the Jesuits and the Carlists are everywhere victorious. Take this as one of the signs of the times: the Catalonia is fairly opened; Don Alfonso and Tristany having the advance guard, and Count Moré the rear guard. Worthily and wisely appointed to the supreme command of the Navarre throne of Spain, and of the main body. On the 9th the gallant Carlist chief met the forces of Rodegas, and drove him down the hills, taking two hundred prisoners and two mules; the former immediately enrolling themselves under the command. At Esdella and Tafolls he took a large number of guns and ammunition of war, and provisions. He has cut the railway between Pampeluna and Saragossa, and holds the line between Madrid. Velasco's column of 1,500 men took a provision train the same day near Vittoria, escorted by army stores.

Cabalios, the lieutenant of Tristany, has formed a junction with Savalls and Tristany himself with Estatus, is in command of the principal column, well armed, and in the Maestrazgo the rising is general; the parishes mustering at the sound of their church bells, and marching off ready to join the nearest headquarters: and the same is the case in Leon, Zamora, Toro, Benavente, Astorga, Palencia and Medina del Campo. The Carlists are masters of the country, and the Alphonsist authorities are obliged to notify their incapacity of action to the Government of Madrid. The movement in Murcia, Estremadura and Andalusia is organizing its partisans, the two Castilles are preparing for the rising, and in Aragon, General of Catalonia wrote a few days since to Madrid, to ask for Irish reinforcements to replace the army which request has been the dispatch of the garrison of the capital.

In Castile the troops are commanded by the Cura of Alcamleon, and he has twice beaten the espaderos; and at Guadalajara—ten leagues from Madrid—a band of two hundred Carlists holds the passes, and laughs at the efforts of Serrano to dislodge them.

The Royal headquarters are now published for each day. Those de la Reine, in Navarre, a very important strategical position, presented to the Carlists by Dorregaray. The engagement in that neighborhood has ever taken place, as the Amadeist troops have never ventured on a battle. Carnot is virtually in possession of the district; and has shown such consummate skill, courage, and patriotism, that no happier choice of a commander-in-chief could not have been made. General Polo—Cabanas's brother-in-law—has arrived in the Royal camp, and the veteran Conde de Morella, whose years of age and failing health have hitherto prevented his taking an active part in the struggle, will proceed to the seat of head quarters. The Royal cause is therefore, if not yet everywhere triumphant, in a fair way to be the way to be so. The Amadeus is hourly looked for, and he has already decided on Lisbon as his place of refuge, where his sister, Pia of Savoy, has offered him an asylum. It is very evident that the Italian dynasty has no fancy to put its fortunes to the issue of the sword; and the counsels of the stranger is everywhere contemptuously contrasted with the daring chivalry of the king and princesses of the blood. Even the Republicans are not

ST. JOSEPH'S SCHOOL, SACRAMENTO.

We condense the following from the Sacramento Record of Friday week last:

The Annual Examination and Commencement Exercises were held in the above named Institution on Thursday, the 11th inst., in presence of a large assemblage of parents and friends of the pupils—a private examination had been conducted by the Sisters during the preceding week.

THE EXERCISES

consisted of vocal and instrumental music, select readings, and exercises in arithmetic by the higher classes, in which they showed themselves quick, intelligent and smart. After the reading of several of the pupils was certainly of a very superior order, and the music, vocal and instrumental, reflected great credit on the teachers. The first honors of the school were awarded to the following pupils for correct deportment during the entire session: Annie Daniels, Roger Kohner, Kate Walsh and Mary Boardman. Silver medals were awarded to the following young ladies: Ex-cellence—Kate Walsh; Good Conduct—Elizabeth Mack; Emma Mathews; Premium in Arithmetic—Mary Simpson; Christian Doctrine — Fanny Kohner and Mary Boardman; Application—Annie Hart and A. Schwartz. The first crown for instrumental music was awarded to Emma Mathews and the second to Louisa Marzen.

Quite a number of books were given as premiums to the most deserving pupils in the less classes; even the infants were not forgotten, but instead of a premium, they received the gentle chastisement of ecclesiastical parents, which they seem to be fully aware of by every reverse of it! And we can assure you that even in the case of the infants there did not any approximate unfriendship with the

Abbe Junqua and Canon Moulis, or "Old Catholics" in France.

The readers of the Protestant Press in England, and especially of the Low Church organs—of the Record and the Evangelical will be surprised to learn that the two priests in France who, almost alone among the forty thousand French clergy, have rebelled against the Vatican Council, and also, on that account, have been held up to public esteem in England as great reformers and martyrs, have been just convicted by the tribunals for publishing a most filthy and indecent scandalous character, and condemned to two years' imprisonment.

The prosecution was instituted by the general "of offense against public morality," and the evidence was conclusive as to the immoral character of the production of the novel, entitled Mysteres d'un Evesche, written conjointly by Canon Moulis and Abbé Junqua, and published in a newspaper of Bordeaux. Scenes were read from the obscene publication which the Procureur Général observed, Mouis and Junqua could only plead that they were in correspondence with their own corrupt lives, and evidence of their own corrupt lives, and their own deified imaginations.

Their defense before the examining magistrate contained a series of charges in-sulting such large and Nazarene terms, and the skirmishes with the Ultramontist troops, in which Carys proved to be a mettle and a skill worthy of the leaders of the Old Catholic movement. Their defense before the tribunal was, however, a complete victory. A dispatch, dated June 15, from Genet, on the eastern frontier, and communicated to the London Press Association, was received in Lyons (the centre for the Irish region) recorded in the following terms: "The city of Gerona capitulated yesterday. The town of Figueras is occupied at the same time, and the Carlists are everywhere victorious. Take this as one of the signs of the times: the Catalonia is fairly opened; Don Alfonso and Tristany having the advance guard, and Count Moré the rear guard. Worthily and wisely appointed to the supreme command of the Navarre throne of Spain, and of the main body. On the 9th the gallant Carlist chief met the forces of Rodegas, and drove him down the hills, taking two hundred prisoners and two mules; the former immediately enrolling themselves under the command. At Esdella and Tafolls he took a large number of guns and ammunition of war, and provisions. He has cut the railway between Pampeluna and Saragossa, and holds the line between Madrid. Velasco's column of 1,500 men took a provision train the same day near Vittoria, escorted by army stores.

Cabalios, the lieutenant of Tristany, has formed a junction with Savalls and Tristany himself with Estatus, is in command of the principal column, well armed, and in the Maestrazgo the rising is general; the parishes mustering at the sound of their church bells, and marching off ready to join the nearest headquarters: and the same is the case in Leon, Zamora, Toro, Benavente, Astorga, Palencia and Medina del Campo. The Carlists are masters of the country, and the Alphonsist authorities are obliged to notify their incapacity of action to the Government of Madrid. The movement in Murcia, Estremadura and Andalusia is organizing its partisans, the two Castilles are preparing for the rising, and in Aragon, General of Catalonia wrote a few days since to Madrid, to ask for Irish reinforcements to replace the army which request has been the dispatch of the garrison of the capital.

In Castile the troops are commanded by the Cura of Alcamleon, and he has twice beaten the espaderos; and at Guadalajara—ten leagues from Madrid—a band of two hundred Carlists holds the passes, and laughs at the efforts of Serrano to dislodge them.

The Royal headquarters are now published for each day. Those de la Reine, in Navarre, a very important strategical position, presented to the Carlists by Dorregaray. The engagement in that neighborhood has ever taken place, as the Amadeist troops have never ventured on a battle. Carnot is virtually in possession of the district; and has shown such consummate skill, courage, and patriotism, that no happier choice of a commander-in-chief could not have been made. General Polo—Cabanas's brother-in-law—has arrived in the Royal camp, and the veteran Conde de Morella, whose years of age and failing health have hitherto prevented his taking an active part in the struggle, will proceed to the seat of head quarters. The Royal cause is therefore, if not yet everywhere triumphant, in a fair way to be the way to be so. The Amadeus is hourly looked for, and he has already decided on Lisbon as his place of refuge, where his sister, Pia of Savoy, has offered him an asylum. It is very evident that the Italian dynasty has no fancy to put its fortunes to the issue of the sword; and the counsels of the stranger is everywhere contemptuously contrasted with the daring chivalry of the king and princesses of the blood. Even the Republicans are not

Spain.

If the transmission of lies could melt the telegraphic wires, those which connect Madrid with the rest of Europe would be fairly worn out by this time. Never, perhaps, has a country been the victim of so shameless an extent as in the official accounts of the Carlist rising, which, after subsisting nearly two months, supreme and triumphant, in the north, has also forced its enemies to recognize it as a belligerent power.

The temporary check it received by the treason of the three Basayan deputies has been amply repaired by the increased ardor of the Navarrese and Biscayans, and the skirmishes with the Amadeist troops, in which Carys proved to be a mettle and a skill worthy of the leaders of the Old Catholic movement. Their defense before the tribunal was, however, a complete victory. A dispatch, dated June 15, from Genet, on the eastern frontier, and communicated to the London Press Association, was received in Lyons (the centre for the Irish region) recorded in the following terms: "The city of Gerona capitulated yesterday. The town of Figueras is occupied at the same time, and the Carlists are everywhere victorious. Take this as one of the signs of the times: the Catalonia is fairly opened; Don Alfonso and Tristany having the advance guard, and Count Moré the rear guard. Worthily and wisely appointed to the supreme command of the Navarre throne of Spain, and of the main body. On the 9th the gallant Carlist chief met the forces of Rodegas, and drove him down the hills, taking two hundred prisoners and two mules; the former immediately enrolling themselves under the command. At Esdella and Tafolls he took a large number of guns and ammunition of war, and provisions. He has cut the railway between Pampeluna and Saragossa, and holds the line between Madrid. Velasco's column of 1,500 men took a provision train the same day near Vittoria, escorted by army stores.

Cabalios, the lieutenant of Tristany, has formed a junction with Savalls and Tristany himself with Estatus, is in command of the principal column, well armed, and in the Maestrazgo the rising is general; the parishes mustering at the sound of their church bells, and marching off ready to join the nearest headquarters: and the same is the case in Leon, Zamora, Toro, Benavente, Astorga, Palencia and Medina del Campo. The Carlists are masters of the country, and the Alphonsist authorities are obliged to notify their incapacity of action to the Government of Madrid. The movement in Murcia, Estremadura and Andalusia is organizing its partisans, the two Castilles are preparing for the rising, and in Aragon, General of Catalonia wrote a few days since to Madrid, to ask for Irish reinforcements to replace the army which request has been the dispatch of the garrison of the capital.

In Castile the troops are commanded by the Cura of Alcamleon, and he has twice beaten the espaderos; and at Guadalajara—ten leagues from Madrid—a band of two hundred Carlists holds the passes, and laughs at the efforts of Serrano to dislodge them.

The Royal headquarters are now published for each day. Those de la Reine, in Navarre, a very important strategical position, presented to the Carlists by Dorregaray. The engagement in that neighborhood has ever taken place, as the Amadeist troops have never ventured on a battle. Carnot is virtually in possession of the district; and has shown such consummate skill, courage, and patriotism, that no happier choice of a commander-in-chief could not have been made. General Polo—Cabanas's brother-in-law—has arrived in the Royal camp, and the veteran Conde de Morella, whose years of age and failing health have hitherto prevented his taking an active part in the struggle, will proceed to the seat of head quarters. The Royal cause is therefore, if not yet everywhere triumphant, in a fair way to be the way to be so. The Amadeus is hourly looked for, and he has already decided on Lisbon as his place of refuge, where his sister, Pia of Savoy, has offered him an asylum. It is very evident that the Italian dynasty has no fancy to put its fortunes to the issue of the sword; and the counsels of the stranger is everywhere contemptuously contrasted with the daring chivalry of the king and princesses of the blood. Even the Republicans are not

MISCELLANEOUS FOREIGN NEWS.

CHIEFLY COMPILED FROM CONTINENTAL JOURNALS.

Large numbers of Garibaldians are leaving Rome for Spain. On Saturday, 8th inst., thirty of these worthies took their departure. Five assassinations are reported as having occurred in the city on Sunday, June 9th.

The foundations of the Po, in the province of Ferrara, have caused incalculable damage. Hundreds of families are in the utmost misery. A number of Catholic youths of Bologna have gone to the relief of the sufferers.

M. Leon Gautier delivered an address on the Gesta Dei and the action of Catholicism," recently to a large and fashionable Parisian audience. The eloquent speaker was listened to with great attention, and was frequently applauded.

The official organs of Madrid are obliged, though reluctantly, to confess that the Carlist rising is not yet wholly put down. They say that in Catalonia it is reviving, and that the bands in that province are daily strengthening and becoming better organized.

Blumarck's crusade against the Catholic clergy is progressing. We read that the Bill directed against the Society of Jesus and other similar organizations has, with a majority of fifty against, passed its second reading in the German Parliament, by a majority of 241 against 101 votes.

On Sunday morning last the steamer Virginia left Toulon for New Caledonia, having on board two hundred Communists, who had been condemned and sentenced for their share in the horrid work of the Commune. Among the number were thirty females.

Bethyl Bey has made a speech in which he says: "If the splendor of the revolution appeared to wane for a moment, it will now shine with all its brilliancy." Señor Zorilla is analogue, so was Prim, and so has been every Minister in the present.

Mustered by the revolutionary party if they dared act other than acquit the assassin of the general, Delacon, they, at a matter of course, pronounced him not guilty. Immediately after being liberated the prisoner was led in triumph through the streets of Rome. The liberal journals, are in a fair frenzy of delight at the event, and say that the Pope is the cause of all, because he keeps his old guards.

The limited national fete in Rome, or, as it has been happily phrased—the viele of the statue"—was a miserable fiasco. The illuminations on the occasion were all but confined to public and municipal establishments, or the government house, and to some habitations of state officials. Yet, with this palpable failure before the eyes of thousands in Rome, the official organs continue to speak of the fete as a very marvel of splendor and enthusiasm. It is a paradox long in splendor anything the world has for a long time witnessed. Neither at Florence, Naples, Milan, nor Venice, was there any spark of this pretended national feeling. Everywhere there was the same indifference to the fete as to the fete itself.

For the management of this large surplus there Peter's Pence collection, which is unfortunately no improvement over preparation. The producer occupies a very uncertain position, unless his fruit has some decided advantage over that of others in quality or earliness of ripening, and his commission will not improve until something is done to prevent the overstocking of the local markets with fresh fruit. The shipments of fruit to the Eastern States in the last three years have generally been unprofitable, and although small shipments will probably continue to be made, yet the Eastern market is practically closed against us by the high freights, the long transit, and the expense of sending men with the fruit to watch over it properly. With a large canning establishment in each of the leading fruit valleys, and an association of the leading fruit-growers of each district to send all their fruit to one commission merchant, and require him to make frequent full reports, so as to give opportunities for comparison, some of the present evils might be remedied.

It is not clear whether fruit can be dried in California more profitably by natural or artificial heat. A fruit-drying furnace lately invented by a Mr. Alden received much praise in a late agricultural Convention in Savannah, Georgia. This furnace was thirty feet high and five feet square inside; and had an endless vertical chain running down in each corner. On these chains, at the intervals of nine inches, were placed sieves or frames, each holding half a bushel of fruit to be dried. The chains descend nearly a foot in ten minutes, so that each frame would pass from the top to the bottom in three hours; and in that period the fruit is dried. A blast of air heated at 165° Fahrenheit is blown by steam into the bottom of the furnace, and, as it passed upwards it becomes saturated with moisture and grows cooler. The fruit prepared in this manner is represented to be much superior in flavor to the common article. The current of air and the heat are no doubt very beneficial, but the steam engine puts the device beyond the reach of the ordinary farmer, and perhaps he could obtain the same object by building a large stone chimney of glass against the sunny side of his house, painted white. Such a chimney open at above and below, on hot summer days would carry a strong draught, and would probably answer most purposes more rapidly than rods of light board platforms, where the air currents have little chance to pass.

CATHOLIC ITEMS

Eastern.

On June 21, the Rev. F. A. Donaher, a promising young priest of the diocese of Wheeling, died at the hospital of St. Joseph, Mount Clemens.

Died at the pastoral residence of St. Mary's church, New York, from the effects of a fall, the Rev. Augustine Hennessy, on Monday evening, July 1. Rev. James Coyle, pastor of Peekskill.

An old and most devoted priest, Rev. Mr. Brummer, formerly of the diocese of Cincinnati, but who for years belonged to Columbus, was recently called to his eternal reward.

Died, in the city of New York, on the 4th of June last, Very Rev. Doctor Bermingham, V. G., of Cincinnati, S. C., in the 74th year of his age, and in the 41st of his priesthood.

We much regret to have to announce the death of Rev. Francis Joseph Buesing, pastor of the German congregation of the Church of St. Francis of Assisi, Schuylkill county, Pa. He died on the 14th ult., after an illness of about one week.

It is our painful duty to announce the death of the Rev. Nicholas A. Bowden, which took place on Sunday, the 16th inst., at Downingtown, Chester county, Pa. Rev. Nicholas A. Bowden was born in county Kildare, Ireland, where he made his classical studies at our Seminary of St. Charles Borromeo, and was ordained for the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, by Rt. Rev. Bishop Wood in 1869.

There were received into the Order of the Sisters of Mercy, in New Orleans, by the Most Rev. Archbishop Perche, on the 8th inst., the following young ladies, all natives of New Orleans: Miss Ellen Brophy, in religion Sister Mary Angela; Miss Clara Cook, in religion Sister Mary Austin, daughter of the late Bernard Hughes, Dungarvan, Ireland. Miss Mary Teresa, third daughter of the late James Hartwell Barry, Friesborough, county Limerick; Miss Alice Duggan, in religion Sister Mary Joseph, daughter of Laurence Duggan, Garrystlough, Carbonbine; Miss Louisa Hughes, in religion Sister Mary Austin, daughter of the late Bernard Hughes, Dungarvan. Miss Grace the Archbishop officiated.

M. J. GARVIN & Bro., Main street, near Mount Hall, Stockton, are the exclusive agents for THE MONITOR in Stockton. tf

BUSINESS CARDS.

JOHN M. BURNETT,
Attorney at Law,
EXCHANGE BUILDING—ROOMS 58 & 59,
Northwest corner Montgomery and Washington streets
SAN FRANCISCO.

PETER DEMPSEY,
Attorney and Counsellor at Law,
No. 801 Montgomery street, San Francisco.

M. COONEY,
Attorney and Counsellor at Law,
Office, Room No. 7, Court Block,
826 CLAY and 629 MERCHANT STREET

ROBERT FERRAL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Rooms 20 and 30 Mercantile Block,
Corner of Montgomery and Washington sts.
San Francisco. M

M. TRAHON, Gen. T. KING,
Member S. F. Board of Brokers.
TRAHON & KNOX,
STOCK BROKERS,
328 CALIFORNIA STREET,
San Francisco. M

LOWNEY BROTHERS,
CARRIAGE MANUFACTURERS AND BLACKSMITHS,
COR. OF EIGHTH and HOWARD STS.,
SAN FRANCISCO.
JOHN AND HEAVY CARRIAGES, BUGGIES, Carts, Drays, Trucks, Etc., made to order. Also, Ocean-Boat Trucks built to order, on the most reasonable terms. jy15-3m

C. MOODY,
DRUGGIST and CHEMIST
Dealer in PURE DRUGS and MEDICINES, Toilet and Fancy Articles and Perfumery.
Prescriptions carefully compounded.
900 and 902 KEARNY STREET.
my11 SAN FRANCISCO. tf

M. McCANN & CO., COMMISSION MERCHANTS
323 BATTERY STREET,
Between Pine and Bush, SAN FRANCISCO.

JOHN MOLLOY,
PRODUCE COMMISSION MERCHANT AND DEALER IN GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS
82 Clay st., bet. Drumm and Sansome,
San Francisco.

FRANCIS BUCKLEY,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER,
Austin street (West of Powell),
Between Ellis and Eddy ..... San Francisco
All kinds of Carpenter and Jobbing Work done at the shortest notice. my18-tf

T. CANTY,
Merchant Tailor
27 Sutter street, near Montgomery
SAN FRANCISCO.
Suits of California clothes made in the latest style, at the ruling pr

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 27.
July
21—Sunday—Ninth Sunday after Pentecost.
22—Monday—St. Mary Magdalen.
23—Tuesday—St. Apollinaris, Bishop and Martyr. St. Liborius, Bishop and Confessor.
24—Wednesday—Vigil of St. James. St. Christina, Virgin and Martyr.
25—Thursday—St. James the Greater, Apostle. St. Christopher, Martyr.
26—Friday—St. Anne, Mother of the B. V. M.
27—Saturday—Vigil of the Immaculate Conception. St. Pantaleon, Martyr.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....JULY 20, 1872.

THE TWELFTH JULY IN NEW YORK.

Although we read in the telegrams that a disturbance was expected during the Orange parade in New York on the 12th July, we were convinced that the demonstration would pass off without any breach of the peace. We gave our countrymen credit for better sense than furnishing the "gallant" Twelfth regiment with another opportunity of exhibiting their fine shooting capabilities. The event has proved we were perfectly right. According to all accounts the parade cannot have been very imposing, for the highest estimate says it was composed of six hundred Orangemen, escorted by twice as many policemen. Several newspapers state there were only two hundred Williamites in the procession, and if that be true they must have made a miserable show indeed. But, taking the larger number, we find a very remarkable falling off from the six thousand mentioned a week previously as likely to parade. In this we have convincing proof that all the efforts of bigots and fanatics to fasten the Orange fiend on American soil are doomed to be ignominious failures. The liberality and sound common sense so strongly characteristic of the people of this country will always defeat them so long as they are left untrammeled. The authorities had a whole year to prepare for this procession; they had their infamous propaganda hard at work making proselytes; they turned to good account all the bad feeling created by the riot of '71; they utilised whatever sectarian bitterness was to be had among the Americans of their neighborhood; and this is the result—at the most six hundred proselytes! There are many Irish societies that could turn out five times as many men on four-and-twenty hours' notice. We daresay that if the Orange Lodges of York would be discovered that the Williamites had to rake up half the Eastern States in order to procure the gallant six hundred that marched so boldly through the streets of New York on Friday last. They had put forth all their strength, and a pretty exhibition they made of it! Now, we ask, what sort of a procession would all the men who are not Orangemen, and never would be Orangemen upon any consideration, make? They would muster rather more than six hundred we fancy, in fact, not one out of every ten thousand men in the United States will have anything to do with them or their pernicious principles. If they are taken no notice of but are let severely alone, they will dwindle down in numbers until they cannot do together a sort of "spectacle" or parody a parade either on the 12th July or any other day. We do not think ourselves bold in prophecying that two or three more such demonstrations as that we have had see in this country. The advantages of a quiet and forbearing policy on the part of our countrymen must now be strikingly apparent. In some who wished it antipated, a riot was created on Friday week last, the consequence would be that last year's massacre would be repeated upon an enlarged scale, and that, as the Williamites increased from eight in 1871 to six hundred in '72, they would increase from the latter figure to six thousand in '73, and so on proportionately. We do not believe the Orangemen are to be allowed parade, inasmuch as they do so for the purpose of creating hatred and ill-will among different sections of citizens. But the authorities ought to be judges of that and if they decide that they have a right to "demonstrate" and keep alive old feuds belonging to another country and another age, we national Irishmen shall do nothing to prevent them. They may stand on their heads, as well as march, for anything we care.

THE CORK CATHEDRAL.

The Rev. James Hegarty, who was some months ago sent to this country by the Most Rev. Dr. Tuohy on a mission to collect funds for the completion of the Cork Cathedral, has arrived in San Francisco. By the kind favor of his Grace the Archbishop who received him most courteously and seconded him in every encouragement, Father Hegarty will preach a charity sermon at last Mass in the Cathedral on Sunday, 28th inst. The reverend gentleman, on behalf of himself personally, and also on behalf of his bishop, returns sincere thanks to his Grace, to the clergy, and to the Catholics of this city for the welcome accorded him. Donations will be received by the Archbishop or any of the clergy; or they may be forwarded to Father Hegarty himself at the residence of C. D. O'Sullivan, Esq., 1023 Bush street. Next week we shall say a few words in reference to the reverend gentleman's mission, and set in matia in a clear light before our readers. Meantime we bespeak for Father Hegarty a truly Irish cead mille failthe from all whom he may meet in the Golden State.

"BILIOUS."—If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, despondent, have frequent headache, a tooth coated badly in morning, irregular appetite not tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or "bilious ness." in many cases of "liver complaint" only a part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect cure, leaving the liver strengthened and healthy. Sold by all Druggists Everywhere.

THE STOKES TRIAL.

The result of the trial of Stokes for the murder of the late James Fisk is not one upon which Americans ought to congratulate themselves. On the contrary, it is of a nature to give rise to most unpleasant reflections concerning the state of public morality and the purity of our law courts. To judge according to all the evidence apparent at the time of the committal—the slaying of the "Prince of Erie"—was as cold-blooded and deliberate a murder as ever figured in the annals of crime. Stokes had every advantage; he took his victim unawares; he shot him, as he might have shot a mad dog, without giving him the least chance of escape. The insanity plea which was set up by the defense, received, we are told, little consideration from the jury, and, indeed, it was not worth much. The self-defense theory found more favor. Some of the jury seem to have thought that if the gambler had not killed the swindler the swindler would certainly have killed, or procured the killing of, the gambler sooner or later. All this may be true enough, and yet it could be accepted as no justification for the deed. No overt act on the part of Fisk or any of his followers tending to assail Stokes' life was proven on the trial, and therefore it may fairly be assumed that no such act ever occurred. The disagreement of the jury can only be accounted for by an unwillingness to consign the accused to the awful penalties for murder which the law stands on the New York statute book, but practically it has been abolished, or at least, it takes effect only in very rare cases. A millionaire, backed by money or political influence may take the life of any one who offends him, and feel perfectly satisfied that a few years imprisonment is the most he has to suffer for his wickedness. There is no country in the world where the law's delays" are half so numerous or so inexplicable as in this free land, and every variety works in favor of the accused. The recollection of his crime dies out, the anger against him in the public mind dies out, merciful considerations are developed; but, above all, time is afforded for "seolog" the jury, and manipulating the jury. We are fast drifting towards that anarchical state of society where murder is only repressed by fear of reprisal at the hands of the slain man's friends. This is deplorable, and yet it is only the natural consequence of the defective and immoral legal system we have borrowed from the English. The English law—all of it that has sprung up since the Reformation is based—makes property more sacred than person, because it has been enacted for the exclusive benefit of the rich and powerful. Thus a man, guilty of burglary, will find it very hard to get off, but a murderer has a hundred chances of escape. In this country, unfortunately, the practice of the Courts has run headlong into these faults, and wholly eliminate all the excellences. A reform is needed very much, but we confess we do not see where it is to come from. Perhaps some terrible uprising of the people against the administration of justice will be the only cure, but even then the remedy might be even worse than the disease. But it is yet possible to prevent all unpleasant consequences by a return to a rigid adherence to the dictates of strict justice.

THE EXILED FRANCISCANS.

With a generous sympathy thoroughly characteristic of them the Catholic Societies of San Francisco have resolved to come to the relief of the Franciscans exiled from Guatemala by Rufino Barrios. The rev. Fathers and religious were, as is well known, landed here in a state of complete destitution, poorly clad and without a cent in their pockets. They were arrested and marched to the sea coast without getting time to make any preparations for such a long and fatiguing journey. They did not even know whither they were bound until they were put on board the steamer. Then it was altogether impossible for them to make the smallest provision for future necessities. The eight Dominican Fathers who accompanied them were treated in the same way, and with just as little consideration. Among those among them was ever charged with any crime, or even informed of any accusation, and their enforced exile can only be accounted for by crediting Barrios with an amount of heartless and conscienceless despotism of which any human being ought to be ashamed. The Dominicans on their arrival were taken care of by their brethren in this city, and the Franciscans found a refuge inside the hospitable walls of the Jesuit College on Market street. On the 14th inst. a Relief Committee was organized at Hibernia Hall, and all the societies, sodalities and military companies were requested to send delegates. The response made was cordial and unanimous, and at the next meeting, which was held on the evening of Monday last, the following gentlemen attended. The organizers of the Committee, Messrs. Isael, Sweeney, James Sweeney, Hill, W. V. Gaffey, I., D. Reilly, J. P. Rafferty, J. C. Brady, P. T. Wall, and the following named delegates: M. Ward, L. D., A. O. H.; L. Dwyer, Division N. 1; James Cahill, Division No. 3; D. M. Connelly, Division No. 3; James Butler, Division No. 4; J. F. Hanna, Division No. 5; H. Monahan, Division No. 6; Mr. O'Loud, Division No. 7; E. McPhilips, St. Joseph, I., 8.; J. Hill, St. Joseph B. S.; Judge Clooney, Sons of the Emerald Isle; M. Collins, Irish-American; Mr. Tilman, St. Peter's German Society; Wolfe Tone Guard, F. S. Meagher; Hibernia Rifles, Capt. Kenney; Legion of St. Patrick, Co. B.; Jackson Dragoons, Capt. Greany. After some discussion as to the speediest and most effectual way of raising funds, it was at length decided to hold a grand joint picnic and excursion of all the Societies at the City Gardens, to continue for three days, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the 8th, 9th and 10th of August. The Gardens have been engaged on most satisfactory terms, and every effort will be made to ensure an unprecedented success for the entertainment. Besides the usual games and pastimes, the appliances for which are already on the ground, it is proposed that there shall be a grand concert on one evening, a lecture on another and something resembling a Fair or bazaar on the third. The order in which these shall occur has not yet been fixed but due notice will be given when the arrangements are completed. The price of admission is to be one dollar for adults and fifty cents for children. Communication has been opened with the different Catholic organizations throughout the State, and it is confidently expected that large delegations will come from the interior cities and town. In short, the Committee are working indefatigably to make this the grandest, most imposing, orderly and successful picnic ever witnessed in California. The clergy are cooperating heartily with them, and his Grace the Archbishop has signified his entire approval of their undertaking. We are happy to say, too, as a reproof to the bitter-souled bigots who are at present striving to create discord and dissention among a community where such things were never known before, that many prominent and influential Protestants have promised their aid, and will do all in their power to make the picnic remunerative. The work is not only a charitable but generous, being meant to aid pious and peaceable men who have been robbed of all they possessed, and treated with unparalleled barbarity by the revolutionary dictator of a petty South American State. Catholics need no encouragement to induce them to join in the good work, and we trust that liberal Protestants likewise will lend their cooperation.

BAFFLING SPITE.

The latest files of Irish papers contain long lists of subscriptions to what is called the "Nolan Fund." The cause of the contributors show that all classes in society, the peer and the peasant, the merchant and the artisan, are in favor of it. The sums given range from one hundred pounds down to sixpence, and already upward of three thousand pounds, or about fifteen thousand dollars, have been collected. What is the money wanted for? Our readers, of course, have not forgotten the gross Galway Election Petition case, in which Mr. Trench was the complainant and Capt. Nolan the defendant. The trial lasted for nearly two months, boats of witnesses were brought from their homes and examined, the ablest counsel in Ireland were engaged on both sides—in short, it was a most expensive contest. Judge Keogh's decision saddled Captain Nolan with all the costs—that is to say, decreed that he should pay twelve thousand pounds, or sixty thousand dollars. Being only possessed of a moderate competence, the unexpected loss of a small estate near Galway, the unlucky aspirant for Parliamentary honors is altogether unable to pay this sum. In fact, it even to attempt to do so. Accordingly he sets aside the big itself to believe that he will ever be MeHale and the clergy of the west of Ireland, who are well acquainted with the facts of the case, charge Mr. Trench and his party with having unnecessarily swelled the costs to the amount mentioned, with the express purpose of ruining the popular candidate. Men were brought forty or fifty miles from home, kept for weeks in hotels until after-wards either not examined at all or else questioned respecting matters totally irrelevant to the issue. The case was protracted and delayed as long as any kind of excuse could be framed, though it could easily have been disposed of in a week or two at the farthest. To be brief—the great patriot Archbishop of Tuam declares that the fine from the munent Judge Keogh has imposed to hear the petition, the Trenchites knew the verdict would be in their favor, and therefore entered into a conspiracy to beggar Captain Nolan, in order to compel him to sit times what the defendant could afford to pay; they got their verdict and they expected; they got the seat in Parliament which probably is more than they expected; and are now exulting over the ruin of the young nationalist, who was audacious enough to defy the Clanrickards family and seek the representation of Galway. We therefore conclude by saying once more, every man who is desirous of seeing the United States governed by the Foreign Office in Downing street as an appendage of the British Empire is especially requested to vote for them!

FRANCE AND PRUSSIA.

Prince Bismarck is of the opinion that France has not yet been sufficiently weakened and humiliated. He is anxious that she should be so shorn of her strength and so crippled in her resources that she shall cease to be capable of injuring Germany by taking revenge for her recent defeat. Accordingly, he is by no means satisfied with wresting Alsace and Lorraine from her, or with extorting five milliards of an indemnity, but he is contriving new difficulties and indignities. All his talk about Prussia being non-aggressive and only desirous of peace is mere empty pretence that can mislead no intelligent individual. In reality he wants another war and is now busy preparing the way for it. The outbreak of hostilities may be deferred until the German treasury has received the last sum of the indemnity, but then, if not previously, his legions will once again take the field. Since it is not likely that France will give any provocation or afford any notable pretext for an assault, Bismarck is taking measures to insure that hostilities will be forced upon her. To effect his purpose he is making use of the Italian Kingdom, now become a mere creature of the German Empire. It will be remembered that at the close of the last Franco-Austrian war the city of Nice and a small strip of surrounding territory was ceded to France by Italy. This was a peaceable cession by one ally to another and was not a case of acquisition by conquest. There was no violence done to the will of the population; on the contrary, the transfer was ratified by an overwhelming majority. Since that time there has been no symptom of discontent, and, to all outward appearance at any rate, the people of Nice are as heartily French as the Parisians. They did not fly from their country in horror and despair as the Alsacians are doing now; they did not turn sullky countenances to their new masters like the citizens of Metz and Strasbourg; they accepted their destiny without complaint or reluctance. According to the French Government had no necessity of using towards them anything resembling the harsh measures that Germany has so freely used against the inhabitants of Alsace and Lorraine. But there is in Italy a party to whom a germanised France is absolutely necessary to existence. Its members are ungrateful for what has been done to advance the power and influence of their country; and like all despicable minds, they even hate those who confer benefits upon them. That is the reason why the intervening themselves for the humiliation of having to accept kindness. These vicious and little-minded men have taken up the cession of Nice as their favorite monomania. Colonel Dunford's Downing street as an appendage of the British Empire is especially requested to vote for them!

GRANT AND GREELEY.

We now have had time to learn how the nominations at Philadelphia and Baltimore have been accepted upon in England and Ireland. Without attaching great importance to the opinions of foreign journalists on a matter of purely American interest, we may, at least, derive some profit from making ourselves acquainted with them. They are excellent indications if not of the way in which we ought to be governed, at all events of the way in which these people would like to be governed. As we are pretty well posted on the feelings which prompt these newspaper writers, and clearly know the motives dictating their words, they may in a certain degree be taken as guides for our policy, both foreign and domestic. For instance every well-read American is aware that the London Times is inveterately hostile to these United States, and, would be vastly pleased if the Union were torn into fragments. It was in the pious hope that its wishes in this respect would be accomplished that it gave such aid, comfort and encouragement to the traitorous Confederacy. Consequently, it ought not require much argument to prove that when the Times organically declares that we should do a certain thing it is the spirit of friendliness the very contrary as speedily as possible. Now, what is true of the Times is equally true of the majority of English newspapers. The United States is known that the Irish national journals are warm supporters and enthusiastic admirers of the American Government. Indeed, the great object of their existence, the end to which all their efforts are directed, is the independence of Ireland of Republican institutions, similar in all respects to ours. Therefore, we may rest assured that whatever they say is dictated by a hostile spirit or friendliness and expresses their honest idea of what would be beneficial to us. Now its singular, to say the least, that so many English journals should advocate the re-election of General Grant; and precisely the papers which were most bitterly opposed to the success of the Federal Government during the late war are the loudest in demands for the reflection of the Republican nominee. There is after all nothing strange or surprising in this. They know the candidate that suits them best and they support him.

Be it known, then, that General Grant is the British nominee for President of the United States, and that every man who wishes to see this country ruled in accordance with the desires of the Imperial ministers is expected to vote for him. The treatment of the difficulties arising out of the arbitrary imprisonment of American citizens in Ireland during the Fenian excitement, the disreputable management of the Alabama claims negotiations, the neglect and ruin of our naval power as a national force, the enormous taxation, according to the English point of view, with the consequent of the White House should be kept there for four years longer. The Times has indignantly characterized the nomination of Mr. Greeley as a "farce," and cannot believe that he will ever be elected. All the petty English journals are out in the same strain, and repudiate the idea of surrounding territory was ceded to France by Italy. This was a peaceable cession by one ally to another and was not a case of acquisition by conquest. There was no violence done to the will of the population; on the contrary, the transfer was ratified by an overwhelming majority. Since that time there has been no symptom of discontent, and, to all outward appearance at any rate, the people of Nice are as heartily French as the Parisians. They did not fly from their country in horror and despair as the Alsacians are doing now; they did not turn sullky countenances to their new masters like the citizens of Metz and Strasbourg; they accepted their destiny without complaint or reluctance. According to the French Government had no necessity of using towards them anything resembling the harsh measures that Germany has so freely used against the inhabitants of Alsace and Lorraine. But there is in Italy a party to whom a germanised France is absolutely necessary to existence. Its members are ungrateful for what has been done to advance the power and influence of their country; and like all despicable minds, they even hate those who confer benefits upon them. That is the reason why the intervening themselves for the humiliation of having to accept kindness. These vicious and little-minded men have taken up the cession of Nice as their favorite monomania. Colonel Dunford's Downing street as an appendage of the British Empire is especially requested to vote for them!

FRANCE AND PRUSSIA.

Prince Bismarck is of the opinion that France has not yet been sufficiently weakened and humiliated. He is anxious that she should be so shorn of her strength and so crippled in her resources that she shall cease to be capable of injuring Germany by taking revenge for her recent defeat. Accordingly, he is by no means satisfied with wresting Alsace and Lorraine from her, or with extorting five milliards of an indemnity, but he is contriving new difficulties and indignities. All his talk about Prussia being non-aggressive and only desirous of peace is mere empty pretence that can mislead no intelligent individual. In reality he wants another war and is now busy preparing the way for it. The outbreak of hostilities may be deferred until the German treasury has received the last sum of the indemnity, but then, if not previously, his legions will once again take the field. Since it is not likely that France will give any provocation or afford any notable pretext for an assault, Bismarck is taking measures to insure that hostilities will be forced upon her. To effect his purpose he is making use of the Italian Kingdom, now become a mere creature of the German Empire. It will be remembered

The jury in the case of Augustin Castro indicted for the murder of Mathew Ulderson, on trial at San Diego, returned a verdict of "murder in the second degree."

Robert Hooks.—H. C. Bateman, Catholic Bookseller, 32 Emery street, corner of Sutter, has just received a large store of Robert Hooks, and all the new books, which he is selling at New York prices.

City, New Jersey.
Q.—You go on and state exactly what you sent to Anabro's office to inquire as authorized the publication of an the Post, reflecting on the character my wife, and to demand of him a satisfactory or retract them. I saw him there—I never saw him before—and him I wanted satisfaction; I wanted to retract that article, as it was false. and it was not; and he could prove it. and he was a liar; and I was a gentleman and took hold of me and pushed me out of the office, saying: "Get out of this—clear out." I had no I never carry a pistol, never owned did not have one in my hand that I used no such language as is imto me by Anabro; did not swear at

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

to France in 1868. I was a Professor Modern Languages in one of the institu of learning in Paris. I taught French, Italian, Greek and Latin, and Letters. I graduated in 1859. Got no more, because in those days we had diplomas; they are called letters small. I have such letters. I was child when I was appointed a Professor. I came to New York with Archbishop Odin, of New Orleans, and with him. I left France I left Anabro's office. I went to New York. I was a boy of seventeen months old when I was appointed Professor's chemist; looks to me that they were natural, resumed my position as chemist. My father has never been dyed. I never had any other or any other preparation. I have not dyed my hair. Such are all natural.

Q.—Is the appearance of Mr. Tyler the witness-sides were established from the Court-

Do you write Latin and Greek? A.—

Direct.

Dudley then passed a paper with the "By this sign we conquer!" written and said it was not good Latin.

Dudley looked at it through his and said it was not good Latin.

moment it was referred to Colonel who, like Horatio, was a good Latin-

Colonel looked at it and said it was Latin.

Dudley (to the witness)—What is the for God? A.—Thou.

Tyler—That is correct. Now save you to God.

Tyler then produced a number of written in French, which he said in evidence, to show that Auffray Rome and Paris at the identical time the witnesses testified to have seen

Australia. Among them were his from the Superior of the college passed through five years' studying the college, bearing date, June 29, a certificate of his baptism, signed by the pastor of baptism, signed by the pastor of Bernard's, Melbourne, dated July 7, 1863; his passport, with an accompanying of him, signed in Paris, by the Minister of Public Instruction; a letter from the Captain of the Pontifical Guard, P. S. Meagher; Hibernia Rifles, Capt. Kenney; Legion of St. Patrick, Co. B.; Jackson Dragoons, Capt. Greany. After some discussion as to the speediest and most effectual way of raising funds, it was at length decided to hold a grand joint picnic and excursion of all the Societies at the City Gardens, to continue for three days, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the 8th, 9th and 10th of August. The Gardens have been engaged on most satisfactory terms, and every effort will be made to ensure an unprecedented success for the entertainment. Besides the usual games and pastimes, the appliances for which are already on the ground, it is proposed that there shall be a grand concert on one evening, a lecture on another and something resembling a Fair or bazaar on the third. The order in which these shall occur has not yet been fixed but due notice will be given when the arrangements are completed. The price of admission is to be one dollar for adults and fifty cents for children. Communication has been opened with the different Catholic organizations throughout the State, and it is confidently expected that large delegations will come from the interior cities and town. In short, the Committee are working indefatigably to make this the grandest, most imposing, orderly and successful picnic ever witnessed in California. The clergy are cooperating heartily with them, and his Grace the Archbishop has signified his entire approval of their undertaking. We are happy to say, too, as a reproof to the bitter-souled bigots who are at present striving to create discord and dissention among a community where such things were never known before, that many prominent and influential Protestants have promised their aid, and will do all in their power to make the picnic remunerative. The work is not only a charitable but generous, being meant to aid pious and peaceable men who have been robbed of all they possessed, and treated with unparalleled barbarity by the revolutionary dictator of a petty South American State. Catholics need no encouragement to induce them to join in the good work, and we trust that liberal Protestants likewise will lend their cooperation.

BAFFLING SPITE.

The latest files of Irish papers contain long lists of subscriptions to what is called the "Nolan Fund." The cause of the contributors show that all classes in society, the peer and the peasant, the merchant and the artisan, are in favor of it. The sums given range from one hundred pounds down to sixpence, and already upward of three thousand pounds, or about fifteen thousand dollars, have been collected. What is the money wanted for? Our readers, of course, have not forgotten the gross Galway Election Petition case, in which Mr. Trench was the complainant and Capt. Nolan the defendant. The trial lasted for nearly two months, boats of witnesses were brought from their homes and examined, the ablest counsel in Ireland were engaged on both sides—in short, it was a most expensive contest. Judge Keogh's decision saddled Captain Nolan with all the costs—that is to say, decreed that he should pay twelve thousand pounds, or sixty thousand dollars. Being only possessed of a moderate competence, the unexpected loss of a small estate near Galway, the unlucky aspirant for Parliamentary honors is altogether unable to pay this sum. In fact, it even to attempt to do so. Accordingly he sets aside the big itself to believe that he will ever be MeHale and the clergy of the west of Ireland, who are well acquainted with the facts of the case, charge Mr. Trench and his party with having unnecessarily swelled the costs to the amount mentioned, with the express purpose of ruining the popular candidate. Men were brought forty or fifty miles from home, kept for weeks in hotels until after-wards either not examined at all or else questioned respecting matters totally irrelevant to the issue. The case was protracted and delayed as long as any kind of excuse could be framed, though it could easily have been disposed of in a week or two at the farthest. To be brief—the great patriot Archbishop of Tuam declares that the fine from the munent Judge Keogh has imposed to hear the petition, the Trenchites knew the verdict would be in their favor, and therefore entered into a conspiracy to beggar Captain Nolan, in order to compel him to sit times what the defendant could afford to pay; they got their verdict and they expected; they got the seat in Parliament which probably is more than they expected; and are now exulting over the ruin of the young nationalist, who was audacious enough to defy the Clanrickards family and seek the representation of Galway. We therefore conclude by saying once more, every man who is desirous of seeing the United States governed by the Foreign Office in Downing street as an appendage of the British Empire is especially requested to vote for them!

FRANCE AND PRUSSIA.

Prince Bismarck is of the opinion that France has not yet been sufficiently weakened and humiliated. He is anxious that she should be so shorn of her strength and so crippled in her resources that she shall cease to be capable of injuring Germany by taking revenge for her recent defeat. Accordingly, he is by no means satisfied with wresting Alsace and Lorraine from her, or with extorting five milliards of an indemnity, but he is contriving new difficulties and indignities. All his talk about Prussia being non-aggressive and only desirous of peace is mere empty pretence that can mislead no intelligent individual. In reality he wants another war and is now busy preparing the way for it. The outbreak of hostilities may be deferred until the German treasury has received the last sum of the indemnity, but then, if not previously, his legions will once again take the field. Since it is not likely that France will give any provocation or afford any notable pretext for an assault, Bismarck is taking measures to insure that hostilities will be forced upon her. To effect his purpose he is making use of the Italian Kingdom, now become a mere creature of the German Empire. It will be remembered

THE CASE OF ALLIS vs. AUFFRAY.

The Police Court was crowded Saturday last in anticipation of the examination of Prof. William Auffray, the husband of the Escaped Nun, on a charge of having drawn a pistol on Detective Allis, at the office of Anabro & Co., Private Detectives.

After the usual routine of business Judge Dudley ascended the bench. Colonel Dudley seated himself in the chair of Burke-Phillips and the examination began.

DETECTIVE ALLIS' STORY.

Phil. Allis, duly sworn, testified: On Wednesday, June 26th, I was in the office of Anabro & Co., 411 California street. I went in about three o'clock in the afternoon, and I passed the Professor, so-called —the defendant—in the outside office. I did not know him at the time. I went in and sat down at the desk in the inner office. He immediately followed me and presented a pistol, and said he would shoot my head off if I didn't retract something in a newspaper which he held in his hand.

Question—Tell the Court the language he used at the time he held the pistol on you. Answer—The first time he said he would shoot my head off. He also used the words "——— a ——— of a b———." "bloody liar," and such words as language, to me. He repeated it several times. There was a lady present at the time. I was sitting and he standing. He held a pistol about a foot from me.

Q.—To what part of your body was it pointed? A.—About my head—in my face. I don't know whether the pistol was cocked or not. His hand was trembling. He was very much excited, and I was more afraid the pistol would go off from the tremor than that he would deliberately shoot me. Anabro came in then, and took hold of him and put him out.

Mr. Dudley—Were you ever a detective in 1850; we landed at Boston. I lived in Rhode Island from 1851 to 1862 with my parents all the time. I was brought up a Catholic. I was educated in the Protestant Methodist Conference Seminary, East Greenwich, Rhode Island.

Q.—Methodist? A.—Methodist, thank God.

Q.—How did it happen if your parents were Catholics that you went to a Protestant school? A.—Because they were more enlightened. I received a certificate of graduation there, Feb. 11 it turned in the convent. The Mother Superior has it. I went into the convent by the advice of my parents and the priests. I had to get the permission of my parents to enable me to bring the required amount of money to the convent.

THE PRICE OF ADMISSION.

Q.—What amount of money did it require? A.—Several thousand dollars.

Q.—How many thousand dollars? A.—That has nothing to do with it. If I should bring the required sum it would be $5,000, but I gave more than that. My father was a farmer in the old country—a landlord. He brought with him as much money as he wanted. I do not know how much. He was a commission merchant in Providence. My father is living. My father's wife died. I considered so by some. He is comfortable today—worth about $25,000 or $30,000.

Q.—Were you married before you went into the convent? A.—No, sir, I was not, nor engaged to be.

Q.—Did you live in the city of Paterson? A.—As a Sister of Charity I did one year in that same month.

Q.—Have you a certificate of marriage? A.—I have. It is hanging up in my parlor in New York. I have not got it here among any copies of it. I have the certificate at home.

Q.—Have you ever had any children? A.—I have had one, born July 17, 1871. It is not living.

Q.—Were you ever in Australia? A.—I never was.

Q.—Never was? A.—Never; never.

Q.—I desire to ask you if you have false hair? A.—I have not—they are natural. I have false hair, because the convent stripped me of my own. They used it for wigs. I had it off and sell it every six months. It has grown some since, but is still short, dark brown. I have it in hand.

Q.—Have you ever lived with any other man? A.—Never (emphatically). I had to leave the convent to avoid it.

Q.—Did not you charge a Catholic priest with debauching you? A.—He tried it, and drugged me for that purpose, but failed, thank God! It was not his fault, though. Q.—And have you not, since you left the convent, charged a Catholic priest? A.—I charged it before the Court, and I charged it to the truth by the grace of God.

Q.—By the grace of God, was it? A.—Yes and I hope you may sometime or other experience it and understand it yourself.

This closed the cross-examination, and Edith retired to the witness-room, and the gloomy walls were deprived of her radiant presence.

John P. Poole, Deputy County Clerk, was called by Mr. Dudley. He testified that he had been a resident of Melbourne from 1858 to 1865. He said that from 1855 to 1865 he had seen in Melbourne a woman so strongly resembling Mrs. Auffray that he had no doubt it was the same person. Saw her almost every day during the time mentioned. She then appeared to be about seventeen years of age. Did not see her after 1858. I went from England to Australia. Was employed in the latter place as law clerk with one of the leading firms. Am forty-three years of age.

Judge Tyler—Have you ever seen Mrs. Auffray in California until you saw her on the stand here to-day? A.—I have not.

William Kelly was the next witness: Have been in California about two months. Came here from Australia. Lived in Melbourne for 17 years. Saw the woman who was on the stand a little while ago. I remember having seen her in Melbourne. She was known as Fanny Woodward and used to frequent the Black Eagle Hotel. It was a rather disreputable establishment, and visited by loose characters.

Judge Tyler—Do you mean to swear positively that the woman you saw on the stand is the same one you knew as Fanny Woodward in Melbourne? A.—Well, listening to such hard swearing as I have heard in this case is enough to shake a man's belief in almost anything, but I am as positive as a man can be under such circumstances.

At this point the Court adjourned until Thursday afternoon, at 1 o'clock.—Chronicle, July 14.

THURSDAY.

Judge Louderback took his seat at ten minutes past one. Mr. Dudley proposed that the evidence taken in the case should also hold good in the libel case, Auffray vs. Anabro, but after some discussion the proposition was abandoned. The "Escaped Nun" was then placed on the stand, and Mr. Dudley began to cross-examine her with respect to the contents of several pages in her "book," but was stopped by the Judge. He then attempted to put in the same pages as evidence, but this was ruled out and the witness resumed her seat.

Two men named Kelly and Quinlan were then examined. Mrs. Auffray was asked if she recognized either. She answered she did not. It seemed they had been residents of Rhode Island. T. Anabro was next cross-examined respecting his pursuits here in the years '54, '55, '56 and subsequently. Nothing important was elicited. Allis was reexamined respecting his life in Australia, and did not vary from the evidence he had previously given. Captain Lees was examined as to his acquaintance with Allis, and to discover whether any professional jealousy did not exist between them. Colonel Crockett was examined to the same purport, and respecting Allis' application to be put on the Police here. A Mr. Bryan was put on the stand to prove that the man known as "Miranda" was a Frenchman. He evidently did not resemble the defendant and testified to that effect. As we go to press a Mrs. Clarke is being examined as to her acquaintance with the O'Gorman family in Rhode Island.

SACRAMENTO CORRESPONDENCE.

Subscriptions Received.

| | |
|---|---|
| Valleio—P. McGinty | $11 00 |
| Angels—Thomas Rooney | 1 00 |
| San Pablo—John Shields | 1 00 |
| Forest—William Bennings | 1 00 |
| Sacramento—Thomas Hennigan | 1 00 |
| P. Hannigan | 1 00 |
| P. McGrath | 1 00 |
| E. J. Meeke | 1 00 |
| D. W. Cullinane | 1 00 |
| Stockton—Mr. McCluskey | 1 00 |
| M. J. Curtin | 1 00 |
| Eberhardt City—P. H. Murphy | 1 00 |

Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer for the scalp, and for restoring the hair and its color, has no equal.

MEETING OF THE IRISH NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The Irish National Convention held a meeting Wednesday evening at Hibernia Hall. In the absence of President Harry, T. P. Wall was elected Chairman pro tem, J. H. Gilmore, Secretary. Delegates from the Wolfe Tone Guard were admitted. The Executive Committee appointed at the last meeting, consisting of Donovan, O'Leary, Cummiling, McArdle, Kane, Kenealy and Barry for the purpose of presenting a plan of action for the Convention, presented their report. Several sections of the plan were, on motion, amended. After considerable discussion the following

PLAN OF ACTION

Was unanimously agreed upon.

That one hundred copies of the accompanying address be printed, and that the same be presented to the governing body of each of the following societies, to wit: To the Supreme Council of the Irish Confederation, to the Senators of the Irish Race in America, and to the heads of all the Irish national, civic, military, benevolent and religious societies not hitherto responded to the call for a Convention as will form the Delegates of the Convention.

That the sitting of this Convention be permanent.

The basis of representation is as follows: For each organization of from 50 to 100 members, one delegate; for each additional 100 members, one delegate. For each society of between two and three hundred members, three delegates. For each fifty additional members, one delegate.

That the Convention meet on the first Wednesday at every month, for the transaction of business.

That we suggest to societies represented with us that they appoint three gentlemen in those societies whose business it shall be to collect of and collect the monthly contributions to the EXECUTIVE FUND.

And to account for the same.

That the Secretary of the Convention having power to add to the number.

That the Executive of the Convention having the proper space for opening up communication with the Irish Race, and accredited representatives of it in the country.

THE ADDRESS

Presented by the Executive Committee is as follows:

Assembled together in the holy cause of Irish liberty and nationality, we, the delegates of the Irish societies of San Francisco, California, have met for the purpose of now making to unite all our countrymen in this State and Union in the work of aiding those, who in Ireland are preparing to make another struggle for the independence of that country. And we do so not only in the name of our common country, to see all your efforts crowned with the success of your devotion, but so as to make them cooperate with us in the work of our own liberation. We are in combination of the united strength of all the Irish societies of America, and we call upon you to unite with us in the formation of a similar one in Ireland, and to raise a similar fund to be perfected by the two organizations, which we hope will be the means of relieving the people of Ireland to establish in their midst

AN INDEPENDENT REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT.

Such a one as that which you have the happiness to live under. Such a one as that which, if we had it, would be the envy of the nations of the past and the present nations, the history of the national movements of the world, and the progress of civilization will prove over the course, it is undeniable that they have failed in their object, and that the Irish people are unfree to-day. Of the million of men of Irish blood in America, how many are there who have not themselves or who belong to the national organizations? How many are there who are doing anything to promote the cause of war for the enjoyment of that army which is now in bondage in Irish Ireland?

VINDICATE THE INDEPENDENCE OF OUR COUNTRY!

Can you be more free? Indeed not a day. Of the hundreds of thousands of men who form the rank and file of the Irish organizations in America how many are working for Ireland? Not one in a hundred. Of the millions of dollars contributed to the social and military organizations of San Francisco, how much has been contributed to the cause of Ireland? Not one thousandth part of that amount. Has not Ireland the same claim on those contributions as the organizations to which they have been contributed? Is not Ireland by the same ties of love, by the same desire to set Ireland free, and are they not all bound to contribute to the cause of Ireland? Are they not bound to Ireland by the same ties of love, of duty, of gratitude as they are by that of a less degree? Has not Ireland the same claim on those societies as the societies to which they belong

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

ENGLAND.

The Ballot Bill.

The peers (as we foretold last week) have smuggled the Ballot Bill in committee, so that it is now worse than useless. There was evidently some danger lurking under the fleshly with which the second reading was passed. The clause adopted on Monday night, making the ballot optional, destroys the measure, for of course the bribed or intimidated voter will now have no choice! Ministers sustained many defeats in the committee, and showed in one instance remarkable vacillation, speaking one way and voting another. The question is not now the old one—"What will the lords do?" They have done their worst. The question is—"What will the Commons do?" If ministers accept the maimed bill, the people are betrayed. Let them, on the contrary, be firm, and the result will show that the peers have really played Mr. Gladstone's game, and have propped up a tottering administration by giving government a first-rate election cry.—Universe, June 22.

Protestant Testimony.

It is good sometimes to read what those who are not members of our faith say of the Holy Father. In a leading article in the Standard, on Wednesday morning, we find the following admission:

"The IX. has created a Roman Catholic party in Europe, indeed in every quarter of the globe. It was he who inspired the movement, now unhappily so widely prevailing, which found utterance by the mouth of an English peer—himself once of our own Anglican communion—that a man may be an Englishman, a Frenchman, or a Hindoo, but that he is a Catholic first and before all things. That is Pius IX.'s own doing."

So pleased are we with the frank avowal that we don't care to quarrel with the terms in which it is put. But here is something still better:

"Rome, under the guidance of Pius IX., at least knows its own mind, which is more than can be said of perhaps any other Continental branch of the Christian Church at the present moment. That in itself is no small matter. But, over and above all that, there are certain theories of government, of education, of moral polity, which still recommend themselves to terms of adhesion of excellent and intelligent people, and of which (Rome) is now the only defender and upholder. Upon a calm review of all the circumstances of the case, we think that it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that were Pius IX. to die to-morrow he would leave the Roman Church—more powerful, we feel bound to add, and endowed with a far higher vitality. He may live some years longer, and as far as he can see, when he takes to direct ourselves of prejudice, we think it likely that Pius IX. will be regarded in future Roman Catholic history as one of the most distinguished and meritorious of the long line of Popes.—London Undersec, June 23.

Disputed Will Case.

Although judgment in the great will case of Purdie vs. Lawlee has not been given, another suit, involving no less an amount than £50,000, has just come into the Court of Probate. It is a suit in which James Vincent Harding and Thomas Farrell propound a will of the late Baroness Weld, to which there are ten codicils, the first codicil being dated on the day of the will, which was made in 1865. The testatrix was the sister of Mrs. Harriet Maria Gordon Smythies, the authoress, and one of the next of kin—the Elizabeth Maria Gordon and Jane Gordon—contest the will and codicils on the grounds of incapacity, undue execution, and undue influence over Archbishop Manning, Dr. Doyle, the late Dr. Grant, Father Ruff, Kirk, Galway, and other eminent Catholic dignitaries. As the Court of Probate on Wednesday, application was made in a most efficient by Mrs. Smythies, Elizabeth Matilda Gordon, and William Clutterbuck, solicitor's clerk, of 6, Whitehall, for leave to inspect certain documents relating to the bequests in the alleged will and codicils, and especially the two deeds of gift and a certain letter in which directions are alleged to have been given by the deceased as to the time, mode, and place of her sepulture. Lord Penzance inquired whether the codicils in question were alleged as to the will and each codicil. Mr. Clutterbuck said there were ten codicils, and undue influence was pleaded to each, but not as being exercised by the same parties. Mr. R. A. Bayford (for the plaintiffs) pointed out they had particulars under his lordship's order. Lord Penzance observed on the defendants were bound to say whether they made the same charge as to codicils, or how many of them and which although he might not be obliged to prove it, short all. Mr. Clutterbuck replied that the really remark that it was a case similar to Purdie vs. Lawlee, only ten times stronger (some laughter in which his lordship joined). Ultimately, the order was made for the inspection of the documents as prayed.—Public Times, June 23.

A Transfer of Stock.

A curious ceremony lately took place on the west coast of Africa. It appears that Mr. John Pope Hennessy negotiated the transfer of a district called Almina (near Cape Coast Castle) from the Dutch to the English, contrary to the wishes of the native, who seem to be somewhat in the condition of Ireland, totally without Home Rule. The 4th of April was chosen for the ceremony of changing the ownership of the country, the following being the official narrative of the proceedings:

"Every care was taken to do the thing in the most impressive and cautious manner, the natives being averse to the cession. The boats were manned and armed, and ordered to station themselves close to shore, the eighteen 32-pounders of the Rattlesnake's crew got in readiness. At eleven o'clock the party landed, the officers in full dress, in command of his Excellency the Pope Hennessy and Commodore Commerell. The party, which was received by the Dutch Administrator and his staff, formed into procession. Headed by the fine band of H. M.'s Barbadoes, with Pope Hennessy, Commodore Commerell, V.C., representing the queen, with their suites on each side, the Dutch Administrator and commodore, with their staffs, representing their king, came together in fours (6 reads like the opening of an exhibition); then the British colors, carried by two midshipmen, followed by a naval guard, and, quite an army of blue jackets, all armed; to these succeeded the Royal Marines, and the whole, concluding with a detachment of the 2d West Indian Regiment, arrived at the Assembly Room. The party halted, formed lines, facing inwards, the officials passing into the building the troops presenting arms. Then the council sat, deliberated, read warrants, authorities handed over keys of fortresses, made complimentary speeches on our side for their king, William the Third; they in honor of our queen. At a certain part of the proceedings the Dutch flag was hauled down with a salute, and the glorious British Union Jack took its place, saluted by 101 guns from the Rattlesnake."

It is rather an ugly commentary on all this speechmaking that, by the latest accounts, the Anglian commodore was afraid to land at Almina, and the native were waiting on the beach to kill him, and perhaps to eat him, and Commodore Dowell, having a very natural prejudice against such proceedings, prudently remained in his ship.—London Universe, June 22.

The British Cat.

We pointed out last week, as a plain proof of beastly brutality, the love of the lash as a Government institution in England. Here is a letter published without note or comment in the North British Daily Mail under the calming title of "Cat Ireland:"

Editor North British Daily Mail—Sir: Perhaps the following would be a certain and admirable cure for Ireland; at any rate it is worth a trial, which would insure its adoption for ever. When a wicked, cruel attempt at disorder and disturbance takes place, send three Irish priests in that district to the lash; that is, make the teachers responsible for the poor pupils they instigate, and liable for the wrong done. A gentle application of this cure would soon give Ireland more quiet and less nonsense than the altar. I am, &c., NEMO.

The writer forgot to add the "piano wire" which her Majesty's officers found so efficacious in the dragging of aged men and even pregnant women the other day in Jamaica.—Dublin Nation, June 22.

ITALY.

The Pope and Italy.

The Pope has addressed a letter to Cardinal Antonelli, dated June 16th, in which his Holiness deplores the approaching introduction in the Italian Parliament of a law suppressing religious bodies, and says this suppression will be prejudicial to the interests of the Church and a violation of the international law of the Catholic world. The Pope alludes to the continual encroachments upon the Pontifical authority as a violation of morality and justice, and says: "We might have spared ourselves this spectacle by seeking an asylum abroad, but motives of the highest religious interest counsel us in the present state of things not to abandon our See. The world also will be convinced of the liberty of the Roman Pope and the Church by a change in the state of things independently ordained by God. The Pope, though free, is not independent. The Pope does not comprehend how a reconciliation between the Papacy and the Italian Government can be seriously spoken of. The Papacy cannot submit to a usurpation of its rights, and all guarantees are illusory." The Pope concludes by declaring that he has confirmed as nuncios and commodore, with their staffs, representing their king, came together in fours (6 reads like the opening of an exhibition); then the British colors, carried by two midshipmen, followed by a naval guard, and, quite an army of blue jackets, all armed; to these succeeded the Royal Marines, and the whole, concluding with a detachment of the 2d West Indian Regiment, arrived at the Assembly Room. The party halted, formed lines, facing inwards, the officials passing into the building the troops presenting arms. Then the council sat, deliberated, read warrants, authorities handed over keys of fortresses, made complimentary speeches on our side for their king, William the Third; they in honor of our queen. At a certain part of the proceedings the Dutch flag was hauled down with a salute, and the glorious British Union Jack took its place, saluted by 101 guns from the Rattlesnake."

It is rather an ugly commentary on all this speechmaking that, by the latest accounts, the Anglian commodore was afraid to land at Almina, the native were waiting on the beach to kill him, and perhaps to eat him, and Commodore Dowell, having a very natural prejudice against such proceedings, prudently remained in his ship.—London Universe, June 22.

The British Cat.

We pointed out last week, as a plain proof of beastly brutality, the love of the lash as a Government institution in England. Here is a letter published without note or comment in the North British Daily Mail under the calming title of "Cat Ireland:"

Editor North British Daily Mail—Sir: Perhaps the following would be a certain and admirable cure for Ireland; at any rate it is worth a trial, which would insure its adoption for ever. When a wicked, cruel attempt at disorder and disturbance takes place, send three Irish priests in that district to the lash; that is, make the teachers responsible for the poor pupils they instigate, and liable for the wrong done. A gentle application of this cure would soon give Ireland more quiet and less nonsense than the altar. I am, &c., NEMO.

The writer forgot to add the "piano wire" which her Majesty's officers found so efficacious in the dragging of aged men and even pregnant women the other day in Jamaica.—Dublin Nation, June 22.

ITALY.

The Pope and Italy.

The Pope has addressed a letter to Cardinal Antonelli, dated June 16th, in which his Holiness deplores the approaching introduction in the Italian Parliament of a law suppressing religious bodies, and says this suppression will be prejudicial to the interests of the Church and a violation of the international law of the Catholic world. The Pope alludes to the continual encroachments upon the Pontifical authority as a violation of morality and justice, and says: "We might have spared ourselves this spectacle by seeking an asylum abroad, but motives of the highest religious interest counsel us in the present state of things not to abandon our See. The world also will be convinced of the liberty of the Roman Pope and the Church by a change in the state of things independently ordained by God. The Pope, though free, is not independent. The Pope does not comprehend how a reconciliation between the Papacy and the Italian Government can be seriously spoken of. The Papacy cannot submit to a usurpation of its rights, and all guarantees are illusory." The Pope concludes by declaring that he has confirmed as nuncios to the foreign representatives of the Vatican with the state of things, and protest against acts encroaching the Papacy and Catholicism. He says: "Foreign Governments cannot forget that the Pontifical See, far from being an embarrassment for the peace and prosperity of Europe, or the greatness and independence of Italy, was ever a bond between peoples and princes, and always a center of concord and peace. It was finally a source of real greatness—the guardian of her independence and the constant support of her liberty."—Catholic Times, June 22.

Foul Play.

The jury of coroner's inquest who sat upon the mock trial of the man who assassinated the Papal gendarmes has acquitted every one of the former. This was a result that was looked for on all hands by those who were aspiring of the matter. Who ever expected "the raven to chide blackness?" in the eyes of that jury of Piedmontese the lust to land at Ancona, the natives

TELEGRAPHIC JOTTINGS.

NEW YORK, July 12.—The speech of ex-Senator Doolittle to-day on notifying Horace Greeley of his nomination at Baltimore was quite brief and formal, after which Greeley was introduced to the other members of the Committee individually. Greeley spoke as follows:

"I should need time were I to attempt to reply fitly and fully to this important, and, I need not say, gratifying communication. It may be that I should reply in writing, but as I have addressed a letter, which has been pretty widely circulated, to the officers of the Liberal Republican Convention, it may not be necessary. I can only say now, that I accept your nomination—accept it in the same spirit in which it was offered. I am at present in a position which many doubtless regard as a proud one, but which is to me an embarrassing one, because it involves a temporary, and, I trust, only a temporary annoyance, on account of a misconception of my motives on the part of some of my valued and lifelong friends. I can confidently say to all candid observers and to convince all of the disinterestedness and patriotism of the course I am pursuing, and intended to pursue, long before I was assured of so much cooperation and sympathy. The time will come when the world will see that you are no less Democrats because you have pursued the course you have, and that I am no less Republican because I accept your nomination."

Here Mr. Greeley's voice faltered with emotion. He recovered himself and continued:

"I am not much in the habit of receiving nominations for the Presidency. I am consequently unable to say as readily and fluently as others might. I can only say I shall be happy to see all of you, or at least as many of you as can come, at my humble farmer home, where I shall be to-morrow, and where we shall be able to converse and confer more freely than here. If you will come I shall be happy to make you welcome to the best the farm affords. And I now simply wish you farewell."

NEW YORK, July 13.—There was an immense crowd in the Court this morning, awaiting the verdict in the Stokes case. The prisoner was there, and looked rather cheerful. When the jury entered the Court and announced that they were unable to agree, the Court discharged them, and Stokes was returned to the Tombs. One report is that they stood nine for murder, one for manslaughter and two for acquittal; another, that they stood eight for acquittal, two for manslaughter and two for murder; in the first degree. A motion will be made to admit Stokes to bail.

EUROPE.

NEW YORK, July 13.—A Berlin correspondent says that General Sherman has expressed himself disgusted, not only with his reception there, but with German manners generally. A dinner at Minister Bancroft's, at which General Von Moltke was present, the two great Generals of the country came in exchange salutations. General Sherman's meeting with Prince Frederick Charles passed off with honors in the same way. At Potsdam, General Sherman was refused admission to the Park because the Emperor was entertaining some Imperial guests. Subsequently, when the Imperial party was taking place, while the troops were being reviewed by the Emperor, General Sherman, who was invited to witness the affair and be presented to the Emperor, remembering the Potsdam incident, politely declined.

PARIS, July 11.—General Sherman and Lieutenant-Colonel Andrews were presented to the Minister of War, General Cissy, yesterday. They were personally presented to Thiers and the Cabinet.

LONDON, July 12.—O'Byrne has recovered from the Chief Secretary of Ireland £25 damages, caused by an attack by the police during the Phœnix Park riot.

LONDON, July 12.—An influential meeting of Catholics was held last night, the Duke of Norfolk presiding. Resolutions were adopted protesting against the action of the Italian Government towards the Papal authorities and condemning the recent law passed by the Parliament prescribing Jesuits.

Lord Francis Conyngham succeeds the late Earl Mayo as Governor-General of the province Leo, His has been created a Peer of the United Kingdom, under the title of Baron Strick.

Death of Rev. Peter, Conway, P. P., Rosedford.

This announcement will be received with profound sorrow throughout the land.

The good, generous and warm-hearted "Father Peter" is no more. In his death the poor have lost one of their best, most tried and uncompromising friends, and religion a faithful and zealous priest. He died on Saturday last, at three o'clock, of typhus fever, brought on, it is said, by the nervous excitement to which he had recently been subjected. The zealous, hard-working priest is at rest, and far removed from "the insolence of office." He is gone to receive the reward promised to those who have loved the poor for Christ's sake, who were loyal to their trusts and faithful to the end. In human hearts there did not beat a more generous or sympathetic heart than that of Father Conway. Few men in our time have given more personal proof of their zeal for the welfare of the poor than he. In famine and pestilence he was among them to give them help and comfort; their joys and sorrows were his; their sufferings and oppressions he also knew and if occasionally his zeal exceeded that which some people call the strict lines of prudence in advocating the claims of his poor parishioners, the excess arose from the high and ardent intensity of his sympathy, as well as from his determination to stand by and do battle for the needy and the friendless. His "want of prudence" was the excess of his honesty and his sincerity. He felt that he was amply rewarded for all his toil and self-sacrifice by having secured the affections of his people, his influence over them and his power to do good, while he lived in their affections and in their "heart of hearts." No sacrifice was too great for him to make for his flock. This was well illustrated by his taking two long and very journeys across the Atlantic to raise money among the Irish in America to build the noble parochial church of Headford, which will long be regarded as a monument as of good and holy a priest, as of a people, as Irishman as ever breathed. But Father Conway needs no such monument, for his name will live in the love of the people from generation to generation as that of one who was always the fearless asserter of their rights, the reprover of the wrong-doer, the generous benefactor of the needy, the destitute and the afflicted; as one who stood between the oppressor and the oppressed, and who had closed his life in the service of God and of the flock confided to his care. His death throws a terrible additional interest round the now famous word, "Judgment." We understand from the day of its delivery Father Conway dropped.—Irishman, June 29.

MINING NEWS.

AMADOR.—The Ledger of the 13th says: "The Bunker Hill mine has struck very rich rock on the 170-foot level, running from the south shaft, which is now about four feet wide. The Keystone still holds its own, and remits its regular $40,000 per month.

CALAVERAS.—Bariola mine, owned by Messrs. Barnes & Lefoy, claim of 1,500 feet, now down will be sunk 120 feet, has a small steam engine for hoisting and pumping. The ledge averages about 22 inches, and was originally worked eighteen years ago, and then abandoned for fourteen years. Work was resumed by the present company about six months since. Ore worked produced from $30 to $80 per ton, some goes as high as $150 to $200 per ton.

Close by is the once famous French Lead, now owned by Joseph Reed, was originally worked in 1856 by a French woman and her two daughters, who took out $60,000 in six months. After being abandoned for fourteen years, work has been resumed. The shaft is down 100 feet and the ore pays from $30 to $125 per ton.

The Calaveras Chronicle of the 13th says: Operations are prospering favorably at the Gwin mine. The damage sustained by the flood of last Winter is nearly repaired.

SAN DIEGO.—The San Diego Union says the Kentuck mine has cleaned up thirty-two ozes of ore, which yielded $40 to the ton, in all $1,405 59—a good showing. In speaking of the Golden Chest, the same paper says: A lot of ore from it is now going through the mill, showing it to be one of the richest gold mines in the State.

BRIEF CITY ITEMS.

ST. JOSEPH'S BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.—At a semi-annual meeting of the above-named Society, held on Sunday afternoon last, the statement of the Treasurer showed that the disbursement for the past six months amounted to $1,268, as the receipts for same time to $1,226 83. Total assets of the Society, $8,545 55. Subsequently the following-named gentlemen were elected members of the Council: T. J. Walsh, Michael Kane, John Hill, James McGregor, T. Swift and M. Dolan.

THE NEW COUNTY COMMITTEE.—First Ward—T. Chandler, John Donnelly; Second Ward—O. B. Boyd, Peter Dolan; Third Ward—C. Tracy, A. McGurren; Fourth Ward—R. R. Provines, L. Quint; Fifth Ward—E. Sunkind, T. M. O'Connor; Sixth Ward—M. Fallon, Sandy W. Foreman; Seventh Ward—James O'Connell, Henry Casey; Eighth Ward—John Cooney, James O'Connor; Ninth Ward—H. Comfost, Eugene Casserly; Tenth Ward—J. Boynton, P. Crighton; Eleventh Ward—Bryan Donnelly, E. J. Daley; Twelfth Ward—Louis Schultz, Thomas Bolcom.

At a meeting of the Shields Guard, held in their armory on last Wednesday evening, July 10, the following prizes were awarded to ladies holding winning numbers from the late picnic: No. 15, Mrs Hensley, order for a pair of gaiters, gift of Supervisor Harriett. No. 85, Miss M. Garity, handsome clock, gift of Lieutenant Mcdaire. No. 165, Miss Jenny McKeever, Wheeler & Wilcox sewing machine, gift of Company. No. 76, Mrs. Babbock, lace-dollar dress, gift of Tormey & Hand. No. 98, Mrs. Hynes, order for a picture of Washington crossing the Delaware, gift of Henry Donohue. No. 110, order for ten-dollar dress, gift of Mr. Frank McGloggin. No. 185, Miss Ann Tally, silver goblet, gift of Mr. Cole Duane. No. 203, Mrs. Harley, ten dollar gold piece, gift of Mr. Daniel Harney. No. 304, Miss Forbes, whatnot, gift of Supervisor Goodbaker. No. 340, Mrs Mary Gallagher, basket of wine, gift of T. C. Morrison's party. After the awarding in the evening in a most pleasing and agreeable manner.

Scene in the Irish Court of Chancery.

The Dublin Court of Chancery was crowded on Tuesday, June 18th, by barristers and the public in expectation of a scene between the Lord Chancellor and Lord Justice Christian. Judgment was to be delivered on an appeal from the Vice-Chancellor, who had refused to take any ruling on a motion to amend a bill, being of opinion that it was a matter not for him but for his chief clerk. The Lord Chancellor has expressed the opinion that the Vice-Chancellor had no discretion to act as he had done. Lord Justice Christian said this was an instance of the jealousy of the Lord Chancellor for taking things easy and occupying giving a judicial answer to the question whether the chief clerk's offices had not been applied to illegal purposes. One of the persons shown in Court of Chancery in Ireland had received what was thought warranted from its connection with the English bar, for the brightest days were when Lord M. Leonards and other ornaments of the English bar practiced in it. The salary of the office of Lord Chancellor in Ireland was higher than that of the English Lord Chancellor, but the emoluments of the additional sum for his duties as Speaker of the House of Lords. The Irish Court of Chancery had outlived its usefulness, and the Irish Lord Chancellor could only escape from the tedious duty of sitting to attend to more attractive duties by illegally referring business to the chief clerk.

The Lord Chancellor should not be a judge of first instance, but his functions should be simply appellate, like those of the English Lord Chancellor, and there should be two Lords Justices of Appeal of equivalent status. His indelible spoke for two hours. The Lord Chancellor replied that it was a warm bath he had never before exhibited on similar occasions. He said he had hitherto exercised the quality of mercy and not of respect to the dignity of the Court, and he would have adhered to that rule still, but that he could not allow reflections to judge—past and present, living and dead—which were as irrevalent as they were offensive, to pass without reply. It was too hard that on a wretched point of this kind he and his colleagues should be made the subject for acting wrongly, but should have improper motives attributed to them. The Lord Justice of Appeal said he did not attribute motives, but when dealing with public matters he could not what individuals stood in his way.

The Colusa Sun speaks well of the crops in that county. It says they are immense, and strongly accuses men as being criminal to run the numerous leaders through the press.

The Monterey Democrat says harvesting has now fairly commenced in the Salinas country, and it is understood a thousand men could now find work there for three or four months.

SUNDAY, July 14th.—A grand Democratic ratification meeting took place here last night. The occasion called together the largest number of people ever assembled in Eastern Nevada. The streets and sidewalks were literally jammed with people. Bonfires blessed along all the principal streets and on the mountains to the eastward, and anvil artillery fired minute salutes. The meeting was addressed by Hon. F. Tilford, O. W. Baker, T. G. Edwards and others.

Wholesale Market Report.

MONTHLY REVIEW, SAN FRANCISCO.]
THURSDAY, July 11, 1872.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export only a moderate inquiry has existed, at a decline. We quote as follows: Extra at $4@4 12½, and superfine, at $4 @4@4 25; interior and Oregon brands—Extra at $4 @4@4 in sks $ 100 lbs.

WHEAT—The market has been quiet but firm, at a slight decline in prices, since our last weekly review. At the close we quote the range at $1 86@1 94 for new and $1 80@1 75 for old per 100 lbs.

BARLEY—The market has ruled firm for feeding at unchanged rates. For brewing demand has been limited at unchanged rates since our last weekly review. At the close we quote new and at $1 05@1 15; old, $1 00@1 07½ per ctl.

OATS—The market has remained quiet, at unchanged rates, during the past week. Ordinary to choice sold at $1 15@1 45 p 100 w., which is the range at the close.

HAY—The receipts have been fair during the past seven days, with a fair demand. Quotably at the close at $@@@ for ordinary wild oats choice wheat @ ton.

STRAW—Quotable at $@@@ 50 @ ½ for cargo lots in bales, as to condition.

CORN MEAL—Sales at $@@@ 75 @ 100 lbs from mill.

BRANS—We note a fair demand, at the following are the ruling rates: Bran, $15 @@ per ton; ½ do; small White and Pea, $1 50@1 60; Mixed Feed, $@ @ 00 lbs.

POTATOES—At the close we quote the range at $1 25@1 50 per ctl., as to quality.

ONIONS—Quotable at $@@@ per ctl.

WOOL—The market continues in an inactive state.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California fresh, 26@27½c; Fresh roll, 22@25c; pickled roll, 18@20c; Mixed, 18@20c; Oregon, 18@20c; Canada—California, 18@19c; Eastern 18@19c.

CHEESE—California, 10@12½c; Eastern 12½@13c.

EGGS—California, 20c @ dozen; Eastern 18@22½c @ dozen; Canada, @@@ @ dozen.

HAMS—California at 13@13½c @ lb; Other, none in the market; Eastern 13½@13½c @ lb.

BACON—California, at 11½@12c @ lb; Oregon, 11½ @12c; Eastern unassorted breakfast, 14@15c; do clear 13@14c.

LARD—California, 12½@13½c @ tin @ lb; 1 second do, 11½@12c; Eastern, 13½@13½c; Tin cans 14@14½c; do in kegs, 12@13c.

FRESH MEATS.

BEEF—For first quality, we cite @ lb; 1 second do, @@7; third do @@@c @ lb.

VEAL—@@@ @ lb.

MUTTON—@@@c @ lb.

LAMB—@@@ @ lb.

PORK—Dressed, grain-fed, @@@c; corn @, grain fed, @@@c @ lb.

POULTRY AND GAME.

TURKEYS—Live, @@@c @ lb; Dressed, @@@c @ lb.

GEESE—Live, $@@ @ pair; Dressed, @@@c @ lb.

DUCKS—Tame at $@@@ @ dozen.

CHICKENS—Live, $@@ @ dozen; Dressed, @@@c @ lb.

PIGEONS—@@@ @ dozen.

RABBITS—@@@ @ dozen.

HARE—@@@ @ each.

QUAIL—@@@ @ dozen.

VENISON—@@@c @ lb.

GRASS—Tame, $1@@@2 each.

TURKEYS—@@@ @ lb.

SNIPE—@@@ 50 @ dozen.

Prussia and the Centre.

Of late a very curious amount of journalistic activity has been noticed a perfectly new direction. Basing themselves on the possibility of the Pope's sudden demise, certain persons, not all Italo-Prussian-official, are busying themselves with the German Empire's propagandist views to the effect that in the future no one is to have election of a successor to Pius IX., Prussia would see her influence restored. German prelate, by using her veto in the approaching of the assembled Cardinals M. de Bismarck gives forth that the Italian Pope possesses the right of veto, which for nearly belonged to Austria, as the Emperor of Holy Roman Empire, which ceased to exist sixty years and more ago. The Augsburg Gazette informed us that, after a long since, "that for centuries, upp the time of Gregory VII., no Pope's election was valid without the permission of the German Emperors. M. de Bismarck thus presents to claim rights of the same character as those which, in ancient times, the Emperors of Germany had over the Popes, but these Empires were Catholic, but the new Empire of Germany is Protestant and essentially anti-Catholic. Moreover if M. de Bismarck claims the privilege, that namely belonged to Austria, as the Emperor of Holy Roman Empire, which ceased to exist sixty years and more days ago, the Augsburg Gazette informed its readers, that the Italian Pope possesses the right of veto, which for nearly belonged to Austria, as the Emperor of Holy Roman Empire, which ceased to exist sixty years and more days ago, and then abandoned by the Emperor of Austria, as the time of Gregory VII., no Papal election was valid without the permission of the German Emperors. M. de Bismarck thus presents to claim rights of the same character as those which, in ancient times, the Emperors of Germany had over the Popes, but these Empires were Catholic, but the new Empire of Germany is Protestant and essentially anti-Catholic. Moreover if M. de Bismarck claims the privilege, that namely

Mr. Crowe. "My friend, Mr. Scully, the respected landlord of this interesting property, is not the person to interfere harshly or rudely with the legitimate rights of man, woman, or child. I will see him, on the spot."

So saying, Mr. Crowe, with a tremendous air of virtuous indignation, led his friend Sadlier into the house.

"I have been listening to you," said Scully, grasping the hands of his guests, as all three burst into a roar of laughter. "O Willum, Willum, why are you not a Judge?

"What are you going to do with those wretches outside?" asked Crowe. He held the petit serve of Cogsac his host had handed him near his lips, and eyed his benefactor with seraphical complacency.

"Evict them, of course, my dear Willum," said Scully.

"I fancy—hee, hee—that George Henry will have a row in the House over the matter," interrupted Sadlier. "He's a smart man."

"Paht that for him!" sneered Scully. "He's like the Scotch minister in one of the romances Orkneys, who used to offer public prayer for the good of his people, and the people of the adjacent islands of Great Britain and Ireland. Why don't you laugh, John?"

"Because I see nothing to laugh at, and besides that I don't think laughing any part of the business of life."

"A man may be funny and yet do well. He may make money, and all that, and yet crack his joke. Crowe said this. By the way, Sadlier, take out a bailiff and should give you a pain in the head some fine morning."

"That would be an inhuman proceedhee, hee," remarked Sadlier.

"Here's a man who protests against ejectments," cried Scully, talking of being shot. I have a letter here from the parish priest, Father Power, in which he an warned that there is nothing impossible in my killing a victim to the relief of an landlords. Very good of the priest, isn't it?" continued Mr. Scully. "He knows that my removal from the property where I am would represent a deficit in his Easter dues."

They sat down to dinner. Mr. Scully's hospitality was profuse; his wine was sacculent, his humor charming. Only thirty years of age, he enjoyed the most glorious abundance of spirit which deserts most men when they attain that critical turning point in one's life. He was good-looking and not ill-framed, but there was a cruel, hard glint of selfishness in his eye that first startled and then repelled you.

"Are you going to turn those people waiting all day?" asked Sadlier.

"Look how long I've been sending," interposed Crowe, "and those poor beach me complaints!"

"I don't see why I should bother myself about them, John," replied Scully. "I want my land; they want it, too. In such cases the weaker party must go to the wall, and, as I do not happen to be the weaker party, I have no idea of going there."

"Good!" remarked Crowe, on whom the port had by this time asserted a characteristic superiority. "Oh, to hear me preach about old Lamy Peppergrass! Why, about Tenant Right and the other Rights of Ireland! Why, man, I'd make the world turn round the same across the table! And his daughter!"

"Don't say one ill word about her," said Scully, with fierceness in his manner. "She is an angel to the poor."

Crowe roared with the air in his lungs at such extravagance.

"How is the building of nagles? that's an improvement on the devil quoting Scripture, at any rate. And talking about goodness of heart, I've met plenty of landlords, who do the angels or the poor think about you? Not they. Why, I'm one of them, isn't right. Neither do I. Sixty people being turned out on the world, and the man who prevents them and turn swearing about angels. Scully! Scully! we may be rogues—and we are—but let us keep up some show of decency."

"A letter from Mr. Grumby, sir," said the servant, Bridget Scully, bringing the epistle on a salver. "The boy's at the door, sir, waiting for the answer."

"Tell him to say I'll call in the morning," said Scully, as he threw the letter into the grate. "I'm to be shot—Why, I was about to say—

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 3.

1872

28—Sunday—Tenth Sunday after Pentecost.
29—Monday—St. Martha, Virgin. St. Felix and others, Martyrs.
30—Tuesday—St. Abdon, Citizen and Virtue, Martyrs, and Innocent, Pope and Confessor. St. Abdon and Sennen, Martyrs.
31—Wednesday—St. Ignatius of Loyola, Confessor, Founder of the Jesuits.
1—Thursday—St. Peter's Chains.
2—Friday—St. Alphonsus Liguori, Bishop, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.
3—Saturday—Finding of the body of St. Stephen.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
PUBLISHED AT
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....JULY 27, 1872.

THE AUFFRAY CASES.

On Saturday last the cases of Allis vs. Auffray for assault with a deadly weapon, and Auffray vs. Ansbro for libel, were disposed of in the Police Court before Judge Louderback. The result was just that which might have been anticipated by those who heard or read the evidence given on the first day, 13th inst. The Professor has been acquitted of the assault; Ansbro has been held to answer for libel with bail fixed at five thousand dollars; and Allis, indicted for perjury, who was surrendered by his first bondsmen, Messrs. Kelly and Robinson, is again at liberty —thanks to the friendship of Messrs. P. Donahue, John Reardon, B. H. Keeney and W. B. Jourdan. Before we record any further, in our comments on these singular trials, we wish to declare that, in our opinion, the decisions pronounced by the Judge were eminently just and righteous—at all events as far as Allis is concerned.

It certainly did appear strange that in the first case, Allis vs. Auffray, where the whole matter at issue was the simple question of fact, viz.: Did, or did not, the Professor present a pistol at the head of the private detective? Judge Louderback should allow evidence to travel so far outside the record as to deal with the character and antecedents of the complainant. But since the ends of justice have undoubtedly been served by the introduction of these irrelevant topics, and the true character of Mr. Thomas Allis has been disclosed thereby, we are strongly inclined to approve that which we would at first have condemned as a blunder. The great private detective's account of himself and his wanderings across the ocean, between America, Ireland and Australia, was so strange, contradictory and improbable; his recollection of events which no human being could forget was so astonishingly vague and indistinct, that no intelligent person could attach any value whatever to his oath.

We fancy we are dealing very charitably indeed with him and his witnesses when we admit the possibility of a mistake as to identity lying at the bottom of all the swearing about the Professor and his "wife" having figured in Melbourne under the names of Miranda de Pressian, and Pamela Woodward. Other people would, perhaps, characterize the tale as one manufactured out of whole cloth, and supported with the most reckless perjury, but we prefer to put a less criminal meaning upon it to avoid the risk of committing an injustice. We must say, too, that, according to our judgment, the attempt to identify the Professor with the man styled Miranda the Prussian was so stupid and wretched an imposition as could well be imagined. Leaving the question of age aside altogether, it was an utter impossibility that Auffray could pass for or be taken for the "Prussian" in a country like Australia, where German colonists are so numerous. Again, the only Miranda known in Melbourne and Sydney was not as Allis represented a strolling pick-pocket, whose greatest professional achievement was the theft of a watch, but one of the cleverest, most audacious and successful confidence operators that ever lived. And so far from being a character, consorting with thieves and prostitutes, he was so thorough an aristocrat that the proudest officials in Australia thought it an honor to be recognized with him, and as good as a patent of nobility to keep his company. So unless there were two Mirandas, one a contemptible pick-pocket and the other a "highstoned" swindler, Mr. Allis' story has an extremely "shaky" appearance. On the whole we believe we may safely congratulate the Australian colonies upon having been spared the infliction of the presence of such dubious personages as Mr. Professor Auffray and the "Escaped Nun."

Now, as far as the assault alleged to have been committed by the Professor on Allis is concerned, we consider it to have been fairly and legally proven, and therefore cannot agree in the Judge's acquittal of the defendant. For, admitting that Ansbro, Allis and the clerk, Walsh, would perjure themselves to establish their case, there was still the testimony of two independent and unimpeached witnesses, Mr. P. Troy and Mrs. Linscott, and in law and equity it should outweigh the declaration made by the Professor. These two persons swore emphatically and distinctly that they saw Auffray holding a revolver pointed at the head of the complainant, and there was no reason shown why they should not have been believed. Against the oaths of four persons, Ansbro, Walsh, Troy and Mrs. Linscott (we throw Allis aside as worthless), the two latter having no interest whatever to state a falsehood, Judge Louderback sustained the assertions of Auffray made to save himself from prison. Giving all due weight to the discrepancies existing between the statements of these witnesses, and acknowledging the elements of suspicion denoted by the lapse of time between the alleged committal of the assault, and the date of the warrant for the apprehension of the defendant—in short, regarding all the circumstances in the most favorable light possible for the "husband of the Nun"—we are still strongly of opinion that the verdict was a wrong one, and would not be endorsed by the Superior Courts.

We shall make no comments upon the libel case, Auffray vs. Ansbro, because it is yet pending, and we do not feel justified in making any pronouncement. Judge Louderback merely acted as a committing magistrate so that the truth or falsehood, wantonness or justification, of the presumed libel still remains to be demonstrated. Until a legal decision is arrived at we shall not discuss the matter, so we shall give neither party grounds for complaint.

DISTINGUISHED VISITOR.

On Monday last, about eleven o'clock in the forenoon, THE MONITOR office was honored by the presence of a very distinguished visitor. Mr. William C. Auffray was kind enough to take the trouble of coming to inform us of the highly interesting fact that he proposed instituting proceedings against us for libel. In a manner "childlike and bland" the great professor of ancient and modern languages declared he expected to make us pay five thousand dollars as a small solution to the wounded feelings of the guileless Edith. He generously acknowledged that he had not read the articles upon which the prosecution was to be based, and consequently could not tell whether they were libelous or not. But some obliging friend had perused them, and told him of their nature; and in consequence of the information thus received he proposed to sue us. The husband of the "Escaped" was disposed to be communicative. He assured the gentleman whom he interviewed, Mr. Lyons, one of the proprietors of this journal, that he either had brought or intended to bring similar actions against some Western newspapers, and particularized the Western Cult as having already apologized "like a coward." Professor Auffray, Professor felt hurt at being thus unanswered out of magnificent dungages, and could not help indulging in this bitter taunt. As comfort for the affliction we beg leave to assure him that The Monitor has not the remotest intention of apologizing for anything it has said about him or the Nun. He has our full permission to go ahead if he fancy the prospects of getting five thousand dollars, or any portion thereof, are sufficiently encouraging. The usual and proper method of conducting intimation of intention to commence a suit at law is, we believe, by means of a lawyer's letter. Why the Professor should come himself we do not know, unless, indeed, he wished to get kicked into martyrdom. Some time ago we saw one in London paper an account of an indriet who made a literary business of lling himself in the way of carte, cabs and carriages, getting run over, and then threatening actions at law to recover compensation for his injuries. Many of his victims preferred giving him a few pounds to facing the annoyance of a trial, and thus the honest and enterprising fellow managed to "make both ends meet." It may be that Professor Auffray has improved upon this plan. By coming personally to declare intention of commencing suit he deliberately puts himself in the power of getting soundly thrashed for his impudence. In case he got his deserts of course he would have his action for assault and battery, as well as the libel venture, and would be thus doubly fortunate. If this be his plan of suggesting the law case business, and making a living for himself, we cannot compliment him upon it. It is too risky. Le jeu ne vaut pas la chandelle. That is better French than esse has signo our learned friend, and the Professor will understand it.

THE RATIFICATION MEETING.

The Greeley and Brown ratification meeting held in this city, on Monday evening, was a most unmistakable expression of popular will. It was numerously attended; it comprised a large body of our best known and most influential citizens; the enthusiasm was unanimous, it was both manly and outspoken in avowal of principle and policy. In every sense of the word, therefore, it was a thorough and most gratifying success. There was a marked contrast between it and the Grant and Wilson meeting which had taken place some time before. The latter had about it all the characteristics of a "got up" affair, and was in consequence both lame and spiritless. There was neither heart nor soul in it, and it made no impression whatever upon the people. So thoroughly "stale, flat and profitable," failing, that the sort of deification that it was scarcely mentioned the day after it occurred. It created as little popular excitement as the three minute dash of a Pacific Railway buggy horse, to use the simile wellest understood by the individual in whose honor and for whose advantage the affair was organized. Perhaps the friends of the present administration do not care very much about popular enthusiasm and trust more to the power of greenbacks to carry their candidates through the contest. No doubt it would be an easy matter to take eight, ten, or twenty millions of dollars from thesaddled taxpayer, and apply them to the subsidising of the press, the maintenance of stump orators and the purchase of votes when the proper time came, and so manipulate the public accounts that it would be almost impossible to detect the fraud. Yet, we believe that the people are so ineffably disgusted with the dishonesty, incompetency, and meanness of the present Administration, that it would take ten times more money than could possibly be stolen to buy the freelection of General Grant.

But to return to the Greeley ratification meeting in which we are more deeply interested. The assemblage in Platt's Hall on Monday evening was of quite another class, and actuated by other motives than those of office-seekers. He is a poor thinker at best who can discover in such an enthusiastic audience nothing except a desire to have the partition of the Government loaves and fishes. That is truly a miserable way of accounting for the patriotism and devotion to principle exhibited, and could only be imagined by the selfish and mercenary politicians who are living in luxury upon the plunder of the people, in very many cases, men of high lineage and large fortune are doing the drudgery of ordinary clerks, for the good of their respective communes, and in order to hold the power of defending religion and liberty. I might cite among those near Lyons, and who are personally known to me—the Counts Charles De St. Victor, Philippe De Lacroix, Sonnay, Gabriac, the Marquis de Fenoyl D'Albon, etc.—of whom the leading men in the province of the Rhone, and who, since the 4th of September have vested themselves to the religious and political regeneration of their country, as thou-ands of their fellow-rywhile-s are doing at every sacrifice all over France. These men have all near relations in the Chamber of Deputies; and, more over, in the Senate, and also in the Council of the Ponti-ical Zouaves, and since on the Loire, or at Belfort; and the same tripple work is carried on in the Senate, the Chamber and military men, bound by family ties and a common interest to the rest of the province In a more or less degree, and will offer a tremend-ous resistance to the revolution when the time comes. It is this strongest human hope for the reconstruction of France, and the return of the Count de Chambord to the throne of his ancestors, Saint Louis Philippe. The decadence of France date from the hour when, rejecting Christianity and royalty in the same breath, she seated the son of an atheist suicide on the throne of St. Louis.

Nothing can be stronger, or more spelling, than the sort of delirium that seems once more to have taken possession of men's minds in France. It is the old headstrong course: Quos Deus vult perdere prius dementat, that seems to be settling on us. May not Christiana hope, on the other hand, that when man's intelligence seems utterly blinded, God's guidance will be the more manifest, and the confusion of mind not only for the fall, but the resurrection of many? It is only in the supernatural that we can find the explanation of the events of the last two years; and that view granted, we cannot doubt that God will in his own hour save the nation which His mother has favored with three signal apparitions—Salette, Lourdes and Pontmain—in the last twenty years. Gesta Dei per Francos is so completely a part of the tradition of Christendom, that it is only an infidel or a Protestant who can doubt of the destiny of the eldest daughter of the Church, whatever be her passing reverses.

The present moment, however, is a terrible one. Any peace may fix the throne from one sad of France to the other. The truth is that we are in the presence of two extremes, or as French writers say, Debacle—the "no man's land," of moderatism, conciliation and its countless political ingenious exile no longer. It has been cut from under our feet by the rapid succession of events, and by the superior energy of the Red Republicans. The Legitimists alone have from the beginning understood and faced the realities, and all men could do to save their country they have done, and done nobly. Had they not been hampered by an office and cowardly bourgeoisie, and sot disant Conservatives, ready to accept any form of government rather than risk their quiet enjoyments, they would long since have raised the drapeau blanc, and saved France by a Christian monarchy, leaving it in alliance and the prestige of contiguities. It is but little known in England how large and active a part the royalist country gentlemen were obliged to take, and are still taking, in the reconstruction, as well as the defence of France. Every where Legitimists have come forward as mayors and councillors of country districts; and here, in very many cases, men of high lineage and large fortune are doing the drudgery of ordinary clerks, for the good of their respective communes, and in order to hold the power of defending religion and liberty. I might cite among those near Lyons, and who are personally known to me—the Counts Charles De St. Victor, Philippe De Lacroix, Sonnay, Gabriac, the Marquis de Fenoyl D'Albon, etc.—of whom the leading men in the province of the Rhone, and who, since the 4th of September have vested themselves to the religious and political regeneration of their country, as thou-ands of their fellow-rywhile-s are doing at every sacrifice all over France. These men have all near relations in the Chamber of Deputies; and, moreover, in the Senate, the Council of the Ponti-ical Zouaves, and since on the Loire, or at Belfort; and the same tripple work is carried on in the Senate, the Chamber and military men, bound by family ties and a common interest to the rest of the province In a more or less degree, and will offer a tremend-ous resistance to the revolution when the time comes. It is this strongest human hope for the reconstruction of France, and the return of the Count de Chambord to the throne of his ancestors, Saint Louis Philippe. The decadence of France date from the hour when, rejecting Christianity and royalty in the same breath, she seated the son of an atheist suicide on the throne of St. Louis.

Nothing can be stronger, or more spelling, than the sort of delirium that seems once more to have taken possession of men's minds in France. It is the old headstrong course: Quos Deus vult perdere prius dementat, that seems to be settling on us. May not Christiana hope, on the other hand, that when man's intelligence seems utterly blinded, God's guidance will be the more manifest, and the confusion of mind not only for the fall, but the resurrection of many? It is only in the supernatural that we can find the explanation of the events of the last two years; and that view granted, we cannot doubt that God will in his own hour save the nation which His mother has favored with three signal apparitions—Salette, Lourdes and Pontmain—in the last twenty years. Gesta Dei per Francos is so completely a part of the tradition of Christendom, that it is only an infidel or a Protestant who can doubt of the destiny of the eldest daughter of the Church, whatever be her passing reverses.

The present moment, however, is a terrible one. Any peace may fix the throne from one sad of France to the other. The truth is that we are in the presence of two extremes, or as French writers say, Debacle—the "no man's land," of moderatism, conciliation and its countless political ingenious exile no longer. It has been cut from under our feet by the rapid succession of events, and by the superior energy of the Red Republicans. The Legitimists alone have from the beginning understood and faced the realities, and all men could half-penny loaves, sold for a penny, of a three hooped pot with ten hoops, and of a penny of drinking small beer. "All realm shall be in common, and in realm shall my palfry go to grass." Mr. Cade's commonwealth there was to be "no money." In Mr. Mooney's, on the contrary, a paper circulation of £2,000,000. Reading and writing were to be at discount in the old British Utopia; but Mr. Mooney commonwealth without which he has not these accomplishments will be null. Such schemes we are obliged to believe, are sadly like loose generalizations in dialectics. Perhaps the priest, who can only mumble Latin in stage plays; but we are hardly near Gonzalez's republic just yet. Mr. Mooney has a good head as well as a sharp tongue, we have no doubt. The other night a meeting was held in London to promote an association of the rulins of Palestine. Mr. Mooney was the subject in the chair when the Archbishop of York in the course of a speech, in which he spoke of everything was going on in a manner of solemn routine, blew up Jesuits and Protestants in Hanover know that their days will come next, and that a policy of Intidel Militarism will crush Bible Christianity and Catholic Dogma alike out of the business.

Secularism and the negation of God enforced by bayonets is the present system of the Chancellor, and at Rome he hopes to put pressure on the Conclave in concert with Austria and Italy to obtain the election of a Cardinal he would wring concession from, or failing this of an Antipope. To Germany the ruins of Catholicism is no secret and it is awakening them from their slumber, and forcing them into action for the weal of the church, no longer as a local matter but as an interest which is at the present hour the gravest and the most personal that can exist for Christians. The insolent triumphs of the vie civile and the guilt that they cost the Pope, was attacked by four armed men in the streets, robbed himself and his own umbrella for some time, till some friends came up and rescued him. His wife is sister of the Baroness Rothergerdt, and was pursued into her own house by one of the assassins and only saved by the door being forcibly shut in his face. His death, while it relieves them of a civil suit, deepens into the guilt that they have incurred by the accident, and that this year there is not the slightest reason to fear that any repetition of the troubles will take place. Of course, if they obey the commands of their religion they will keep the peace with all men and more especially with their own countrymen. I was at first sorry that my friends would not permit me to address the lecture, but my health has been so shaken by this journey to Memphis that it is now impossible for me to go, and now I find there was never need of any such address. The Irish are more kindly disposed to each other than ever they were at home. Yon know, of course, that the whole influence of the priesthood is always in favor of peace and law and order, and this of itself should be enough to prevent all trouble. If anybody shall be so ungrateful as to make a row in procession through your streets I am told they have a right to, and if anyone feels insulted thereby, sure, by the way to redress it is not by any personal violence, but by peaceable legislative action, and there is no doubt but that such will be the course taken. I am sure I may assure you positively that there will be no fight or anything like it on the part of our people in this city; and I am heartily glad to be able to give this assurance. The continuous labors of the Father since his arrival in this country have evidently told upon his health. He does not look like a well man. His jaded, haggard appearance is enough to justify the gravest fears of the physicians as to his recurring for some time to come.—N. Y. Herald.

The next session of the Academy of Notre Dame, Maryville, will commence on the 31 of September.

M. J. GARVEY & SON, Main street, near Mission Hall, Stockton, are the exclusive agents for THE MONITOR in Stockton.

THE EXILES.

The Central Relief Committee held meeting last evening at Hibernia Hall, and was largely attended by our people. The following named gentlemen were elected delegates to the Committee: M. M. Sullivan, Jas. Kelly, Richard Tobin, J. Broderick, James Callahan, William Sherin, John A. Coffey, C. Farrell, D. Scanlan, J. N. Adams, John Judge, D. Dougherty, R. E. Metfill, John Bulger, Cummings, M. Dolan, John A. Lellen, Thomas Scherreback, Lawrence Nolan, John Walters, J. H. Merrill, Patrick Connolly, P. R. Burmingham, Hugh S. Murphy, James Barrett, P. Hoey, George O'Connor and T. C. Mayer. The Secretary stated that Mr. Nunan, of the Hibernia Brewery, had already given six barrels of ale for the picnic.

Judge Cooney moved that the secretary be instructed to send a communication to the Archbishop asking him to send a communication to the Catholic churches announcing the picnic.

AN APPEAL.

On motion of Mr. Donahoe, it was resolved that the Donation Committee add to the following in the newspapers a call for contributions:

"The undersigned having been appointed by the Central Relief Committee a solicit donations for the relief of the destitute Franciscan and Dominican Fathers who are expelled by the Government of the Revolutionary Government, on account of their religion, appeal to the people through the press of this city, that the opportunity for charity is a worthy one. Persons desiring to contribute articles for the fancy fair, or articles for the Bazaar, in order to enable the Committee to successfully carry on the object of their appointment, on the first opportunity. Mr. Howard has just returned from a visit to Europe, and the Orleans Princes to minister to the wants of their exiled countrymen, I was at first sorry that my brethren would not permit me to address the lecture, but my health has been so shaken by this journey to Memphis that it is now impossible for me to go, and now I find there was never need of any such address. The Irish are more kindly disposed to each other than ever they were at home. Yon know, of course, that the whole influence of the priesthood is always in favor of peace and law and order, and this of itself should be enough to prevent all trouble. If anybody shall be so ungrateful as to make a row in procession through your streets I am told they have a right to, and if anyone feels insulted thereby, sure, by the way to redress it is not by any personal violence, but by peaceable legislative action, and there is no doubt but that such will be the course taken. I am sure I may assure you positively that there will be no fight or anything like it on the part of our people in this city; and I am heartily glad to be able to give this assurance. The continuous labors of the Father since his arrival in this country have evidently told upon his health. He does not look like a well man. His jaded, haggard appearance is enough to justify the gravest fears of the physicians as to his recurring for some time to come.—N. Y. Herald.

THE next session of the Academy of Notre Dame, Maryville, will commence on the 31 of September.

M. J. GARVEY & SON, Main street, near Mission Hall, Stockton, are the exclusive agents for THE MONITOR in Stockton.

Orangemen Interviewed by the "Irish people's" Reporter.

On Friday last our reporter visited the Orange Lodges and interviewed some of the leaders of that gang.

The veracity the answers of the Orangemen will be apparent in our readers.

Paterson Tess, Marshal of Prince of Orange Lodge, in answer to our reporter, said that the Orange Organization was in existence in this country six years; that the Association is in every respect a secret one.

Q. Were you an Orangeman in the old country?

A. I was. I always regarded William of Orange as our liberator.

Q. Mr. Tess, I presume you are a very religious man?

A. I am. I read the Bible every day.

Q. How many Orangemen were there in the procession to-day?

A. Six thousand! It took full half an hour to pass a given point.

Q. Were the Orangemen armed to-day?

A. They had no arms but those which every citizen should carry for his own protection.

Q. Are you aware that there is a law against carrying concealed firearms?

A. Yes; but 'tis done.

At this point Mr. John McGee, the Grand Marshal, interrupted Mr. Tess, and ordered him to give no further information to our reporter. McGee looked daggers as everyone around him, and made it a point to call our attention to his appearance, which was nothing more nor less than a miniature coffin, "I will not," said McGee, "allow any more of my men to be interviewed by a detator to-day."

So soon as the wrath of the valiant Grand Marshal had subsided, and that he wiped the dirty froth from the waxed brustles under his nose, I took him in hand and elicited the following replies from him:

Q. Do you know, Mr. McGee, whether there were any foreigners in the procession to-day any men from other States or from Canada?

A. I don't know. There may have been a few, but I could not say whether there were one or fifty.

Q. How many did it take the procession to pass a given point, Mr. McGee?

A. I've told you already—didn't it?

Q. Is your Association a secret one, with oaths, signs, grips and pass words?

A. It is; and we are bound by our oath to oppose, even at the risk of our lives everything that belongs to Popery.

Q. Is it true that since you have split the Dublin Orangemen have been totally disorganized in the most furious manner, ripping the most shocking blasphemies, and threatening to "exhaust" all reporters out of the window—and finally addressing the latter personally, he said:

"I know you, you Devil's—Papist son of a bitch! I'll be able to give this hump like you before and I shot the Popish sneak, too."

Such this Orange ruffian had finished his harangue he was hustled down stairs by the brethren to "thjuse up" in an adjoining room.

Mr. McGee meanwhile assured me that I was safe, for that he would not permit me to be thrown out of the window because it would bring discredit on the Order. I was pleased to hear it, though it was the first time that I ever had the questionable honor of being under the protection of a McGee, and I'll never be in the employment of a "Irish people's" Reporter.

Society for the Propagation of the Faith.

We have been favored with the Pastoral of Mgr. Gastaldi, Archbishop of Turin, His Grace was well-known in England and Ireland for many years as a zealous and eloquent missionary priest of the Order of Charity.

We give the following extract on the origin and success of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith:

"The sacred year will bring with it, on the Feast of the Holy Ghost, the fiftieth anniversary of the institution for the Propagation of the Faith.

In the year 1822, a pious young lady of Lyons, desirous of seeing the Holy Catholic faith propagated throughout the world, invited some of her companions to form a society among themselves with a view to providing missionaries with the requisite means for preaching the faith among idolatrous nations, deciding that each one at the same time to contribute weekly a small sum of money for this purpose, and every day to invoke the divine blessing on those Apostolic men in a short ejaculatory prayer. The infant society was called into being on the third of May, in honor of the august and sacred standard of the Cross, whereon Jesus Christ, elevated for the salvation of mankind, and which was discovered on that day by St. Helen, the Mother of the first Christian Emperor—Constantine the Great. God showered His grace abundantly on this pious undertaking, and with propriety it may be likened, according to the parable of our Divine Redeemer, to a grain of mustard seed, that grew up vigorously and became a great tree, whose branches literally overshadow the whole earth, and whose holy and hospitable shade thousands of zealous missionaries have found repose and millions of heretics and idolators the grace of conversion.

The throne of St. Peter was occupied at that time by the Sovereign Pontiff Pius VII. That rare example of firmness and endurance, to whom our forefathers gave convincing proofs of their veneration and love, when dragged captive from Rome by Napoleon I, and when subsequently he returned in triumph to Rome after an exile of many years. As soon as the formation of the association reached the ears of this saintly old man, he gave thanks to God for the holy thought, took it under his protection, enriching it with many indulgences. All the Pontiffs who have governed the Catholic Church, Leo XII., Pius VIII., Gregory XVI., and the angelic Pius IX., all, without exception, have made it a duty to promote this great work, adding new favors to those already granted, and recommending it to all Patriarchs, Archbishops, Bishops and Abbots, in order that they might distribute among all pastors sent in the dioceses and regions over which they hold jurisdiction. And indeed the Patriarchs, Archbishops and Abbots, invested with power in virtue of the obedience they owe to the Roman Pontiff, or through an ardent desire on their part to cooperate in propagating the faith, have repeatedly exhorted their flocks to enroll themselves as members of this holy association. Aided thus by such authoritative protectors, the association has increased marvellously, and now, with full fifty years of life, may well cast a glance behind, and with holy complacency contemplate the many abundant fruits of its labors, which have far and away surpassed the most sanguine expectations.

When this eminently Christian undertaking was in its infancy, the Holy Catholic Church, confined within a few, and those bound; she lay concealed, unable to make one single step in advance. In the United States, Canada, China and Siam, despite the long and bloody persecutions which they had to suffer, there existed in their midst only maintains her ancient conquests, but is ever gaining new ones. And in Japan, which persecution even to blood, the Catholic faith begins to flourish anew on the ashes of its martyrs. Australia displays on her shores, churches, bishops and priests in great number, and Oceania, scarcely an island in the ocean which covers two-thirds of the globe where priests and churches may not be found.

And for this stupendous progress of the faith, for this constant increase of the Catholic Church, to whom are we indebted. Undoubtedly we are indebted to those thousands of priests who, filled with apostolic courage, have renounced the comforts of the domestic hearth, together with their love of fatherland, who have boldly confronted the dangers and inconveniences inseparable from long voyages, and who, at a sacrifice of all they had dear, have hied away to foreign lands to diffuse the light of the gospel at a distance of five or six thousand miles, or even more from their native land. We are indebted also to the thousands of Sisters of St. Vincent of Paul, of the Sacred Heart of the Holy Family, and of the other religious orders, who, emulating the zeal of the priests, would be their companions, taking upon themselves the arduous task of directing the schools, the asylums, the orphanages, hospitals, and houses of refuge; and of purchasing infants and visiting the poor and infirm in their private houses. But who has furnished these magnanimous priests, and these heroines of religion and charity with the means required for undertaking their long journeys, and for building and maintaining the churches and schools and houses of mercy? This great Society of the Propagation of the Faith has in great measure done this, and for this reason it must be accounted as a wonderful instrument in the hands of God, and as such encouraged and assisted, and promoted by Catholics with all possible energy and zeal.

They who had the honor of sitting in the Vatican Council, beheld a praiseworthy feature, which perhaps was not to be seen in any preceding Œcumenical Council. We refer to the numerous assemblage of clergy, who had come from the remotest quarters of the globe, furnished, and from lands far, far away, where, prior to the formation of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, no Christian voice had not yet penetrated. What a sublime spectacle to behold! What an irrefragable proof of the Church's heaven-derived power! What a convincing argument of the divinity of that Society for the Propagation of the Faith! What a testimony against these perverse and foolish men, who persist in asserting that the Catholic Church is in her last agony. Never, on the contrary, did she exhibit to the world more life and vigor; never did she possess within her pale so vast a number of bishops and priests, who, filled with the divine word in its strictest acceptation, over every ocean, along every coast, across every mountain, through every place and in every nook and corner into every nation and tribe on earth, bearing the sacred banner of the standard of the Cross of Jesus. What solace, what joy to the Christian heart, downcast and afflicted by the sad spectacle of the shocking and piteous way where in the world is not more kindly disposed to each other than ever they were at home. Yon know, of course, that the whole influence of the priesthood is always in favor of peace and law and order, and this of itself should be enough to prevent all trouble. If anybody shall be so ungrateful as to make a row in procession through your streets I am told they have a right to, and if anyone feels insulted thereby, sure, by the way to redress it is not by any personal violence, but by peaceable legislative action, and there is no doubt but that such will be the course taken. I am sure I may assure you positively that there will be no fight or anything like it on the part of our people in this city; and I am heartily glad to be able to give this assurance. The continuous labors of the Father since his arrival in this country have evidently told upon his health. He does not look like a well man. His jaded, haggard appearance is enough to justify the gravest fears of the physicians as to his recurring for some time to come.—N. Y. Herald.

THE next session of the Academy of Notre Dame, Maryville, will commence on the 31 of September.

M. J. GARVEY & SON, Main street, near Mission Hall, Stockton, are the exclusive agents for THE MONITOR in Stockton.

Fearful Suicide by Drowning of Mr. Martin H. Carey.

With heartfelt sorrow we record the sad death, July 6th, of Mr. Martin Healey Carey, who, while laboring under mental derangement, leaped into the Liffey, near Essex Bridge, Dublin. All heroic efforts to save him, was proved. Mr. Carey was and bore with honor a commission as lieutenant in the Inner-Irish Company which was attached to the famous Irish Brigade through the recent French war.

Previously he had suffered as a severe pressure treatment so severe and relentless that he was forced out of prison by the stagnation—Irish Government as a result of which he was for years the subject of bitter taunts by his family and friends, how ever, he gradually recovered, mentally and physically, until eventually the effects of the dungeon torture disappeared. There can be little doubt that they would never have returned but for the fearful beating on the head which he received at the hands of the Central Committee, the Phœnix Park meeting and August. On that day a particular set seemed to be made on him. His head was severely battered in with police bludgeons, until he was carried off in gorge of blood, and for some time until the wounds on his head were healed; but it is now only too plain that the effects of the day's brutality had crowned the murderous fork of the prison cell—his mind was overthrown, and the dungeon scene once more apparently at times, the least redescent or a comparatively trifling excitement would be sufficient to render him unfit for business. Some such circumstance occurred last evening or the early morning, and the poor fellow rushed to his death. He does not look like a well man. His jaded, haggard appearance is enough to justify the gravest fears of the physicians as to his recurring for some time to come.—N. Y. Herald.

THE next session of the Academy of Notre Dame, Maryville, will commence on the 31 of September.

M. J. GARVEY & SON, Main street, near Mission Hall, Stockton, are the exclusive agents for THE MONITOR in Stockton.

THE GALWAY JUDGMENT.

QUEENSTOWN, July 1, 1872.

EDITOR CORK EXAMINER:—SIR: I beg to send you inclosed a letter from the Bishop which was to have been read at our meeting on Sunday, but was adjourned until two o'clock on next Sunday. You will wish to place this letter at once in the hands of your readers. Yours truly,

J. S. RICE.

QUEENSTOWN, June 30, 1872.

MY DEAR MR. RICE:—The enclosed five pounds have been forwarded to me from Clarksville, by the Rev. Dr. Croke, P.P. of V. G., as his subscription towards the Galway Election Fund. You are hereby requested to put down my name for five hundred pounds towards the same fund. For myself and for creed, the people and the priest of Ireland have, during centuries of trial, been united as if "they had but one heart and one soul." Attempts to weaken, from whatever quarter they may be made, will only strengthen the binding powers of the sacred link that unites them together. The lay gentlemen of the parish who have volunteered to move in this unpleasant duty, deserves all the aid and all the cooperation you can give them. Success is merited, and success will be achieved by experience, intelligence, and zeal, which they will be by the united efforts of a united people. I remain, my dear Mr. J. WILLIAM KEANE.

Bacon & Company
Formerly Towne & Bacon,
Have the largest office
Do the best work
More promptly
Than Any other
Printing firm.
You can prove it
By giving them a Job
At the well known Office,
536 Clay Street

THE SILKS.

The Central Relief Committee held meeting last evening at Hibernia Hall, and was largely attended by our people. The following named gentlemen were elected delegates to the Committee: M. M. Sullivan, Jas. Kelly, Richard Tobin, J. Broderick, James Callahan, William Sherin, John A. Coffey, C. Farrell, D. Scanlan, J. N. Adams, John Judge, D. Dougherty, R. E. Metfill, John Bulger, Cummings, M. Dolan, John A. Lellen, Thomas Scherreback, Lawrence Nolan, John Walters, J. H. Merrill, Patrick Connolly, P. R. Burmingham, Hugh S. Murphy, James Barrett, P. Hoey, George O'Connor and T. C. Mayer. The Secretary stated that Mr. Nunan, of the Hibernia Brewery, had already given six barrels of ale for the picnic.

Judge Cooney moved that the secretary be instructed to send a communication to the Archbishop asking him to send a communication to the Catholic churches announcing the picnic.

AN APPEAL.

On motion of Mr. Donahoe, it was resolved that the Donation Committee add to the following in the newspapers a call for contributions:

"The undersigned having been appointed by the Central Relief Committee a solicit donations for the relief of the destitute Franciscan and Dominican Fathers who are expelled by the Government of the Revolutionary Government, on account of their religion, appeal to the people through the press of this city, that the opportunity for charity is a worthy one. Persons desiring to contribute articles for the fancy fair, or articles for the Bazaar, in order to enable the Committee to successfully carry on the object of their appointment, on the first opportunity. Mr. Howard has just returned from a visit to Europe, and the Orleans Princes to minister to the wants of their exiled countrymen, I was at first sorry that my brethren would not permit me to address the lecture, but my health has been so shaken by this journey to Memphis that it is now impossible for me to go, and now I find there was never need of any such address. The Irish are more kindly disposed to each other than ever they were at home. Yon know, of course, that the whole influence of the priesthood is always in favor of peace and law and order, and this of itself should be enough to prevent all trouble. If anybody shall be so ungrateful as to make a row in procession through your streets I am told they have a right to, and if anyone feels insulted thereby, sure, by the way to redress it is not by any personal violence, but by peaceable legislative action, and there is no doubt but that such will be the course taken. I am sure I may assure you positively that there will be no fight or anything like it on the part of our people in this city; and I am heartily glad to be able to give this assurance. The continuous labors of the Father since his arrival in this country have evidently told upon his health. He does not look like a well man. His jaded, haggard appearance is enough to justify the gravest fears of the physicians as to his recurring for some time to come.—N. Y. Herald.

THE next session of the Academy of Notre Dame, Maryville, will commence on the 31 of September.

M. J. GARVEY & SON, Main street, near Mission Hall, Stockton, are the exclusive agents for THE MONITOR in Stockton.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL, SAN RAFAEL.

Annual Examination, Exhibition and Award of Premiums.

The annual examination of the boys of St. Vincent's orphan school, of San Rafael, was held yesterday at the Asylum, and the programme presented was particularly interesting and well carried out. The Asylum is situated among the foot-hills of the Coast Range, about five miles from San Rafael, and presents a very picturesque appearance, surrounded, as it is, by luxuriant foliage and groves of tall trees. The main building is a two-story frame, substantially built, and comprises three class rooms a study hall, 100x20 feet, large dormitories, and a wash hall 70x30 feet, besides parlors, dining-room, and sleeping-rooms for the preceptors and attaches of the establishment. Among the out buildings is a commodious dairy built of brick, a laundry and stables. The buildings are surrounded by neatly-kept gardens, and the entire establishment gives evidence of the fact that it is well conducted in every department, and that it is an institution worthy of general support. The Exercises yesterday were conducted in the study hall, where a large number of friends and visitors had assembled, besides the children of the school.

The exercises were conducted by John Mullany Esq., the Principal of the school, who was assisted unremitting in his duties toward the little orphans under his charge, by Mrs. Mullany and the Misses Mullany, the hours of 5 a. m. and 9 P. M. to the numerous cares which attend his position and the responsible duties of the profession, and aptitude displayed by the pupils under his tuition, Brother Isidore addressed the children and guests in a few very happy remarks, complimenting Rev. Father Bernard, the founder of the Asylum upon his careful management and supervision of the Institution, and in his pleasant and impressive manner, sensibly and instructively addressed the little ones before him.

A COLLATION.

From the study hall the guests repaired to the dining rooms, where a sumptuous repast had been spread, at which justice was done by all present, followed by a long drive and an appetite sharpened by long waiting. Among the guests present at the collation we noticed Grace Archbishop Alemany, Rev Father Sanchez, of Santa Barbara; Rev. Father Jansoone, of Los Angeles; Rev. Father Gallagher, Auden, Durkeen, King, Geary, Quahing, Foley, Donahoe, Quinn, Dogan, O'Brien, Cassidy, McCullough, Cayse, and Dole. Also Peter Donahue, Tyler Cottle, Wm. Scott, and Hon. Newton Booth, Governor of Utah, and wife; D. J. Oliver J. B. Oliver, James Miller, John Sullivan and at the same time to point out to them the way that leads to eternal bliss. This is true to all Patriarchs, Archbishops, Bishops and Abbots, in order that they might distribute among all pastors sent in the dioceses and regions over which they hold jurisdiction. And indeed the Patriarchs, Archbishops and Abbots, invested with power in virtue of the obedience they owe to the Roman Pontiff, or through an ardent desire on their part to cooperate in propagating the faith, have repeatedly exhorted their flocks to enroll themselves as members of this holy association. Aided thus by such authoritative protectors, the association has increased marvellously, and now, with full fifty years of life, may well cast a glance behind, and with holy complacency contemplate the many abundant fruits of its labors, which have far and away surpassed the most sanguine expectations.

When this eminently Christian undertaking was in its infancy, the Holy Catholic Church, confined within a few, and those bound; she lay concealed, unable to make one single step in advance. In the United States, Canada, China and Siam, despite the long and bloody persecutions which they had to suffer, there existed in their midst only maintains her ancient conquests, but is ever gaining new ones. And in Japan, which persecution even to blood, the Catholic faith begins to flourish anew on the ashes of its martyrs. Australia displays on her shores, churches, bishops and priests in great number, and Oceania, scarcely an island in the ocean which covers two

FATHER PETER CONWAY.

Queen guard, who, standing in the Field of God,
Unarmed and single-handed from the wolf
Who firmly held the then-besprinkled food
Which stirs the sheer edge of the shadowy gulf,
Whose hand goes down to us unshrivel'd yet,
Our trusting martyrdom's excruciated token!
And stirred with whitenesses and covered brave—

A holy mastery and a great heart broken.

Broken by savage sneer and obscene jest—
The cold and sharp brutalities of speech—
By one who, by the Lord's supreme behest,
Met gentleness and decency should teach. [bead—
Poor priest, meanwhile were heaped upon thy
The meanest it could—noblest slander,
That Truth will enumerate in't narrow bed:
For Truth is great, and nothing can withstand her.

Stopped all emotion—pent storm and hate—
But not past our affection—there last gone,
As through the splendor of one ex-pate zone,
The illimitable glow of higher dawn.
Whom shall no cruel jeer and slander smite—
It's labor of accustomed pains is over,
For thou art safe within the perfect light
Of the serene exalterless Brilliance.

He Judge shall wrong thee there—no heated scorn,
Bathed in the heated blood to overflow, [more Shall hurt thee: thou hast passed the verge of
On which the falsest heart at midnight pale
The tantling—the wretchedness of evils
Which hold our vague world, have fled thy seeing
Into the fullness of a perfect life.—
Into the glory of a never better.

Unscreen'd, unshored thee, where all others presided:
Save one friend of thee, whose name all unsay
One man's anxious conscience into fury blazed,
Thou thou hast fought—Faith hath kept her
And trust the path which Irish martyr's trod.
Hath, through the reaches of our tearful story—
Who hath the blood of heroes in his veins
The sacred highway that leads up to glory.

Go every the last sweet last beam shed:
Not yours alone the mission to bless
Who united in that could they share in thy lot—
The palm, the white robe and the diadem.
And thou, poor widow-mother pore of heart—
Hath in the peace of God, it'll not discernible
Which the only favored of heavenward start
Would'st to make the sensitive heart trembling.
Dublin Nation. J. F. O'D.

SUPPRESSION OF RELIGIOUS HOUSES.

ROME, June 22.

The audiences of congregations have continued all this week at the Vatican. The Roman nobility were received on Sunday, when of the whole number of old historic names but few were wanting besides the half-dozen shorn whose deduction to the Quirinal enough has been said. On Monday the Sacred College was received, there being about twenty-five Cardinals present, or nearly the whole number at present in Rome. The Noble Guard presented their homage the same day: and at another audience the officers of the Palatine and Swiss Guard, of all these undergone the Holy Father spoke with wonted energy; but the length of his Holiness' note in Cardinal Antonelli, which, it is said, will precisely by sending any summary of the addresses. This important document will serve to put to silence any gossip which has been forged into currency designed to lead the world in error, and Rome in particular, to imagine that any transactions were possible between the Vatican and the revolutionary Government.

Since the suppression of religious Orders in Rome, is not to be regarded by any means only in the light of a manifest injustice towards certain individuals, who have deserved better things at the hands of society, but rather as an attack on the international rights of the whole Catholic body.

It is a duty of gratitude, further, to point out that the oppression of religious houses in Rome would carry with it no little detriment to this Apostolic See, where their most distinguished members dedicate themselves to the work of safeguarding in its sacred minister, whether in rendering assistance to the different ecclesiastical congregations; or in affording information concerning the abilities candided to them, or giving themselves to deep study necessary for the refutation of errors and for tendering their advice upon various disciplinary questions concerning different churches.

Hence it appears clearly, my Lord Cardinal, what is the true scope held in view by the usurping Government in the promulgation of the Decree which was to be taken from us. Regardless that it was a patrimony with which the Roman Pontiffs were endowed in the admirable ordering of Divine Providence; possessed by them for ages with centuries under right and title the most sacred and legitimate, and that in the most sacred and legitimate, and that in truel for the benefit of the whole of Christendom.

Who is he that can keep up any illusion concerning the tendency of the Italian Government, as it does to the destruction of our authority and dignity, and to shackle us in the due exercise of the most sacred functions of our ministry? Yes, my Lord Cardinal, are witness day by day of the usurpations which are perpetrated, now under the pretext, now under another, to the detriment of religion, morality and justice. Usurpations, which all form part of it the one scheme of destruction. To what other end, if not this, can be directed the continual abstraction from under our authority of all the institutions of charity and beneficence, of the ecclesiastical establishments and lyceums which have ever been the prominent objects of the solicitude of the Roman Pontiffs for the good manners? To what other end, if not this, can be directed the unjust law which condemns to a forced military service youths dedicated to God, than cutting off the most promising hopes of the Church, and depriving the missionary and the cloister of an ample band of new laborers? To what end, if not this, is directed the unbridled license of teaching with impunity every kind of error, whether by means of the press or by a public and scandal-giving preaching by apostate and rebels from the Church? To what other end is the relaxation of manners, this license in public spectacles; these continued insults offered to sacred things and to the ministers of the Lord; these frequent processions of religious worship; this revelling in the blood of Christians, if not to mislead the unfortunate people, and charge them with the heavy chastisement of the anger of God? To what other end, if not this, is directed the unbridled system

TELEGRAPHIC JOTTINGS.

BOSTON, July 20.—Clement, the leader, and fifteen members of the Irish Band, left yesterday on their return to Ireland. The members who remain claim the title of the band. It is reported that they refused to forfeit their original band leader and have taken a new one, and will make a tour of the United States before they return to Ireland.

NEW YORK, July 20th.—It is reported that A. T. Stewart has given $50,000 to aid the children of Greeley.

Mr. Greeley resolutely declined to furnish money to sustain a newspaper in Washington saying "I do not consider that a legitimate political expenditure. If the people will not support a newspaper there favoring my election we must go on without as best we may."

It is reported that ex-President Johnson will make two or three Greeley speeches in North Carolina, replying especially to Secretary Boutwell.

RALEIGH (N. C.), July 18th.—Samuel G. Smith, colored Marshal of a Greeley and Brown rail-mass meeting, was attacked and beaten by some negroes last night, and was brought to a place of refuge in the police headquarters. He stayed there a short time and then started home, and has not been seen or heard of since.

Another colored Marshal of the same meeting was beaten and his life threatened by the negroes.

BOSTON, July 22.—A special from Washington to the Transcript states that Gunner has written a letter to Gardner Brewer, of Boston, coming out in favor of Greeley and BROWN, and against Grant strongly.

MEXICO.

MADRID, July 19th.—At midnight last night an attempt was made to assassinate the King and Queen of Spain. Their carriage was fired on. One of the assassins was killed and two were captured. The King and Queen are living here from the present day forward. The Prince of Asturias when the world-be assassins fired upon them. Neither was hurt, however. There is immense excitement in the city.

The marriage of the King and Queen occurred a party of men who were conservatively posted in the street. One of the gentlemen in the party was the Chief Constable of the royal party. The greatest precaution is expressed every where at the cowardly deed.

MADRID, July 19th.—The King and Queen attended at the Te Deum in the Royal Chapel. The King subsequently walked through the streets and was cheered enthusiastically by people of all classes manifesting to show their loyalty and sympathy for the royal family. A crowd has since taken the assassins out of jail and shot them, and a strong force of police prevented the crowd.

A judicial inquiry is actively progressing into the circumstances of the attempted assassination. There is no doubt that all connected with the crime will be dealt with according to the utmost rigor of the law.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The English press say that Judge Keogh went to Longford to speak on the 17th July. On the train Capt. Keogh, accompanied him. The train was preceded by a pilot engine and two hundred police. Hundreds of police were guarded every station on the route. At Longford the station was surrounded by police and thousands of people. Shots were heard during the night, and the Orangemen's carriages, which conveyed the Orangemen from the town after the meeting, were wrecked, but no demonstrations were made.

BRIEF CITY ITEMS.

A. O. H.—The Committee on General Arrangements met on Thursday evening, 18th inst., at Hibernia Hall, for the purpose of making the arrangements for the grand ball which will take place on the 15th of August. It is reported that they refused to forfeit their original band leader and have taken a new one, and will make a tour of the United States before they return to Ireland.

Foot race—rider in tournament—A gold medal, the gift of Col. Forbes, and a gold clarionet, the gift of Owen McMahon; won by Mr. Dunn.

Foot race—boys belonging to the city—for a hat, gift of Sullivan, Kelly & Co.; won by Michael Conway.

Foot race—boys under fourteen—first single prize, gold medal, gift of Mr. Thomas Cleary; won by J. Harrington.

Foot race—boys under fourteen—second prize, gold medal, gift of Jas. Hanley; won by Master Joseph Clapper, 324 Natoma O'Connor; won by Miss Sprague.

Foot race—boys under fourteen—third prize—to lady—A $12 dollar shawl, gift of Foley, Donnelly & Co.; won by Miss O'Neill.

To gentlemen—A silver butter dish, gift of Supervisor Meagher; won by Mr. Hanley, 324 Natoma street.

Foot race—boys under fourteen—gift of Mathew Nunan; won by Master Joseph Murphy, 324 Natoma street.

Note bene—A barrel of Cary's gift of Chas. J. Hendy; won by Thomas O'Neill.

Foot race—boys under fourteen—gift of Chas. Fay & Co. Somehow. The contest was won by a gift from Tyler Curtis, we were told, but the name escaped us, we should like to have rendered the donors.

On Monday afternoon, about 5 o'clock, a fire was discovered in the basement of the building occupied by Mr. Wm. Hall, at No. 128, corner of Sacramento and Leavenworth streets, which is owned by the Fire Department, which is detailed for that section of the city, responded; but when the arrived at the building the flames had they discovered that they were not needed in the vicinity, so they left their services were rendered to some two and a half hours beneath a mass of earth which had fallen from the hill in the rear, and a house, No. 1826 Sacramento street, where the men had been at work excavating. The damage to the house is about $1,000, and is in a short time extracted Michael Curry, one of the men, who was found to be in the basement of the house. He was taken to the Receiving Hospital, and dressing of the other men, who were also injured, was attended to. Curry, the other man, was taken out, but he was dead. In a few minutes afterwards, Mr. Coroner Coffey arrived at the Receiving Hospital, and impaneled a jury, who viewed the unfortunate corpse, was taken out, and he left.

EMMET GUARD.—At a special meeting of the Emmet Guard, Co. K, Third Infantry, held on Tuesday, 17th inst., the following newly-elected non-commissioned officers were elected: Quartermaster-Sergeant, M. Whelan; Color Sergeant, Edward Hartnett; Second Sergeant, Matthew Conlon; Third Sergeant, J. W. Nolan; Fourth Sergeant, William Hartnett; Fifth Sergeant, Jas. J. Grant. Corporals—John McInnis, Wm. Hartnett, Louis Davis, M. J. B. Dandrid, D. J. Driscoll, Tho. Reilly, P. Corrigan, James O'Brien. Secretary, W. J. Byrne; Treasurer, M. Meehan.

TO PREVENT RUNAWAYS.—Mr. A. Modden has invented a plan for the prevention of runaways, which he proposes to submit to the Board of Supervisors, and which, when made the use of the preventive contrivance. The plan is to have a bolt-rod fitted attached to the headpiece of a horse, passing down to the forehead alone, and fastened down over the eyes, and it is impossible to make the horse run.

CHRISTIAN BROTHERS.—The offices of the Register Clerks of the Third and Nineteenth District Courts, and the office of the Great Register, have been removed to the second floor of the City Hall—the rooms formerly occupied by the City Surveyor. The entrances to them is from the same hall as that into which the Probate Court opens.

The men employed by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, filling in the line of Illinois street, near the Potrero, ceased work on Friday last, about four o'clock in the afternoon, not owing to a strike, as has been reported, but to wages being discharged for a time—until further instructions shall be received from headquarters. A change in the formation of the dump, rendering it impossible to proceed on the present plans, is said to be the reason for this stoppage. The roads extending on the car track, on the left-hand side of the road, said to be dangerous, are in no worse condition than they have been during the last six months, but they will be examined by the overseer of the works.

MINING NEWS.

AMADOR.—The Ledger of the 20th says of the Union mine: "Work was commenced on this mine a few weeks ago under the superintendence of Mr. Williams. The hoisting works over the main shaft has been completed and the water drawn from the mine, and workmen are now engaged in taking out rock. Since the water has been taken from the mine work has been resumed upon the drift and a fine ledge of really valuable rock discovered."

CALAVERAS.—The Chronicle of the 20th says: "Ten tons of quartz taken from the San Bruno mine at Mosquito Gulch have recently been crushed in Harris' mill, at Sandy Gulch. The result showed an average yield of $70 per ton. There is a large quantity of a similar grade of ore in sight, but as much water has been encountered in the shaft that it will be difficult to obtain it."

FRESNO.—The Republican says of the Bachman Copper mine: This mine has been idle for two years until about three months ago, when it changed hands, and under its present management promises something good. One hundred tons of ore has been shipped with an average assay of sixteen per cent. copper. There are some thirty hands employed in and around the premises, and the number of buildings, etc., give the place an appearance of quite a lively place. There is considerable ore in sight, but how copper ore is in the immediate vicinity, and it will not be long before other mines will be in active operation.

NEVADA.—The Marysville Appeal of the 18th says that the miners at Campbellville, North San Juan, Sweetland, Buckeye, Forest City, French Corral, etc., are doing well. Generally they have plenty of water, and the mines never yielded better. The strike made in Bald Mountain, near Forest City, some months since seems to be permanent, the gravel developing into a perfect lead of great richness. Forest City is rapidly improving and begins to assume again the old time activity in business.

EL DORADO.—A company have recently opened a claim in the gravel range in the Mountain Meadows, near Goodricke's Ranch, and are making good pay. There is a chance for very extensive diggings in that locality.

PLACER.—The Marysville Appeal gives an interesting account of one of the hydraulic mines at La Porte, owned by Cooly & Gravelly. They have been engaged in sluicing up their ground after a four months' run of ground sluicing or hydraulic washing. During that time they have cleaned up eleven and one-half acres, averaging about sixty dollars to the load to a depth of 150 to 200 to the weight of gravel to the foot, this company has moved the enormous amount of 1,600,000 tons of gravel and started it on its way to the Yuba. One of their pipes is 1,000 feet in length, of eight-inch stream, using eight hundred inches of water, more or less, as necessity requires. Before the 1st of August they will be ready to move the ore. Boulder which will way a ton or more can be moved by the force of the water, and the rock, which is reserved by the force of the water, and the rock, which is reserved by an irresistible power. The bottom of the claim is covered with a hard cement crust, which they have to loosen by a thickness resting on the bed-rock. A stream is constantly kept flowing over the cement rock. In an instant it rots a hole under and turns up large flakes of the cement, which is then broken up and which are thoroughly dissolved before they reach the sluice boxes. The fineness of the company is 1,600 inch heads, and the depth of hole is 200 feet. The ultimate ore passed through the sluice boxes will be carried away by annual floods. To clean up each a flume is no light job, and it will require about two months' time. The most pleasing part of the miner's service. They average yield of $70 per ton. There is a large quantity of a similar grade of ore in sight, but as much water has been encountered in the shaft that it will be difficult to obtain it."

FRESNO.—The Republican says of the Bachman Copper mine: This mine has been idle for two years until about three months ago, when it changed hands, and under its present management promises something good. One hundred tons of ore has been shipped with an average assay of sixteen per cent. copper. There are some thirty hands employed in and around the premises, and the number of buildings, etc., give the place an appearance of quite a lively place. There is considerable ore in sight, but how copper ore is in the immediate vicinity, and it will not be long before other mines will be in active operation.

NEVADA.—The Marysville Appeal of the 18th says that the miners at Campbellville, North San Juan, Sweetland, Buckeye, Forest City, French Corral, etc., are doing well. Generally they have plenty of water, and the mines never yielded better. The strike made in Bald Mountain, near Forest City, some months since seems to be permanent, the gravel developing into a perfect lead of great richness. Forest City is rapidly improving and begins to assume again the old time activity in business.

EL DORADO.—A company have recently opened a claim in the gravel range in the Mountain Meadows, near Goodricke's Ranch, and are making good pay. There is a chance for very extensive diggings in that locality.

PLACER.—The Marysville Appeal gives an interesting account of one of the hydraulic mines at La Porte, owned by Cooly & Gravelly. They have been engaged in sluicing up their ground after a four months' run of ground sluicing or hydraulic washing. During that time they have cleaned up eleven and one-half acres, averaging about sixty dollars to the load to a depth of 150 to 200 to the weight of gravel to the foot, this company has moved the enormous amount of 1,600,000 tons of gravel and started it on its way to the Yuba. One of their pipes is 1,000 feet in length, of eight-inch stream, using eight hundred inches of water, more or less, as necessity requires. Before the 1st of August they will be ready to move the ore. Boulder which will way a ton or more can be moved by the force of the water, and the rock, which is reserved by an irresistible power. The bottom of the claim is covered with a hard cement crust, which they have to loosen by a thickness resting on the bed-rock. A stream is constantly kept flowing over the cement rock. In an instant it rots a hole under and turns up large flakes of the cement, which is then broken up and which are thoroughly dissolved before they reach the sluice boxes. The fineness of the company is 1,600 inch heads, and the depth of hole is 200 feet. The ultimate ore passed through the sluice boxes will be carried away by annual floods. To clean up each a flume is no light job, and it will require about two months' time. The most pleasing part of the miner's service. They average yield of $70 per ton. There is a large quantity of a similar grade of ore in sight, but as much water has been encountered in the shaft that it will be difficult to obtain it."

PACIFIC COAST ITEMS.

STOCKTON, July 22.—The Board of Equalization now in session have refused to reduce the assessment on the property of the Central Pacific Railroad in this county. The property is assessed at nine thousand dollars per mile, and the Railroad Company desired to have it greatly reduced.

RENO, July 20th.—Col. Finnegan, Secret Service Detective, arrested Wm. H. Lantz, ex-Postmaster of Petaluma, at nine o'clock last evening, in Virginia City, for embezzlement of Government moneys, while he was Postmaster. He takes him to San Francisco.

SACRAMENTO, July 22.—At a meeting of the State Board of Equalization this morning, an order was passed granting fifteen days further time to the San Francisco County Board of Equalization, to hear and determine the applications for reduction of the assessments in that city and county; and a copy of the order was telegraphed to the President of that Board. This step was deemed necessary, in view of the numerous applications for reduction undetermined, for that might be for want of time, or by reason of a ring formed to prevent applicants being heard, and that the people may realize fully the public benefit secured by the operations of the statute constituting the State Board of Equalization. The additional time thus granted expires with and includes August 8th.

PETALUMA, July 18.—A tragedy took place to-day near the Eagle House, about six miles from this city, on the Santa Rosa road. It appears that a young man, by the name of Mrs. Keeney, living in East Petaluma, who has been married but a short time, has had trouble with her husband for the past week or two, on account of remarks made about her by a man named Cummings, derogatory to her character since the meeting. Keeney left home about a week ago she left her husband, taking away all her things and going back to her father's. This afternoon Cummings was passing near her father's house with a load of wood, when she approached him with a loaded shot-gun, and fired it through the head, killing him instantly. She immediately came down to town to her father, Mr. John Bannin, and gave herself up to the authorities. She seems to have the sympathy of the whole community, and she is believed to be innocent of the sinister motives reports are against her by Cummings, which caused the separation of herself and husband, and led her to commit the deed. She is a quiet young lady of possessing, not being over eighteen or nineteen years of age. She will have a preliminary examination before Justice Cavanagh to-morrow morning.

Lord Byron on Catholic Claims.

The speech which Lord Byron delivered on the 21st of April, 1812, during the debate on the Earl of Donoughmore's motion for a Committee on the Roman Catholic Claims, is interesting not only on account of the extraordinary genius of the young nobleman, but because the discourse is altogether worthy of his subsequent fame. Its interest to us, moreover, is enhanced by the fact of his manifesting in after life a decided leaning to the faith of those who cause he had sadly advocated in Parliament. He caused his daughter Allegra to be educated as a Catholic, and when Lord Byron replied: "in some degree I concur with those who say it is not the time exactly; but when is the proper time? I ask you, sir, the country, that the Catholics possessed at the present time. The demand of the committee of 1805 was not to be thought of at the present day, and the claims of the Catholics would be whole to-morrow. The millions are poured forth like water, and the public credit exerted every by annual loads. To clean up each a flume is no light job, and it will require about two months' time. The most pleasing part of the miner's service. They average yield of $70 per ton. There is a large quantity of a similar grade of ore in sight, but as much water has been encountered in the shaft that it will be difficult to obtain it."

FRESNO.—The Republican says of the Bachman Copper mine: This mine has been idle for two years until about three months ago, when it changed hands, and under its present management promises something good. One hundred tons of ore has been shipped with an average assay of sixteen per cent. copper. There are some thirty hands employed in and around the premises, and the number of buildings, etc., give the place an appearance of quite a lively place. There is considerable ore in sight, but how copper ore is in the immediate vicinity, and it will not be long before other mines will be in active operation.

NEVADA.—The Marysville Appeal of the 18th says that the miners at Campbellville, North San Juan, Sweetland, Buckeye, Forest City, French Corral, etc., are doing well. Generally they have plenty of water, and the mines never yielded better. The strike made in Bald Mountain, near Forest City, some months since seems to be permanent, the gravel developing into a perfect lead of great richness. Forest City is rapidly improving and begins to assume again the old time activity in business.

Stamp Tax Abolished.

According to the Internal Revenue Circular, stamps are no longer required on the following written instruments:

Contracts for insurance against accidental injuries.

Affidavits.

All agreements or contracts, or renewals of the same.

Appraisements, of value or damage, or for any other purpose.

Assignments, of lease, mortgage, policy of insurance, or anything else.

Bills of exchange, foreign, inland, letters of credit, or anything of that kind now taxed by stamps.

Bills of lading, and receipts, in the United States or for anywhere else.

Bills of sale, of any kind.

Bonds of indemnification, of any kind.

Bond of administrator or guardian, or anything that has the same of bond in it, and now taxed by stamp.

Brokers' notes.

Certificates of measurement of any thing.

Certificates of stock, profits, damage, deposit, or any other kind of certificate now taxed by stamp.

Charter or its renewal, or a charter party of any kind.

All contracts or agreements.

Conveyance, or any part of the work of conveying.

Indorsement of any negotiable or non negotiable instrument.

Entry, for consumption, warehousing or withdrawal.

Gaugers' returns.

Insurance policies, contracts, tickets, renewals, etc. (Life, marines, inland and fire.)

Leases. All through the lease list is abolished.

Legal documents. Writ or other process, confession of judgment, cognovit-appeals, warrants, etc., letters of administration, testamentary, etc.

Manifest of Custom House, or any, otherwise, or for any purpose.

Mortgage of any kind.

Passage ticket to any place in the world.

Powers' checks.

Power of attorney, for any purpose.

Probate of will, of any kind.

Promissory note for anything.

Protest of any kind.

Quit-claim deed.

Receipt. Not generally exempt, and if included in present law in any case will be hereafter exempt.

Sheriff's deeds.

Trust deed.

Warehouse receipt.

Warrant of attorney.

Weigher's return, of any character.

Any one of two cards on checks, drafts and orders is all of Schedule D that is retained. And this is the detail of the stamp abolitions in the law of June 30th, 1872.

Wholesale Market Report.

MONITOR OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, July 20, 1872.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export only a moderate inquiry has been noted. We quote as follows: Extra at $5 37½@5, and superfine, at $4 50@4 87½; Oregon brands—Extra at $5 12½@5; in sks $5 100 lbs.

WHEAT—The market has been quiet but firm, at steady prices. We quote shipping lots at $1 57½@1 60 per ctl.

HAY—The receipts have been fair for the season of date, viz.: Wheat, 1,000 tons; Barley, 1,000 tons; Oat Hay, 1,000 tons; Straw, 1,000 tons. We quote as follows: Wheat and Oat, $14@16 50; Red and Tule, $12@14; Barley, $12@14; Alfalfa, $12@14; Straw, $5@6 50 per ton.

BARLEY—Quotable at $1 05@1 10 per ctl.

OATS—Quotable at $1 60@1 70 per ctl.

BRAN—Quotable at $20 @ 25 per ton sold.

MIDDLINGS—Quotable at $25@30 per ton from the mill.

CORN MEAL—Sales at $1 75@1 80 per ctl.

CORN—Sales at $1 07½@1 10 per ctl.

BEANS—We note a fair demand, and the following are the quotations: Pinks, $3 50@3 75; Small White and Pea, $4 50@5 00; Red and Pink, $4 @4 50.

POTATOES—Quotable at $1 @1 25 per ctl.

ONIONS—Quotable at $1 50@2 per ctl.

BUTTER—Quotable at 25@30c per lb.

CHEESE—Quotable at 15@16c per lb.

EGGS—Quotable at 25@30c per doz.

We quote shipping grades as Staple, the latter price for extra selected, and Ordinary, nominally.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California fresh, 30@37½c; fresh roll, 30@37½c; pickled, 25@30c; Oregon, 25@30c.

CHEESE—California, 13@15½c; Oregon, 13@15½c.

EGGS—California, 25@30c per dozen; Eastern, 19@21c per dozen; Oregon, 25@30c per dozen.

HAMS—California, 13@15c per lb; Oregon, 13@15c per lb; Eastern, 15@17c per lb.

BACON—California, 11½@12c per lb; Oregon, 10½@11c per lb; Eastern, 12½@13c per lb.

LARD—California, 11½@12c per lb; Oregon, 10½@11c per lb; Eastern, 12½@13c per lb; in tierces, 11½@11c; do in cases 12½@13c per lb in kegs, 13@13½c.

FRESH MEATS.

BEEF—For first quality, 10c; for second do, 6@7; third do 4@5c per lb.

VEAL—Large, 7@8c; small, 8@9c per lb.

MUTTON—At 6@8c per lb.

LAMB—At 8@9c per lb.

PORK—Dressed, grain-fed, 7½@8½c; do fleet, grain fed, 6@7c per lb.

POULTRY AND GAME.

TURKEYS—Gobblers, 20@22½c; Young Spring Chickens, [illegible] 50; Roosters, 15@17½ dozen.

GEESE—Young, $1 50@2 00 each.

GOSLINGS—Young, $1 50@2 00 each.

DUCKS—Tame, $1 each.

HENS—Large, $1 each.

RABBITS—Wild, each.

RABBITS—Tame, $1 50@1 75 doz.

GEESE—Tame, $1 50@2 each.

SNIPE—$1@1 50 per dozen.

Midsummer Malodia.

The hot color rays that ripen the harvests, generate many detestable odors, and drive the sick to the hospital in irregularities, this is the season in which the Bitters are most needed. Their use is not confined to, but is eminent in the summer months, and the loss of appetite, the bilious attack, the nervous prostration is as great, that a wholesome tonic, combining also the properties of a diffusive stimulant and gentle aperient, is in many cases necessary to health, and the only safeguard against fever to the unacclimated and the debilitated. Of all the preparations recommended as a refuge, comfort and fortify the human frame, there is none that will compare with the Bitters, which is endorsed by the best men. They have been restored to the balance of supremacy and not only that, but they have been restored to the confidence of the people, and in spite of interested opposition from manufacturers of spurious stimulants, and from the venders of all proprietary medicines intended for the prevention and cure of fever and ague, bilious remittent, dumb ague, the fever, the bowels and the nerves. In the unhealthy districts bordering the great Rivers of California, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters may be classed as the standard and by far the most reliable safeguard against remittent fever. The people who inhabit those districts, place the most implicit confidence in the preparation—a confidence that is increased every year by the fact that it deserves it.

A BUTTON, a cabinet, of the most perfect construction, and of the most approved pattern, is the latest novelty. We quote shipping grades as Staple, the latter price for extra selected, and Ordinary, nominally.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California fresh, 30@37½c; fresh roll, 30@37½c; pickled, 25@30c; Oregon, 25@30c.

CHEESE—California, 13@15½c; Oregon, 13@15½c.

EGGS—California, 25@30c per dozen; Eastern, 19@21c per dozen; Oregon, 25@30c per dozen.

HAMS—California, 13@15c per lb; Oregon, 13@15c per lb; Eastern, 15@17c per lb.

BACON—California, 11½@12c per lb; Oregon, 10½@11c per lb; Eastern, 12½@13c per lb; in tierces, 11½@11c; do in cases 12½@13c per lb in kegs, 13@13½c.

FRESH MEATS.

BEEF—For first quality, 10c; for second do, 6@7; third do 4@5c per lb.

VEAL—Large, 7@8c; small, 8@9c per lb.

MUTTON—At 6@8c per lb.

LAMB—At 8@9c per lb.

PORK—Dressed, grain-fed, 7½@8½c; do fleet, grain fed, 6@7c per lb.

POULTRY AND GAME.

TURKEYS—Gobblers, 20@22½c; Young Spring Chickens, [illegible] 50; Roosters, 15@17½ dozen.

GEESE—Young, $1 50@2 00 each.

GOSLINGS—Young, $1 50@2 00 each.

DUCKS—Tame, $1 each.

HENS—Large, $1 each.

RABBITS—Wild, each.

RABBITS—Tame, $1 50@1 75 doz.

GEESE—Tame, $1 50@2 each.

SNIPE—$1@1 50 per dozen.

INSURANCE.

THE GERMANIA LIFE INSURANCE CO.

Is the ONLY Company issuing ABSOLUTE Policies NON-FORFEITABLE and INCONTESTABLE.

No application for paid up Policies required: no limitation of time. jy1

SULLIVAN, FRATINGER & CO.,

14 Montgomery Street,

Have just received a large assortment of

CHILDREN'S BRAIDED PIQUE SUITS,

WITH OVERSKIRTS,

Which they are selling at the following prices for children:

2 YEARS OLD.....$1 75
3 YEARS OLD.....4 00
4 YEARS OLD.....4 50
5 YEARS OLD.....5 00
6 YEARS OLD.....5 75

ALSO, A HANDSOME LINE OF

Children's Linen Dresses and Suits.

Which they offer at prices ranging from $1 50 and upwards. my25

THE CETTYSBURG

KATALYSINE WATER is sold at the Spring at $5 per case (twenty). Three gallon demijohns, $1 each; 50 gallon casks, $15 each. Cases of two dozen quart bottles, $9 each. Orders by mail will be not keep it. Invalides may have it sent free of charge by Railroad or Adams' Express, by enclosing Postoffice Money Orders at Checks. Physicians and Clergymen supplied for their own use with three gallon demijohns for $5 50 each; with six-gallon demijohns at $7 50 each; with cases of two dozen quarts at $6 50 each. Medical or clerical certificate must be certified by nearest Postmaster or other responsible parties. Address WHITNEY BROS., 127 S. Front st., Philadelphia, Pa. 1m5-Sa

GO TO

M. O'CONNOR'S,

Ball No. 1, Grand Central Market,

IF YOU WANT THE BEST BEEF, MUTTON, etc., in the market, and at the sonable prices.

DUTCHER'S LIGHTNING FLY-KILLER,

SWEEPS THEM OFF,

AND CLEARS the HOUSE SPEEDILY.

TRY IT.

L. L. DUTCHER & SON, Proprietors, 81 Albion, N.Y.

LEGAL.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA.—IN JUSTICES' Court of the City and County of San Francisco. Before Justice of the Peace, Jas. Dunne. R. CUMMINS & CO., Plaintiffs, residents of said City and County, vs. JOHN DALY, Defendant, late a resident of said City and County. Action brought in the Justice's Court of the City and County of San Francisco, and Complaint filed in the office of the Clerk of said Court.

The People of the State of California, to DAVID DALY, Defendant, late a resident of said City and County, greeting:

You are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint, as above required, the first day of the next regular term of said Court, after the expiration of twenty days from the service of this summons. The said action is brought to recover of the said defendant the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars, gold coin of the United States, agreed by you to be paid to the said plaintiff for the hire of a certain horse of the said plaintiff for your special business and purpose. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will take judgment for the said sum and interest, and interest thereon, together with costs and disbursements of this action, and will apply to the Sheriff of said City and County for a writ of attachment.

Witness my hand and seal of the Justices' Court of the City and County aforesaid, this 4th day of May, A.D. 1872. By order of

JAMES C. PENNIE, [L.S.]
Presiding Justice of the Peace of the City and County of San Francisco.

BROWN L. WEDEKIND,
Attorney for Plaintiff. jy20-Sa

IN THE DISTRICT COURT of the Seventh Judicial District of the State of California, held at the city and county of San Francisco. C. FLEMING, Plaintiff, vs. HARRIET M. FLEM INGS, Defendant.

Action brought in the District Court of the Seventh Judicial District, in the city and county of San Francisco, and filed in the office of the Clerk of said District Court, in said city and county of San Francisco.

The People of the State of California, to the said Defendant, greeting:

You are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint filed in this action, within ten days after the service on you of this summons, if served within this county; or if served elsewhere within thirty days; or you will be notified that unless you appear and answer as required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

Given under my hand and seal of the District Court of the Seventh Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the city and county of San Francisco, this twenty-first day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two.

[L.S.] H. BY BENT MCNULTY, Deputy Clerk.
Dudley & Dudley, Att'ys for Plaintiff. jy20-Sa

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE NINETEENTH Judicial District of the State of California, held in and for the city and county of San Francisco.

MARY ANN ROBERTS, Plaintiff, vs. N. ROBERTS, Defendant.

Action brought in the District Court of the Nineteenth Judicial District, in the city and county of San Francisco, and filed in the city and county of San Francisco, and the city and county of San Francisco, and the city and county of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said District Court.

The People of the State of California, to the said Defendant, greeting:

You are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint filed in this action, within ten days after the service on you of this summons, if served within this county; or if served elsewhere within thirty days; or you will be notified that unless you appear and answer as required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

Given under my hand and seal of the District Court of the Nineteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the city and county of San Francisco, this fifteenth day of May in the the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two.

[L.S.] WILLIAM RABNEY, Clerk.
By HENRY MCNULTY, Deputy Clerk.
Dudley & Dudley, Att'ys for Plaintiff. jy13-Sa

DRY GOODS, ETC.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.

NO. 7

Montgomery St.

.....HAVE.....

THE BEST SELECTED STOCK

.....OF.....

DRY GOODS

.....IN.....

THE PACIFIC COAST

.....AND ARE SERVICING.....

NEW GOODS FROM NEW YOR

.....DAILY.....

Buyers will find it to their advantage to examine

STOCK OF DRY GOODS,

Which comprises every variety and class of Goo our line, and at Prices which Defy Competition.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.

No. 7, MONTGOMERY STREET.

NOTICE! NOTICE! NOTICE!

The Public are Respectfully Informed that

THE GREAT SEMI-ANNUAL

CLEARANCE SALE

.....OF.....

DRY GOODS

.....AT.....

J. J. O'BRIEN'S,

606 MARKET STREET,

IS NOW DRAWING TO A CLOSE, AND all those desirous of purchasing themselves of the extraordinary bargains now offered had better call immediately, for you can save a series of

50 Cents on the Dollar!

We will offer during the next week

75 pieces Heavy French striped Silks, all colors for [illegible] per yard, formerly $1 75.

50 pieces Black Silks, at $1 50 a yard; formerly $2 50.

Our entire stock of Black Silks reduced fully 50 per cent.

75 pieces fine French Poplin (solid) for [illegible] yard, formerly $1 50.

75 pieces real Irish Poplin (Dublin), at $1 a yard; formerly $1 50.

75 pieces best Japanese Silks, at 50c a yard; formerly 75c.

50 pieces Silk Striped Japanese Poplins, 37½ cents per yard; formerly 75 cents.

Our entire stock of

SPRING DRESS GOODS

Reduced to half price, consisting of several thousand yards, at 12½, 15, 20 and 25 cents a yard.

A splendid line of Black Alpacas, from 25 cents a yard upwards.

75 pieces best Black Pollard, at 50 cents a yard; formerly $1.

10,000 yards Plain Black and Striped Grenadines, at 25 cents a yard; formerly 50 cents.

A beautiful assortment of STRIPED ZEPHYRS, at 12½ cents a yard; formerly 25 cents.

75 pieces splendid French Lawns for 12½ cents a yard; reduced from 25 cents.

50 pieces White and Colored Piques, 25 cents a yard; reduced from 50 cents.

Case Heavy Corded French Piques, 25 cents a yard; reduced from 50 cents.

500 pairs Blankets, from $1 50 a pair; reduced from $2 50 a pair.

300 pieces Brown and White Canton Flannel, 10½ cents a yard; worth 25 cents.

750 pieces Scotch Diaper, 25 a piece; reduced from $3 50.

50 pieces Boys' Clothe, 36 cents a yard; reduced from 75 cents.

All makes of Muslins and Sheetings at greatly reduced prices.

A splendid line of Corsets, from 50 cents a pair upwards. 1,000 dozen Ladies' Hose, at 25 cents a pair; reduced from 50 cents.

1,000 dozen Jouvin's Kid Gloves, at $1 a pair; reduced from $1 50.

Case Ladies' Linen Embroidered Kid Gloves, at 50 cents, to-day; reduced from $1.

A full assortment of Ladies' Linen Collars and Cuffs.

A large lot of Ladies' and Gents' Underwear, fully reduced, half price.

A call respectfully solicited.

J. J. O'BRIEN,
606 Market Street,
Four doors above Kearny.

NOTICE.

The Public are Respectfully Informed that

THE GREAT SEMI-ANNUAL

CLEARANCE SALE

.....OF.....

DRY GOODS

.....AT.....

J. J. O'BRIEN'S,

606 MARKET STREET,

IS NOW DRAWING TO A CLOSE, AND all those desirous of purchasing themselves of the extraordinary bargains now offered had better call immediately, for you can save a series of

50 Cents on the Dollar!

We will offer during the next week

75 pieces Heavy French striped Silks, all colors for [illegible] per yard, formerly $1 75.

50 pieces Black Silks, at $1 50 a yard; formerly $2 50.

Our entire stock of Black Silks reduced fully 50 per cent.

75 pieces fine French Poplin (solid) for [illegible] yard, formerly $1 50.

75 pieces real Irish Poplin (Dublin), at $1 a yard; formerly $1 50.

75 pieces best Japanese Silks, at 50c a yard; formerly 75c.

50 pieces Silk Striped Japanese Poplins, 37½ cents per yard; formerly 75 cents.

Our entire stock of

SPRING DRESS GOODS

Reduced to half price, consisting of several thousand yards, at 12½, 15, 20 and 25 cents a yard.

A splendid line of Black Alpacas, from 25 cents a yard upwards.

75 pieces best Black Pollard, at 50 cents a yard; formerly $1.

10,000 yards Plain Black and Striped Grenadines, at 25 cents a yard; formerly 50 cents.

A beautiful assortment of STRIPED ZEPHYRS, at 12½ cents a yard; formerly 25 cents.

75 pieces splendid French Lawns for 12½ cents a yard; reduced from 25 cents.

50 pieces White and Colored Piques, 25 cents a yard; reduced from 50 cents.

Case Heavy Corded French Piques, 25 cents a yard; reduced from 50 cents.

500 pairs Blankets, from $1 50 a pair; reduced from $2 50 a pair.

300 pieces Brown and White Canton Flannel, 10½ cents a yard; worth 25 cents.

750 pieces Scotch Diaper, 25 a piece; reduced from $3 50.

50 pieces Boys' Clothe, 36 cents a yard; reduced from 75 cents.

All makes of Muslins and Sheetings at greatly reduced prices.

A splendid line of Corsets, from 50 cents a pair upwards. 1,000 dozen Ladies' Hose, at 25 cents a pair; reduced from 50 cents.

1,000 dozen Jouvin's Kid Gloves, at $1 a pair; reduced from $1 50.

Case Ladies' Linen Embroidered Kid Gloves, at 50 cents, to-day; reduced from $1.

A full assortment of Ladies' Linen Collars and Cuffs.

A large lot of Ladies' and Gents' Underwear, fully reduced, half price.

A call respectfully solicited.

J. J. O'BRIEN,
606 Market Street,
Four doors above Kearny.

THE MONITOR:

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO Irish and Catholic Literature AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY LYONS & BARRY

JOHN LYONS.....JOHN C. BARRY.

DENIS LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.

OFFICE—532 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts. (Rooms E, F and G, up-stairs.)

☞ All communications, whether relating to the business or editorial department, should be addressed to "Lyons & Barry."

ONLY IRISH and CATHOLIC JOURNAL IN CALIFORNIA.

TERMS (Payable In Advance):

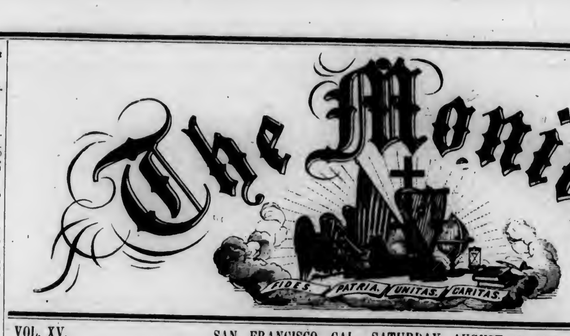
Served by Carriers, per week.....10c
Mail subscribers, per month.....40
Six months.....2 25

ADVERTISING RATES:

1 square, 1 time.....$1 50 | 1 square, 6 months.....$10 00
" 1 month.....4 00 | " 12 months.....15 00
" 2 months.....7 00 | 1 column, 1 year.....75 00
" 3 months.....9 00 | 1 page, 1 year.....75 00

☞ The above rates will be strictly adhered to. ☜

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.



VOL. XV. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., SATURDAY, AUGUST 10, 1872. NO. 39.

OUR ROMAN LETTER.

ROME, July 10th.

No event could be more consoling to the Holy Father than that which has just happened, namely, the publication of the long-planned pastoral letter containing the full acceptance of the Holy Father's (Ecumenical council by the Bishop of Orleans. Although Mgr. Dupanloup had long since sent in his adhesion, yet the public act of submission to the Holy See, cannot fail to be attended with great edification to others, and blessings on his own diocese and the Church of France. As the document will no doubt have ere this reached the extensive diocese of Orleans, it is unnecessary for me to enter into details. Suffice it to say that it is in perfect accordance with the Vatican decrees, and that it is signed by the above-named prelate in the presence of the Clergy of the Cathedral of the State of California, in and for the city and county of San Francisco, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two.

[L.S.] JAMES C. PENNIE, [L.S.]
Presiding Justice of the Peace of the City and County of San Francisco.

BROWN L. WEDEKIND,
Attorney for Plaintiff. jy20-Sa

SULLIVAN, FRATINGER & CO.,

14 Montgomery Street,

Have just received a large assortment of

C

Another love more dear than I, wears those sweet flowers to-day!
Too free in kindly bosoms, where host with cheer and welcome meet!
And the lockets we wear would to praise are grave and big this year!

I know I would not falter, if at Death's alluring kiss
For Thee!
But 'tis poet all telling, the pain is my heart sweet-ness.
To know that! had known a lover, feeble and untrue, but I will not discover the name of my false lover;
God give to me some root of heart, and give him length of days,
The neighbors all say nearly, that I am looking poorly—
A shadow wasting in the sun, a sorrowful young lady;
Indeed, I cry for you—O, darling, I'd die for you!
Come back, and kiss—if only once—before my grave is made.

"Has that any foundation in fact!" asked Tom, as he closed the manuscript volume of music, and placed a chair for Miss Prendergast.

"Aye has it," was Prendergast's reply. "I will tell you the story some day, but not here—he off with the pair of you. I haven't had enough sleep."

"Put on your hat and let us go into the garden. 'In the spring a young man's fancy,' you know, Tom, and all the rest."

Kate's eyelids drooped, and her color changed inwardly. She went about the room in a dreamy condition of mind—a sort of psychological confession—for which the French have the happiest of words, but for which the English we are obliged to speak of as nerves.

And into the garden they went. Apart the lilacs, which were beginning to feel the first sap in their trunks—under the tangled shadow of bare laburnums that had not yet taken heart to flower—by a seat, sheltered rose-beds, which the marigolds had dared to environ with happy gold, and into the open space where the garden, by the most natural transition, melted into the lawn.

"You know, Kate," said Dick, "that taken in the lump, or mixed up with the general range of the people around us, the philosopher who picked me out of the heap wouldn't lay much stress on my importance. He might see me for a type. Would you take me for a unit?"

"Can I worship to be your wife?"

And poor Kate shuddered to the fanciful shadow of her own dissatem.

"You are worthy to be any man's wife—I don't care who he may be—prince or duke, or Lord Cardiff and Dick Prendergast, who would lead a forlorn hope or climb an Alpine precipice, become auditor-general of Ireland or emeltor."

The day deepened into evening, and still the two walked under the scented lilacs, and no thought of separating occurred to the one or the other.

"I only tell you," said Kate, "as she nearly released her waist from the arm of her lover, without perhaps being conscious of some provision for me which you don't suspect."

"You are afraid it's not accepted; but I would rather not meet the man or woman who suspected you."

"Oh! you ill-tempered!" and, to reassure him, she took his arm and playfully fondled his hand. "There you not heavily on my aunt, poor Mrs. Roche, left me three thousand pounds? Papa has put it in the new bank. Isn't he a clever papa, dear? Say 'yes' or we shall be enemies."

"Yes, dear," said Dick Prendergast.

CHAPTER VIII.

At the most luckless period of Irish history, or, rather, of Irish national politics, there had got into a strange confusion. Fed ed, it appeared as if no man knew his right hand from his left. Misery in the boroughs, demoralization in the cities, cant in most classes in which it was possible to make public affairs with any hope of having them rationally discussed—these were the order of the time—the hypothesis of the hour.

Rathcore was a socio-dingly small place; but the perverted sentiment of the nation penetrated into it. When the Weekly Outlook Revolver arrived by the Saturday mail from Dublin, everyone rushed to buy it. It was so good, so intensely polemical, so desirous of guarding the faith, so reverential to the clergy, so considerate towards the sensibilities of the flock, so fond of politics, and—what some at the time cared to oppose—so keenly subservient to the Whigs.

Mr. MacHeir—from London—undertook to edit this reputable publication; and it was with a sense of completeness that he established his contemporaries, and it might have surprised even himself. He told the people, week after week, that there was only one savior in Ireland, and his name was Saint Patrick; that the readiest method of political redemption was to be looked for from any quarter, it was from "the Liberator." He lectured the landed lord and assay to invest, to put it in the Tipperary Bank, because the Bank was angel guardian, and under the pure shadow of his protecting wing nothing could go wrong. In short, what is necessary than the sedulity, the Irish people took the man's advice; and were sedd.

Everything the miserable organ could do was done, to uphold the reputation of Mr. Bedlard and Mr. Sadlier's bank. And so de vice was spared or hesitated at, to blacken and destroy the characters of the men who in that hour of financial peril, when accidentally seem to have gone to the dogs, by unbounded greed and folly, could declared that Mr. Crowe was a humbug, that Mr. Sadlair was a rogue, and that Mr. MacHeir—all his jelly notwithstanding—was not a per-son for decent men to swear by.

Here the very pivots—the bone of the Irish fold—were overawed by the audacious hypocrisy of this paper and the party which it served. Where honest journals were cursed and expelled, the character of the people was impressed with a strange, considered as dogmatic. It had no literary ability, to speak of, but it had unbounded impudence and no sense of shame. Unconsciously corrupted by the fals-attation of goodness, this open profile of virtue, the people were induced, for the greater part, to side in with the wretches who betrayed the country's misfortunes to their own account, and to dread the men who were fighting to save the National funds from extinction.

This was Ireland in Mr. John Sadlier's day. It was not also his day, but that of every low adventurer who then thought it fair game to traffic and baten on the blind credulity of the millions who survived the wreck of '48.

"I wonder, Lucy," said Tom Lacey to his little Protestant sister, as they sat together in the deep embrasure of a window, "what the people in the parlor are conceived to be plotting up for the Pope. Look at that papa!" and he moved the Catholic Standard with his foot, as a thing too foul to be handled. "Do you think that the men who support that sort of thing really mean what they say? Pshaw!"

"Tut, tut!" said old Maurice Prendergast, who had caught Tom's words, but as he was swaking from his afternoon nap, "it's all very fine to go on supposing people, but give me the proof."

In favor of the idea he forms of Mr. Sadlier and his party," exclaimed Kate, with some warmth.

"Very well, said Lucy, "we shall see. It is not everyone who says Lord, Lord, that shall enter Heaven."

Said Lucy Prendergast:

"Look at what the people of whom you speak so bitterly and so unjustly are doing. They are putting Catholics into every vacant place, and thrusting the Dungeonon out into the cold. And, then, sir, they are so pious."

"I give in," exclaimed Tom. "if give in body and soul. There's a curse on Ireland."

Lucy suddenly rose, and surveyed her lover with a calm, reproving glance.

"You did not say, sir," she began, "that my father or myself would be an apologist for what you have just maligned!"

"That's no devil's a-fraud in Tipperary," exclaimed old Prendergast. "If ever there was one he's dead and gone to his own place."

"I am very sorry that Miss Prendergast should misunderstand me," said Lacey, placing his chair in its proper place, and taking up his hat. "The world is full of errors, and I've committed no—intentable, I suppose."

He walked to the door, his cheek pale, his eye lighted up with a wild suppressed fire.

A lovely spring afternoon, the birds were singing on every spray; the tender, tearful sky like a mother over the cradle of her first-born.

And among the trees and along the gray roads which streamed right and left in tangled confusion through Rathcore, walked Tom Lacey. Attached, he felt that he was apostate, unfaithful, he knew that, in part; terribly confident in his judgment of men, he writhed that his sagacity was called into question by those he loved best, and whom at no distant day he hoped to call his wife.

He turned back to the cottage. Lucy was at the garden gate, her eyes red for weeping, and her whole appearance was the colored by tears.

"So good, Tom," she said, "and forgive me, I have been very rude to you; but you are the stronger nature, and you might, for my sake, be good and follow, not lead."

She put out her hand as if pleading for her lover's pardon, and Lacey took it and pressed it in silence. Hand in hand they walked down the b reen that led into the high road, and not a word was said by either until they came to a well overshadowed by a sycamore, and singing to itself with a fresh clacking delight.

Lacey paused, and his companion followed his example.

"We were happy when we first met there, Lucy," he said, pointing to the well.

"Were happy, Tom? Oh, Tom, is it only were happy?" she gasped with quivering lip.

As he looked his eyes to meet the loving gaze directed into his face, a cry of low moan or half suppressed wail of anguish broke from the heroes cross lady, startled and thrilled h'm through and through. It was a woman's voice.

Lucy clasped his arm convulsively, and shivered like a-aspen leaf.

With a bound Tom leaped into the narrow road.

"Oh, master Tom, master Tom, he's dying ha-d by the ditch, by the ditch!"

It was Mary Ryan; a poor woman whom old Lacey some years before had allowed to shelter herself in a distant corner of his land. Her father had died of famine-fever caught from an unknown wayfarer—a poor beggar-woman whom he found one evening stretched on the road outside his house, and, rather sinning the road reclining against the ditch or fence, had insensible, with a little infant, a girl, at her breast. Mary Ryan, himself, only a cottier or workman under Squire Lefroy, brought the poor cross are in. Mary made up a bed for her in the outer room of the cabin; and during twelve days of raging fever, had nourished her with that compassionate care and tenderness which the poor show to each other in times like these. "The neighbors," too, were kind. They contributed milk and other nourishment. But when the fever was at last brought, and stood by his head and ordered wine, it was a sore task to find it. Mary, frutiful in resources, was off early next morning with a coupe of pullets to Cloghsen, and having sold them, came back with half a bottle of wine. But all was in vain. Twelve days after she had received the stranger into her cabin the Ryans were "waking" the poor creature for whose life they had longed so hard; and whose infant children now received to bring up with their only boy. Mary was a fine fellow, and her resources out of many of the heroism of the Irish poor to their fellow poor—a week afterwards Jack himself was down with the fever, caught from his late charge; and before three weeks were gone the Boy Mary was a widow, with her own boy of two years and the adopted beggar child to support and educate.

The big man, the squire, could not let papers squat on his property to establish any responsibility on the shoulders and dwellers rates. His workman, Ryan, was dead. He wanted in the cottage and the bit of land for a new hand, he said; at all even a be would not let paupers squat on his property. Mary Ryan had therefore left it by herself," he said, and moreover, had violated the rules of the estate in housing an unknown vagrant. She must give up his holding and go elsewhere.

"Elsewhere" meant to the town of Cloghsen, where, after a bitter struggle of a few years, Mary and the little ones would eventually be reduced to the last resource chargeable to the poor electoral division, or the union at large.

It was in this extremity that old Mr. Lacey—on the appeal of Tom and Kate, if the truth must be known, pressingly they were then little better than children—gave the outcast widow a cottage on a distant corner of his land, and gave positive orders that Mary Ryan, industrious, hard-working, cheerful, must have one hundred days' employment; working in the harvest in the meadow and the cornfield; reaping fuel and selling eggs, and, always excepted from "the neighbors" (and by young Master Tom and Miss Kate), no pauper was ever more kindly treated by his employer.

"We were happy when we first met there, Lucy," he said, pointing to the well.

"Were happy, Tom? Oh, Tom, is it only were happy?" she gasped with quivering lip.

As he looked his eyes to meet the loving gaze directed into his face, a cry of low moan or half suppressed wail of anguish broke from the heroes cross lady, startled and thrilled h'm through and through. It was a woman's voice.

Lucy clasped his arm convulsively, and shivered like a-aspen leaf.

With a bound Tom leaped into the narrow road.

"Oh, master Tom, master Tom, he's dying ha-d by the ditch, by the ditch!"

It was Mary Ryan; a poor woman whom old Lacey some years before had allowed to shelter herself in a distant corner of his land. Her father had died of famine-fever caught from an unknown wayfarer—a poor beggar-woman whom he found one evening stretched on the road outside his house, or, rather sinning the road reclining against the ditch or fence, had insensible, with a little infant, a girl, at her breast. Mary Ryan, himself, only a cottier or workman under Squire Lefroy, brought the poor cross are in. Mary made up a bed for her in the outer room of the cabin; and during twelve days of raging fever, had nourished her with that compassionate care and tenderness which the poor show to each other in times like these. "The neighbors," too, were kind. They contributed milk and other nourishment. But when the fever was at last brought, and stood by his head and ordered wine, it was a sore task to find it. Mary, frutiful in resources, was off early next morning with a coupe of pullets to Cloghsen, and having sold them, came back with half a bottle of wine. But all was in vain. Twelve days after she had received the stranger into her cabin the Ryans were "waking" the poor creature for whose life they had longed so hard; and whose infant children now received to bring up with their only boy. Mary was a fine fellow, and her resources out of many of the heroism of the Irish poor to their fellow poor—a week afterwards Jack himself was down with the fever, caught from his late charge; and before three weeks were gone the Boy Mary was a widow, with her own boy of two years and the adopted beggar child to support and educate.

The big man, the squire, could not let papers squat on his property to establish any responsibility on the shoulders and dwellers rates. His workman, Ryan, was dead. He wanted in the cottage and the bit of land for a new hand, he said; at all even a be would not let paupers squat on his property. Mary Ryan had therefore left it by herself," he said, and moreover, had violated the rules of the estate in housing an unknown vagrant. She must give up his holding and go elsewhere.

"Elsewhere" meant to the town of Cloghsen, where, after a bitter struggle of a few years, Mary and the little ones would eventually be reduced to the last resource chargeable to the poor electoral division, or the union at large.

It was in this extremity that old Mr. Lacey—on the appeal of Tom and Kate, if the truth must be known, pressingly they were then little better than children—gave the outcast widow a cottage on a distant corner of his land, and gave positive orders that Mary Ryan, industrious, hard-working, cheerful, must have one hundred days' employment; working in the harvest in the meadow and the cornfield; reaping fuel and selling eggs, and, always excepted from "the neighbors" (and by young Master Tom and Miss Kate), no pauper was ever more kindly treated by his employer.

Master Tom, the little adopted daughter, and young Ned her a-n, grew apace. The latter was employed on a property some three or four miles distant; but Tom, a quiet boy, and often passing under the striking pigtrying fees one of which was a great deal indeed-ed to children, his absolute de-otion, to his mother and to his foster-sister, Maureen. Tom was too much of a boy to fear Ned Ryan was involved in the agrarian combination, the members of which were in the habit of making secret trials for arms at their chief occupation. The poor mother, from time to time, seemed vaguely uneasy or alarmed by some such surmise, but Ned had always a plausible excuse for them; and he and always the secret of finding his way to the mother's heart with some burst of genuine honest affection that stilled all her fears.

Down on the road at Tom's feet the poor woman now knelt, her hands cla-ped, her head bowed to the earth, and she rocked her self up and down, be ween her convulsive sobs, she had ever and anon struck her forehead against the stony mud.

"He's dying! Oh, master Tom! Oh, he's dying!"

"Dying, Mary! Who—who is dying?"

"Oh, sirr! oh, sir! Ja—Ned sir. Oh, my God, my God—is it the son of my heart to go from me!"

"Ned, dying! Why, in Heaven's name," gasped Tom, "what has happened? Yesterday I met him coming from early Mass."

"Oh, he's dead, sir! bad work, bloody work, black and bitter work for me! I feared 'tis old sins that is back."

(To be continued.)

POSITION AND PRIVILEGES OF THE POPE.*

Lecture by Father Burke.

(Continued from last week.)

Oh, how fair, how beautiful is this man as he comes forth, from out the mind, from the loving heart and omnipotent hands of God! Oh, how grand is that soul, beaming with knowledge, filled with light! To him all the highest things of God, as well as the most intricate secrets of nature are open—his mind illuminated by their contemplation. How grand is that creature that rises before my eyes of faith, as I go back, contemplating him before he allowed sin to ran his soul and to destroy in him the gifts of God! When I behold my first parent entering into familiar conversation with Almighty God, his voice falling upon the ear of the Most High as sweet music—when I behold him commanding with undisputed sway every passion, every power of soul and body—while, as he goes forth from his leafy home, the eagle, upon wings, soaring amid the clouds, descends rapidly upon him, and swoops to his feet—the lion and the tiger, the elephant and their fair ly lick the feet of their imperial master; all nature is obedient to the command of God. These, when they see the man in his truth, obedient to the command of God. These, when they see the man in his truth, obedient to the command of God. These, when they see the man in his truth,

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 17, A.D.

11—Sunday—Twelfth Sunday after Pentecost.
12—Monday—Of the Octave.
13—Tuesday—St. Leo Levite, Confessor, &c. Hippolytus and Cassian, Martyrs.
14—Wednesday—Of the Octave. Vigil of the Assumption. Fast. St. Eusebius, Confessor.
15—Thursday—Assumption of the B. V. M. Holiday of obligation.
16—Friday—St. Hyacinth, Confessor.
17—Saturday—Octave of St. Laurence.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY, AUGUST 10, 1872.

THE NEXT POPE.

The German and Italian papers, now in wonderful accord on most subjects, are still harping on the theme of the next election to the Papacy. With a persistent ignoring of the prominent name to be put in Declaimer to the Prince of the Apostles, which tells plainly of the anti-Christian spirit actuating them, they keep on discussing their plans for coercing the College of Cardinals into choosing a Pope who shall be the creature of their governments rather than the head of the Church. A more insane idea, a more utterly hopeless project, was never yet conceived by men presuming to have possession of their faculties, and yet these infidel writers, backed up no doubt by their kingly masters, talk about it in all seriousness, as if it were the most feasible thing in the world. It positively amusing to notice with what gravity they speak of preserving the independence of the Papacy, and securing freedom of election to the Cardinals! The best way they can devise for accomplishing those laudable purposes is for that orthodox Catholic, Kaiser Wilhelm, and that extremely devout monarch, Victor Emmanuel, to lay their two heads together and nominate the next successor to St. Peter. With what feeling of gratitude must not the two hundred and fifty millions of Catholics who are scattered over the face of the habitable globe regard this touching proof of the kind concern which these most gracious sovereigns have in their eternal welfare! Is it not really presence of them to endeavor to take the government of the Church into their royal hands, and dispense with such antiquated personages as Cardinals, Bishops, priests, etc.? Would it not save a great deal of trouble, and put an end to all unpleasant speeching about ultramontanism and Jesuitism and the like, if Catholicity were presided over by a High Joint Commission appointed by the Cabinets of Berlin and Berlin? To be sure the faithful in Ireland, France, Spain, Austria and the American Continent might complain about national influences, and might ask what special revelation from on High authorized these powerful monarchs to select a Vicar for Jesus Christ, but they could be answered that they did not know what was good for them, while the aforementioned potentates did understand it well! The learned and far-seeing director our attention to the circumstance that one German newspaper, supposed to be inspired by Prince Bismarck, declares one of the reasons why Kaiser Wilhelm's interference is necessary is because the Jesuits have determined that the successor to Pio Nono shall be an ecclesiastic pledged to forward their terrible designs upon the peace and harmony of the world. This astonishingly well-informed journal assures us, moreover, that the Supreme Pontiff himself and all his Cardinals are engaged in the awful plot against the welfare of the Church, and have agreed to an arrangement whereby the election is to be made in an unconscious manner! Is it not well for all of us, poor Catholics, that these Teutonic politicians have put themselves up as interpreters of Canon Law, and are gallantly coming to the rescue of our imperiled faith. The Prussian Minister has been thoughtful enough to seek the cooperation of the President of the French Republic, but the latter, strange to say, declined at once, and in peremptory terms. M. Thiers answered that he would not meddle directly or indirectly with the Cardinals, but would let them fulfill their duty conscientiously for the glory of God, and the good of His Church. The Republican President disclaimed all pretensions to act as an expounder of Canon Law for the Catholic world, believing very probably that the Redeemer will prove faithful to His promise and preserve His Church in her foundation on a rock without the agency of kingly despots. The anti-Christian, revolutionary, and, with very few exceptions, the Protestant papers of both hemispheres, loudly applaud the designs of Prince Bismarck and urge him on to their prosecution. Some of them are foolish enough to imagine that the Papacy which, much to their chagrin, has survived the loss of the temporal power, can thus be finally and irremediably overthrown. Others, less hopeful, are yet delighted at the prospect of having doubt or discord thrown into the bosom of the Church. "If," they say to themselves, "the appearance of an anti-Pope is accused by the machinations of Emperor William and King Victor, if confusion is created in the ranks of the hierarchy, we shall be satisfied." Thus do they shamefully exhibit their malice and hatred of truth. In the meantime the Catholic millions of all nations take this matter very coolly, and are not even inclined to find amusement in it. Their trust is based upon those glorious words which issued from the divine mouth of the Son of God. "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." They know, therefore, with absolute certainty that the Church cannot be destroyed. Trials and tribulations may come, persecutions and misfortunes may come, as they have come repeatedly during the course of eighteen centuries, but these things cannot disheaten the faithful who are ready to bear them with firmness, and with resignation to the will of Providence. And, moreover, they have such confidence in the piety, zeal and wisdom of the Holy Father and the Cardinals by whom he is surrounded, that they firmly believe such precautions will be in due time taken, if, indeed, they have not been already taken, to prevent the possibility of these designing politicians being able to harass the slightest confusion in the Church, or to cast the smallest imaginable doubt upon the identity of the true successor of the Prince of the Apostles. For our part we feel perfectly satisfied that the miserable plots and intrigues of imperial despots and their soulless creatures will come to nothing, and fall utterly through their own intrinsic stupidity. Kaiser Wilhelm and Victorio Emmanuele will not be able to usurp authority in the Church of God as they were able to possess themselves of the property and revenues of the United Italy—by the strong hand. They may indeed play the persecutor within the limits of the territory subject to their power as monarchs, but that is the utmost they can ever accomplish. We would advise those journals, here and elsewhere, which busy themselves with predictions as to the result likely to be achieved by German and Piedmontese coercion of the College of Cardinals, and which fairly go into ecstacies over their splendid expectations, to cease their ridiculous attempts at prophecy, and prefer quietness to having any difficulty about the matter. The excuse is frequently made that they are in ignorance of what kind of company their boys keep outside of home, or what they do during the hours of recreation. That is true certainly—but the ignorance is deliberate and wilful on their part—it is precisely that of which they are accused. They could know everything requisite if they only took a little trouble. There is not the slightest necessity for undue severity, or for interference with the freedom of action proper to be enjoyed even by children. Before a lad is utterly corrupted and depraved, he will naturally respect the admonitions of his parents and follow their advice. But when from negligence or indulgence, wholesome admonitions are not given, when it is found that parents display no concern whatever in the movements of their children, the propensity to will grows strong, and bad habits are acquired. We wonder do the parents of these misguided young lads ever reflect upon the terrible fact that Almighty God will hold them responsible for the conduct of their offspring. If through neglect of their duties as fathers and mothers, their boys become lost to grace and given to all manner of wickedness, are they not accountable? Now the papers are discussing—what is to be done with the Hoodlums, how ought they be repressed? It is certainly high time to ventilate such questions whether robbery, burglary, manslaughter and murder are to be numbered among the crimes imputed to them. But, whatever course will be adopted to save the community from their outrages, the fact remains, that the first criminality as well as the responsibility before God, lies with the parents whose neglect of the most important duties has alone made Hoodlumism what it is.

JUVENILE OFFENDERS.

The fact that there are four young men, or rather boys, now in the city Prison charged with the awful crime of murder, is one suggestive of much profound reflection. Their guilt or innocence is yet to be decided in our courts, so we shall make no reference whatever to them as individuals. But, it cannot be denied, that the crime imputed to them are the natural result of that rowdy spirit which is generally termed "Hoodlumism." The papers every day contain accounts of the doings of "Hoodlums," which show that in regards these young desperadoes are prepared to go for the gratification of their wicked propensities. The most innocent of their demonstrations consist in knocking up a watchman, assailing the passers-by with obscene and profane language, rudely jostling defenceless women, or engaging in pugilistic encounters among themselves. From these "sports," they proceed frequently to robbery, and occasionally to murder. All of them, even the youngest, go armed with knife or pistol, often with both, and they use their deadly weapons upon the slightest imaginary provocation. The question is asked repeatedly:—Who is to blame for the conduct of the Hoodlums?" Undoubtedly their parents in the first instance. Who are the Hoodlums? Mostly boys, who are under no restraint at home, who are allowed to roam the streets at all hours of the day and night, who receive little or no religious instruction, and who, therefore, speedily become conversant by bad example. Their elders, whom they meet in the streets and in the saloons, are bad and lawless. The decent members of society, the respectable part of law abiding, have no time to spend "loafing around;" they are engaged in their proper business. But the thief, the burglar, the gambler, the card sharp, all the fraternity that live by their wits and prey upon others, have to remain on the streets and lounge in the saloons, for it is there they secure their game. It is contact with sad companionship with such characters, that made the first Hoodlums. Boys are highly susceptible of impressions, they naturally follow the example of those they find around them—in a word, they are what they are found—corrupt and depraved. The fault of the parents consists in neglecting to exercise any supervision over the intimacies and friendships contracted by their children. Perhaps, they send them to school for a few hours each day—that is if they are very young, for the older boys will not endure the restraint of school discipline; but from the hour they return home, until an advanced time of night, they know absolutely nothing of their whereabouts or what they are doing. The fathers and mothers do not seem to care about these matters, or if they do care, they prefer quietness to having any difficulty about the matter. The excuse is frequently made that they are in ignorance of what kind of company their boys keep outside of home, or what they do during the hours of recreation. That is true certainly—but the ignorance is deliberate and wilful on their part—it is precisely that of which they are accused. They could know everything requisite if they only took a little trouble. There is not the slightest necessity for undue severity, or for interference with the freedom of action proper to be enjoyed even by children. Before a lad is utterly corrupted and depraved, he will naturally respect the admonitions of his parents and follow their advice. But when from negligence or indulgence, wholesome admonitions are not given, when it is found that parents display no concern whatever in the movements of their children, the propensity to will grows strong, and bad habits are acquired. We wonder do the parents of these misguided young lads ever reflect upon the terrible fact that Almighty God will hold them responsible for the conduct of their offspring. If through neglect of their duties as fathers and mothers, their boys become lost to grace and given to all manner of wickedness, are they not accountable? Now the papers are discussing—what is to be done with the Hoodlums, how ought they be repressed? It is certainly high time to ventilate such

TIPPERARY NATIONAL BAZAAR.

We print elsewhere in our columns an appeal to Irishmen in general and Tipperary men in particular signed by Thomas Francis Burke, Edward L. Carey and John McClure. Its purport is to solicit the aid of their fellow-countrymen throughout the States in relieving some of Tipperary's truest and bravest nationalists for the expense incurred by them during that memorable election contest which resulted in the return of O'Donovan Rossa as parliamentary representative for Ireland's premier county. Rossa was at the time lying fast bound in an English bastile branded as "a felon" according to law, a convicted rebel against her Most Gracious and Sovereign Majesty, Victoria; yet the Tipperary men showed the world that he had not thereby lost their confidence or esteem. An election contest is always, and under all circumstances, a most expensive affair, and unfortunately this one was particularly so. The Government officials and Castle authorities did their utmost to embarrass the patriot voters and make the struggle a costly one. Money was no object to them, they had plenty of it, and they fancied they could beat down Rossa's friends by the sheer weight of their purse. They failed ignominiously, because the rebel republican was returned by a large majority. Of course his prison doors was not opened, of course he was not allowed enter the Halls of St. Stephen's, but the constituent was made—Tipperary had chosen the fetter-bound Fenian as its representative. A more significant expression of opinion, a grander endorsement of the principles of republican liberty, was never yet made by any people. A great deal of the work was done by volunteers who asked nothing for their services; much of the expense was borne by ardent nationalists who put their hands in their pockets and paid out more than they could actually afford. Still a debt of thirteen hundred and fifty pounds, about six thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars, remained to be provided for. A few spirited men with, probably, more patriotism than prudence, made themselves liable for it. They trusted that the generous pride of their countrymen all over the world in the magnificent demonstration of nationality they had made, would come to their rescue whenever payment was demanded. That time is close at hand, the money has to be paid soon, or these men will be ruined. They are not wealthy, and it is impossible for them to liquidate a debt which is really not theirs but belongs to every true Irishman in an equal degree. To save them the Tipperary National Bazaar has been organized. The prizes are numerous and valuable and the entertainment is such as cannot fail to give satisfaction to all. The committee in Ireland has sent to this country as an agent one of the truest, staunchest and noblest patriots that ever trod the soil of Tipperary, or, indeed, of Ireland, T. P. O'Connor, Esq., of Laffanns, Clonouty. He is now in New York, where a most cordial welcome has been tendered to him by his fellow countrymen, and where a Committee has been appointed to promote the affairs of the Bazaar. We feel certain that California will not be without taking a share in the good work. A Committee of a few earnest men is about being formed, and they will either send on to Mr. O'Connor for a supply of tickets, or else devise some other means of helping to liquidate the debt of the Tipperary patriotic exiles. The tickets, only fifteen cents each, are sold singly or in books of twenty containing one complimentary one for the vendor. Communications addressed to Captain John McClure, 382 Bowery, New York, will be promptly attended to. Next week we expect we shall be in a position to say something about our local Committee, and what they hope to accomplish.

THE NORTH CAROLINA ELECTION.

The first report from North Carolina was to the effect that the Democrats, or Conservatives as they are termed there, had carried the State by a large majority. It was at one time asserted that the majority would mount up as high as seventeen thousand votes. Since then, however, each successive report has decreased the Democratic vote, until it now stands at little more than fifteen hundred ahead of the Republican. It was also believed at first that Merriman, the Conservative candidate for Governor, was elected, whilst the latest dispatches accord that good fortune to his opponent, Caldwell. Here we have a series of the most remarkable changes recorded of any election in this country. Popular opinion is very seldom astray in these matters. It is next to impossible that so large a miscalculation as fifteen or sixteen thousand votes could have been made. Consequently, we are convinced that if the ballots were properly cast and the count thereof made in good faith, Merriman's majority would stand pretty nearly as at first described. We allow a great deal when we admit that it might be brought down to ten thousand; that it should be overturned altogether and a small majority be accorded to the Radical candidate, we regard as being completely irreconcilable with the idea of fair play. We have no hesitation, therefore, in proclaiming our profound conviction that some of the grossest frauds ever perpetrated in this country have been committed by the Administration party in the late election. If "co-operation" and repeating and stuffing could be secured by an unscrupulous distribution of greenbacks, we may rest assured they were duly purchased. But what have the people of North Carolina to say of this outrageous violation of their rights, this fraudulent transfer of their State to a Radical Governor?

PROSECUTION OF THE GALWAY PRIESTS.

We notice in the daily papers a paragraph stating that the Attorney General for Ireland had declared in the House of Commons his intention of prosecuting twenty-four of the Galway clergy for their conduct during the Trench-Nolan election. Without a word of explanation, the paragraph in question might create impressions unfavorable to the priests, quite unjustified, and moreover extremely unjust to them. The fact is, that this prosecution, if such it can be properly called, is brought in accordance with the publicly avowed wishes of Protestants and their Bishops. Immediately after the publication of Judge Keogh's monstrous judgment—that is as soon as they became aware of its charges against the Galway priests contained in it—the Most Reverend Archbishop of Tuam and the Most Reverend Dr. McEvilly signified their intention of getting its correctness tested in a court of law. It was the duty of the Bishops to thus act in defending the Judge of libel, and if they did not avail themselves of it, or if they could not bring it to pass, the clergymen whose honor was at stake in question, and the Bishops in the main under the stigma cast upon them. Both these distinguished prelates petitioned Parliament to grant a trial of the case, and we were not in the least willing to be a slave to redeem the slave, of a Francs who was potent the blindness of men because they neglected their interests—the love of God.

I know, Rev. Fathers, you claim no land as yours. I know you have forsaken home and country, abandoned the joys of science, renounced, perhaps, the gown of the toga of minister to the poor and you, to console the captive in his chains, the slave in the mines, or the oppressed wrestling under the horrors of tyranny. I know the Religious Orders are everywhere. They have peopled the desert, they have cultivated too soil, they have mastered the arts, and science—in a word, they have ministered unto the needy in every phase of suffering. They were the first Europeans that visited the coasts of Guinea—the first, they were to minister and its teachers. In Paraguay they were husbandmen, mechanics, artists, legislators and statesmen—they gave birth to our own glorious Republic, evangelized and most devoted citizens. They are all things to all men to gain all for Christ. With no other weapon but the cross, they have raised the standard of civilization, and called around them the children of the forest, and beheld a commonwealth spring up at which even Voltaire says: "it is the triumph of humanity."

Such ladies, and gentlemen, are your guests—the noble men for whose benefit you have so generously got up this magnificent festival.

Some writers—libellers of the fair fame of the best benefactors of our race—tell these men lazy monks, tools of despots, and enemies of liberty and education. They

THE MAJESTY OF LAW.

At the recent Assizes there were just three prisoners to be tried in the whole county of Meath, Ireland. The offences with which they were charged were quite insignificant and demanded only a moderate penalty if the parties were convicted. To dispense justice to this trio, the British Government sent down two judges, to wit: the Right Honorable Lord Chief Justice Whiteside, and the Honorable Mr. Justice O'Brien, thus giving them the small allowance of a victim and a-half each. In addition to these high functionaries, there were the High Sheriff, the Under Sheriff, twenty-four Grand Jurors, thirty-six Petty Jurors, a Crown Solicitor, several police Inspectors and the usual army. If the three prisoners in the dock and the entire population out of it were not properly impressed with the force and majesty of the law, it certainly was not the fault of the paternal government. The Dublin Irishman says the following in connection with the singular display, speaks of the great expense attending it. As long as the right of fixing the amount of taxation lies with the government, and the people have nothing to do but pay, there will not, we fancy, be much economy practised in these matters. Yet, a few very important reflections suggest themselves in reference to this grand judicial turn-out. It must have cost, we are informed, considerably over fifteen thousand dollars, or more than five thousand dollars apiece for the supposed culprits—a sum which would have been a small fortune to each of the men, and would have insured justice from ever being troubled with them again. If the plan of dealing with criminals engaged by this last case carried out, what an immense saving there would be effected, not only in Ireland, but all over the civilized world! Too much money is spent upon the punishment of crime, and too little upon the prevention of it. In Ireland, particularly, there is an amount spent in punishing offenses mainly attributable to poverty, which would suffice to remove all temptation from those likely to be guilty of them. So blind is human justice—so poor are our plans for dealing with crime! The worst of it is, that the more civilization progresses the greater is the mischief caused by this method of dealing out justice.

THE EXILED FRIARS.

Great Festival at the City Gardens.

The grand three-days' festival in aid of the Franciscan and Dominican Fathers exiled from Germany was inaugurated quietly on Thursday morning of this week. At 11 o'clock about three the sand persons were on the grounds, perambulating the various avenues and disporting in the light, manner as seemed to them best. The swings and rocking horses were well patronized by the youngsters, whose merry laugh resounded through the gardens. Two excellent bands of music were in attendance, and their electric strains made those wicked and unfounded charges the cause for their expulsion! If they were lazy how could they accomplish such wonderful works. They have traversed vast countries, climbed high mountains, passed over burning deserts, visited the islands of the sea, and everywhere they have proved themselves the best friends of the aboriginal inhabitants. Many have over been the tools of despots, but how is it that the vilest despots of the earth have, wherever they could, waged a relentless and cruel war against these friars? We have the highest authority for saying, that they are the friends of the world would love its own. If they are the enemies of liberty, how is it that they have ever been the loved friends of the people? Send I refer you to the great services they rendered Christendom in the days of its sternest trials? Will I speak of the monks of the Rio de la Plata, by the illustrious sons of St. Ignatius? They gave to the world the most perfect form of government it has ever known. If they are the enemies of education, why is it that they have everywhere among the best educators, and have always been found in the front rank of the benign influences? Were they not the preservers of letters, of the arts and sciences, during the dark ages, with all the splendor of the most solemn promises to the word of teaching? While were the lights that blazed the brightest in the most famous Universities of the world? Shallow, narrow-minded men, ignorant of all personages, that the only safety for society or individuals is to be found in the principles of liberty, in the recognition of the rights of the weakest, even when most in the wrong, in the practice of charity to all—to all of any kind, we are proudly interested in the welfare of the exiled friars, and we are glad to see that the people of this city are so generously disposed to manifest their sympathy with them. Both these distinguished prelates petitioned Parliament to grant a trial of the case, and we were not in the least willing to be a slave to the redeem the slave, of a Francs who was potent the blindness of men because they neglected their interests—the love of God.

I know, Rev. Fathers, you claim no land as yours. I know you have forsaken home and country, abandoned the joys of science, renounced, perhaps, the gown of the toga of minister to the poor and you, to console the captive in his chains, the slave in the mines, or the oppressed wrestling under the horrors of tyranny. I know the Religious Orders are everywhere. They have peopled the desert, they have cultivated too soil, they have mastered the arts, and science—in a word, they have ministered unto the needy in every phase of suffering. They were the first Europeans that visited the coasts of Guinea—the first, they were to minister and its teachers. In Paraguay they were husbandmen, mechanics, artists, legislators and statesmen—they gave birth to our own glorious Republic, evangelized and most devoted citizens. They are all things to all men to gain all for Christ. With no other weapon but the cross, they have raised the standard of civilization, and called around them the children of the forest, and beheld a commonwealth spring up at which even Voltaire says: "it is the triumph of humanity."

Such ladies, and gentlemen, are your guests—the noble men for whose benefit you have so generously got up this magnificent festival.

Some writers—libellers of the fair fame of the best benefactors of our race—tell these men lazy monks, tools of despots, and enemies of liberty and education. They Hannah Barry, Maggie Hickey and Katie Flier.

PHOTOGRAPHS

Of the Exiled Friars are sold in the bazaar. They are represented as fine looking-men, of all ages; one of them in particular, the new Superior (40 odd one recently deceased) being of very imposing appearance, and exceedingly venerable aspect.

GOLD-HEADED CANE.

There is a handsome gold-headed cane on exhibition, which is to be balloted for between the friends of Grant and Greeley. On Thursday evening about 1500 tickets had been sold, Greeley being the favorite. The following names ladies will receive the ballots and act as judges of the elections: Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. J. Schoonmaker Mrs. O. C. Comstock, Miss Annie McGrath, Mrs. Patterson, Miss Mary Collins, Miss Lizzie Lowery, Miss Mary A. Murphy; Miss O'Neill, Miss Mary P. Hinz, Miss Annie Green, Miss Davies and Miss Josie Dunning. The balloting will commence until the close of the festival. Woman suffrage will be fully recognized, but separate ballot-boxes will be provided for the men who want to vote, at the suggestion of the ladies, who aver that they will vote as if accustomed to it all their lives, and that they will outnumber the sterner sex two to one.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The officers selected by the Literary Committee are, President of the Festival, Hon. Thomas H. Williams, Jr.; Grand Marshal, Hon. Thomas Vivier; Vice-President, C. Brenil, Consul of France; Mr. Mueske, Consul of the Austria-Hungarian Empire; Camile Martinez, Consul of Spain; Hon. John B. Felton, Myles D. Sweeny, Gen. J. R. Hardenbergh, James Otis, Kelly, Dr. Sir A. Gachet, P. Herman Isenecks Esq., Hon. John McGlynn, Hon. P. A. Roach, W. H. Rhodes, Louis Kentrick.

Miss Annie Green is the name of the Chairman of the various Committees; Frank Capt. M. Greany; Refreshments, James Cahill; Sports and Games Capt. J. P. Dougherty; Printing and gate, W. V. Gaffey; Music, James Sweeney; Invitations, Thos. Reilly; Donations, Mr. Indebaugh; Literary, T. P. Wall; Prizes, Daniel Sweeney; Grounds, Judge Connolly; Bazar, Capt. H. C. Beteman; Secretary of the Bazaar Committee, J. F. Sullivan.

THE CONDITION OF THE CHILDREN.

The girls are in a pitiable sight. All are nearly barefoot, and there are those among themselves to their utmost to provide for their wants. Hundreds visited the scene of the disaster yesterday, and numerous offerings were contributed by the kind-hearted. The society is in a prosperous condition, no debts of any amount have been contracted, and it will not be long before everything will again be in working order.

IMMEDIATE AID WANTED.

All charitable persons are earnestly requested to assist immediately in providing the clothing, sustenance, and shelter necessary for the poor girls now temporarily deprived by fire of their home, which the Board of Managers have already commenced to make arrangements to replace.

HISTORY OF THE PROTECTORY.

The Protectory has a very remarkable history, one which illustrates the trials and vicissitudes of a great organization which began its work with a light treasury. It was founded to preserve the faith of Catholic children, and to prevent their commitment to Protestant institutions. Dr. L.K. Ives first conceived the idea which resulted in the establishment of the Protectory. The doctor was accosted to the Catholic Church, and he adhered to his new faith until the hour of his death. He was at one time a bright luminary in the Episcopal communion, having been advanced rapidly from the office of deacon to that of Bishop of North Carolina. His wife, a daughter of the distinguished Bishop Hobart, was inclined to follow in the path of her husband, but he left her for a brief period to prepare for entering the priesthood. The doctor, however, did not receive Holy Orders, but remained a layman. He founded the Protectory in the year 1863, his associates in the charitable enterprise being Charles M. Connolly, John O'Brien, E. C. Donnelly, Henry J. Anderson, Daniel Devlin, Eugene Kelly, II. Hilton, Jr., J. White and the Rev. Wm. Quinn, the popular pastor of St. Peter's Church, Barclay St. The nucleus of their arrangements to provide for little ones that only time to reach the poor when applications in behalf of unprotected children became so numerous and pressing as to compel the executive committee, in view of their limited means, to restrict the number of inmates to such boys as might be committed by the courts and branded as vagrants by the Commissioners of Charities and Corrections.

PROVIDING FOR THE GIRLS.

They also made provisions for girls. Dr. Ives raised a public building at Eighty-sixth Street and Second Avenue to establish an Asylum for female children, and this asylum, which preceded the female branch of the Protectory—just destroyed—was placed under the direction of the Sisters of Charity. Executive Committee also rented two houses connected by their yards at Thirty-six and Thirty-seven Bloomfield, and these are set apart for boys. In the first year of the organization 323 children were committed to the Institution. The Boys' House of the Protectory from all sources in 1871 was $235,025 65. The number of children now under its care is about 1,000, and there has been 5,021 children who have been sent in as wards to the Protectory.

AN UNKNOWN DONOR GIVES $10,000.

Soon after the Protectory was founded the Executive Committee found it to be utterly impossible to meet the obligations they had incurred. Dr. Ives came to their rescue, but even he was finally at his wit's end for money. He went among his friends and raised a small amount of money, too small, however, to pay some urgent claims against the institution. The Executive Committee required $10,000 to pass them over the financial troubles, but how and where to obtain that sum was a puzzle for the executive committee. Dr. Ives spoke to a number of Catholic gentlemen about the embarrassments of the Protectory, but no one volunteered to help him out of the difficulty. One morning, however, while sitting in his office, the Doctor received a letter by mail, containing a check for the amount. It contained $10,000, and was signed by a name unknown to Dr. Ives, and the donor was not given.—N. Y. Sun, July 28.

BRIEF CITY ITEMS.

The son of Rear-Admiral Winslow shot himself through the head at the Occidental Hotel on Tuesday night.

About $700,000 have been subscribed towards the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad. The subscribers so far number about 1,500 persons.

On Tuesday of last week, a man named Marshall, formerly Marshal of Salt Lake City, fatally shot James Crotty, familiarly known as Short-Haired Jimmy. Marshall has been arrested.

The Hibernia Savings and Loan Society has obtained judgment for foreclosure of mortgage against Dr. A. J. Bowie for $1,100. The property is worth more than the amount due.

Lieutenant-Colonel Thos. Gray, on the retired list, and formerly Captain in the Second U. S. Artillery, died Wednesday afternoon, at his residence, on the corner of Guerrero and Twenty-third streets, from a severe attack of apoplexy. His remains will be buried from the Presidio Barracks.

The Irish National Convention met Wednesday evening at Hibernia Hall, 9 Market Wall in the Chair. Reports were received from the various delegates of the Societies represented. All stated that their Societies and organizations were willing as individuals to contribute to the Convention, but did not wish to touch their Society funds. It was stated that it was not the intention or wish of the convention that any Society should do so, and that they did not wish to interfere with the internal economy of any organization whatever. There being no further business before the Convention, it adjourned until Friday, the 23d inst., at their usual hour.

An Irishman Declares.—Before the Board of Supervisors adjourned last week, as a Board of Equalization, they decided that they will not levy a tax on the deposits in the savings banks for the fiscal year should they be assessed, and cancelled the assessments. The amount of mortgages from which this decision removes taxation is $35,416,782, 90. The cash in hand amounts, perhaps, to one million dollars, making the value of the bank buildings and fixtures in, of course, good condition. Borrowers are indebted for this pleasing decision to the representatives of the Irish Hibernia Bank, and the convincing manner in which the case was presented by the Bank's attorney, Richard Tobin, Esq.

TELEGRAPHIC JOTTINGS.

A Quebec telegram of the 6th says: That at the general elections for Center and West Wellington yesterday, the Canchon men in the Center took possession of the polls and committed fearful excesses. The Rose men barricaded themselves in their houses, were too weak for their assailants, who were 2,000 strong and were armed with revolvers. A fearful encounter took place at the foot of Eustachs street. Several lives were lost, while wounds were numerous. The polls being taken possession of, no fair returns could be made, but Cauchon, the French Canadian candidate, is declared returned. The English-speaking population, it would seem, are to be determinated by the French, according to the statements of the leaders of the French party. It is feared that more blood will be shed, as the Diamond Harbor boys are going up town to revenge the murder of their men.

A Washington telegram of the 8th says that there is a rumor there to the effect that Colonel Moody and Dr. Watson fought a duel that morning, in which Colonel Moody was killed. The report comes from Alexandria, Virginia, and needs confirmation.

A London letter says that one of the most influential members of the International Workingmen's Association asserts that it is not improbable that the dissolution of the Association will be consummated at the coming General Congress at Hague, on the 2d of September.

Rt. Rev. Bishop Amat preached at St. Mary's church, Gilroy, on Sunday, July 28, to a crowded congregation, on the virtue of humility. The discourse of the venerable prelate was pregnant with piety and good advice. After the celebration of Mass, Bishop Amat administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to some eighteen persons of both sexes.

A Solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated in St. Francis' Church on Thursday, for the repose of the souls of the brother and sister of Rev. Father Vedelago, whose demise in France we recently recorded. Father Vedelago himself acted as celebrant; Father Valentini as Master of Ceremonies; Father Guasco of San Pablo, Deacon; Father Gairigs, sub-Deacon. There were present in the Sanctuary, Rev. Fathers Aerden, Olivey, McCullough, Largan, Fowar, Derham, Doogan, Bowman of San Mateo, Dejaret of Napa, Fergus of Mission San José.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.—We have just received two late for notice this week, from Mr. Waldteufel of San José, on behalf of the Catholic Publication Society, of Warren street, New York, the following books: "The Betrothed," by Manzoni; "The Spiritual Exercises of Saint Ignatius," and "Canon Oakley on the Mass." We also acknowledge receipt of the Catholic Record and Peters' Musical Monthly.

THE NEW SPANISH CHURCH.—A dramatic performance in the Spanish language will be given at Maguire's Opera House, in aid of the Building Fund of the above institution, on Monday evening the 12th inst. The performance will be under the direction of Señor Llata, and the characters will be represented by a company of amateurs.

GAME LAW.—After the 1st day of August, according to the game law, hunters can kill elk, deer or antelope, until the 1st day of January. The balance of the year it is unlawful to kill such game. On and after the 15th of September quail and all kinds of duck, geese, brant, grouse, snipe and plover can be killed, up to the 15th of March.

The San Diego Daily Bulletin, a Republican paper, has suspended, and the Daily World has been started on its ruins. The announcement is to be a lively paper, and will support Greeley and Brown. W. Jeff. Osborne, Esq., a veteran journalist, is chief editor.

THE LADIES' FAIR in aid of St. Rose's church, Sacramento, will commence on the 14th October next. The ladies of Sacramento are straining every nerve to make the Fair what it undoubtedly will be, and ought to be—a grand success.

Rich hawk, hawk, spot, spot, blow, blow, and dingeon everybody with your calamity and its offensive odor, when Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will speedily destroy all odor, arrest the discharges and cure you.

GENERAL NOTES.

The Duchess de la Torre, the wife of Marshal Serrano, is going to establish herself in Paris.

The Germanica Herald states that Mrs. Dr. Mother of Mr. Asbeston Smith, of Mount Bay, Archbishop Alemany officiating, has been received into the Catholic Church.

On the 6th ult., two Englishmen, attended by their seconds, perambulated the streets of Frankfort-on-the-Main, distributing facts right and left.

It is announced that the Russian Government has instituted inquiries into the recent murders of Englishmen in the Caucasus, but without satisfactory results.

It is stated that the German Government has postponed until January, 1873, the compulsory use of German as the official language in the French-speaking district of Alsace.

Figaro informs us that, at a meeting in the quarter St. Germain, ladies resolved to propose a tax of ten francs per cent. on every fresh that cosie more than a hundred francs.

We understand that proceedings are about to be taken against Dr. H. W. Blandell, of All Saints', Clifton, for alleged ritualistic practices. Dr. Stephens has been retained on behalf.—John Bull.

Lieutenant-General de Guiben, who commanded during the war the cavalry of General de Mantauffel, has been ordered to go and spend three months at Hogan (Silesia), in consequence of a quarrel with the lieutenant-officer.

The French Foreign Minister has notified the Powers that the sittings of the International Congress, to take into consideration the universal introduction of the metrical system, will commence on the 24th of September.

In answer to a memorial on the subject, it has been announced that steps will shortly be taken to make the Exhibition more accessible to the working classes by keeping it open one night in the week until ten, at an admission of sixpence after six o'clock.

The House of Commons has refused a vote of £500 for painting one panel in fresco in the Central Hall of the Houses of Parliament, on the ground that the frescoes were all crumbling away, and that it was folly for any more of them.

The decay of the frescoes of Mr. Maclise in the Victoria Gallery of the Houses of Parliament has been referred to an eminent chemist, and a process will be adopted for the preservation of the pictures which has proved successful in other cases.

It is said that a proposition will be laid before the Dublin Exhibition Committee at its next meeting, to invite the Emperor and the Empress of the French to visit the Exhibition in August, and, if possible, on the 15th of that month, it being the Emperor's

New Advertisements.

THE WORLD'S JUBILEE!

One of the notable facts of the World's Jubilee at Boston was that the ONLY PIANOS used were the

HALLETT, DAVIS & CO.'S

NOW PRONOUNCED THE UNRIVALLED.

That the PARLOR AND UPRIGHT ORGANS of WOOD & CO.,

Which took the highest rank, were the soonest sold, while all other Pianos were discarded at the World's Jubilee, those of HALLETT, DAVIS & CO. were selected as the best, and the only ones used.

WM. G. BADGER,
Sole Agent.
1927 No. 7 and 18 Sansome street.

Twenty-six'h Semi-Annual Report
OF THE HIBERNIA
SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY

TO THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE HIBERNIA Savings and Loan Society:—Gentlemen: The undersigned, your Auditing Committee, having examined into the affairs of your Society, beg leave to report as follows:

Having examined the books and counted the Cash on hand, we find the same to be correct, as per following statement:

Statement of Receipts and Disbursements from Jan. 31, 1872, to July 31, 1872.

| | |
|---|---|
| There was on hand in cash January 31st, 1872 | $441,183 39 |
| Received from depositors | 1,731,000 00 |
| Received from borrowers | 1,181,700 84 |
| Received from interest on borrowers | 33,548 20 |
| Received sundries fees | 2,140 00 |
| Paid depositors | $1,343,554 56 |
| Paid borrowers | 1,210,400 00 |
| Cash expenses | 13,871 43 |
| Taxes | 25,000 00 |
| U. S. Bonds | 462,000 00 |
| Cash Balance | 334,746 24 |
| | $3,389,572 23 |

There are no "worn official notes" in the state of saving machines in this or any country, but the second special committee state that the carded double-thread sewing machines of the family beee exchanged for the Wilcox & Gibbs Silent Family Sewing Machine, has recently been sold in New York, and the double-thread companies are so rified about it that a little sewing machine is now thought to be almost, by any means, proper.

New Advertisements.

GREAT REDUCTION

IN

Catholic Books.

ON AND AFTER THE 5TH AUGUST I will sell all my Catholic and Miscellaneous Books and Stationery at New York prices.

I have now in stock a large assortment of all kinds of Catholic Books published in the United States and Ireland, including editions of Varvel, Peart and Ivory Prayer Books and all kinds of Catechisms.

Orders from the country promptly attended to. Schools and country dealers will be supplied at wholesale rates.

H. C. BATEMAN,
CATHOLIC BOOKSELLER,
308 KEARNY STREET, COR. SUTTER.
au10-1p-if

MAGUIRE'S OPERA HOUSE

—FOR ONE NIGHT ONLY—

MONDAY EVENING, AUGUST 12th,

SPANISH PERFORMANCE

FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE Building Fund

—OF THE—

NEW SPANISH CHURCH.

The performance will be under the direction of SEÑOR LLATA

C. JOSEPH

HAS REMOVED HIS STORE TO

403 KEARNY STREET,

Between Pine and California.

IT IS THE ONLY FRENCH HOUSE IMPORTING DIRECT.

PH. HERBER OF PARIS.

C. JOSEPH has the honor to inform his numerous friends that he has removed from No. 406 to entrance of

Boots and Shoes

—FOR—

Ladies', Gentlemen and Children's Wear

403 KEARNY STREET, 403

Between Pine and California Streets.

au10-3m

GREAT WESTERN GUN WORKS

P

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

ENGLAND.

The London Times on Greeley.

The Times is horrified at the idea of Horace Greeley, "an ignorant pamphleteer," as it described him the other day, being accepted by the American Democracy as their candidate. His nomination it describes as a flagrant instance of demoralization. It expects that Grant will be returned. The Daily News also regards the nomination as a very extraordinary one.

Strange Bigotry!

Amongst the wills mentioned the other day in the newspapers there was one very strangely worded. The testator, a Sir Thomas Philips, left a considerable library, and one of the provisions in the will is that "no Roman Catholic shall ever be admitted to inspect the books or manuscripts." What can the poor man have been afraid of? Did he dread that Popish eye might discover in his virtuous sons secret which might be turned to account to the detriment of Protestantism? Sir Thomas is described as M. A., F. H. S., F. S. A., J. P., and D. L. Another title, in addition to all these, he fairly earned, namely, that which was conferred on the great Dr. Pangloss, the high and honorable distinction of A. S. S.—London Queries, July 15.

Another Scene in a Church.

The Bishop of Wilchester has inhibited the Rev. Mr. Wilkens, of Swanmore, Isle of Wight, for kissing his sons in the pulpit of St. Michael's Church, Southampton, on the occasion of the reopening a few days since, and his lordship has also called upon the Rev. F. M. Gregory, the vicar to offer explanations as regards the use of incense and the performance of other practices contrary to the Rubric on the same occasion. There was another scene in Chesterton on Sunday evening. The Rev. Herbert Smith, who publicly protested at the opening festival against what he had seen, has taken his seat in the centre aisle, and on the entrance of the vicar he rose and said he felt it to be his bounden duty to expose him. "What," said Mr. Smith, "is it to be done with you who set at defiance the authority of the bishop and churchwardens? People ought to leave the church." The vicar endeavored to remove Mr. Smith, but he, notwithstanding a great disparity of age between the two, rallied stoutly, and a policeman was sent for and came. "You," said the REV. GENTLEMAN, "represent the Queen, and I will accompany you directly," and he then left the church.—London Times, July 8th.

Gunpowder Tasted by the Sun's Rays.

On Tuesday evening an explosion, which happily was not accompanied with its usual grim companion death, occurred in a gun factory in Lichfield street, Birmingham. A gun finisher, named William Warton, was employed in extracting powder and shot from a quantity of old "Spencer repeating cartridges," which had been in his possession for a long period. He performed the operation in a garret, which was used as a workshop. The powder of about 50 or 60 of the cartridges was put into a basin, which was placed on a table opposite the window. Warton was standing near this table, engaged with the cartridges, when the sun, which had been rather powerful during the day, and, although evening, was then reflecting its rays into the room, ignited the powder, and consequently exploded. Warton was severely burnt on his face and arms, and was conveyed to the General Hospital. Fortunately there was not a large quantity of powder in the basin, or the consequences might have been more serious. Beyond a few panes of glass being blown out, and the ceiling of the room being discolored and damaged, little or no injury was done.

Progress of Catholicism in England.

The London correspondent of the Liverpool Weekly Albion, noticing in his last letter the presence of Monsignore Capel at all the aristocratic gatherings in London, goes on to say:

That Roman Catholicism as spreading among the higher classes of the country is a fact of which any one may obtain evidence for himself by visiting certain of the Roman Catholic churches in London. Let him take three—say, the Pro-Cathedral of Kensington; the Oratory South Kensington; and the Jesuit head-quarters in Farm street. If there be a "function," or even an ordinary holiday service, he will find a line of splendid equipages outside the entrance to any one of these churches, and an array of powdered footmen about the doors. Let him enter and look at the congregation, and he will see among them members of many of the greatest families in England. If no "function" or special service be going on, let him look up the names on the seats, and if he is not already acquainted with Roman Catholic statistics, he will not be a little suprised at the titles borne by some of the pew owners. Very strong exaggeration on these points are indulged in by those who are always trying to make out that Mr. Gladstone and one-half our public men are "Jesuits in disguise;" but all exaggeration being put aside, there certainly is much going on all around us to show that the aristocratic ban has been taken off Roman Catholicism in this country, and that it is not unfashionable to worship with Dr. Manning and the disciples of Ignatius Loyola. Many Roman Catholics thought it was a mistake of the authorities at Rome to make Dr. Manning Archbishop of Westminster. Those persons now admit their mistake. He has given their religion an influence in English society such as they had not hoped to see it attain in their lifetime. He is a leading man among them, whether on the same platform with the Premier of the Church of England, or as a guest of the Conservative Lord Mayor of London. When he is present at a debate in the House of Lords he stands close to the Episcopal benches, and the right rev. Prelates converse with him before the assembled Lords Spiritual and Temporal in the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland assembled."

ITALY.

Bismarck and the Papacy.

The most improbable rumour has been current that Prince Bismarck has dispatched an officer of the German army as charge d'affaires to represent the empire at the Vatican. This would be the first instance on record of a soldier appearing before the Sovereign Pontiff the representative of any Christian power. It is certain that Pius IX. would never consent to receive such an envoy. The Roman municipality, with a consistent shabbiness, have refused this year the meagre gift to St. Peter's of a stallion, on a recurrence of the festival of the saint. Besides saving a few scudi, these large minded citizens have thus broken through a tradition some centuries old. Disgusted with such baseness, the Prince Campagnano has himself made the offering in the name of the city of Rome. The last citizen of political energy. When warned at four in the morning that their sentence was about to be executed, they abused the jailers, and said their friends would avenge them. They both refused to listen to the priest, and repulsed him rudely. When asked if they desired anything before leaving the prison, they took some wine and coffee. Rouillier smoked a dirty short pipe, laughed frequently, and sang snatches of songs. While this scene was going on Beaulon recognised in one of the jailers an old comrade in the Artillery of the Guard. With him he conversed quietly, and spoke with great coolness of the certainty he felt that his political friends would soon get the upperhand. After the very short interval for refreshments and preparation, the prisoners were conducted to the execution ground in the prison vans. The chaplain, Abbé Folet, rode with them. On the plateau of Satory at five in the morning the usual scene, 10,000 troops drawn up on three sides of a square, and two firing parties opposite two posts. The prisoners walked steadily to the posts, but again refused the priest so roughly that he hastily withdrew to a carriage, quite frightened. They placed their backs against the posts, Rouillac still smoking his pipe and singing, and seemed to wish their fate as bravely as they would from have done in the same place. But in consequence of its having been found a recent execution that the soldiers were made nervous by the sight of the prisoners' eyes, and could not take good aim, permission to cover them has been given that bandages shall be put around the eyes of every man brought out to be shot. Both Beaulon and Rouillac strenuously resisted the soldiers sent for execute the order. They loudly declared they would look death in the face. They tore off the bandages after they had had been put on, and threatened to push the soldiers away. It was a shocking and unparalleled scene. Ultimately they were overpowered by numbers, and not only bandaged, but they were forcibly lashed with cords to the posts. Both kept their position they were shot. Every bullet took effect. The bodies were so strongly tied that they did not fall. Their heads alone fell. Then they dropped without the least life in them. The like of this was never seen before at Satory."—Daily News.

A Commemorative Chapel.

Sunday, July 7th, was a gay day with the prosperous village of Villers-Bretonneux, now rapidly rising to the importance of a town. This town was brought into public notice on the 27th of November, 1870, the day preceding the Prussian occupation of Amiens, from which it is some ten miles distant. It formed the central portion of the great semicircle over which the series of detached actions, better known as the Battle of Amiens, extended. Last year the bodies of those who fell and were hurriedly buried were exhumed and re-interred in the cemetery of Villers-Bretonneux, when a funeral service was performed. Since then a subscription list, made in the North of France has raised a commemorative chapel on the spot which has seen the severest fighting. It is now nearly ready for consecration between the woods whence the Prussians debouched on the high road over the railway where the French made a determined stand, and where their General in command received a wound which obliged him to be carried from the scene of action. From an early hour the carriages of all descriptions brought their had dozen, while special trains brought their hundreds, generally consisting of Zouaves and Mobilisés who had taken part in the fight or the friends of those who died, for the battle of Villers-Bretonneux was almost a Mobilisés' battle, only four corps of Regulars having taken any part in it—viz., the 2nd and 20th Battalions of Chasseurs, 15th Regiment of Artillery, 43rd of the Line—and a small body of sailors. The Mobilisés engaged belonged principally to Lille, Roubaix, Douia, and St. Quentin; consequently this ceremony appealed strongly to the North of France. Invitations had been sent to the Red Cross societies of the Northern towns, nearly all of which sent delegates, the British National Society being also represented on this occasion, and their representatives received hearty thanks and acknowledgments from all the delegates present, as also from the inhabitants of Amiens and Villers-Bretonneux, who, to extend that, had it not been for the instantaneous and liberal supplies of the British National Society's depot, then at Amiens, many wounded must have succumbed. The names of Colonel and Mrs. Ouvrie were heard with words in this district, where they rendered such good service. The ceremony on Sunday consisted of service in the handsome Gothic church, of recent construction in red bricks with stone corners, a style very prominent in this neighborhood. An official reception of the Prefect of the Somme, M. Bonnaud, which General Henry, commanding the Military Division of the Somme and his Staff, the General in command of Lille, as also the Prefect, were represented, was held at the railway station, hence these gentlemen proceeded to the church, where the united choirs of several parishes performed a capital musical service, after which Père Jonin, Dominican censeur, of Arques du Nord, who was commanded to take the Lent at Saquenay, delivered an eloquent address. The procession having re-formed, proceeded to the commemorative chapel, a handsome Byzantine building constructed of brick and stone. The ceremony of benediction was performed by the Grand Vicaire of Amiens in the absence of the venerable Bishop, who had been unable to leave his palace, and after six two slabs bearing the names of those killed and the regiment they belonged. The ceremony concluded, the guests present repaired to the cemetery to visit the tombs of those slain, and afterwards to a banquet at the Mayor's. The battle had other victims than those who fell on the spot. Jacky Fisher, who has succeeded the late Captain N. E. Bulteke, whose untiring devotion to the wounded of the English Red Cross Knight, sowed the seeds of consumption, which produced their harvest very lately by carrying off this gallant soldier and kind Christian in the grave at the early age of 38. Many of the inhabitants of Villers-Bretonneux shed tears last Sunday on hearing of his death.

FRANCE.

Most Executions at Versailles.

Our Paris correspondent, writing on Saturday night July 6th, says "The bloody plain of history was the scene of two more executions this morning. The men shot this time were obscure individuals belonging to the dregs of the Paris population, who were sentenced to death by a court-martial for common law crimes during the reign of the Commune, with-out, the as prosecution alleged, any political pretext. And yet, one of them Rambois, was convicted, not only of murdering a man named Herrion, but of setting fire to public buildings. The other convict, Houillac, killed a man named Dubois, and afterwards robbed his house. The gentlemen, under a plural form, whether justly condemned of not, assumed the airs of political martyrs, and refused to listen to the priest, and repulsed him rudely. When asked if they desired anything before leaving the prison, they took some wine and coffee. Houillac smoked a dirty short pipe, laughed frequently, and sang snatches of songs. While this scene was going on Beaulon recognised in one of the jailers an old comrade in the Artillery of the Guard. With him he conversed quietly, and spoke with great coolness of the certainty he felt that his political friends would soon get the upperhand. After the very short interval for refreshments and preparation, the prisoners were conducted to the execution ground in the prison vans. The chaplain, Abbé Folet, rode with them. On the plateau of Satory at five in the morning the usual scene, 10,000 troops drawn up on three sides of a square, and two firing parties opposite two posts. The prisoners walked steadily to the posts, but again refused the priest so roughly that he hastily withdrew to a carriage, quite frightened. They placed their backs against the posts, Rouillac still smoking his pipe and singing, and seemed to wish their fate as bravely as they would from have done in the same place. But in consequence of its having been found a recent execution that the soldiers were made nervous by the sight of the prisoners' eyes, and could not take good aim, permission to cover them has been given that bandages shall be put around the eyes of every man brought out to be shot. Both Beaulon and Rouillac strenuously resisted the soldiers sent for execute the order. They loudly declared they would look death in the face. They tore off the bandages after they had had been put on, and threatened to push the soldiers away. It was a shocking and unparalleled scene. Ultimately they were overpowered by numbers, and not only bandaged, but they were forcibly lashed with cords to the posts. Both kept their position they were shot. Every bullet took effect. The bodies were so strongly tied that they did not fall. Their heads alone fell. Then they dropped without the least life in them. The like of this was never seen before at Satory."—Daily News.

A Commemorative Chapel.

Sunday, July 7th, was a gay day with the prosperous village of Villers-Bretonneux, now rapidly rising to the importance of a town. This town was brought into public notice on the 27th of November, 1870, the day preceding the Prussian occupation of Amiens, from which it is some ten miles distant. It formed the central portion of the great semicircle over which the series of detached actions, better known as the Battle of Amiens, extended. Last year the bodies of those who fell and were hurriedly buried were exhumed and re-interred in the cemetery of Villers-Bretonneux, when a funeral service was performed. Since then a subscription list, made in the North of France has raised a commemorative chapel on the spot which has seen the severest fighting. It is now nearly ready for consecration between the woods whence the Prussians debouched on the high road over the railway where the French made a determined stand, and where their General in command received a wound which obliged him to be carried from the scene of action. From an early hour the carriages of all descriptions brought their had dozen, while special trains brought their hundreds, generally consisting of Zouaves and Mobilisés who had taken part in the fight or the friends of those who died, for the battle of Villers-Bretonneux was almost a Mobilisés' battle, only four corps of Regulars having taken any part in it—viz., the 2nd and 20th Battalions of Chasseurs, 15th Regiment of Artillery, 43rd of the Line—and a small body of sailors. The Mobilisés engaged belonged principally to Lille, Roubaix, Douia, and St. Quentin; consequently this ceremony appealed strongly to the North of France. Invitations had been sent to the Red Cross societies of the Northern towns, nearly all of which sent delegates, the British National Society being also represented on this occasion, and their representatives received hearty thanks and acknowledgments from all the delegates present, as also from the inhabitants of Amiens and Villers-Bretonneux, who, to extend that, had it not been for the instantaneous and liberal supplies of the British National Society's depot, then at Amiens, many wounded must have succumbed. The names of Colonel and Mrs. Ouvrie were heard with words in this district, where they rendered such good service. The ceremony on Sunday consisted of service in the handsome Gothic church, of recent construction in red bricks with stone corners, a style very prominent in this neighborhood. An official reception of the Prefect of the Somme, M. Bonnaud, which General Henry, commanding the Military Division of the Somme and his Staff, the General in command of Lille, as also the Prefect, were represented, was held at the railway station, hence these gentlemen proceeded to the church, where the united choirs of several parishes performed a capital musical service, after which Père Jonin, Dominican censeur, of Arques du Nord, who was commanded to take the Lent at Saquenay, delivered an eloquent address. The procession having re-formed, proceeded to the commemorative chapel, a handsome Byzantine building constructed of brick and stone. The ceremony of benediction was performed by the Grand Vicaire of Amiens in the absence of the venerable Bishop, who had been unable to leave his palace, and after six two slabs bearing the names of those killed and the regiment they belonged. The ceremony concluded, the guests present repaired to the cemetery to visit the tombs of those slain, and afterwards to a banquet at the Mayor's. The battle had other victims than those who fell on the spot. Jacky Fisher, who has succeeded the late Captain N. E. Bulteke, whose untiring devotion to the wounded of the English Red Cross Knight, sowed the seeds of consumption, which produced their harvest very lately by carrying off this gallant soldier and kind Christian in the grave at the early age of 38. Many of the inhabitants of Villers-Bretonneux shed tears last Sunday on hearing of his death.

ITALY.

Bismarck and the Papacy.

The most improbable rumour has been current that Prince Bismarck has dispatched an officer of the German army as charge d'affaires to represent the empire at the Vatican. This would be the first instance on record of a soldier appearing before the Sovereign Pontiff the representative of any Christian power. It is certain that Pius IX. would never consent to receive such an envoy. The Roman municipality, with a consistent shabbiness, have refused this year the meagre gift to St. Peter's of a stallion, on a recurrence of the festival of the saint. Besides saving a few scudi, these large minded citizens have thus broken through a tradition some centuries old. Disgusted with such baseness, the Prince Campagnano has himself made the offering in the name of the city of Rome. The last citizen of political energy. When warned at four in the morning that their sentence was about to be executed, they abused the jailers, and said their friends would avenge them. They both refused to listen to the priest, and repulsed him rudely. When asked if they desired anything before leaving the prison, they took some wine and coffee. Rouillac smoked a dirty short pipe, laughed frequently, and sang snatches of songs. While this scene was going on Beaulon recognised in one of the jailers an old comrade in the Artillery of the Guard. With him he conversed quietly, and spoke with great coolness of the certainty he felt that his political friends would soon get the upperhand. After the very short interval for refreshments and preparation, the prisoners were conducted to the execution ground in the prison vans. The chaplain, Abbé Folet, rode with them. On the plateau of Satory at five in the morning the usual scene, 10,000 troops drawn up on three sides of a square, and two firing parties opposite two posts. The prisoners walked steadily to the posts, but again refused the priest so roughly that he hastily withdrew to a carriage, quite frightened. They placed their backs against the posts, Rouillac still smoking his pipe and singing, and seemed to wish their fate as bravely as they would from have done in the same place. But in consequence of its having been found a recent execution that the soldiers were made nervous by the sight of the prisoners' eyes, and could not take good aim, permission to cover them has been given that bandages shall be put around the eyes of every man brought out to be shot. Both Beaulon and Rouillac strenuously resisted the soldiers sent for execute the order. They loudly declared they would look death in the face. They tore off the bandages after they had had been put on, and threatened to push the soldiers away. It was a shocking and unparalleled scene. Ultimately they were overpowered by numbers, and not only bandaged, but they were forcibly lashed with cords to the posts. Both kept their position they were shot. Every bullet took effect. The bodies were so strongly tied that they did not fall. Their heads alone fell. Then they dropped without the least life in them. The like of this was never seen before at Satory."—Daily News.

BANKING.

HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY

Office—Northeast corner of Montgomery and Market streets.

OFFICERS:

President.....M. D. SWEENY
Vice-President.....C. D. O'SULLIVAN

TRUSTEES:

M. D. SWEENY, M. J. O'CONNOR,
C. D. O'SULLIVAN, P. MAHON,
JOHN SULLIVAN, GUSTAVE TOUCHARD,
R. J. TOBIN, JOHN O'HARA,
PETER DONAHUE.

Treasurer.....EDWARD MARTIN
Attorney.....RICHARD TOBIN

Remittances from the country may be sent through Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Express office, or any reliable business house; but the Society will not be responsible for their safe delivery. The signature of the depositor should accompany his first deposit. A passpr pass book will be delivered to the agent by whom the deposit is made.

Dividends received from 1st of each month.

Open from 10 A.M. to 3 P.M.

JOS. DONAHUE, San Francisco. | EUGENE KELLY, New York.

DONOHOE, KELLY & Co.

SAN FRANCISCO.

EUGENE KELLY & Co.

NEW YORK.

BANKERS.

EXCHANGE ON

NEW YORK, LONDON, AND
BANK OF IRELAND.....DUBLIN.

Payable at all the Branches,
AND IN EVERY COUNTY TOWN IN IRELAND.

SAN FRANCISCO

Savings Union,

532 California st., cor. Webb.

Deposits.....$4,561,481 01
Guarantee Capital and Reserve Fund.....210,000 00

President.....
Vice-President.....
Directors:

DENIS J. OLIVER, C. ADOLPHE LOW
CHARLES BAUM, GEO. C. POTTER,
WASHINGTON BARTLETT, CHARLES PACE,
ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, &c.

Cashier and Secretary.....JAMES D. PHELAN
Attorney.....JOHN ARCHBALD
Surveyor.....HENRY C. CAMPBELL

DEPOSITS DEPOSITS AND LOANS MONEY on real estate security.
Country remittances may be sent by Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Express, or any reliable business house; but the responsibility of the Society will not extend beyond the safe receipt of the money.
The signature of the depositor should accompany the first deposit.
No charge is made for pass book or entrance fee.
Office hours—9 a. m. to 3 p. m. Open Saturday evenings from 6 to 8.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

FRENCH MUTUAL PROVIDENT SAVINGS and Loan Society.—The Board of Directors declared a dividend of four per cent. per annum, and a bonus of one per cent. per annum, on all deposits, payable on and after July 1st, 1872, from profits realized in 1872, and in conformity with the report of the Committee of Verification appointed by the members of the Society, have been declared by the Board of Administration at its Semi-Annual meeting held on the 10th inst. This dividend will be payable on and after the 10th instant, at the office of the Society, 151 Montgomery street.
STEWART MAHE,
Director ad-hoc French Savings Bank.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

THE HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY, for the semi-annual dividend, at the office of the Society, No. 101 Sansome street, San Francisco, July 21, 1872.—At a meeting of the Board of Directors of this Society, held this day, a dividend was declared on all deposits entitled to the same, at the rate of four per cent. per annum, for the six months ending with the 31st of July, 1872, payable on and after the 1st of August next.
EDWARD MARTIN, Secretary.

HOTELS.

Removal.

THE SECOND STREET HOUSE

Has Removed to 123 Second street,

Northeast corner of Minna. Furnished Rooms to let, with or without board, on the most reasonable terms. Call and examine.
M. GOGGIL,
Proprietor.

CENTRAL HOTEL,

614 and 616 SANSOME STREET,

Between Broadway and Pacific.....San Francisco

THIS NEW, LARGE AND COMMODIOUS House has been thoroughly renovated, and the undersigned, late proprietor of the Russ House, would be pleased to see his friends and the public generally. The table will be supplied with the best the market affords, and the rooms are large and well ventilated.
There is a first-rate safe in the House, where money and valuables can be kept at the risk of the proprietor.
The Central House Coach will be at each car depot and steamboat landing, to convey passengers to the House free of charge.
Price of board per week.....$5 00
Single meals.....25 cents
Lodging.....25 cents
Board and Lodging per week.....$6 00

THE PACIFIC SCHOLASTIC BUREAU

Payable half yearly in advance.
For board, washing, tuition, warm and cold baths, and lights.....$10 per week.
Entrance fee, to be paid only once.....$5 00
Vacation at Lodings.....$5 00

DAY PUPILS.

Classical and commercial course, drawing, painting, and music.....$5 00
Use of the scholastic year reference may be had to the Rev. Father Maraschi, S. J., Univ. N. Y.
For further information address the Rev. Father Maraschi, S. J., Univ. N. Y.
Rev. P. BERO,
Director.

N. B.—One of the first Professors of the Jesuit College, Rome, has been appointed Professor of Italian in the College, and now has charge of the Italian class. Parents desirous to give their children an Italian education will do well to send them to this College.

DAY SCHOOL

FOR

Boys and Girls.

THE SISTERS OF MERCY HAVE opened a commodious school in their convent, near Bryant, where girls may be thoroughly instructed in the English branches. A Boys' School is being prepared for the reception of boys, and will be opened on the 15th inst. Both Schools will be opened on Monday, July 15th, at 9 o'clock A. M.
Apply to the Superior of the Convent,
San Francisco, May 12, 1872.

GEORGETOWN COLLEGE

The Academic Year Begins
First Monday of September, 1872.
The regular course of Lectures in the Medical Department will commence on the first Monday of October, 1872.
REV. JOHN BAPST,
President.

GROCERIES, WINES AND LIQUORS.

WILLIAM B. DOLAN,

145 Third Street.....San Francisco,

Importer and Dealer; Wholesale and Retail in French Wines and Brandies,

—AND—

Irish Whiskey,

Imported direct from Ireland.

HE HAS ALSO ON HAND A LARGE AS-sortment of California Wines of every description, which he will dispose of, to suit or in case, for the convenience of families.

All orders left at the store, 145 Third street, will be promptly attended to, and delivered free of charge to any part of the city.

JOHN FLANAGAN & CO.,

Importers and Jobbers of

Fine Brandies, Wines, Liquors, etc.,

Fine proof Rums, 612 Front street, bet. Clay & Washington,

San Francisco.

Foreign Liquors in bond. Fine Brandies, Holland Gin, Port, Claret, etc., sold in quantities to suit the purchaser.

Also, dealers in native California Wines and Brandies.

H. H. KELLY. JOSE FOGG.

Kelly & Egan,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

FINE WINES AND LIQUORS

No. 604 Battery street,

Near Jackson. San Francisco

D. Commins & Co.

(Successors to F. Riley & Co.)

WHOLESALE LIQUOR MERCHANTS

and No. 605 Front street.

A. P. HOTALING & CO.,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

WINES AND LIQUORS.

AGENTS FOR THE J. H. CUTTER

OLD BOURBON WHISKY,

C. P. MOORMAN & CO., DISTILLERS,

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY.

OWING TO THE DESERVED REPUTATION of this celebrated brand of Whisky, unprincipled dealers are imposing upon the public by false labels, as concerning the brand of the same, under the popular names of CUTTER, and by other names of a similar nature, to the injury of the bogus, represented in these spurious labels.

To guard as far as possible the public against fraud and imposition, we notify the trade and consumers that this is the only genuine brand of Cutter Whisky, and that we are the sole Agents for the same on the Pacific Coast.

A. P. HOTALING & CO.,
605 and 607 Battery street, San Francisco.

THOMAS J. POWER, 110 SECOND STREET
Marysville, over the city Mail Branch, Wines, Liquors and Cigars, on sale. A Brooklyn Lunch set daily.

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.

SULLIVAN, KELLY & CO.,

Northwest corner Pine and Front Sts.,

Where they offer for sale

THE LARGEST STOCK OF

PAINTS,
OILS,
GLASS,

ETC., ETC., ON THE PACIFIC COAST,

AT THE LOWEST MARKET RATES.

101, 103 and 105 FRONT STREET,
and 110 PINE STREET.

Premium Cutler.

First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1871
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1869
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1868
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1867
First Premium at Mechanics' Institute in 1866
First Premium at Mechanics' Institute in 1865
First Premium at Bay District Society in 1865
First Premium at New Orleans, 1870.

M. PRICE,

FOR HOME-MADE CUTLERY,

STORE: 615 MERRY ST., bet. Pine and California.

FACTORY: 10 STEVENSON STREET,

SAN FRANCISCO.

Razors, Knives, Shears, etc., made to order and warranted. Parties having Razors, Knives, Scissors, Damaged Cutlery, pointed equal to new, Cheerly orders promptly attended to. ap27

TROY BELLS.

Old Established Troy Bell Foundry,

TROY, N. Y. (Established 1825.)

A LARGE ASSORTMENT OF CHURCH, Academy and Fire Alarm, and other Bells constantly on hand, and made to order. Made of genuine Bell Metal, Warranted. Full Set of Bells for Churches, the best and most durable ever used. All Bells Warranted satisfactory.
Large Illustrated Catalogues and free upon application. Address
E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,
(or 103 Jackson street, Chicago, Ill.

DOG LICENSES FOR 1873

NOW DUE.

NOTICE TO OWNERS.

ALL DOGS NOT PROVIDED WITH A NEW Tag will be arrested by the Pound-keeper, and destroyed after the 1st inst. Tags now ready at office, No. 7 City Hall jal2-1m
C. P. HERRICK,
Collector of Licenses

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,

1.02 ARGUELLO, CAL.

DEGREES CONFERRED

Rev. JAMES MACHILL, C. M.
jal2-tf PRESIDENT.

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE

THE NEXT SESSION OPENS ON THE 15th of August. Parents, guardians and students are reminded of the following rules and regulations: Students will be admitted at the beginning of the vacation or Christmas holidays, and present on the day appointed for their respective classes, will, by the fact of absence, be liable to the tuition for the following half month, during which they have been absent, unless a satisfactory reason be rendered. Students will be received at any time during the year. Terms for washing.....$5 00
Board.....$150 00

A. CARAL, S. J.,
ap5-2m President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS IN every respect according to the laws of the State, is empowered to confer academical honors, and to grant Diplomas and Certificates of Graduation. The next session will begin on the first Monday in August, 1872. The course of instruction embraces the English, French, Spanish or German Languages, and Vocal and Instrumental Music.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid only once.....$10 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter.....50 00
Washing, per quarter.....12 50
Physicians' fees (unless it may be preferred to pay the bill to each doctor).....
Piano, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting, each.....10 00
Use of Library.....1 00
French, Spanish or German Languages, each.....10 00
Bedding and Furniture.....
Payments are required to be made in advance. Parents will not be permitted to visit their children to be present at the speech of the latter.
Dec. 1, 1871.

SAINT MARY'S COLLE

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Br

Offers every facility for receiving a Scholastic, Commercial or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical Course in the degree of A. B., the Scholastic, Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Classical course embraces the best branches of knowledge that are taught in the Colleges, and now held in high esteem by the public. The Commercial course includes Book-keeping in its various forms, Composition and Rhetoric and all other studies connected with the course.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

Payable half yearly in advance.
For board, washing, tuition, warm and cold baths, and lights.....$200
Entrance fee, to be paid only once.....10 00
Vacation at Lodings.....30 00

DAY PUPILS.

Classical course.....$50 00
Use of Library.....1 00
Physician and Medicines.....
Graduation Fee.....10 00
Use of Philosophical Apparatus.....5 00
Extra charges for Music, Drawing and Painting.....
Studies will be resumed on the 1st of August.
REV. B. JUVITY, C. S. C.,
President.

Unrivaling Letters.

Unsolicited letters connected with the very judgment are not exclusively to Mr. Justice Keogh, but it seem that gentlemen who have their dispute at that Judge's chapel of the Convent of Mercy, Bay St. performances, and have appeal Clarke and Urmston Rwardon, subl to the defense fund of Captain sons, have enjoyed the Dec Mr. Mitchell Henry, the senior for the county of Galway, ha a blood-thirsty document, beginn lago, Clonliffe, and St. Patrick's, Maynooth, and ending that the degraded Orange on the occasion to the band of reliefless workers who have accomplished so much and for the Catholic population of the colony.

A Friendly Remonstrance.

Daily News has published a few of not unkindly remonstrance on the ever-recurring strife amongst ishmen on the occasion of the celebration the battle of the Boyne. It says that there is no reason why Irishman should not be proud alike of the victory of King William over the plains of Saradaid, and deplores that the which at this distance of time might be no cause for any feeling of triumph should only be the constant stimulus of the blood of Irishmen. It says that the votaries of Orange and the sons of Green are declared to be rival families in Scottish story, blood, it was said, would refuse to be poured into one dish; and the ancient and famous enemies, the Percys of the Cheviots and the Douglas such that the smoke of their funeral blazed to island in one column, but the hatchet of friendship appears to be buried effectually enough now, and that it appeals to Irishmen to make up their minds to forget and forgive, and not think the least thing England can do to refrain from taking sides with Irishmen, or the Anglish Dublin and English public opinion are desirable in the matter. There is any of the disputes of these old and weary traditions of we cannot now too carefully abstain from the slightest touch of one or the law of the controversy.

The Orange Celebrations.

Belfast, July 12.—Accounts have been received in Dublin from all parts of the north of Ulster of the manner in which the great Orange anniversary to-day has been celebrated. At Derry, Lurgan, Lisburn, Glenavy and a number of other localities Orange meetings were held, at which there was a great display of regalia, and the proceedings in all cases were characterized by the most violent and disgusting sectarian animosity. The Orangemen abstaining from any display of party emblems, and from the disgusting practice of burning effigies of the Pope, and the Pope's wife, and the Pope's children, which has been the usual accompaniment of the celebration in former years. Nowhere, however, was the peaceful character of the proceedings more marked than in Belfast, where the Orangemen, with the exception of a few isolated instances, behaved with the greatest good humor. The orangemen abstaining from any display with the Catholics and burning their demonstrations. This is the 182nd anniversary for many years at the battle of Aghadoe, and the gathering was held in the Ballynafeigh, Belfast, Orange demonstration. We observe a dispatch from Belfast of the 13th inst., to the effect that the Orangemen of Belfast celebrated the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne yesterday (July 12th) with great enthusiasm. The demonstration was the largest ever held in Belfast, and was participated in by 30,000 Orangemen. The procession was a splendid one, and was witnessed by immense crowds of people. The Orangemen were addressed by Lord Enniskillen, Lord Rossmore, Lord Arthur Hill, Lord Dunleath, Lord Waterford, Lord Leitrim, Lord Annaly, Lord Clanwilliam, Lord Farnham, Lord Erne, Lord Templetown, Lord Lurgan, Lord Castlereagh, Lord Dunluce, Lord Ranfurly

GREELEY AT HOME.

Senator Gwin and Frank McCoppin's Speeches.

Harry George has written a sprightly letter about the visit of the California delegation to Chappaqua, the home of Horace Greeley, from which we make a few brief extracts:

Of the Californians eight were on hand, Downey, Gwin, Hardy, McCoppin, George, Butterworth, Workman and Wolfskill, the other four not being in New York.

Chappaqua is on the Harlem Railroad, in Westchester county, about thirty-five miles from the city, a run of an hour or so on the fastest train.

This little village, now known over the whole Union, lies between two ranges of low but well-wooded hills, and consists of perhaps a dozen houses, with two or three village stores, a country inn and a ticket office. Here Sinclair the publisher of the Tribune, was in waiting with a couple of carriages to take up the ladies, and Greley's gate, only a good stone's throw from the station, being pointed out, the males of the party started for it on foot. A good road runs from the white-washed gate along the hillside, passing through the thickly grown beeches and maples, spruces and hickories, which are the pride of the philosopher's heart, and upon which he does his regular chopping. It is really a beautiful situation, at least at this season, when the coolness of the woods seems so refreshing, and the eye rests with delight upon the fields of grain which clothe the hills on every side. Pretty well up the ascent, but a little distance below the house, advanced to meet us a stalwart but venerable looking man, whom to no one who looked at the pictures of papers could fail to recognize as Horace Greeley. He is however, a bigger and a better man than the idea suggested by these thousand and one portraits and caricatures. There is more of strength, much more refinement, and more, too, of shrewdness in his face; while in any printed portrait I have of course been able to see that he all very looks and beard give to his face. There was nothing, either, of ostentation or of affected carelessness in his dress. Both legs of his dark pantaloons came down over the top of big, strong, heavily blacked shoes. He wore a dark alpaca sack coat, and had a white hand kerchief turned up of soft, brownish white fall. The old man seemed to be brimful of happiness, there was a pleased twinkle in his eye, eye behind the gold rimmed spectacles, and an expression of quiet satisfaction and cordiality on his benevolent face, as he welcomed us to Chappaqua. It was a curious meeting, and like ridiculous aspect some have suggested itself to him, as it did to some of us, though mingled with fresh deeper emotions. * * * * The introductions and hand-shakings having been disposed of, "Now, friends," said he, "I am glad to expect you are all hot and tired, and I guess the best thing we can do is to

ALL GO AND TAKE A DRINK,"

And he shambled off to lead the way, the long procession of Democrats following.

* * * * * * * *

As we rushed up the hill side, the White Hat in the van, many were the speculations as to what we were about to drink, and it had just about been considered that Horace, though a non-drinker himself, was going to show so much deference to the time-honored custom of the Democracy, whose nomination he had just received, as to offer those who chose to take it a glass of sparkling champagne, when the Old Man halted at the edge of a rocky and precipitous chasm, through which shaded by thick trees, meandered a little stream, and saying, "Friends, in something like this you won't hurt you," plunged below.

There was a murmur of disappointment, and a laugh, in which McCoppin joined his fashion physique against a maple and commenced fishing himself. Butterworth and a shaved across the brook and began to bow down a small sapling with a big jack-knife, but though some turned inside the house, who, though having been led to water, would not drink, the majority of us followed the philosopher down the dell and bailed out his little spring with the tumblers that we found there. We all drank, and many jokes had been cracked, "Now," said the old man, "every body who wants to see what I know about draining had better come with me, and the rest of you might as well amuse yourselves under those trees till I come back," and down into his farm proper, he led the way with a walk which I cannot describe, but which is something between the roll of an old sea-dog and the prance of a biker with a game leg, and which suggests the idea that he knows about walking had been learned in ploughing and not on deck.

When the thoroughly enjoyed meal had been concluded the Philosopher proclaimed that there would be some speaking in which he would lead off, gathered as upon the hillside, the whole company sitting or reclining on the ground, and planting se arm shad at our feet prepared to speak.

Mr. Greeley having told them what he knew about farming, smiled upon

SENATOR GWIN OF CALIFORNIA.

He became Gwin and "Twenty-eight years ago I was a member of the National Democratic Convention, held at Baltimore, to nominate a Presidential candidate. The delegates were instructed to vote for Martin Van Buren. But, in the meantime, he wrote a letter opposing the annexation of Texas, a pro-slavery measure, and therefore upon the Alabama platform. The result was the annexation of Texas and the bounding and settlement of California. In 1860 another Democratic Convention was held in Baltimore, at which the Democratic party split up and divided on the question of Slavery in the Territories. Crimination and recrimination ensued, and the result was strife, war and devastation. The Democratic Convention just held at Baltimore was harmonious beyond everything. The gentleman nominated there was not a favorite of any of the delegates; he was not the choice of any State in the Union; but it was said that his previous nomination was a fair, and that the representatives of 3,000,000 of the people of this country went there just to vote for Horace Greeley as their Presidential candidate. What is the cause of this gentleman's bold upon the hearts of these people? They know that he is honest, that he is incorruptible. We have not had strict honesty and incorruptibility in the Presidential chair since Jefferson's day. We are going to put them there next November.

OTHER ADDRESSES.

Judge Rogers was next introduced, and after adverting to the evils of corrupt government in the South, said: At the close of the war the Confederate soldiers disarmed, with the feeling—that of accepting the results and securing an early reconciliation. This you may think was strange but why so? It was not a war of personal hatred. It was a war between neighbors and brothers on a question involving $500,000,000—a question too big to be settled by civil strife. It was a war of sincere principle fighting to maintain an institution which is cherished and believed in, and the other fighting to maintain the integrity of the Union. There is now no reason why we should be enemies. We have no apologies to make for accepting the Liberal Republican platform, and no apologies to make for accepting the Liberal Republican candidate. We care nothing for Democracy or Republicanism. We ask only peace, reenfranchisement and a closing of our old wounds. To us that is life and death.

Col. Shorter of Alabama, an ex-Confederate Congressman and soldier, Francis Wilbird and Chas. Davis of Massachusetts, also made remarks.

HON. FRANK M'COPPIN.

Mr. Frank McCoppin, former Mayor of San Francisco, said: My connections in San Francisco, knowing how I always shrink from everything in the way of public exhibition, will be greatly surprised to learn that I had the temerity to stand up here and address this most intelligent assemblage, and indeed, when the excitement incident to this happy occasion shall have passed away, I have no doubt but that I shall be surprised myself. Ladies and gentleman, though we of California are far removed from you, nevertheless you are ever present in our thoughts and affections, for our population has been drawn from every State, you from every town and hamlet in the whole land; and, therefore, whatever affects you upon this side moves us profoundly in California. We fortunately had no part in the civil war. Our victories were all peaceful and for this reason we have no bloody chasm to bridge over. Four years ago, believing in the absurdity of the Grand Old Party cry, "Let us have peace," our State gave him its electoral vote, but after, when elected a term of suffering almost of agony came up from the people of the South, and was wafted across the prairies and the mountains that separate us from them. That cry penetrated the hearts of our people in their homes in the valleys and mountains of California—it was heard even deep down in the bowels of the earth where many of them work day and night in unearthing the treasure that California pours upon the world. These people came forth in response to that cry for succor and support, and having associated in State convention they sent us hither upon a mission of peace. We came more than three thousand miles to vote for Horace Greeley for President, and to-day we feel that our journey has not been in vain. After November next we shall have not a hollow truce, but perfect tranquility, such as was intended by the Clay Whigs, when he said: "Let there be peace on earth and good will among man." For this we care, and nothing more, and I beg to assure you that California will give a larger majority for Mr. Greeley than she ever gave for any candidate for the Presidency since our admission as a State.

Col. McRae of Tennessee, Major Chalmers of Mississippi, and Col. G. W. Anderson of Missouri made speeches, after which the guests took the cars for home, seemingly well pleased with their visit.

CONTINENTAL LETTER.

LYONS, July 12th.

The Republican movement has received a tremendous stimulus from the declaration of M. Thiers, and though it is not probable that the manifestations on the anniversary of the taking of the Bastille will be permitted generally to-morrow, there will be one or two banquets at which the Left will reiterate their programme. That at Ferté-sous-Gonarre being near Paris, has been chosen by M. Gambetta himself as the occasion of declaring his coming policy, and in it, godless and compulsory instruction will occupy an important place.

The dissolution of the assembly in the present object of the revolutionary party, and it will probably be executed ere long, as Right and Left are in the majority still, but must certainly be got rid of before a second Commune is possible. As for a moderate Republic nobody believes in it, and the first effect of a definite proclamation of that form of government will be measures on education, public worship, property and the army. The first will be of a character as will be obinoe to Royalist and Christian France, and entail civil war sooner or later.

Blanqui, Motta, Gaillard, Pyat, and all the scum of the Commune will be assembled and return to power and place, the wreck vengeance on priests, nuns, nobles and clericals of every description. They only will be safe whom the outbreak finds upon this side moves as profoundly in California. We fortunately had no part in the civil war. Our victories were all peaceful and for this reason we have no bloody chasm to bridge over. Four years ago, believing in the absurdity of the Grand Old Party cry, when he said, "Let us have peace," our State gave him its electoral vote, but after, when elected a term of suffering almost of agony came up from the people of the South, and was wafted across the prairies and the mountains that separate us from them. That cry penetrated the hearts of our people in their homes in the valleys and mountains of California—it was heard even deep down in the bowels of the earth where many of them work day and night in unearthing the treasure that California pours upon the world. These people came forth in response to that cry for succor and support, and having associated in State convention they sent us hither upon a mission of peace. We came more than three thousand miles to vote for Horace Greeley for President, and to-day we feel that our journey has not been in vain. After November next we shall have not a hollow truce, but perfect tranquility, such as was intended by the Clay Whigs when he said: "Let there be peace on earth and good will among man." For this we care, and nothing more, and I beg to assure you that California will give a larger majority for Mr. Greeley than she ever gave for any candidate for the Presidency since our admission as a State.

Col. McRae of Tennessee, Major Chalmers of Mississippi, and Col. G. W. Anderson of Missouri made speeches, after which the guests took the cars for home, seemingly well pleased with their visit.

CONTINENTAL LETTER.

LYONS, July 12th.

The Republican movement has received a tremendous stimulus from the declaration of M. Thiers, and though it is not probable that the manifestations on the anniversary of the taking of the Bastille will be permitted generally to-morrow, there will be one or two banquets at which the Left will reiterate their programme. That at Ferté-sous-Gonarre being near Paris, has been chosen by M. Gambetta himself as the occasion of declaring his coming policy, and in it, godless and compulsory instruction will occupy an important place.

The dissolution of the assembly is the present object of the revolutionary party, and it will probably be executed ere long, as Right and Left are in the majority still, but must certainly be got rid of before a second Commune is possible. As for a moderate Republic nobody believes in it, and the first effect of a definite proclamation of that form of government will be measures on education, public worship, property and the army. The first will be of a character as will be obinoe to Royalist and Christian France, and entail civil war sooner or later.

Blanqui, Motta, Gaillard, Pyat, and all the scum of the Commune will be assembled and return to power and place, the wreck vengeance on priests, nuns, nobles and clericals of every description. They only will be safe whom the outbreak finds upon this side moves as profoundly in California. We fortunately had no part in the civil war. Our victories were all peaceful and for this reason we have no bloody chasm to bridge over. Four years ago, believing in the absurdity of the Grand Old Party cry, when he said, "Let us have peace," our State gave him its electoral vote, but after, when elected a term of suffering almost of agony came up from the people of the South, and was wafted across the prairies and the mountains that separate us from them. That cry penetrated the hearts of our people in their homes in the valleys and mountains of California—it was heard even deep down in the bowels of the earth where many of them work day and night in unearthing the treasure that California pours upon the world. These people came forth in response to that cry for succor and support, and having associated in State convention they sent us hither upon a mission of peace. We came more than three thousand miles to vote for Horace Greeley for President, and to-day we feel that our journey has not been in vain. After November next we shall have not a hollow truce, but perfect tranquility, such as was intended by the Clay Whigs when he said: "Let there be peace on earth and good will among man." For this we care, and nothing more, and I beg to assure you that California will give a larger majority for Mr. Greeley than she ever gave for any candidate for the Presidency since our admission as a State.

Col. McRae of Tennessee, Major Chalmers of Mississippi, and Col. G. W. Anderson of Missouri made speeches, after which the guests took the cars for home, seemingly well pleased with their visit.

Wholesale Market Report.

MONITOR OFFICE, San Francisco, Thursday, August 8, 1872.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export only a moderate inquiry has existed, at a decline. We quote as follows: Extra $4 87½@5; and superfine, at $4 50@4 80; interior and Oregon brands—Extra at $4 @4 37½; do ats @ 3 90.

WHEAT—The market has been quiet but firm, at a slight decline in prices, since our last weekly review. At the close we quote the range at $1 36@ $1 44 for new and $1 37½@1 40 for old; $ 100 lbs.

BARLEY—The market has ruled firm for brewing at unchanged rates. For a fair demand has existed at unchanged rates since our last weekly review. At the close we quote new bay at $1 10@1 15; old, $1 @1 07½ per 100 lbs.

OATS—The market has remained quiet, at unchanged rates, during the past week. Ordinary to choice sold at $1 70@2 @ 100 lbs, which is the range at the close.

HAY—The receipts have been fair during the past seven days, with a fair demand. Quotable at the close at $16@18 for ordinary to choice new $ ton.

STRAW—@$15@20 $ bale for good and bright.

CORN—Market quiet at $1 45@1 70.

CORN MEAL—Sales at $1@2 75 $ 100 lbs from mill.

BEANS—We note a fair demand, and the following are the jobbing rates: Bayo, $5 50; Butter, $4 50; Pea, $4 50; Pink, $4; Red, $4; Bed Kidney, $4; Small $ 100 lbs.

POTATOES—At the close we quote the range at $1 25@1 50; Salinas, $1 75@2 $ 100 lbs.

ONIONS—Quiet at $1 75@2 $ 100 lbs.

BRAN—Quiet at $16 $ ton from mill.

MIDDLINGS—Nominal at $20 $ ton from mill.

BUCKWHEAT—Dull at $1 75 @ 100 lbs.

CHICKEN FEED—Steady at $2 @ 100 lbs.

SEEDS—We quote: Flax at 3c; Canary, 4½@5c; Alfalfa, 12c; and Mustard, 7½@8c $ lb.

HONEY—We quote Los Angeles Comb at@12 50@13, and Extracted at 9@10c $ lb; Sonoma at@.

BEESWAX—We quote California dirty 17½@18c, and refined at 24@25c $ lb.

TALLOW—Nominal at 6@6½ $ lb.

PORK—Steady at $15 @ 100 lbs.

LARD—Quiet at 12½@13c $ lb.

MIDDLINGS—Nominal at $16 @ ton from mill.

BUCKWHEAT—Dull at $1 75 @ 100 lbs.

CHICKEN FEED—Steady at $2 @ 100 lbs.

SEEDS—We quote: Flax at 3c; Canary, 4½@5c; Alfalfa, 12c; and Mustard, 7½@8c $ lb.

HONEY—We quote Los Angeles Comb at@12 50@13, and Extracted at 9@10c $ lb; Sonoma at@.

BEESWAX—We quote California dirty 17½@18c, and refined at 24@25c $ lb.

TALLOW—Nominal at 6@6½ $ lb.

PORK—Steady at $15 @ 100 lbs.

LARD—Quiet at 12½@13c $ lb.

MIDDLINGS—Nominal at $16 @ ton from mill.

CURED MEATS.

Rose—California, 12½@13c; Eastern, none in the market.

Bacon—California at 15@16c M B; Oregon, none in the market—Eastern, 16@17c $ lb.

Hams—California, at 12½@13c $ lb; Oregon, 13½ @14c; and sugar-cured Breakfast, 16@16c, do rirne 16@16c.

Lard—California, 12½@13c; Oregon, none in the market; Eastern, in tcs, 11½@12c; do in cases 12½@13c $ lb.

FRESH MEATS.

Beef—For Beef Cattle only, 6@6c $ lb; for second $ lb; third do 5@5½c.

Veal—4@5c $ lb.

Mutton—4@5c $ lb.

Pork—For Dressed Hogs only, 8@8c $ lb; for second do, 7½@8c; third do 7@7½c.

POULTRY AND GAME.

Fowls—California, 4 @5 00 @ dozen for Spring Chickens, $3 @4; Roosters, $4@5 @ dozen.

Ducks—Tame at $4@5 @ dozen.

Geese—Tame at $3@4 @ dozen.

Turkeys—Live, Gobblers, 20c $ lb; dressed 18c $ lb.

Hare—@60c @ 50 doz.

A Perilous Season.

Illurious and delightful as the summer weather is, its tropical heat is a severe trial to the vital powers, and to many strangers are sometimes prostrating by the effects. The common phrase applied to this condition of the body is "general debility." Now, general debility arises from, and includes a variety of diseases. The liver is more or less affected, the bowels are disordered, and the nerves are in a feverish state; but half performs the work of digestion, the appetite poor, and the spirits depressed. This is what is called general debility. Now, as we have said, all this is caused by the sultry heat of the climate, and is a revolutionary manoeuvre intended to force M. Thiers to expel them, and to provide action in this sense, on the spiritual advent of the thambetists to power. Hellgium is preparing to receive the German Jesuits, and when the dispersion of the orders in France, England, Ireland, Scotland, Canada, may hope for a similar grace. The first great movement towards Catholicity in England we owe to the priests of the first French emigration. The generous impulses of the country broke down the barriers of bigotry, and brought a blessing on the people. May not the last grace of conversion be reserved for a similar act of national charity we may also be glorious period be called on to make?

Faith, however, in spite of the Reporter, is not dying out, and in the south especially, the Catholics are fervent and energetic. At Carpenti, a few days since, the entire population went in procession, at two o'clock in the morning, in fulfilment of a pious vow of their ancestors. A terrible epidemic visitated the town about a hundred years ago, and the inhabitants were driven to prayer and prayer to obtain its cessation. It was at its height when the town was aroused by the sound of a bell from the cathedral, and found standing at the gate, dedicated to Our Lady Health of the Sick. The whole population hastened there, and found the chapel closed and no one there to account for the ringing of the bell. The miraculous character was proved by the cessation of the plague at the same moment, and in gratitude for this great deliverance the procession takes place annually at the same hour. This year the whole population assembled to the church with lighted torches and increased devotion.

Mgr. Place, Bishop of Marseilles, has been suddenly called to Paris, where his father is dangerously ill.

Marshal Bazaine's trial will begin, it is thought, about the 16th, when the witnesses will be heard. It is thought that it will last till the end of September, being of a very complicated nature. The general is firmly believed it will go very hard with the Marshal, unless the liberal side be in a majority into power, when his grade in Freemasonry may save him.

The population of Metz, which before the war was 45,000 has, since the German occupation, gone down to 16,000, the Lorraliers preferring exile to German nationality.

The committee for securing Christian education and French nationality to the countless orphans of the war of Alsace-Lorraine, are doing a noble work. Money is help not only to France but to Catholics in all countries, and will publish a list which will reach you in a few days. The orphans who remain in Alsace are now forced by the Prussian authorities to go to the German and infidel schools, and are also robbed of nationality and faith in the same breath. It is the common cause of all Catholics and lovers of their own country to help in averting such an injustice, since the Committee is gradually placing these poor children in the French colonies in Tunis and Algeria, where Mgr. Lavigerie, takes a paternal interest in the Alsatian colony which has been formed in the desert.

The excess and brutality of the Prussian soldiery in the annexed provinces is like Cromwellite Puritans in Ireland, and all prospect of a consolidation of German nationality in the provinces is at an end. The Alsatians look for deliverance to the first outbreak in Europe, and bid their time, but not patiently, for they are being robbed of their faith and their children's education by the Prussian rulers as a means for the suppression of religious corporations in Germany, and extend to Alsace and Lorraine, by which the great Jesuit College of Metz, the Sacré Coeur of Issenheim, and various other religious and educational establishments, will be broken up and dispersed.

SPAIN.

My correspondence from Trim, Pampeluna, Estella, and other points of interest in Spain, agree in stating that the centre of the Carlist movement is now in Catalonia. Olozaga has taken the Commune will be assembled and return to power and place, the wreck vengeance on priests, nuns, nobles and clericals of every description. They only will be safe whom the outbreak finds upon this side moves as profoundly in California. We fortunately had no part in the civil war. Our victories were all peaceful and for this reason we have no bloody chasm to bridge over. Four years ago, believing in the absurdity of the Grand Old Party cry, when he said, "Let us have peace," our State gave him its electoral vote, but after, when elected a term of suffering almost of agony came up from the people of the South, and was wafted across the prairies and the mountains that separate us from them. That cry penetrated the hearts of our people in their homes in the valleys and mountains of California—it was heard even deep down in the bowels of the earth where many of them work day and night in unearthing the treasure that California pours upon the world. These people came forth in response to that cry for succor and support, and having associated in State convention they sent us hither upon a mission of peace. We came more than three thousand miles to vote for Horace Greeley for President, and to-day we feel that our journey has not been in vain. After November next we shall have not a hollow truce, but perfect tranquility, such as was intended by the Clay Whigs when he said: "Let there be peace on earth and good will among man." For this we care, and nothing more, and I beg to assure you that California will give a larger majority for Mr. Greeley than she ever gave for any candidate for the Presidency since our admission as a State.

Col. McRae of Tennessee, Major Chalmers of Mississippi, and Col. G. W. Anderson of Missouri made speeches, after which the guests took the cars for home, seemingly well pleased with their visit.

INSURANCE.

JULY'S Golden Rule Agency 310 California ST. SAN FRANCISCO

THE GERMANIA LIFE INSURANCE CO.

Is the ONLY Company issuing ABSOLUTE Policies, NON-FORFEITABLE and INCONTESTABLE.

No application for paid up Policies required; no limitation of time. jy1

SULLIVAN, FRATINGER & CO.,

14 Montgomery Street,

Have just received a large assortment of

CHILDREN'S BRAIDED PIQUE SUITS,

WITH OVERSKIRTS,

Which they are selling at the following prices for children:

2 YEARS OLD.....$3 25
3 YEARS OLD.....3 50
4 YEARS OLD.....3 75
5 YEARS OLD.....4 00
6 YEARS OLD.....4 25
8 YEARS OLD.....4 75

A NOVELTY IN LINEN SUITS.

Chil'ren's Linen Dresses and Suits.

Which they offer at prices ranging from $1 50 and upwards.

LEGAL.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA.—IN JUSTICES Court of the City and County of San Francisco. Northeast corner of Montgomery and Jackson streets. E. CUMMINS & CO., Plaintiff, residents of said City and County, vs. DAVID MALONEY, Defendant, a non-resident of said City and County. Action brought in the Justices' Court of the City and County of San Francisco, and the complaint filed in the office of the Clerk of said Court.

The People of the State of California, to DAVID MALONEY, greeting: You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff, in the Justices' Court for the City and County of San Francisco, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within three days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons. If such service is brought to recovery of the sum of two hundred and seventy two 50/100 dollars, gold coin of the United States, agreed to be due and delivered to you by the plaintiff at your request, and if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint within the time aforesaid, the plaintiff will take judgment against you for said amount, and interest due, together with the costs of this action. This action has been assigned and you are required to appear for trial before E. P. Hacker, Esq., Justice of the Peace of said City and County of San Francisco, (three under my hand, this 25th day of May, A. D. 1872. By order of E. P. HACKER, Esq., Justice of the Peace.

GEORGE L. WEDEKIND, Constable and Ex-Officio Clerk.

PETER DARBY, Attorney for Plaintiff. jy20

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE NINE Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the City and county of San Francisco. Action brought in the District Court of the Nine Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the City and county of San Francisco, and the complaint filed in the office of the County Clerk of said City and county of San Francisco. The People of the State of California send greeting to JOHN HARNEY, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear before the District Court of the Nine Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the City and county of San Francisco, and answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this county; or if served out of this county, but in this district, then within thirty days; or otherwise within forty days; or judgment by default will be taken against you according to the prayer of said complaint. This action is brought to obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the grounds set forth in the complaint, and for such other relief as may be proper in the premises. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

Given under my hand and seal of the District Court of the Nine Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the City and county of San Francisco, this 15th day of July, A. D. 1872.

[L.S.] WILLIAM HARNEY, Clerk.

By HENRY MCNULTY, Deputy Clerk.

Dudley & Dudley, Att'y for Plaintiff. jy20 4w

DRY GOODS, ETC.

KERBY, BYRNE & C

NO. 7

Montgomery

—HAVE—

THE BEST SELECTED S

—OF—

DRY GOO

—ON—

THE PACIFIC COA

AND ARE RECEIVING

NEW GOODS FROM NEW Y

DAILY.

Which comprises every variety and class of our line, and al

Prices which Defy Competi

KERBY, BYRNE & C

No. 7 MONTGOMERY STREE

Buyers will find it to their advantage to call

STOCK OF DRY GOOD

NOTICE!

The Public are Respectfully Info that

THE GREAT SEMI-ANNU

CLEARANCE SA

OF

DRY GOO

AT

J. J. O'BRIEN'S

606 MARKET STREET

NOW DRAWING TO A CLOSE, at which time I intend to start the season of 1872-3 with a stock of Goods unsurpassed in variety and cheapness by any house in this city. Do not fail to call and examine my stock.

50 Cents on the Dollar!

We will offer during the next week

Heavy Brown French Percales at 12½ cts. per yard; reduced from 25 cts.

25 pieces fine French Percales at 15 cts. per yard; reduced from 25 cts.

50 pieces fine French Percales and Satteens at 20 cts. per yard; reduced from 40 cts.

15 pieces real Irish Poplin Poplins at 25 cts. per yard; reduced from 50 cts.

15 pieces real Japanese Silks, 36 cts. a yard; reduced from 75 cts.

20 pieces Silk Bonnet Japanese Poplins, Plain and Figured, at 25 cts. per yard; reduced from 50 cents.

Our entire stock of

SPRING DRESS GOO

Reduced to half price, consisting of over 50 pieces of Spring Dress Goods, at 12½ cts. per yard.

15 pieces Linen Lawns at 12½ cts. per yard; reduced from 25 cts.

15 pieces Linen Black Pointed Percales at 12½ cts. per yard; reduced from 25 cts.

1,000 yards Plain Black and Striped Grenadines at 12½ cts. per yard; reduced from 25 cts.

A beautiful assortment of STRIPED and PLAID GRENADINES at 25 cts. per yard.

All our Striped Shawls reduced to half price.

All our Plaid Shawls reduced to half price.

All our Plain Shawls reduced to half price.

50 pieces White and Colored Piques, from 10 cts. per yard upward.

1 case Heavy Corded French Piques, 36 inches wide, at 25 cts. per yard; reduced from 50 cts.

1 case Linen Damask Napkins, $1 a dozen; reduced from $2.

1 case Linen Damask Doilies, 50 cents a dozen; reduced from $1.

25 dozen Bleached Table Damask, 50 cents per yard; reduced from 75 cents.

50 pieces Heavy Heavy Cloth, 6 cents per yard; reduced from 12½ cents.

100 pieces Fine Bleached Sheeting, 12½ cents per yard; reduced from 25 cents.

1 bale of Bleached and White Flannel, 25 cents per yard; reduced from 50 cents.

1 bale of Bleached and White Canton Flannel, 25 cents per yard; reduced from 50 cents.

250 pieces Scotch Paper, 12½ cents a yard; reduced from 25 cents.

250 pieces Royal Cloths, 50 cents a yard; reduced from $1.

All kinds of Muslins and Shawls at Half Price.

All kinds of Linen Goods at Half Price.

All kinds of Domestics at Half Price.

All makes of Japanese Poplins at Half Price.

All makes of Japanese Silks at Half Price.

A large lot of Ladies' and Gents' Underwear at Half Price.

J. J. O'BRIEN,

606 Market Street

Between Kearny and Montgomery.

jy20 1m

POPULAR DEMONSTRATION

IN AID OF THE

EXILED

CAPUCHIN AND DOMINICAN

Clergy Banished from Guatemala!

A GRAND PICNIC,

Dancing, Foot-racing, Games, Sports

Bazaar and Fancy Fair

WILL BE HELD AT THE

CITY GARDENS,

THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY,

August 8th, 9th and 10th.

THE FESTIVAL WILL OPEN THURSDAY, at 10 o'clock a. m., when an address will be delivered in ST. PATRICK CHURCH by the Rev. Father Joseph of St. Mary's College. Addresses will also be delivered in the Evening, by Rev. Father Thos. Caruin, Father Hastings, and John Hamill, Esq.

A Grand Vocal and Instrumental Concert

Will be given on Thursday evening. On Friday evening short addresses will be delivered by Rev. Father Caruin, Rev. Father Hastings, Rev. Father Montgomery, and other talented speakers.

A POEM,

Written expressly for the occasion by R. C. RYAN, Esq., will be read on Friday evening by Miss Keating, after which the grand drawing of prizes will take place.

Games and Sports each day.

For which prizes will be awarded. A programme of the various Games, Sports, &c., for each day will be published in the Daily Papers.

The Bazaar and Fancy Fair, held in the large Pavilion, will be filled with a choice assortment of useful and ornamental articles, contributions for the same will be thankfully received by the Ladies Committee, and by Father Caruin, at the Presbytery, on Dupont street, near Jackson.

Admission, 25 cents; Children, 10 cents.

Tickets for the Festival, including admission to the Grounds, Pavilion, Bazaar and Fancy Fair, $1 each.

Committees on Donations

INFORMATION WANTED OF JOSEPH HUGHES, from Antrim, County Down, Ireland, who came to California in April, 1851. Information will be sent to the [illegible] Francisco, Cal. jy20

THE GERMANIA LIFE INSURANCE CO.

Is the ONLY Company issuing ABSOLUTE Policies, NON-FORFEITABLE and INCONTESTABLE.

No application for paid up Policies required; no limitation of time. jy1

SULLIVAN, FRATINGER & CO.,

14 Montgomery Street,

Have just received a large assortment of

CHILDREN'S BRAIDED PIQUE SUITS,

WITH OVERSKIRTS,

Which they are selling at the following prices for children:

2 YEARS OLD.....$3 25
3 YEARS OLD.....3 50
4 YEARS OLD.....3 75
5 YEARS OLD.....4 00
6 YEARS OLD.....4 25
8 YEARS OLD.....4 75

A NOVELTY IN LINEN SUITS.

Chil'ren's Linen Dresses and Suits.

Which they offer at prices ranging from $1 50 and upwards.

NOTICE!

NOTICE!

The Public are Respectfully Info that

THE GREAT SEMI-ANNU

CLEARANCE SA

OF

DRY GOO

AT

J. J. O'BRIEN'S

606 MARKET STREET

THE KATALTINEN

KATALTINER WATER, Nature's great remedy for Kidney, Liver and Urinary Diseases, Neuralgia, Kidney, Urinary, Nervous, Heart, and other Chronic Diseases, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Constipation, Piles, Invaluable wherever resulting from Impure Blood, Obstructions of the Kidneys, Liver, Bladder, Nervous Prostration, Female Complaints, &c. Prepared only at the Spring in Lake County, California, and for sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicines everywhere.

THE UNDERSIGNED

Having been appointed by the Central Relief Committee to solicit donations for the relief of the destitute Franco-Prussian sufferers, Sendings will be handed from Grassmarch by the Revolutionary Government, and the Committee will publish a list of the names of the subscribers as literally received, as the charity is a worthy one.

Subscriptions will be received by the Treasurer, Mr. Rodolphe Lemoin, 1 Rue Bonaparte, in order to enable the Committee to publish the list before the departure of the Assembly from Versailles, all persons sending will have their donations published in the following number.

The sympathy and cooperation of all sects and classes is respectfully solicited in this noble work.

The well known banker of Rodez, Chase & Co., have kindly tendered the use of one of their banking Grand Piano.

The city has had of any member of the committee on behalf the people.

Subscriptions to date, $1 00; Ladies, 50 cents. Children, 25 cents.

Passe-tickets will be issued, available for day of issue only.

WILLIAM HARNEY,

Proprietor Justice of the Peace of the City and County of San Francisco.

GEORGE L. WEDEKIND,

Constable and Ex-Officio Clerk.

PETER DARBY, Attorney for Plaintiff. jy20

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE NINE Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the City and county of San Francisco. Action brought in the District Court of the Nine Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the City and county of San Francisco, and the complaint filed in the office of the County Clerk of said City and county of San Francisco. The People of the State of California send greeting to JOHN HARNEY, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear before the District Court of the Nine Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the City and county of San Francisco, and answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this county; or if served out of this county, but in this district, then within thirty days; or otherwise within forty days; or judgment by default will be taken against you according to the prayer of said complaint. This action is brought to obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the grounds set forth in the complaint, and for such other relief as may be proper in the premises. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

Given under my hand and seal of the District Court of the Nine Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the City and county of San Francisco, this 15th day of July, A. D. 1872.

[L.S.] WILLIAM HARNEY, Clerk.

By HENRY MCNULTY, Deputy Clerk.

Dudley & Dudley, Att'y for Plaintiff. jy20 4w

THE MONITOR:

A WEEKLY JOURNAL, DEVOTED TO Irish and Catholic Literature AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY LYONS & BARRY

JOHN LYONS, ..... BUSINESS MANAGER.

OFFICE—522 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts. Rooms 2, 7 and 8. [illegible] ☞ All communications, whether relating to the business or editorial departments, should be addressed to Lyons & Barry.

ONLY IRISH and CATHOLIC JOURNAL IN CALIFORNIA.

TERMS (Payable in Advance).

Served by Carriers, per week.....
Mailed to subscribers, per year.....
Six months.....

ADVERTISING RATES:

1 square, 1 time.....$1 50 | 1 square, 1 month.....$ 6
" 1 month.....7 00 | " 3 months.....15
" 3 months.....9 00 | " 6 months.....25
" 6 months.....15 00 | " 1 year.....40

☞ The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

VOL. XV. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., SATURDAY, AUGUST 17, 1872. NO. 40.

OUR ROMAN LETTER.

ROME, July 18th.

The result of the elections for the Municipality of Rome is so much dreaded by the government, that it has postponed them till the 4th of August, so as to be able to dispose of its measures and insure a majority. All decorated officers of the Italian army possess elective rights wherever they may be. It has been resolved to draw up here from every part of Italy, and so swamp the votes of the Romans in their own city. Such an act needs no comment; a moment's contradiction to the principle of free local voting is too patent to escape any one.

All the newly arrived employés moreover are threatened with the sack, and dismissal, if they do not vote for the Liberal candidates. Such is the liberty of the subject, and such the tyranny of the Italian Government. The great bulk of its employés are Lombards, Tuscans, and Piedmontese, and are therefore entirely dependent on the favor of the schools and the support of the Liberal party. The intellectual capacities of the Romans, turning to three Piedmontese gendarmes, and give its chief a share of its spoil. It appears to be specified that a number of the convents confiscated are to be turned into workshops and asylums for the aged and infirm. We shall see how long the Liberal and the Italian Parliament will tolerate such charities. Meanwhile, the numbers know that they sell by auction, and the religious are driven to prayer to obtain its cessation. It was at its height when the town was aroused by the sound of a bell from the cathedral, and found standing at the gate, dedicated to Our Lady Health of the Sick. The whole population hastened there, and found the chapel closed and no one there to account for the ringing of the bell. The miraculous character was proved by the cessation of the plague at the same moment, and in gratitude for this great deliverance the procession takes place annually at the same hour. This year the whole population assembled to the church with lighted torches and increased devotion.

Mgr. Place, Bishop of Marseilles, has been suddenly called to Paris, where his father is dangerously ill.

Marshal Bazaine's trial will begin, it is thought, about the 16th, when the witnesses will be heard. It is thought that it will last till the end of September, being of a very complicated nature. The general is firmly believed it will go very hard with the Marshal, unless the liberal side be in a majority into power, when his grade in Freemasonry may save him.

The population of Metz, which before the war was 45,000 has, since the German occupation, gone down to 16,000, the Lorraliers preferring exile to German nationality.

The committee for securing Christian education and French nationality to the countless orphans of the war of Alsace-Lorraine, are doing a noble work. Money is help not only to France but to Catholics in all countries, and will publish a list which will reach you in a few days. The orphans who remain in Alsace are now forced by the Prussian authorities to go to the German and infidel schools, and are also robbed of nationality and faith in the same breath. It is the common cause of all Catholics and lovers of their own country on the bed, lay Ned Ryan. The pillow, the bed clothes, and a towel that lay on the back of a chair were dashed with great patches of blood. A large sticky flight of the tallow candle, the face of the man already seemed that of a corpse, yet the heaving of his chest and his painful breathing showed that he still lived.

"What is it all, my son, ask me. I'll tell you, Tom: the story that we priests have to tell every day; crime and blood tracking the lawless embravors of maddened men to revenge their wrongs. I'll tell you how this has come about, God help us."

It was, indeed, a strange story Father Quaid had to narrate.

It was, alas! but too true, as Mary Ryan had feared, that her son was involved in the agrarian combinations to which allusion has been already made. Not a week passed, scarcely a night, that in one corner of the county or another some house was not surrounded and the owner called upon to "come out" or worse might be possessed. It almost invariably proved that the assailing party were accurately informed as to the exact number of grain in the house; and it was in very rare instances indeed that anything like a refusal to surrender them was attempted. Ned Ryan had to take his turn on the rota at intervals. On the previous day, which was Sunday, he and two others were to "lift" the arms in the house of a Protestant farmer of good position, Ralph Allen, who lived at a place called Ardmanus, some distance.

Owing to reasons easily appreciated by all but superficial observers, the Protestant portion of the population in Ireland were always well supplied with arms; and instances of recently their stores may be said to have been at all acquainted with the use of arms. Through two hundred years stainless had been passed in prohibit Papists —the masses of the Irish people—from possessing, or learning how to use arms, while on the other hand the favored minority—the planted garrison — was always taught to regard the possession of arms by them as of a token of their superiority of caste, and a portion of that duty and service which as a garrison they were bound to render. A fowling-piece in the hand of a young man marked him as belonging to the legal truth. When Papists began to carry arms, the privileged caste affected awful alarm. It must be a measure of the Protestants was intended! Was it not nonsense that any should be in such hands? What did they want them for? So Arms Acts were pass ed in Parliament by the dozen, to check in accordance with the Penal Code brought about; that is to say, to keep all the arms in the country in the hands of a couple of people; and to keep the bulk of the Irish population all the did not belong to the garrison caste, as destitute of arms, and as ignorant of their use, as are the inhabitants of Central Africa.

The residence of a Protestant, like Allen, therefore, always offered the temptation of a rich spoil. But, on the other hand, there was all the greater danger assailing such a house in the ordinary way. In such a case resistance would be inevitable, and death and disaster highly probable. There was but one way of getting Allen's arms with any chance of success or safety. He was known to be extremely regular in attendance with his family at Ardmanus service every Sunday; the nearest place of Protestant worship being four miles distant. Ned Ryan and two companions were detailed for the duty of entering his house at midday on Sunday, while he and his wife would be absent at Church, and of carrying the guns and photols known to be in Allen's possession. Wrapping rags round their boots so as to deaden the sound of their footsteps on entering the flower-garden or small shrubbery in front of the house, they boldly knocked at the hall door, and demanded admittance. Their approach had been noticed by the servant boy left in charge of the house; these, with a child of Allen's, aged ten or twelve, being the only persons on the premises. Those two servants themselves were "out" (as the phrase was) as well as Ryan and his companions; they had been on like "duty" themselves that week; and had, are now, along with the identical assailants at the door, participated in similar raids elsewhere. But, as they put it to Ryan, in a hurried and earnest parley, they were now in charge of their own masters house, and they warned Ryan and his companions that they would feel bound emphatically to resist any attempt to take Allen's arms while under their charge. They intimated plainly that under other circumstances it would be fair enough to join matters in a scrimmage; they were ready to do so again; they were ready, if put to it, to help in taking even Allen's arms when not under their charge and trust, as in the present instance; but they could not stand by and see a man in a bonid enter the house to rob it while in their care. Again and again, they warned the party outside to withdraw under (for them) untoward circumstances of this visit; and ending their evolution with an oath, declared their intention to resist force by force. From half-friendly expostulation, or dispute, the party grew set and passionate. One of the assailants, seeming probably only to frighten the mother to his chivalrous defenders whilst threw a horse-pistol from beneath his vest and fired it at his adversary through one of the panels of the door. Splinter and bullet tore through the arm of the young man who had just been shouting a warning to them to desist. The reply was a deadly volley through the narrow side-lights of the hall door. Ned Ryan fell on the gravel plot in front, mortally wounded! He had just time to hear, angrily exclaiming to his companions against the madness of having fired into the house, when a bullet from the defenders' volley struck him in the head, and he fell forward with a groan.

Consternation seized the companions of the hapless youth. The contingency of having to use their firearms had, in fact, been too remote to have been regarded as a probability; for noise or alarm was most dangerous to their success. Whether there was an alarm raised, and their chance of escape encumbered by the necessity of bringing off their dying comrade the neighborhood, however, was sparsely populated. It was about midday, when everyone was away at Church or Chapel. They had an hour or more yet, during which they might get off unseen; but how could they carry the wounded man?

Lifting him as best they could, they hastily took to the road. They had proceeded a mile or more toward Baldboyne, when more considerations than one told them further flight thus encumbered was hopeless. Their progress was extremely slow; and now half-a-mile ahead they could notice little groups of men and women coming towards them, evidently returning from Mass. Moreover, by this time Ned's agonies had become unendurable.

"Boys," he gasped out, "it's no use at all. I'm done for, entirely entirely. Lay me down on the road, and let me die. You cannot save me, save yourselves."

They were fain to comply. They carried him into a copse of underwood growth that sloped downward from the road to a little stream, and laid him gently down in a spot where he would be completely hidden from view by passers-by.

"Ned," said the unfortunate man, "if you can hold quiet here till night falls, as sure as God is over us we'll be back wid you, an' bring you off safely."

"Till night falls, Mike, ah"—and a spasm of agony made him writhe till the ears cursed down the road—"Mike, Mike, long before nightfall 'twill be all over with me."

"Tut, tut; cheer up, Ned. Not at all. It's not so bad maybe. We'll have the doctor an' all ready; only, Ned, for the love of Heaven, don't spike or cry out when you hear any one a passin.' We'll be back sure."

Squeezing his hand in farewell, they leaped across the little stream and soon disappeared in a plantation beyond.

CHAPTER X.

For three hours of mortal agony Ned Ryan lay in his covert alone. He could hear the tread of the people passing by, the rattle of the cart-wheels, the merry laugh and the loud remark, &c., on foot, or on horseback, or in carts, the peasant household would of their way homeward contented and happy from the house of God. Ah! Even thou, perhaps, were his mother and Maureen now returning to that home which on high fall would fill with horror and despair! And to the thing he had done despite many an anxious look and silent entreaty from Maureen; many a loving warning from his mother would he so blinded! No issue now for her in the future brightened by Maureen's smiles and made plentiful by his hand! No realization of those castles in the air which pass as well as poor builds in the golden days of youth; no fulfilment of those dreams which, almost without the exchange of a word, Maureen and he had fondly in each other many a summer evening in the leafy lanes of pleasant Rathcreel!

He bore this intense physical and mental agony for more than three hours without once crying out; but now that the first severe torture. Thirst, all-consuming, raging, maddening thirst, set in—"Oh! could it be longer; discovery, nay, sudden death, would be, he felt, a mercy, so that he could but get a drink of water. Again and again he strove in vain to rise, and asked the fire that parched him. An hour or two before his anxiety was to hear the voices on the road rise by degrees in the distance. Now his ear was strained for the sound of an approaching footstep. At length he caught the sound of wheels on as it seemed to him, a by-road that skirted the plantation. Then again, it se med to be on the high-road that ran in a different direction. Ah, was this not an ill-omened mocking bird! Then, as the sounds seemed nearer and nearer on the by-road, they were those of a dogcart. He groaned in despair, he caught other sounds. Footsteps on the by-road! Yes—no. Wheels on the high-road! No? Yes—yes; ever nearer and nearer; no deulion, but really they was approaching.

"Water! water! for the love of the Blessed Redeemer one drop of water! Help! help! Christians! Help! I am dying—"

A side-car, dashing along the high road, pulled up suddenly. It carried a respectably-dressed man, his wife and three children.

"What's that? A cry for help, was't it?" "Oh, help! mercy! mercy! One drop of water!"

The man sprang off the car.

"Here, Jimmy, hold the reins;" and then, as a bound, he was over the ditch and kneeling by Ned's side.

"Qh, water! water!"

The stranger rushed to the stream, pulled his new Sunday hat off his head, filled it, and ran back to Ned.

"Here, my poor fellow, drink."

"Oh, oh, God's blessed, blessed water! Oh, more."

"More! Yes, to be sure, my hearty. Here's enough of it."

"Now you're refreshed and better. What has happened? But wait; don't answer; you mustn't speak. Here—Mary, Gracie—come here and help me. My poor fellow you must come along with us, for you need ill to stay here. Ned, you'll have a car on the road. Aye, there; let him go on a bit, and the horses and children can walk; we don't live far off, only a couple of miles; only at—"

"At—at—where?" gasped Ned Ryan, with a convulsive start.

"Where?"

"At Ardmanus."

A shriek, a wail, burst from the wounded man.

The good Samaritan by his side was Ralph Allen.

"No," cried Ned; "no, you must leave me here. I ask you for the sake of our common humanity, for the sake of your children, but leave me here. I am all right now!" and he shuddered.

Allen seemed all bewildered. However, there was an earnestness in the tone of Ned's voice that awed him. "Well, my poor fellow, so be it; only here, you may want a drink again. I'll fill the hat and leave it by your side."

And five minutes afterwards the honest-hearted Allen, call it not a sin, was on his way, himself, was driving off homeward, little imagining what an explanation of the event awaited him at Ardmanus.

The last few words reached ears other than those of Ned Ryan.

"Well, by the holy, if that doesn't beat everything!" and slowly rising out of a dense leaf of fern where they had hid themselves on the approach of Allen's car, two of Ned's confederates (dispatched by the flying Allen to give the alarm) and left no longer; discovery, nay, sudden death, would be, he felt, a mercy, so that he could but get a drink of water. Again and again he strove in vain to rise, and asked the fire that parched him. An hour or two before his anxiety was to hear the voices on the road rise by degrees in the distance. Now his ear was strained for the sound of an approaching footstep. At length he caught the sound of wheels on as it seemed to him, a by-road that skirted the plantation. Then again, it se med to be on the high-road that ran in a different direction. Ah, was this not an ill-omened mocking bird! Then, as the sounds seemed nearer and nearer on the by-road, they were those of a dogcart. He groaned in despair, he caught other sounds. Footsteps on the by-road! Yes—no. Wheels on the high-road! No? Yes—yes; ever nearer and nearer; no deulion, but really they was approaching.

"Water! water! for the love of the Blessed Redeemer one drop of water! Help! help! Christians! Help! I am dying—"

A side-car, dashing along the high road, pulled up suddenly. It carried a respectably-dressed man, his wife and three children.

"What's that? A cry for help, was't it?" "Oh, help! mercy! mercy! One drop of water!"

The man sprang off the car.

"Here, Jimmy, hold the reins;" and then, as a bound, he was over the ditch and kneeling by Ned's side.

"Qh, water! water!"

The stranger rushed to the stream, pulled his new Sunday hat off his head, filled it, and ran back to Ned.

"Here, my poor fellow, drink."

"Oh, oh, God's blessed, blessed water! Oh, more."

"More! Yes, to be sure, my hearty. Here's enough of it."

"Now you're refreshed and better. What has happened? But wait; don't answer; you mustn't speak. Here—Mary, Gracie—come here and help me. My poor fellow you must come along with us, for you need ill to stay here. Ned, you'll have a car on the road. Aye, there; let him go on a bit, and the horses and children can walk; we don't live far off, only a couple of miles; only at—"

"At—at—where?" gasped Ned Ryan, with a convulsive start.

"Where?"

"At Ardmanus."

A shriek, a wail, burst from the wounded man.

The good Samaritan by his side was Ralph Allen.

"No," cried Ned; "no, you must leave me here. I ask you for the sake of our common humanity, for the sake of your children, but leave me here. I am all right now!" and he shuddered.

Allen seemed all bewildered. However, there was an earnestness in the tone of Ned's voice that awed him. "Well, my poor fellow, so be it; only here, you may want a drink again. I'll fill the hat and leave it by your side."

And five minutes afterwards the honest-hearted Allen, call it not a sin, was on his way, himself, was driving off homeward, little imagining what an explanation of the event awaited him at Ardmanus.

The last few words reached ears other than those of Ned Ryan.

"Well, by the holy, if that doesn't beat everything!" and slowly rising out of a dense leaf of fern where they had hid themselves on the approach of Allen's car, two of Ned's confederates (dispatched by the flying Allen to give the alarm) and him four hours ago) gazed after the departing vehicle.

Ned's ears had not deceived him in the least. He had heard wheels on the by-road, and he had heard footsteps. His comrades had brought a car for him, which they pulled up in the plantation close by the road, and they were just stepping towards him when the noise of Allen's approach compelled them to hide themselves.

"Well, by the holy, if that doesn't beat the—" but bullies, Ned, logy, here we are, hold on my sword. All right, they grasped his hand.

"Oh, it's no great matter; I'm done for, I'm afraid."

"Tons for, man; phew! never a bit; not badly hurt at all. Come, keep up your heart; all right; easy," and they bore him to the car, in the bottom of which was some clean straw and covered him with the sacks.

"Now, Ned, we must go home by a long round-about; and if there's any danger on the road, draw the end of this gun over your face, and I'll say it's the hare ing, boy."

A little before sundown that evening a car pulled up before the cottage of Mary Ryan; and amidst a scene that would have needed a hard of a one they took that night, Ned was borne the wounded and dying eldest's son.

Such was the story which, necessarily in much briefer shape than our narration, Father Quaid related to him Lo—

"And now, Maureen, you must, as I said awhile ago, either send or I must go myself to Mrs. Shea, and here, give her my keys and tell her to send what I mentioned."

The priest acted from the group and re-entered the little bed-room. Taking his

* The whole of the episode we are here relating is given almost literally as it occurred and may be seen (as I typewrit)—ALTHOR.

stole off the table where he had laid it a moment before, he kissed it, and was in the act of putting it on his neck, when Maureen rushed past him, pale ghastly, silent as before, yet evidently laboring under some fearful excitement. She hurriedly pulled the blood-stained towel off the chair, lifted Ned's head, and turned the pillow so that the stains were no longer visible.

Father Quaid seemed not only not to understand the interruption, but was evidently about to address the girl reprovingly, when a scream from the window attracted his attention. Glancing into the kitchen he saw it filled with police.

(To be continued)

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

ENGLAND.

A Shrieking Prayer.

The Vicar of St. Saviours, Hoxton, has been attacked for recommending diocesan gregation to pray for the souls of the women so barbarously murdered in his parish. He writes to say that the words he used were these: "Let us, if it be but an unspoken act of charity, humbly commend to the mercy of the All-Wise—we can do no more, and we can surely do no more—the souls of the murdered women." If it be not a prayer for the dead to commend souls to the mercy of God, we should like to know what is. It would have been more straightforward and candid of the Vicar to admit that, like the whole Church of Englandism, he believes it to be real Christianity to make the sentence of no-time they were murdered. This in the name of the rights of man! A little later the fair again took to Maria Indonesia, and stopped through—again in the name of the rights of man! At all events the "rights of man" people at that period were considered by far more than Master Gambetta is.—Universe, July 20.

Dumas' Morality.

Dumas the younger is again anxious to speak to France to be more. The last of this a lengthened pamphlet with the show-box title of "The Man-Woman." We have not read it through—we have a care for our stomach—and even a slight perusal assures us we have glanced at were so rankly unwholesome that we have been obliged to keep a phial of sesqui-carbonate of ammonia beside us since. The last work of the "Lady with the Camellias" seems to have had strange effects on the author's mind of late years. At first he was only a little coarse, and then he took an eneic. In language unfit to be repeated in the society of females, he assails the Republic generally and praises the celibacy of the Catholic priesthood. The Catholic priesthood! Why, we are almost speed, with instructions not to retire until they had seen the Mayor of the city, the officer commanding the troops, and the chiefs of police, city and county. These urgent orders the officers seriously objected. They saw the Deputy Mayor, the officer commanding the troops, the ordinance officer (Captain Burchard), the chief of police, and the chiefs of the city and county police. During the morning of the very Monday mentioned by General Chuseret. Instead of there being 700 Fenians present fell about, danced and embraced one another, everybody would laugh. He did not believe in the union of the sexes, and was not one of the congregation. Frederick Church, 436 ft, said the chapel had been opened for worship on Sunday, and had been removed from the Walworth road. Mr. Arnold said he was afraid if people adopted a form of worship so very unusual and new to the present day, they must expect a congregation of the class that evidently assembled; but at the same time this was a certified place of worship, and those who objected to it should not go there and disturb people who thought they were doing right. He hoped there was some mistake on the part of the complainant and his witness about the expression imputed to the defendant if that had been proved, he should have severely punished him. However, according to his own account, the defendant had laughed, and though his mirth might have been provoked, he should not have answered the question in the offensive manner he was going on. He should require the defendant to find one surety in £5 to keep the peace for three months. The surety was at once entered into.—London Universe, July 20.

FRANCE.

The Bastille.

The capture of the Bastille has been celebrated in France by a splendid display of fire-works, discharged from the mouth of Master Gambetta. The capture of the Bastille was the first glorious victory of the great French Revolution. Forty Swiss soldiers and eight or nine hundred field of prison-fortress; they were promised life if they Universe surrendered; they surrendered and they were murdered. This in the name of the rights of man! A little later the fair again took to Maria Indonesia, and stopped through—again in the name of the rights of man! At all events the "rights of man" people at that period were considered by far more than Master Gambetta is.—Universe, July 20.

Sering of Despots.

A forthcoming meeting of Emperors begins to excite some indispensable circles. It is reported from Berlin that an invitation has been sent to the Emperor of Russia to be present at the autumn review of 100,000 troops, between the 4th and 12th of September. As that is the time when the Emperor is in visit the Prussian capital, the meeting is often called the meeting of the three Emperors; but this phrase is really inappropriate, as Italy and Austria do not count as Empires. The Emperor of Austria is to go to Italy to meet the King, and will then proceed to Berlin. The Emperor of Russia is to meet the Emperor of Austria at Berlin, and the Emperor of Germany, and the Emperor of Austria,

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 17, 1872.

11—Sunday—Thirteenth Sunday after Pentecost, St. Hyacinth, Father of the R.V.M. Confessor. St. Appolina, Martyr.
12—Monday—The Octave of the Assumption.
13—Tuesday—St. Bernard, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.
14—Wednesday—St. Jane Frances de Chantal, Widow.
15—Thursday—Octave of the Assumption. SS. Timothy and sol-ete, Martyrs.
16—Friday—St. Philip Benitt, Confessor.
17—Saturday—St. Bartholomew, Apostle.

THE MONITOR:

THE ONLY

Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....AUGUST 17, 1872.

PERSECUTION OF RELIGIOUS ORDERS

We observe with pleasure that a portion of the secular and Protestant press of this country correctly estimates the conduct of the German and Guatemalan Governments towards the religious orders. Many influential and widely circulated Journals are conducted by men deeply imbued with anti-Catholic prejudices, who forget all fair play and even all decency when dealing with matters pertaining to our faith, and for them the simple fact that a Minister of State, either Republican or Monarchical, has thought fit to exile or disfranchise religious communities, is sufficient to obtain the victims Heroe, ever since it was announced that Prince Bismarck had expelled the Jesuits from Germany and Rufino Barrios had driven the Capuchins from Guatemala, innumerable articles have been printed casting odium upon the crimes of which these orders must have been guilty to merit such heavy punishment.

It is quite unfair to judge for granted, without one particle of proof, that these religious men have committed high misdemeanors against their respective States. It is easy to see that these men must have been first a great willingness to condemn them, and second a readiness to support any form of government, no matter how much at variance with American principles, provided it dealt severely with priests and monks. Our readers are aware that both in Germany and Guatemala, the offense charged against the religious orders was that of conspiring against the government—of seeking to change the established order of things. In these United States such a crime is almost impossible, because the system of Government is decided and sustained by the people, and whenever the majority think it ought to be changed, changed it will be without much more ado. In the meantime any minority, however small in number or influence, however opposed in opinion to the great bulk of the people, are affluent liberty to seek to impress their peculiar stamp upon the national institutions. Therein lies true liberty of speech and action. But in the monarchical nations of Europe and in the so called republics of South America, it is not lawful for men to express any opinions, social or political, except those held by the persons in authority for the time being.

The criminal codes of these places contain very minute descriptions of and award various penalties to all the crimes against government, from what is called high treason downwards. Now if the Jesuits or Capuchins were guilty of any of these misdeeds, even the least among them, they should have been tried according to law, confronted with their accusers, convicted or acquitted upon good evidence. In neither of the cases to which we are alluding was this done. All the outer world knows about the guilt of the Jesuits in Germany or the Capuchins in Guatemala, is that Prince Bismarck and Rufino Barrios say they were convicting against the govern ment. So in effect it comes to this, that if a Minister of State in any country asserts Catholic priests or monks are trying to effect a change of government, no shall be at liberty to put them, confiscate their property, or imprison them, at his option. And American editors, believing in Republican institutions, talking much about the blessings of liberty, will be found willing to applaud such cruel and despotic conduct! They demand no trial, they look for no evidence, they hear no defense, the mere pronouncement of some tyrant of a day is amply sufficient for them. But we must remark it is only with reference to Catholic ecclesiastics that they are ready to sanction this high-handed mode of proceeding. If Bismarck or Barrios were to behave in such a manner to any other class in the community—bankers, lawyers, journalists, doctors, or what you will—there would be a regular storm of indignation raised. So it does make a vast amount of difference whose cat is gored!

There are, however, as mentioned in the beginning of this article, a few honorable exceptions to our communion who will not allow themselves to be lead away by prejudice, and who carefully examine the principle involved in this anti-religious policy. They discover that it practically establishes government supremacy over religion, and empowers officials, who may be mere creatures of a temporarily successful revolt against order, to destroy, as far as in them may lie, any creed the adherents of which may not be in sympathy with them. If the German authorities expel Jesuits for imaginary conspiracy against them, if Guatemalan revolutionists exile Capuchins for the same ostensible reason, if the Swiss Republicans drive out Christian Brothers for daring to teach school, some other officials may yet behave in a similar manner to Protestant clergymen, and make use of similar pretexts. To admit a vicious principle, to applaud injustice, to encourage despotism simply because they are used to embarrass a particular religious system, is the most fatal policy that could be pursued by men calling themselves rational. Moreover, if the conduct of the Prussian or Guatemalan dictator be sustained, it follows necessarily that pagan nations, like the Chinese and Japanese, are fully justified in expelling Christian missionaries of every denomination. There are, we know, thousands of men here and elsewhere who would make small complaint about that as long as trade and commerce were not interfered with; but we cannot believe that the nations to whom the Gospel has been preached are wholly given over to the spirit of Mammon as to prefer the spread of wealth to the spread of Christianity.

For these reasons, and for others which we do not wish to dilate upon now, all intelligent and conscientious men who investigate the matter will condemn the course pursued by Bismarck and Barrios. For our part we can see in the policy of these two statesmen only additional proof of the evil effects of that supremacy of the secular power which the Popes so forcibly condemned in the famous Syllabus. It would appear indeed as if Providence specially directed the course of events since the publication of that much discussed document, so as to illustrate the wisdom and righteousness of its decisions. We hear a great deal about its being reactionary, medieval in spirit, a defiance hurled at progress, civilization, and so forth; but now the profoundest scholars, the ablest thinkers, and the best philosophers of the age are gradually, and, as it were in spite of themselves, coming to adopt its principles. In a few years we may expect that the master minds of the world will fully recognize the fact that the safety of society, the preservation of law and order, the security of governments, the welfare of the entire Christian family—all depend upon the maintenance of the principles enunciated by Pius IX.

KINDLY FORBEARANCE!

A telegram, the wording of which is somewhat confused, tells us that the Catholics of Ireland intend to have a demonstration in favor of the Home Rule. There is no such Act known to us, and we are safe in asserting that no parliamentary decree bearing any such title, or recognized by such, has existence. Probably what is meant is the Emancipation Act, the Act by which Catholics were allowed hold or purchase real estate, practice the liberal professions, and educate their children in their own religious belief.

For this piece of legislation, which only accorded them the rights belonging to citizens of any free country, and which could not long be denied them if England cared to be accounted a civilized and progressive nation, some Catholics are immeasurably grateful. Their hearts are full of pious gratitude, because about five and forty years ago their Anglo Saxon conquerors, out of pure benevolence, thought fit to cease flogging, robbing, hanging, and outlawing them as mere Papists, and to permit them live in comparative peace and safety. For this one minor persecution, To-day we find it asserted that the "Catholics of Ireland" are preparing to make a public demonstration in honor of this wonderful recognition of their existence.

The demonstration is, we presume, to be of the nature of a parade or procession. Here comes in the ludicrous feature of the case. The Orange leaders are represented as begging their followers not to interfere with this demonstration if it should take place. They evidently want to make it an effort against their own petty displays on their sectarian anniversaries. The trick is by no means a clever one, and it must fail. We heartily condemn the day demonstration, which we think worthy of men endowed with a proper sense of their own dignity, and we hope our country-men will discountenance it. We do not relish the idea of Irishmen parading, or banqueting, or speeching, in commemoration of the passing of an Act of Parliament which simply took the brand of helotism off them, and gave them these national rights. It is far enough as they should be proud of the patriotism and genius of the celebrated men who won their rights for them; but that they should feel or express any gratitude to England for the concession argues a degree of self-abasement positively disgraceful.

Nevertheless, if this demonstration does take place it will be a very different affair from the annual Orange processions. It will be nothing more or less than a commemoration of an act of Justice and reparation which had the approval of every right-thinking man in the civilized world. If the Orangemen regard such a demonstration as an offense or provocation, if they identify themselves with penal laws and religious persecution, they simply prove how just are the accusations which Catholics bring against them. They show plainly that if they could have their way there would still be a price upon the head of a priest, to say Mass would be punishable with death, and it would be felony to educate a Catholic child in his faith.

As for their refraining from any molestation of the processionists it is about the wisest thing they could do if they love whole skins. Their manifest desire to gain credit for forbearance in this matter is so ridiculously absurd that it could scarcely fail to move a sole to laughter. Those fellows know right well that if they dared meddle with a demonstration in which the Catholics of Ireland were interested they would receive such a thorough drubbing that they would never again be able to make a similar attack. They are well-nigh to make the attempt if they feel so disposed, and the processionists decline to bring about any temptment to them by keeping the peace. Indeed we are sadly afraid that a singularly large number of the men likely to be in this parade would only be exceedingly obliged to the Orangemen if they did "come on." By remaining at home they merely prove that they have a laudable wish to keep their "four bones" free from fracture!

SAN FRANCISCO AND COLORADO RAILWAY.

In another column we print an ad dress issued to the public by order of the Board of Directors of the San Francisco and Colorado Railway. The very existence of this city and the welfare of the whole State depend upon the railway system to be adopted. It is needless, therefore, to tell our readers that they should weigh well and deeply the merits of every railway enterprise affecting San Francisco which is laid before them. They have too much at stake, their property is too closely concerned, to permit them to treat such a matter with indifference. We by this address to draw them to-day, that they may reflect seriously upon its contents. For our own part we shall pronounce no judgment upon it just now. We shall, however, call attention to the list of names accompanying the document. The men figuring therein are all well known. They possess great wealth and enjoy good reputations. They have a large interest in the prosperity of our city. Their interests are seemingly identical with those of the mass of their fellow citizens. The proposed road appears to be as necessary to them as to any fifteen members of the community. Moreover, they are all keen, practical business men, who know what they are about and know how to do it. Their address has the right ring in it. It is now only remains to be seen how their project will be received by the public. If they get the large subsidy they ask, there is no doubt they will commence work immediately. Indeed, there is no time to be lost. The sooner San Francisco possesses a line of communication with the Eastern States, which shall be worked for its advantage and not to its detriment, the better it will be for all its inhabitants, rich and poor. The monopolists will certainly strain every point and spend much money to prevent the building of any line of road than their own, or those in harmony with them; but if the people are true to themselves they cannot succeed.

Publications Received.

THE REFORMATION, By Monsenl. Nov Swit; Catholic Publication Society; San José: A. Waldteufel.

This truly beautiful story has been translated into nearly every European language, and has run through a great many editions in each. It is a novel written for a good purpose, inculcating sound moral principles, and therein contrasts forcibly with the hot-house productions of the sensation-mongers of the present day. The translation before us is not altogether free from faults, being somewhat stiff and inelegant here and there, and in some places it is more an abridgment than a good rendering. The episode of Father Lange, for instance, is omitted altogether; nevertheless, the continuity of the tale is preserved, and the moral taught loses nothing of its application. We could wish every Catholic to read it, if it were only for the purpose of gathering some idea of how the monks and nuns of the middle ages, so grossly misrepresented now-a-days, labored for the poor and lowly against the tyrannies of the great lords and potentates.

MANNERS, OR THE SPIRITUAL EXERCISES, OR SAINT IGNATIUS. New York: Catholic Publication Society; San José: A. Waldteufel.

These exercises are intended for the use of persons about to make a spiritual retreat of more or less duration. But they form excellent reading for any person who wishes to avoid, tending as they do to show the littleness of the things of this life and the immense importance of the matters pertaining to the soul's eternal welfare. Any one, then, may serve as a powerful antidote against the spirit of worldliness and indifference to religion, which unfortunately appears to be the presiding genius of modern society. A little more of such reading and a little less of sensational novels would vastly improve the tone of public morality.

THE CHRISTIAN AND CHRISTMAS; or, the Child of Bethlehem. By Canon Oakley. New York: The Catholic Publication Society. San José: A. Waldteufel.

In this little hand-book, the order and ceremonial of the most Holy and Adorable Sacrifice of the Mass are explained in a series of dialogues between a priest and a catechumen. There is also an appendix containing instructions relative to High Mass, Compline, Vespers and Benediction of the Most Holy Sacrament. In this form is seen that the volume contains a vast deal of information which should be possessed by every good Catholic, and without which the solemnity of worship can hardly be properly understood. Moreover the explanatory dialogues take place between a priest and catechuman aiming at holy orders, they are not without fitness, adapted for the use and benefit of the laity.

HUMAN ANATOMY, PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE. A Text-book for schools and families. By Joseph C. Hartshorne, M.D. Philadelphia: Eldridge and Brother, 17 North Seventh street.

This book deals with a branch of knowledge strangely neglected at the present day. If the young were taught more about their own physical structure and the laws of health, there would be far less need of doctors than there is at present. We cannot understand that sort of delicacy which, while teaching boys and girls all about the formation and growth of plants and inferior animals, leaves them in utter ignorance respecting the nature of their own bodies. It is by no means necessary to make physicians or surgeons of them, yet we are convinced that infinitely more good than harm would be done, if every young person knew all contained in this text-book.

THERE are letters at this office for Rev. J. Foley and Mr. Austin King.

THE ONE HUNDRED.

Is the Committee of One Hundred really in earnest in its proposition to join hands with the Atlantic and Pacific R. R. of St. Louis, or is it merely deluding the people in order that real opposition to the Central Pacific monopoly may be stifled or discharged at the time and in the manner it deems to the city. The Committee started under excellent auspices, and good men are yet connected with it; but as a whole it is a sleepy body, and unless it soon stirs up it will find itself one of for all practical purposes. We must have another commercial railroad, whose western terminus will be in San Francisco, and we will literally contribute to that which gives most assurance of early completion.

A. WALDTEUFEL'S STORE, FIRST STREET, SAN JOSE.—Mr. Waldteufel's stock of Books, Sheet Music and Musical Instruments is more than usually large just now. Many of the most desirable volumes are marked at prices fully as low, if not actually lower than the prices prevailing in the East. Those wishing to possess themselves of foreign works, in the French, Spanish, Italian or German languages, will save money, time and trouble by ordering them through Mr. Waldteufel, whose arrangements with European publishers are now perfected. Those in search of a good yet cheap piano would be wise if they examined his stock, which comprises some of the finest productions of the manufactories of Steway & Sons, Dickerings, and Hayes Brothers, as well as parlor and church organs by Burdett, Mason & Hamlin, &c., etc.

RELIGIOUS PROFESSION.—The beautiful ceremony of Profession took place at the Sacred Heart Presentation Convent on Taylor street on Friday of this week. Very Rev. Father Shoke, V. G., officiated on the occasion, and Rev. Father Prendergast preached, as is his wont, a most edifying sermon. The young lady who took the final vows was consecrated to the Lord, and now to God, in Sister Mary Joseph, known in the world as Miss Frances Hegarty. Miss Hegarty arrived in this city less than two years ago from Ireland, and, indeed, before she expires purpose of joining the order of Notre Dame in California. She is said to be a young lady of high mental attainments—attainments that will hereafter be devoted to the gratuitous education of the female youth of San Francisco.

OPENING OF A NEW STORE.—We desire to direct the attention of our readers and friends to the reopening the store 14 Fourth street, by Messrs. Brown & Barry. These gentlemen have purchased a very choice stock of dry goods for cash, and are selling them at prices which are really moderate. An inspection will satisfy anyone of the truth of this statement, as well as affording a pleasant visit. The style and variety in all the different lines. Those intending to pay Messrs. Brown & Barry a visit should carefully note the address, 14 Fourth street.

PASTORATE.—The picnic of the Satsfield Independent Grenadier Guard, Cap. H. C. Bateman, which was announced to take place at the City Gardens on the 25th August, has been postponed until September 8th. This change of date was rendered necessary, because the officers and members of the company devoted so much time to the Franiscan Festival that they had none to spare for their picnic. The picnic on the 15th promises to be a fine affair.

DEATH OF "SHIEL THE POET."—The Drogheda Argus announces the death of Mr. John Shiel, better known as "Shiel the poet," who died on the 5th of July, in the 88th year of his age. He was born in the north of Ireland, but in the turbulent days of penal persecution was obliged to fly thence. He was active in the struggle of '98. His memory of the events of those stirring times was singularly retentive, and up to within the present few months he enjoyed great popularity, and his works will long outlive him. Such was the popularity of his ballads and the really fine they commanded among the rural population, that Shiel decided his whole attention to versification as a livelihood.

PUTTY FOR WINDOW FRAMES.—An excellent putty for windows, it is said, is prepared by boiling four pounds of brown umber with seven pounds of linseed oil to about seven hours, and then adding four ounces of finely sifted wax. This is then to be taken from the fire, and five pounds half pounds of powdered chalk and eleven pounds of white lead stirred in. This cement is very durable, and adheres perfectly to window frames, even when they have not been previously primed.

OIL.—A Scott, the great railway king, and then, Judge, the principal builder of the Union P. R. R., have united in the State for the purpose of pushing the Pacific branch of the Texas Pacific road about a large number of surveyors are at work near San Diego locating the road. National City, about three miles from New San Diego, is selected as the western terminus.

It is a somewhat strange coincidence that Marshal McMahon and Field Marshal Moltke served for a time together as instructors of the Turkish army, and that General Bazaine, the French commander of the Army of the North, and his gifted Prussian adversary, General Von Goben, served together during the Carlist wars in Spain, frequently sleeping in one tent.

THE French Invasion Asylum will be established near Napa. The Commissioners have virtually, but not formally, so decided.

MR. THOMAS WRIGHT is the authorized agent for The MONITOR in Chico. Persons in arrears will please pay their subscription to him.

FATHER O'TOOLE.—Burke, the great Dominican, is preparing a volume of his sermons for the press. Haverty, of New York, will be the publisher.

TIPPERARY ELECTION FUND.—Representatives from the various National Clubs in this city, met on Wednesday evening last, in the Irish Confederation Hall, 751 Market street, to take action in regards to helping to swell the fund now being raised. In reserve from rum the liberal-hearted gentlemen who made themselves responsible for the expenses incurred in the election of Osborn Ross for Tipperary.

There were three delegates each from the Knights of the Red Branch, No. 1 and 2, and the Rourke and Luby and Thomas Davis Clubs of the Irish Confederation.

Mr. J. Keneally was appointed Chairman, and Mr. J. O'Leary, Secretary. Mr. Keneally briefly stated the object for which they were met, and called on the gentlemen present to state their opinions as to the most suitable method of helping on the movement.

Many projects were then brought forward and discussed amongst them, being those of having a public subscription list opened, of selling tickets for the National Bazaar in Dublin, and of holding a picnic at the City Gardens.

Mr. Keneally stated that several Tipperary men had been urging on him strongly the advisability of holding a public meeting.

It was finally resolved to found a committee consisting of some of the most influential Irishmen in the city, to take the matter in hand, and to inaugurate a public subscription.

The names of the committee will be published next week.—ED. MONITOR.]

The meeting then adjourned to meet again at Confederation Hall, on Monday evening next, the 19th inst., at 7½ o'clock, when it is hoped that all sympathizers with the movement will be present.

HOLY CROSS CHURCH.—A Ladies' Fair will be held some time next month in the Pavilion, Hayes' Valley, for the purpose of erecting a fund for the erection of a suitable church in the Lone Mountain parish. The Mortuary Chapel, which has been used as a parish church for some years past, is required exclusively for the purposes for which it was built; besides, the congregation has increased so rapidly since the parish was set apart for Father Iargan, that the little edifice is now unable to accommodate all who attend. A new and more commodious church is a necessity.

IGNATIAN LITERARY SOCIETY.—At the quarterly election of the Ignatuian Literary Society the following gentlemen were elected as officers for the ensuing term of six months: President, Rev. E. M. Nattini, S.J.; Vice-President, Robert Tobin, A. B.; Recording Secretary, James H. Clark; Corresponding Secretary, John F. O'Day; Treasurer, R. F. Mcgilly; Librarian, Hubert Wallace; Assistant Librarian, Thos. Riordan; Board of Directors—Chairman, Jer. F. Sullivan, A. M.; P. E. Dunne, Jas. Mcgilly, Thos. Mcgilly; Institution Committee; Chairman, Jas. F. Johnson; John Clark and Thomas Riordan.

"O'R all Irishmen living." wrote Hon. John Martin in relation to Keogh's Galway election speech, "although Shiel was the man best loved and most venerated by Irishmen all over the world, and while generation after generation will cherish his memory, the name of the Right Hon. Justice the Keogh, his traducer, shall live in infamy."

CONGRATULATIONS PRESENT.

Besides the Parnell medals, whose presence we noticed at the dinner in our last, the Jackson Invincibles presented their captain with an "ebony cane, with a gold head, suitably inscribed," during the Montgomery Guard, the Hibernia Guard, and the Sarsfield Guard of St. Patrick all in uniform. The Austrian order of Hibernia to full regalia, to the number of about two thousand, were present on the occasion.

BEQUESTS.

Following are the principal portions of the Bequests as by the Chairman and Secretary of that committee, Capt. H. C. Bateman and Mr. J. F. Sullivan.

| | |
|---|---|
| Mrs. Mary Ann Bowden | $ 100 00 |
| Miss Alice Bowden and daughter | 100 00 |
| Miss Mary Bowden | 50 00 |
| Mrs. Thos. Byrne | 100 00 |
| Mrs. Mary Ann Bowden | 100 00 |
| Mrs. T. C. Roberts | 100 00 |
| Mrs. Mary Ann Bowden (for Bishop Hendricken) | 100 00 |
| Bishop Loud—The Misses Fitzgerald | 100 00 |
| Mrs. Mary Ann Bowden | 100 00 |
| Total | $ 850 00 |

The following returns are not official, but are near accurate as if they were:

| | |
|---|---|
| Total receipts of Fair | $ 9,332 16 |
| Returned—Mrs. J. W. Hill | 450 00 |
| Total received for Fair | $ 8,882 16 |
| Standing liabilities | 181 42 |
| Total amount | $ 9,063 58 |

There are about 10,000 tickets yet unaccounted for, most of which, no doubt, have been sold, and when the returns are in the total receipts will not fall far short of $12,000.

The raffle for the various articles on exhibition at the Fair will take place next week, at which due notice will be given in the daily papers.

The fully prize-winners stating that eight thousand and odd votes had been cast for the three-drawing 2,66 headed race, their 1,00 were realized on this race, and that the Fair netted $1,000 over and above the 1,00 ballots. Grimey was the race by about 200 votes.

We hope to be able to publish a more complete list of the successful numbers at the raffle, as well as at the statement of receipts and expenditure.

PROTESTANT EXCOMMUNICATIONS.—The history of the German Government's obstruction to ecclesiastical discipline, as successively involving civil consequences, may possibly be yet studied. Not only have the Protestants recently cut off several persons from the Lutheran communion, but the Protestant authorities before now have done the same. The excommunication against a young woman was promulgated by the Protestant Pastor at Lippspringe, and in a village near it bedeckt the case occurred which created still greater sensation. The father had been sending his son to a Catholic school, and being admonished by the pastor, replied that he considered himself free to choose the best education for his children. His case was then brought before the Consistory, and on the 18th of June, 1869, it was notified to him by the pastor that he had been subjected to excommunication provisionally, and that this sentence involved exclusion from the Lord's Supper, inability to act as sponsor for a child, loss of right to vote for church officers, and deprivation, in the case of his death, of ecclesiastical burial. The letter further added that this sentence would be publicly promulgated during divine service on the following Sunday. The Courrier de Bruxelles, from which we extract these facts, is not unnaturally at a loss to distinguish between the civil illness resulting from this excommunication and those inseparable from the excommunication inflicted by a Catholic bishop.—New Orleans Morning Star.

THE FRANCISCAN FESTIVAL.

In our last issue we gave a full account of the opening day of the great festival in the city Gardens in aid of the Franciscans exiled from Guatemala. As predicted, Friday and Saturday eclipsed even that. The immense concourse of persons present have been present some portion of the three days and evenings that the festival continued, and during this time not a single unpleasant incident occurred to cast a shadow over the scene.

The gross receipts will not fall short of $20,000. The much grace cannot be bestowed upon the ladies and gentlemen whose energy and indefatigable exertions the affair to such a successful conclusion.

On Saturday evening, Wm. H. Rhodes, Esq., rising with Rose Hill immediately in front, spoke to R. C. Hopkins, Esq., entitled "CHARITY."

The thousands who have heard some [illegible] since know a mark and learn the [illegible] by the shores of heaven, the law of love and charity.

My Spirit pulses with a kindness toward, And whenever such gush warbling bird, And whenever such gush warbling bird, And nothing tears of misery shed.

And softer sang the Summer breeze Of love the [illegible] shed, Or in its balmy wings it bore Her fragrance to the needy poor.

No golden mantle did he bear, Nor [illegible] of purple wear; His indwelt were the humblest men Of earth's poor, struggling suffering sons.

To these he taught these truths sublime That love dwelt of the heart of Time, And still shall live till man no more Shall dwell upon this changing shore.

He taught that in the choirs above Though sweet the melting strains of love, The sweetest song in heaven to be That which is clothed in CHARITY.

That angel who [illegible] Of which a tear drop finds the eyes, And softly [illegible] Of man's sorrow and his sighs, That they this seraph's name may bear, He did a [illegible] Of [illegible] He gave his life and his last breath, Breathed forth in [illegible] Upon the Cross for Charity.

But see [illegible] Of [illegible] and [illegible] Would to darkness fall [illegible] Of [illegible] and [illegible] And to mankind His Gospel preach.

That they the Master heeded well, Let poverty [illegible] To read [illegible] Let [illegible] And [illegible] Charity.

While some in gloomy dungeons lay, Some were devoured by [illegible] And some by sword, and some by flame, Won for [illegible] a martyr's name.

In every land the martyr sleeps, And o'er his [illegible] weeps, And gentle pity turns aside [illegible] Where [illegible] has died.

Where'er we seek the lowly grave Of him who [illegible] In [illegible] in burial clime, In [illegible] And [illegible] Of Charity.

No drooping willow tells us where The lowly man is [illegible] Nor sleeps [illegible] in the dust Holiest vigil keeps.

Nor [illegible] cross may mark The wild, barbaric spot, Where silent sacred dust of one Whose name is now forgot.

Far from [illegible] and home, And far from cultured lands, He sleeps [illegible] Of Charity.

By rude and heathen hands.

And ere his hand the rank grass waves And earth [illegible] And winds alone a requiem sing [illegible] Of Charity.

Well, let him rest; his work is done; And for his toil so hard, In better lands than this, be sure, A crown [illegible]

Weep not nor wail his passed away, For from the [illegible] Of the true, And seraphic [illegible] Of [illegible] Of Charity.

May that bright [illegible] Of [illegible] Of [illegible] Of

GENERAL NOTES.

A metrical translation of Goldsmith's "Deserted Village" into Armenian has been published at Venice.

The Dien Public announces that Mr. Bradlaugh, "the English Republican agitator," arrived in Paris on the 15th ult.

The Athenæum regrets to learn that the visit of Signor Mario to London is prevented by the extreme proceedings of his creditors in Florence.

A fort for the protection of Chatham and the road to London is shortly to be erected on Chatham-hill. The greater part of the works will be executed by convicts.

Prince and Princess Czartoryski have arrived in Paris from Italy, where they went to spend their honeymoon. They will soon join the other members of the Orleans family on the coast of Brittany.

Baron Rothschild has given 3,000 guineas for the whole-length portrait of Mrs. R. B. Sheridan, by Gainsborough, exhibited in the Academy in 1783, which was a long time at Dalspro Abbey, where Sheridan was a frequent visitor.

Northumberland house is about to come down, and a new street from Charing Cross to the Thames Embankment is to take its place. The purchase-money is said to be £489,500!

Mr. Tennyson and Mr. Gladstone met the other night at a party for the first time, and immediately had a long and practical consultation. The subject was Homer, and the time covered four hours. They were both much at home on Homer.

The Germans are so slackening Metz that it cannot be exposed to bombardment, and will be able to hold their own sufficient to support the garrison and the town for two years.

A dish swords has been fought in Paris by M. Tirard, Deputy for the Department of the Seine, and M. Francis Aubert, an editor of the Gaulois. Both were slightly wounded.

The Archduke Charles Louis, next brother to the Emperor of Austria, is about to be married for the third time. The new bride is the Princess Maria-Immaculate Louis, sister of the dethroned King Francis II., sister of the Archduke's last wife, Maria Annunziata, and only seventeen years of age.

One of the newest drawing-room toys is a richly bound volume, stocked with an elegant writing case. The book contains a series of amusing questions, with blank spaces for answers. Each visitor is required to write a response, and to sign and date it. The collection is extremely funny.

It is announced as a fact, not without even political significance, that Prince Bismarck, who ceased attending the Masonic Lodge when war was declared against Austria, is about to return to it. His return is regarded in Germany as an act of hostility against the Catholic Church.

The German Emperor has given the celebrated military library of Metz to the general staff at Berlin. The library comprises 40,000 volumes, many of them exceedingly rare, and a great number of valuable manuscripts and drawings. It is the result of 200 years' collecting.

The Frankfort Journal professes to know that some serious derangement has broken out between the King of Bavaria and the German Emperor, which is attributed to Russian influence. The fact is that the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia will shortly arrive at Bayreuth, when she will be met there by the bachelor King Louis II.

The mug of Bavaria was near being drowned a few day ago. He was out boating alone on the Kochensee, one of the Upper Bavarian lakes, when his boat upset. Fortunately he was able to grasp at a post, and there he remained afloat until some peasants, who had witnessed the accident from the shore, could come to his help.

The Emperor Napoleon's cousin, the Princess Mathilde, is selling off her magnificent palace; price, one and a half millions of francs. She is wealthy, for her Russian husband was very rich. She prefers literature and art to politics, and was no niggard in aiding struggling talent. Over ten doors of her palace she had notice: "politics prohibited."

An account has just been made up of how it became the fashion for ladies to faint during the siege. Fifty-seven reached a safe destination, carrying 150 passengers. Two came to grief by falling into the sea, where the passengers lost their lives in the other fifty-five were saved by the Germans. By means of pigeons carried out of Paris by the nonsuits 50,000 messages were sent back into the besieged city.

"Serious news" has reached the Gaulois. The civil war in Mexico has rendered life and property so unsafe that President Grant has resolved to send General Sherman with 50,000 men to take possession of the Gulf, while, on the other side, General Mcmuot will operate on the confines of California thereby we must go from home to learn news!

Madame Tiltens has made a stipulation with her American patrons that she shall be allowed to visit Ireland once more before she leaves England for America. Quite a compliment to the country, for it cannot offer her the munificent terms which our Transatlantic cousins can give. She is to have her passage to America, hotel expenses, carriages, horses, etc., for herself and two other persons, and £20,000. She is indeed be styled "realising."

A correspondent has made a calculation of the height the bank-notes would reach, if piled up, that were demanded by Prussia from France after the late war. One thousand bank-notes of 1,000f. each, placed on one another, measuring exactly one centimetre; consequently, 1,000 of the same of bank-notes necessary to pay five milliards were packed into a column, it would have to the height of 500 mètres, or, in English measurement, 1,000 feet and two-thirds.

On one occasion Lady Lovelace paid a visit to Newstead Abbey. In the great library, Colonel Wildman, who had invited her there, read one of the finest passages of Byron to Byron's daughter, who, touched with the beauty of the verse, asked who was the author. Colonel Wildman stared at her, and said, "There is the portrait of the author," pointing to the portrait of Byron by Phillips. He read yet more of Byron's poetry to her. Lady Lovelace was mute with astonishment at new revelations bursts upon her. "Do you think this a fiction?" he asked. "Oh, no, when I tell you I have been brought up in ignorance of all that regards my father!" From this moment a passionate enthusiasm for everything which recalled the memory of Byron took possession of her. While at Newstead Abbey she used to shut herself up for long hours in the apartments he had lived in and which still retained much of the furniture which had belonged to him.—Lady Clementina Davies's "Recollections of Society."

The author of "Tennysoniana" writes: Every student of Tennyson will learn with surprise and pleasure that in the fourth volume of the library edition of the works of the Poet Laureate some additional stanzas, now published for the first time, have been interpolated between the sections hitherto standing as the thirty-eighth and thirty-ninth. The new thirty-ninth section takes up the burden of the famous apostrophe to the Yew Tree, which occurs almost at the outset of the poem (section two). Thus it runs—

"Old warder of these buried bones!
And answering now my random stroke
With fruitful cloud and living smoke,
Dark Yew! that graspest at the stones.

And dippest tips wards the dreamless head,
To thee, too, comes the golden hour
When flower is feeling after flower,
But vainer. Red upon thy sprays

And darkening the dark grass of man,
What whispered from her lying lips,
Thy gloom is kindled at the tips,
And passes into gloom again!!"

The line italicized is an allusion to the opposing stanza of the third section.

The Royal Humane Society has issued the following important notice to bathers: Avoid bathing within two hours after a meal, when exhausted by fatigue, or from any other cause; or when the body is cooling after perspiration; or altogether in the open air, if, after having been a short time in the water, there is a sense of chilliness, with numbness of the hands and feet; but bathe when the body is warm, provided no time is lost in getting into the water. Avoid cooling the body by eating or remaining undressed on the banks or in the boats after having been in the water. Avoid remaining too long in the water; leave the water immediately there is the slightest feeling of chilliness. Those who are not strong may bathe early in the morning on an empty stomach. The young, and those who are weak, should bathe two or three hours after breakfast. Those who are subject to attacks of giddiness or faintness, and those who suffer from palpitation and any sense of discomfort at the heart, should not bathe without first consulting their medical adviser.

Archbishop Manning—The Expulsion of the Jesuits.

At a great Catholic meeting held in London, July 16th, to protest against the expulsion of the Jesuits from Germany, his Grace Dr. Manning thus spoke. The report is taken from the London Universe, of July 20:

They had been assisting in a very solemn act of prayer in the acts, and that drama was nothing more than a manifestation of the old fable of the Wolf and the Lamb. For a century they had seen a hypocritical revolution in Italy, casting the justification of its sacrilegious acts upon a pretended aggression on the part of the Vicar of Jesus Christ. The second act had been played in Germany. He had shared with Mr. Allies in the anxious hope that the unity of Germany might be consolidated. But when he found that the great chancellor of that empire, dazzled, as it were, with his success, was not content with having his hands full in securing political liberty, but must needs engage himself with the religious divisions of the people, he was lost in amazement. Some half-century ago that man would have taken possession of Prince Bismarck that he should thus undo the work of his own hands.—Dr. Manning conceived the explantation to be this. During the eight months of the Vatican Council he had touched as it were with his own hands the intrigues of the government of Europe, and had seen the preparations made for that unhappy schism which had followed. The animating spirit of the whole was the work of men who, baffled and put down by the irresistible authority of the Bishops of the world at all most ba, had no other course but to stir up in governments and peoples a passionate hatred, opinion and penetrational fear of the Jesuits. forsooth; of aggression of the Holy See, and of what they called the ultra montane and sacerdotal doctrines of the Vatican Council. dreams and impossible schism could hardly be heard with patience. The Prince Bismarck, saying, as a rational man would, that he was not a Catholic, and did not understand these things, sent for those who did, and, taking counsel from the King of Bavaria and Archchancellor, had got the sidious programme which had been hid from the eyes of the Holy Father treated to building up the works of his hand he might have prospered; that he could prosper no one was to be beyond his responsibility. The third act was behind. He had seen it with many present knew better than he did, that there was a power behind all governments. They had heard of the Encyclopedists. The German empire, and there were other bodies which, with or without law, in the dark, had Jesuits were to be cast out, and while the bishops of the Church were to be restrained in the performance of their duties, there was a power which was never to be restrained. Behind the Jesuits was Socialism; because it had obtained its hold with a too complete grasp and was ministering to the politicians of Germany at its will; because in the breach between the civil and religious powers the flame of rebellion always obtained its opportunity. With regard to the resolutions before the meeting, he should most heartily second an amendment, since there was but one question now before us, to uphold supreme the religious orders. Pius IX. could do it, and no one else. They might be robbed, despoiled, persecuted, driven from the borders of kingdom after kingdom; but supreme they would act. The world had no fear of exile. That great society which for 300 years had been hunted and chastised and persecuted, imprisoned and hunted away, and which had with unbroken constancy kept up the faith alive in England, at this moment stood at the head of the great Catholic mission in this land. Our Master had told them that if men persecuted them in one city they should flee to another, and thus they would act. The voice of this meeting would go all over the world, the free independent articulate voice of the English laity—for the time to speak at the end of the meeting simply because he would not have any should say that the English laity were acting without them with whom they were so intimately connected as the Bishops, there was only in the world which exceeded them, and, on the other hand, it was not amiss that at the conclusion of this great meeting they should allow him to move a vote of thanks to the noble duke who had presided over it.

Lord Wentworth, a grandson of Lord Byron (son of "Ada, daughter of my bones and heart,") has the family frailty of getting into trouble with his wife. Lady Wentworth left the home of "my lord!" lately, and advertises to the British public that its will not pay any debts she may contract, nor be responsible for her board.

The electoral movement is gaining ground in Rome, and Catholic committees are being formed. The elections, however, are partial, as only 12 out of 90 municipal councilors are being elected.

Cardinal Ciarelli Paracciani, Bishop of Frascati, died on Tuesday.

BANKING.

HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY

Office—Northeast corner of Montgomery and Market streets.

DIRECTORS.

M. D. SWEENY, Vice-President. C. D. O'SULLIVAN

TRUSTEES.

M. D. SWEENY, M. J. O'CONNOR,
C. McMAHON, GUSTAVE TOUCHARD,
JOHN SULLIVAN, JOS. A. DONAHOE,
J. TOBIN. PETER DONAHUE.

Treasurer ..... EDWARD MARTIN
Attorney ..... RICHARD TOBIN

Remittances from the country may be sent through Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Express office, or any reliable banking house in the country will not be responsible for time or delay. The signature of the depositor should accompany his first deposit. A proper pass book will be delivered to the agent by whom the deposit is made.

Deposits received from 8 A.M. to 4 P.M.

Office Hours—From 9 A. M. to 3 P. M.

JOS. A. DONAHOE, San Francisco. EUGENE KELLY, New York.

DONOHOE, KELLY & CO.

SAN FRANCISCO.

EUGENE KELLY & CO.

NEW YORK

BANKERS.

EXCHANGE ON

NEW YORK, LONDON, AND BANK OF IRELAND.....DUBLIN.

Payable at all the Branches, AND IN EVERY COUNTY TOWN IN IRELAND.

SAN FRANCISCO

Savings Union,

532 California st., cor. Webb.

Deposits.....$4,844,586 61
Guarantee Capital and Reserve Fund..... 210,000 00

President..... JAMES D. PHELAN
Vice-President..... ALBERT MILLER

Directors:

DENNIS J. OLIVER, C. ADOLPHE LOW
CHARLES BAUM, GEO. C. POTTER,
KAHN DIMMICK, CHARLES PACK,
ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, Jr.

Cashier and Secretary..... LOVELL WHITE
Surveyor..... JOHN ARCHBALD
Attorney..... HENRY C. CAMPBELL

RECEIVES DEPOSITS AND LOANS MONEY on real estate security.

Interest on deposits must be sold, Dec. 31st, 1872, at 12 M., at the office of the Company, No. 532 California street, San Francisco, Cal. Each share of stock entitles the holder to one vote, and no person can vote unless the actual ownership of the stock for thirty days next preceding the election.

Transfer books will be closed on the 15th inst., and reopened on the 1st prox.

By order of the Board of Trustees.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

THE HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY, northeast corner of Montgomery and Market streets, will pay a dividend of Five (5) per cent. on the deposits of the Society for the last six months, ending June 30, 1872, on and after July 1, 1872.

By order of the Board of Trustees.

TWELVE MAHL, Secretary.

Office—Hibernia Savings and Loan Society.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

THE HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY, northeast corner of Montgomery and Market streets, will pay a dividend of Five (5) per cent. on the deposits of the Society for the last six months, ending June 30, 1872, on and after July 1, 1872.

By order of the Board of Trustees.

TWELVE MAHL, Secretary.

Office—Hibernia Savings and Loan Society.

HOTELS.

Removal.

THE SECOND STREET HOUSE

Has Removed to 113 Second street,

Northeast corner of Minna. Furnished Rooms in 1st, 2d and 3d stories, for rent, on reasonable terms. Call and examine.

M. CRESS, Proprietor.

CENTRAL HOTEL,

815 AND 816 SANSOME STREET,

Between Broadway and Pacific.....San Francisco

THIS NEW, LARGE AND COMMODIOUS House has been completed throughout in the well known proprietor, M. FARRELL, late of the Bonanza House, in Virginia City, would be happy to receive his numerous friends and the public in general, at his new and elegant location, where he invites a continuance of their future patronage.

The tables will be supplied with the best the market affords, and the bar with choice liquors and cigars.

Terms moderate.

M. FARRELL, Proprietor.

RAILROAD HOUSE,

Corner of Sansome and Pacific streets, San Francisco.

NOW OPENED BY

P. CASSERLY,

(Late of the Tremont House; where he will be happy to receive his friends and the public in general.

The House is thoroughly fitted up on the latest plan, with Parisian Baths and all other modern improvements. The Rooms are large and airy, and can be had single or en suite, with or without board.

The best attention will be paid to the comfort and convenience of boarders.

Board and Lodging per week..... $10 00
Board by the day..... 2 00

The Saloon is supplied with the choicest Wines, Liquors and Cigars on sale. A first-class Lunch set daily.

FRANKLIN HOTEL,

615 AND 616 PACIFIC STREET,

Between Sansome and Montgomery, San Francisco.

HUGH CURRAN.....Proprietor.

Board, per month..... $ 6 00
Board and Lodging, single rooms..... 8 00
Single Meals, 25 cents. Lodging, 25 cents.

Family accommodations on reasonable rates. Passengers and baggage conveyed to the house free of charge from the Steamer or the boats and cars. A city hotel-car, and all the city papers taken.

$10 made from 10 to 15. Call and examine, or 12 samples sent, postage free, for 50 cts. (Hat will retail quick for $10. R. L. WOLCOTT, 161 Chatham square, New York. 815 1y eow

GROCERIES, WINES AND LIQUORS

WILLIAM B. DOLAN,

143 Third Street.....San Francisco,

Importer and Dealer, Wholesale and Retail, in French Wines and Brandies,

AND

Irish Whiskey,

Imported direct from Ireland.

HE HAS ALSO ON HAND A LARGE AS-sortment of California Wines of every description, which will dispose of, in bulk or in case, for the convenience of families.

All orders left at the store, 143 Third street, will be promptly attended to, and delivered free of charge in any part of the city. 1524

JOHN FLANAGAN & CO.,

Importers and Jobbers of

Fine Brandies, Wines, Liquors, etc.,

Fire-proof Store, 421 Front street, bet. Clay & Washington

San Francisco.

Foreign Liquors in bond. Fine Brandies, Holden & Otis Port, Cherry, etc., sole in quantities to suit the purchaser. Also, Cognac in native Wineyard Bandage. Sep 1f

JOHN RYAN. JOHN RYAN, Jr.

M. H. KELLY.

Kelly & Egan,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

FINE WINES AND LIQUORS

No. 604 Battery street,

New Jackson San Francisco.

E. D. Commins & Co.

(Successors to P. Riley & Co.)

WHOLESALE LIQUOR MERCHANTS

my8 No. 805 Front street.

THOMAS J. POWER IS SECOND STREET Merchant. Only the very best brands of Wines, Liquors and Cigars on sale. A first-class Lunch set daily. 1f

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.

SULLIVAN, KELLY & CO.,

Northwest corner Pine and Front Sts.,

Where they offer for sale

THE LARGEST STOCK OF

PAINTS,

OILS,

GLASS,

ETC., ETC., ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

AT THE LOWEST MARKET RATES.

101, 103 and 105 FRONT STREET,

and 110 PINE STREET. tf

Premium Cutler.

First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1871
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1870
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1869
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1868
First Premium of Mechanics' Institute in 1867
First Premium of Mechanics' Institute in 1866
First Premium of Bay District Society in 1866
First Premium of Bay District Society in 1865

M. PRICE,

FOR HOME-MADE CUTLERY,

STORE: 813 KEARNY ST., bet. Pine and California.

FACTORY, 10 STEVENSON STREET,

SAN FRANCISCO.

☞ Razors, Knives, Shears, etc., made to order and warranted. Scissors and shears ground and polished. Diamond cutlery polished equal to new. Cleanliness guaranteed. my11

TROY BELLS.

Old Established Troy Bell Foundry,

TROY, N. Y. (Established 1831).

A LARGE ASSORTMENT OF CHURCH, Academy Fire Alarm and other Bells constantly on hand, and made to order. Made of genuine Bell Metal, mounted in the most approved and modern style, the best and most durable ever used. All Bells warranted satisfactory.

Large Illustrated Catalogues sent free upon application to or 199 Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill.

JOHN MC & SON, Troy, N. Y.

OUTSIDE LAND CLAIMS.

ALL THOSE HAVING RECEIVED NINETY-nine per cent. of their claims for lands taken by the city for public uses, under order 168, will please hand in the undersigned, within thirty days from date, their statements of balances due.

San Francisco, July 31, 1872.

A. AUSTIN,

Collector of Outside Land Assessments.

Room No. 1, City Hall.

PROFITABLE EMPLOYMENT

For Ladies and Gentlemen in their own homes that will not interfere with any other occupation. Address Randall & Co., 723 Broadway, N. Y. au10-6

QUITE AN ATTRACTION

—AT—

MRS. RIORDAN'S

MILLENARY EMPORIUM,

121 Kearny Street,

☞ One door from the corner of Sutter street. "tf

The latest assortment of EUROPEAN and NEW YORK STYLES, selected with the newest fabrics. Also, please call and examine for yourselves. au5-3m

SHAW'S

PECTORAL COUGH SYRUP,

For the Cure and Relief of all

PULMONARY COMPLAINTS,

For sale at SHAW'S DRUG STORES, corner Sutter and Powell streets, San Francisco

A VOID QUACKS.—A VICTIM OF EARLY indiscretion, causing serious debility, premature decay, etc., having tried in vain every advertised remedy has discovered a simple means of self-cure which he will send free to his fellow sufferers. J. H. REEVES, 78 Nassau street, New York. au10-1y

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS UNDER the direction of the Sisters of Notre Dame, opened for the reception of pupils on the Second Monday of August, 1851. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once..... $ 5 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter..... 50 00
Washing, per quarter..... 12 50
Physicians' fees (unless it may be preferred to pay the bill in case of sickness, per quarter..... 2 50

Piano, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting being the extra charges, but there is no extra charge for French, Spanish or German Languages, the use of which is considered a necessary branch.

Clothing is required to be made half a year in advance. Pupils will find it much to their interest to be present at the opening of the session.

For further particulars address

REV. J. J. CROKETT, C.S.C.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers.

Offers every facility for acquiring the Higher Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial Course, a Diploma.

The Commercial course has been established by the Christian Brothers in view with the wants of a practical education to as short a time as possible. Book-keeping, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Commercial Law, Correspondence, etc., receive special attention. The daily exercises in Composition, Declamation, Reading, etc., are carefully discussed and corrected in the class-room.

TERMS: $50 per month, or $500 per YEAR. (Payable half-yearly in advance.)

Board, Tuition and Washing..... $250 00
Bed and Bedding..... 10 00
Use of Library..... 2 50
Vocation at College..... 5 00
Use of Piano..... 10 00

Vocal and Instrumental music, drawing and painting, Shorthand and Typography, form extra charges. Full particulars concerning these and other matters may be had on application to

Very Rev. F. BENNEBERY, Superior.

N. B.—One of the Rev. Fathers of the College is in attendance every day at the office of the Company, corner of Sansome and Market streets, from 10 A. M. to 1 P. M., to receive the names of such persons as may desire to enter their children in the College. He will also accompany them to their homes.

SISTER MARY B. RUSSELL,
Superior of Sisters of Mercy.

San Francisco, May 27, 1871.

DAY SCHOOLS

—FOR—

Boys and Girls.

THE SISTERS OF MERCY HAVE JUST OPened a permanent school building on Fifth street, near Bryant, where little will be taught the following branches, viz.:

A Day School is being prepared on Howard street, between Fifth and Sixth, where the following branches will be opened on the 15th inst.:

SISTERS MARY B. RUSSELL,
Superior of Sisters of Mercy.

San Francisco, May 27, 1871.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL,

PETALUMA,

Day and Boarding School, Conducted by the Sisters of Charity.

TERMS for Boarders including tuition in the above branches, Fine Embroidery, Fancy Work, and use of Library.....$20 00

EXTRA CHARGES:

Music with use of Piano, per month..... $ 4 00
Washing, if done at the Institution..... 2 00

Only a limited number of Boarders can be received. The Scholastic year commences on the 15th of August. Payments invariably in advance. 20

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,

SANTA BARBARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THE SIXTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUtion, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, will commence on the Second Monday of August.

The object of the Institution is a good English, Mathematical, Classical and Philosophical education, but there is no extra charge for French, Spanish or German Languages, the use of which is considered a necessary branch.

TERMS:

Entrance Fee, to be paid but once..... $ 5 00
Board and Tuition, per session, if paid in advance (or monthly)..... 100 00
Washing, per session..... 20 00
Physicians' fees (unless it may be preferred to pay the bill in case of sickness, per session..... 5 00
Bed and Bedding, per session..... 20 00
Use of Library..... 2 50
Use of Piano..... 10 00

Clothing is required to be made half a year in advance. Pupils will find it much to their interest to be present at the opening of the session.

For further particulars address

REV. J. J. CROKETT, C.S.C.

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE,

Rohnerville, Humboldt County, Cal.

CONDUCTED BY THE FRIENDS OF THE ORDER OF THE HOLY CROSS.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN A HEALthy and picturesque locality, between Eel and Eel Rivers, and near the town of Rohnerville, which is connected by daily stages and from other parts of the State. The grounds are extensive, and well adapted for the exercise of studies in classical, scientific and commercial branches, and the terms are moderate for receiving the necessary instruction.

TERMS (PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR):

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

For board, tuition, washing and mending, use of Library, Bed and Bedding..... $250 00
For use of Piano..... 10 00
Vocation at College..... 5 00

Bed Pillow..... $ 2 50
Mosquito Bar..... 2 50
Use of Violin..... 5 00

Vocal and Instrumental music, drawing and painting, Shorthand and Typography, form extra charges. Full particulars concerning these and other matters may be had on application to

REV. FATHER ANTHONY, Superior.

Very Rev. F. BENNEBERY, Superior of the Order of the Holy Cross.

REV. S. JUSTIN, Prefect.

MISCELLANEOUS FOREIGN NEWS.

CAREFULLY COMPILED FROM CONTINENTAL JOURNALS

Cardinal Asquini is named ecclesiastical secretary.

It is satisfactory to learn that the Holy Father enjoys excellent health—indeed has never enjoyed better than he does at present.

During the last few days some street fights have occurred between the pupils of the Ecclesiastical and Communal Schools at Rome. The latter attacking the former whilst on their way from school.

The committee of the Catholic Assembly of Gratz, in Austria, held a meeting on the 6th inst., at which the programme for the pilgrimage to Monte Santo was arranged. Agreeable to the wishes of the Holy Father, the 23 of September next was fixed for the date of the pilgrimage.

His Holiness received a deputation from the city of Adriano, introduced to him by Cardinal di Pietro and Prince Alibert. Also a thousand pupils of the local Christian schools were received by his Holiness, and they sang a beautiful anthem for the Holy Father, entitled "Ecco il Sospito Padre."

The Council of the Propaganda held an important sitting on Saturday, 13th, relative to Eastern affairs and the course to be adopted respecting the Armenian patriarch, Mgr. Hassoun. Mgr. Hassoun declares that he will only yield to force. The French Embassy in Constantinople is making great efforts to persuade the Porte to adopt violent measures for compelling Mgr. Hassoun's retirement.

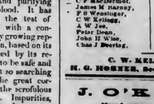
DR. SCHAUBRUCK'S WORK.—The fete day of the patron saint of the church of Wiesbaden, Nassau, was celebrated on May 12th, with all imaginable pomp. His lordship the Bishop of Limburg, in Holland, who had just arrived in the city, kindly consented to officiate at the High Mass. Before the commencement of the solemn ceremony, His lordship was assisted at the alter by the very rev. grand vicar and by the Canons Albers and Dr. Lindnour, Father Lindnour preached the sermon in the German language.

DEATH OF CARDINAL CLARELLI.—It is with deep regret that we learn the death of Cardinal Niccolo Paracciani Clarelli, which took place at Rome on the 2nd day ago. The deceased Cardinal was born at Rieti, April 12, 1796, and was consequently in his 76th year. He was raised to the dignity of a Cardinal on the 23d January, 1845, and was Bishop of Frascati since 1867. He exercised at the same time the functions of archpriest of the Vatican Basilica, secretary of the apostolic briefs, grand chancellor of the pontifical decorations, &c., &c. Suffering from a severe illness, the deceased Cardinal was aggravated by the entry of the Italian troops into Rome, and by the seizure on which they occupied his apartment in the Consulta palace, all those entertained with the deceased Cardinal, and in which all the Cardinals made by Gregory XVI., with the exception of two, viz., Cardinals Patrizi, Amat, De Angelis, Cagiati, Schwartzenberg, Angulos, Carafa, Altieri.

THE STATE OF SPAIN.—The insurrection in the provinces of Catalonia still continues. The Carlist chiefs threaten the railway companies if they refuse to grant the demands made upon them. The Carlists are also, it is reported, preventing the trains from running, and have cut the telegraph wires. Madrid is a veritable political Babel. The Republicans are divided into two parties, who are constituted—and are again repeated the following day with some modifications. It is said that King Amadeus is about to rejoin his father, and will certainly abdicate at the end of October. The Duke of Madrid calls do not hesitate to affirm that a Republican demonstration in favor of Don Carlos is apparent in Madrid. On the other hand the Alphonsists pretend to believe that the days of their sovereign are near. The war is favor. Notwithstanding numerous assertions, Whatever, Don Carlos has not returned to Spain and is not inactive. The Carlists are by no means put down. In La Marche, Maronni and Lopez have gathered bands of Navarri soldiers, as the Amadeists are commonly called. Lopez, one of the chiefs of the affair at Betamar, where he made several prisoners. In the province of Toledo, the chief, Don Carlos de Bourbon, has 500 horse and some foot, quieted Madridejos without encountering any resistance. It is also joined by several volunteers, received contributions, requisitioned some horses, and having remained about 15 hours in the city, took his departure unmolested.

DR. SCHAUBRUCK, BISHOP OF PORTSmouth, preaching from the following text in Le Pays, a French Journal published in Fort Louis. Le Pays of May 11th, says: "On the new basis of Fort Louis, arrived to-day by the Emires. As had been agreed upon, a solemn service was held early in the morning, announcing to the clergy and the faithful of Maurice the presence of the cholera. The children assisted to the instructions of his Excellency the Governor, His Captain of the Port, seized upon his Lordship, and offered whatever means were at their disposal in case he wished to land. The Vice-Administrator, the president, and several members of the Cathedral Council also remained on board the steamer, and were invited by the captain; M. Baron, to breakfast with him. At half the sail down the harbor, a salute with great upon the arrival of the guns at Pragueus. Towards the close Charles de Rosnay, Archbishop of Rouan Catholic succession raised the the one party and the hopes of the When the public crowd, the well known priests of the Lord. The outcry against the Jesuit churches. His Lordship the new Bishop was received with the acclamations of the Vicar General and the clergy of the diocese, and having been clothed with the sacred vestments, the procession set out to be more strict in reporting and the 1678 and 1679 of allegiance were drawn up by the bishop Rouan Catholics in the diocese, and those who refused had to undergo a of punishments and were thrown the Bastile. All suspicious persons were the way-piece was then given to the deathbed neighborhood was put arrested. Ravaillac was at this time of Ignorance embraced. The houses of poetry were searched, and all papers and arms, the oath of allegiance Ravaillac himself was forced to sign, and by the special desire of the Sovereign Pontiff.—Catholic Times, July 26.

The Marseillaise branch of the Society for Defending Catholic Worship has addressed the following letter from Rome:—"By the grace of God and the favor of St. Peter, do you assume a benefit in religion and spiritual advantage to youth, but we and thus in the most effectual manner, by the total dishonour of said order, and by the great increase of your country in her glory and prosperity. We are not surprised, we doubt not, that you have engaged to do it; and that you will be found in support a motive which promises to be of so great



Ayer's

Sarsaparila

Is widely known as one of the most effectual remedies ever discovered for cleansing the system and purifying the blood. It has stood the test of years, with a constantly growing reputation, based on its intrinsic virtues, and remarkable cures. So mild as to be safe and beneficial to children, and yet so searching as to effectually cast out the great corruptions of the blood, such as the scrofulous and syphilitic contaminations, the impurities, or diseases that have lurked in the system for years, soon yield to this powerful antidote, and disappear. Hence its wonderful cures, many of which are publicly known, of Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Ulcers, Eruptions, and cruptive disorders of the skin, Tumors, Blotches, Boils, Pimples, Pustules, Sores, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, and internal Ulcerations of the Uterus, Stomach, and Liver. It also cures other obstinate complaints, to which it would not seem especially adapted, such as Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Piles, Neuralgia, Heart Disease, Female Weakness, Debility, and Leucorrhœa, when they are manifestations of the scrofulous poisons.

It is an excellent restorer of health and strength in the Spring. By renewing the appetite and vigor of the digestive organs, it dissipates the depression and listless languor of the season. Even when no disease appears, people feel better, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. The system moves on with renewed vigor and a new lease of life.

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.,

Practical and Analytical Chemists.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE.

THE

FLORENCE

Will we everything needed in a family, from the Sewer to the lightest fabric.

IT DOES SURE WORK,
SOLE KINDS OF WORK,
AND BETTER WORK.

Than any other machine.

If there is a Florence Sewing Machine within one thousand miles of San Francisco not working well and giving entire satisfaction, if I am informed of it, it will be attended to and without expense of any kind to the owner.

SAMUEL HILL, Agent,
19 New Montgomery Street,
Grand Hotel Building, San Francisco.

Send for Circulars and samples of the work. Active Agents wanted in every place.

MENEELY'S BELL FOUNDRY,

WEST TROY, NEW YORK.

Established in 1826.

CHURCH, ACADEMY, FACTORY AND OTHER Bells, made of copper and tin, warranted satisfactory, and mounted with our New Patent Rotary Yoke, the most recent and desirable Bell Hung in the market. Illustrated Catalogue sent free.

au10-1y.eow

MISCELLANEOUS.

LYNCH & COMIEN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

Overstrung, Grand, Square & Upright

PIANOS.

WAREROOMS,

Nos. 628, 624, 626 and 628 Broadway,

NEW YORK.

THESE PIANOS ARE UNSURPASSED FOR their Elastic Touch, Singing quality, full, round and powerful Tone, great Durability, and, in short, everything that constitutes a PIANO PERFECT.

Description and Prices.

The Pianos will be delivered in San Francisco at the prices given.

No. 1—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, plain legs, carved fall board..... $290
No. 2—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, moulding on plinth, carved legs and lyre..... 310
No. 3—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, carved legs and lyre..... 340
No. 4—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, carved legs and lyre, moulding, beveled top..... 370
No. 5—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, three mouldings, beveled top, carved legs and lyre..... 410
No. 6—7 Octaves. Large front, round corners, three mouldings, beveled top, carved legs and lyre, three mouldings, beveled top..... 450
No. 7—7 Octaves. Grand..... 1,000

These Instruments are all in Rosewood cases, handsomely polished.

UPRIGHT PIANOS.

Seven Octaves—Rosewood case..... $400
Seven Octaves—Walnut case..... 500

PARLOR ORGANS AND MELODEONS, of all sizes and styles, at manufacturers' prices.

TESTIMONIALS.

Below will be found a few of many letters sent as complimentary to the above:

[From Mrs. General W. T. Sherman.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 6, 1872.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: I am very much pleased with the Piano purchased of you. It really a fine instrument in every respect, and is admired by all who have seen and heard it, for its fine tone, delicacy of touch and beauty of finish. Many of my friends and acquaintances have since called since it has been in our parlor, and all pronounce it a first-class instrument. I shall take pleasure in recommending it to my friends, and shall always be pleased to recommend them to any one who may wish to purchase. I am very truly and respectfully yours. ELLEN S. F. SHERMAN.

205 J street.

The price of the above letter can be seen at this office.—ED. MONITOR.

[From the World-renowned Artist, Camilla Urso.]

NEW YORK, May 27, 1872.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: After having your Piano for a month, I am happy to congratulate you on the splendid success you have made in the manufacture of your instrument. It gives me much pleasure to recommend them to any artist. Yours truly, CAMILLA URSO.

[From Rev. J. Shaw, S. J., President of St. John's College, Fordham.]

FORDHAM, N. Y., June 4, 1872.

MESSRS. LYNCH & COMIEN—Gentlemen: It gives me pleasure to state that the Parlor 6-Oct. we bought of you some years since, has given entire satisfaction to us and Professors and Pupils in Music. Yours very truly, J. SHAW, S. J., President.

[From the Sisters of Charity, Academy of Holy Cross, Port Jervis, Orange County, New York.]

Having Lynch & Comien's Pianos in use we take great pleasure in saying that we consider them not superior, to those of any other manufacturer.

[From Mrs. James Sadlier, 19 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.]

Mrs. James Sadlier has very great pleasure in certifying to the superior excellence and durability of the Piano purchased of Messrs. Lynch & Comien, which has remained here it was an object of curiosity and admiration to all visitors. I am, sir, truly yours, SARAH M. V. SADLIER.

The Piano that I bought for my daughter of Lynch Brothers, I have had ample opportunity to test, and have never in tone, and decidedly cheaper than one of similar grade. CORCORAN, Bishop of Pittsburgh.

☞ Circulars and full particulars can be obtained at The Monitor Office.

C. JOSEPH

HAS REMOVED HIS STORE TO

403 KEARNY STREET,

Between Pine and California.

IT IS THE ONLY FRENCH HOUSE IN-gaging the manufacture of

PH. HERBER OF PARIS.

C. JOSEPH has the honor to inform his numerous friends that he has received from Paris a large assortment of

Boots and Shoes

FOR.....

Ladies', Gentlemen and Children's Wear

403—KEARNY STREET—403

Between Pine and California streets.

au17 2m

C. DESMOND,

PRACTICAL HATTER,

No. 5 New Montgomery Street,

GRAND HOTEL BUILDING.

TO SELLING OFF HIS LARGE AND VARIED Stock of Hats and caps at less than half its value, preparat

PACIFIC COAST ITEMS.

Two lines of stages now make tri-weekly trips between Julian and San Diego.

Very rich ore has been struck on the Silger ledge, near Greenwood, El Dorado county.

The mining excitement in the Silver Zone District, Nevada, runs high, and valuable mines are discovered daily.

Charles Andrews, a young man of 19, shot himself accidentally at Crystal Springs on Saturday. He died instantly.

James C. Nealon late of Sacramento, won the prize for throwing light weights at the City Gardens on Friday.

Several persons are agitating the practicability of erecting a new hotel at Salem Oregon, on Mallory's corner.

The construction train on the Oregon and California Railroad has reached the North Umpqua river.

Great fires are raging in the Blue Mountains near Walla Walla, destroying large quantities of wood and rails.

The crops of nuts in the fertile district of Los Nietos promises to be very large and especially where irrigated.

There is much talk in business circles in Tulare county of a branch railroad to connect with the Southern Pacific Railroad.

The daughter of J. M. Sanford, County Commissioner of Churchill county, Nevada, was accidentally drowned in Carson slough at Stillwater lately.

The Vallejo Independent says: The collecting of voters on the Yard has begun. There are nines men enrolled than there is work for, and still they come.

Senator Cole has authorized the statement that he will not be a candidate for a nomination to Congress outside the regular Republican organization.

J. B. Lamer of Mendocino county, who was a prominent candidate for Congressional nomination at the time Pearce was nominated, is again in the field.

On Tuesday, August 6th, a man by the name of Mr. McGrade, while working near Napa City hauling hay, fell off of a load and sustained a capellar fracture of the joint.

A California lion was killed recently by Robt. Williams in a gulch near his house, about six miles from Mariposa. The animal measured seven feet from the nose to the end of its tail, and weighed over 150 pounds.

The laborers and teams, to the number of 700, employed on the State Capitol grounds, were all discharged last week. About half the number will be soon again employed.

A party of diamond hunters at San Diego have fitted out to start for Arizona in a few days. They propose going into the vicinity of the Burro mines. Many old Arizonians seem to think diamonds can be found in that neighborhood.

Josiah Lee, while hunting in the redwoods near Cornelius, was badly bitten by a rattlesnake. He went to Wauscerville for medical assistance. Five pints of whisky were then administered. If he survives the dose he may possibly recover.

W. B. Crane and the superintendent of the gold mining company (Jackson), have purchased the controlling interest in the Conner Creek Gold Lode, and they say it is the richest quartz lode ever discovered in Eastern Oregon.

A party of tourists returned to Visalia August 10th from the Kaweah Valley, last bringing a measurement of the big tree "General Grant." Circumference, 102 feet 6 inches. One stump is over 130 feet in circumference. Hundreds will average 100 feet.

General Schofield and other officers of the army, with the Paymaster, are now at Fort Independence, their business being to determine the character of the improvements to be made there, to hold a court-martial for the trial of deserters lately brought in, and to pay off the troops.

Casper Lukebe, residing about twelve miles north of Yuba City, on the Honcut, has in a pen about 140 young wild ducks, which he has caught in a low adobe flat back of the house, when nearly full grown, before the little fellows could fly. They are feeding and growing, and propose to sell them as soon as grown.

Napa County assessment—Number of acres, 396,000; value of real estate, $3,341,925; value of improvements on same, $1,289,765; value of city lots, $189,350; improvements on same, $126,950; personal property, $2,176,912; total value of all property, $6,203,987.

Butte County Assessment—Valuation of real estate, $3,463,369; improvements on the same, $1,121,150; personal property, $2,685,347; total assessed value, $7,176,866, as against $4,521,830 last year. Land assessed, 111,671 acres; city property assessed, 845 acres; in wheat, 46,636 acres, in barley 16,041 acres.

Hatlett has a force of over eleven hundred men at work on the Northern Pacific Railroad beyond the Newaham. There are several deep cuts and heavy fills to make more. It is expected that the track will be laid to Hodgden's by the end of September.

There are details of a horrible crime last week in Weber county, Utah. Two bard boys, thirteen and fourteen years old, met a girl named Janet Lowy, of fifteen years, on the street. They induced her to come from her home, violated her person, and then pushed her into a slough, where she was drowned. The boys were then arrested.

The Prescott (Arizona) Miner of August 3d has the following: Cyrus Burnett left home on Thursday, and went into the woods with a pan load of wood. Not returning at night, his friends went in search, and found the next day in the woods near town Burnett, and both his horse killed by lightning.

The Santa Cruz Sentinel of the 10th says that on Friday last a man named Charles Houston, a partner of Perry of the tannery, was driving his wagon to roll them apart, when they suddenly commenced to bite a pair of bears, crushing his hips and diaphragm in a very serious manner.

The Tucson Citizen of the 3d has the following: The Apaches continue to murder our people just as if they had not promised to keep the peace. They shot down J. M. Flores to death near the Sopori Ranch, on July 30th; also killed his horse and that of his companion; the latter escaped. Yesterday, within three hundred yards of Kitchen's ranch, they shot and killed J. Martinez, an old and respected citizen.

We have noticed the fact that surveyors have been employed locating the line of the Texas Pacific Railroad, from the town of San Diego, five or six miles eastward. On the eastern end of the line, commencing at the town of Marshall, in Texas, work is also soon to be commenced in earnest. General U. M. Dodge has advertised for proposals for the grading, bridging, tieing and tracklaying of about five hundred miles of the road westward—the bids to be all in by the 1st of October. This looks like business.

A severe earthquake shock was felt in the Salinas and Hollister valleys on the 4th inst.

Miss Laura A. Patterson, a girl of about 16 years, drowned herself in the Pajaro River on the 3d inst.

Dr. C. W. Norcom, of Stockton, suicided by means of a pistol shot on Wednesday.

The State fair will commence in Sacramento on the 16th inst.

Capt. Leroy was fatally shot in Arizona City last week by a Chinaman.

It is rumored that the Panama steamers advertised to stop at San Pedro and San Diego, have been bought off by Holladay.

Ex-Chief of Police Downey of Virginia City, Nev., committed suicide on Wednesday of this week by swallowing an ounce of laudanum.

A correspondent from Nanaimo says that upward of twenty square miles of timber are ablaze, and that bridges and roads are blockaded with falling timber.

A coal-passer on board the California, named Michael Fitzgerald, committed suicide on the vessel wavetering the Straits near Victoria, B. C., on Monday last.

A Spanish boy, about ten years of age, was drowned while swimming with other boys in a reservoir near Spanish Dry Diggings, El Dorado county, on Wednesday.

Near Napa, on Wednesday, Mrs. Colburn and Mrs. McCombs each had a leg broken, and Miss Chiles had an arm broken by the upsetting of the wagon in which they were riding.

The Board of Supervisors of Los Angeles county ordered an election on the proposition whether five per cent. of the assessable property of the county shall be given to the C. P. R. R. for building fifty miles of road south of that city.

John Kearney, who was thrown from his buggy in a field on the San Pablo road, several years ago, and remained lying on the ground all night, has received from the effects of his wounds.

Nine hundred men are now employed to the Mare Island Navy Yard, and as many more will be put to work before the end of the 4th November, and be compelled, as they were last year, to vote for the straight Republican ticket. After the election the majority will be discharged, as they were last year.

The Amador Ledger of the 10th has the following: The Kennedy mine cleaned up last Saturday, after a fifteen days' run, the snug little sum of $10,660. The rock on the lower level is looking very fine and gets richer the farther down they sink upon it, and is also widening. The hanging and foot walls are exceedingly well defined, and at no time since the mine has been opened has it shown such encouraging prospects for a lasting and paying stock-farmers—their tastes inclining that way.

Young ladies of that warm, brown color that so pleases Joaquin Miller and Dr. Linsley, are to be found in the Sierra foothills—the Willows & Gibbs Silent Family Sewing Machine, and when it is pretty clear that when, cold Dentine into gushing bellow.

Commodore John L. Worden, now in command of the Naval Academy at Annapolis has been promoted to the grade of Rear-Admiral, which promotion takes place on the 5th day of November next, then Rear-Admiral John O. Winslow retires on account of long and faithful services.

Mitchell Hart, the millionaire pawnbroker of Chatham street, New York, was buried last week by Tarbe. He was found in the old house in that street, and for many years it has been known as the haunted house by the neighbors. The joint estate of himself and his brother is estimated at six million dollars.

President Thiers said the other day, in the French Assembly, that, in his opinion, King William of Prussia would have done then Frederick the Great; that Bismarck was greater than Napoleon; and that Field Marshal Moltke the most eminent strategist that ever lived.

The Stockton Herald says that Tarryt-own, N. Y., recently horse-whipped a man because he had named his mare after her, and then entered the mare for a race with another mare named Josie Mansfield, and placarded the two names all over the city all over town, which Miss Maggie considered an insult and an injury.

The Rev. Talcott Tilton talks about his sister, Susan B. Authony: she slighted, dove-like in the midst of the Cincinnati Convention, and refused to go to her or her pretty feet in that surging flood. She was done down by Baltimore, like an eagle descending from her mountain eyrie to snatch a kid from the flock, but was scared away without so much as one lamb having to flush her beak upon. At Philadelphia, however, it was otherwise; there she and her sisters found recognition, and upon Philadelphia she drops her benediction, and over its doings she flaps her wings."

Late advices from North Carolina leave little doubt that Governor Caldwell and the gubernatorial seat will be contested before the Legislature. The Democrats claim that sufficient frauds can be proven to secure the election of Merrimon. The Republicans also allege that gross frauds and fraudulent returns were perpetrated in working a cheepity as that at Oakville.

Prof. Olney, of Colorado, and the Todd party, are now arrived in Los Angeles on their return from an extended geological tour in Arizona and New Mexico, and are direct from the diamond fields. They have with them 1,000 pounds of specimens of gold, silver and other ores, and several pints of precious and doubtful stones, which will be exhibited in San Francisco. On the route from Fort Wingate to Albuquerque, New Mexico, and on the borders of Arizona, in what is called the Ani Mal Hosting, their gems were discovered, all at the surface. There are specimens of genuine rubies from the size of a large pea downward. The diamonds, if there are any, are small, and the bed of clay in which they found rich gold and silver-bearing quartz near Fort Wingate. The party claim to have discovered and located flowing oil springs that will yield from seventy to one hundred barrels per day. The petroleum issuing from these springs they will not develope. In old mounds and ruins of ancient cities they found relics of tools, pottery and woven cloth. The party are not sanguine as to their diamond discoveries. The ruby specimens will weigh a quarter of a pound. The party suffered privations on the road, and narrowly escaped perishing while crossing the Colorado Desert.

LOCATION OF THE DIAMOND FIELDS.—We have no information from an independent source, so particular and explicit as hardly to leave a doubt of the true location of the diamond fields which have created so much excitement in this city for the last few weeks. The diamond mines are situated in the southeast corner of Arizona Territory, south of latitude 32 degrees, at a point near to the boundaries of New Mexico and Sonora. Any one by taking a map of the country can readily find the point where the boundary lines of Arizona and New Mexico intersect; Mexico on the south. The country has several silver mines laid down, and the Apaches are designated as occupying the same district. The country is not surveyed. It is situated at no great distance from the old southern trail crossing the country from Fort Yuma to El Paso. We have not much reason to doubt but the true locality has been sufficiently given in this paragraph. If that is the diamond territory, we do not think half-a-dozen men would be able to gobble it up or to keep everybody else out of it. But we advise nobody to go there. The diamond hunter is a fool. Africa is a hard luck. Hardly more than a dozen gained anything at all edequate as a compensation for the risks and sufferings encountered. If any extensive diamond fields are discovered, it will be very difficult to prevent as free competition as was established in South Africa. There is not sufficient evidence within reach to warrant any one in running off blindly to this distant and inhospitable territory. Diamonds are used for cutting diamonds; and just now very sharp men are disposed to try the cutting powers of diamonds on the public.

PERSONAL.

Barnum's gorilla threatens to strike on account of the hot weather. He swears with an Irish accent.

Fred. Douglass said, in his speech at Raleigh, N. C., that he did not ask for social, but civil equality.

One of the most brilliant paragraphists in the country is Chas. T. Congdon, who writes the minor editorials for the New York Tribune.

From the De Noailles family, whence we get our name, seven generations have been four Ambassadors to England and one to Rome.

Mr. Sanders, the husband of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, is a tireless man. Mrs. Cady Stanton and Mrs. Gage are both Grant men.

M. Bernadotte of Sweden, grandson of Napoleon's generous marshal of that name, has gone to Paris. He is the only prince who is known as King of Sweden.

Filippo Casabona, convicted lately, and six of his gang, were executed at Naples on the 8th of July. Casabona, on his scaffold, confessed a number of robberies and murders, beside the kidnapping of a nobleman's child.

Fanny Fern and James Parton are billing and cooing at Newport this Summer. Jim is writing up a biography of Aaron Cardiff Giant, while Fan scribbles at the world through the Ledger at a dollar a line.

Ex-Governor Leonard J. Farwell, of Wisconsin, burned out in Chicago, has settled in Grant City, Mo., where he can bring up his boys and educate his daughters among stock-farmers—their tastes inclining that way.

Young ladies of that warm, brown color that so pleases Joaquin Miller and Dr. Linsley, are to be found in the Sierra foothills—the Willows & Gibbs Silent Family Sewing machine, and when it is pretty clear that when, cold Dentine into gushing bellow.

Commodore John L. Worden, now in command of the Naval Academy at Annapolis has been promoted to the grade of Rear-Admiral, which promotion takes place on the 5th day of November next, then Rear-Admiral John O. Winslow retires on account of long and faithful services.

Mitchell Hart, the millionaire pawnbroker of Chatham street, New York, was buried last week by Tarbe. He was found in the old house in that street, and for many years it has been known as the haunted house by the neighbors. The joint estate of himself and his brother is estimated at six million dollars.

President Thiers said the other day, in the French Assembly, that, in his opinion, King William of Prussia would have done then Frederick the Great; that Bismarck was greater than Napoleon; and that Field Marshal Moltke the most eminent strategist that ever lived.

The Stockton Herald says that Tarryt-own, N. Y., recently horse-whipped a man because he had named his mare after her, and then entered the mare for a race with another mare named Josie Mansfield, and placarded the two names all over the city all over town, which Miss Maggie considered an insult and an injury.

The Rev. Talcott Tilton talks about his sister, Susan B. Authony: she slighted, dove-like in the midst of the Cincinnati Convention, and refused to go to her or her pretty feet in that surging flood. She was done down by Baltimore, like an eagle descending from her mountain eyrie to snatch a kid from the flock, but was scared away without so much as one lamb having to flush her beak upon. At Philadelphia, however, it was otherwise; there she and her sisters found recognition, and upon Philadelphia she drops her benediction, and over its doings she flaps her wings."

Late advices from North Carolina leave little doubt that Governor Caldwell and the gubernatorial seat will be contested before the Legislature. The Democrats claim that sufficient frauds can be proven to secure the election of Merrimon. The Republicans also allege that gross frauds and fraudulent returns were perpetrated in working a cheepity as that at Oakville.

Prof. Olney, of Colorado, and the Todd party, are now arrived in Los Angeles on their return from an extended geological tour in Arizona and New Mexico, and are direct from the diamond fields. They have with them 1,000 pounds of specimens of gold, silver and other ores, and several pints of precious and doubtful stones, which will be exhibited in San Francisco. On the route from Fort Wingate to Albuquerque, New Mexico, and on the borders of Arizona, in what is called the Ani Mal Hosting, their gems were discovered, all at the surface. There are specimens of genuine rubies from the size of a large pea downward. The diamonds, if there are any, are small, and the bed of clay in which they found rich gold and silver-bearing quartz near Fort Wingate. The party claim to have discovered and located flowing oil springs that will yield from seventy to one hundred barrels per day. The petroleum issuing from these springs they will not develope. In old mounds and ruins of ancient cities they found relics of tools, pottery and woven cloth. The party are not sanguine as to their diamond discoveries. The ruby specimens will weigh a quarter of a pound. The party suffered privations on the road, and narrowly escaped perishing while crossing the Colorado Desert.

LOCATION OF THE DIAMOND FIELDS.—We have no information from an independent source, so particular and explicit as hardly to leave a doubt of the true location of the diamond fields which have created so much excitement in this city for the last few weeks. The diamond mines are situated in the southeast corner of Arizona Territory, south of latitude 32 degrees, at a point near to the boundaries of New Mexico and Sonora. Any one by taking a map of the country can readily find the point where the boundary lines of Arizona

Wholesale Market Report.

MONITOR OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, August 15, 1872.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export only a moderate trade is reported, at a decline. We quote as follows: Extra at $5 42½@5 75, and superfine, at $4 75@5 00; interior and Oregon brands—Extra, at $5 25@5 37½; low grades, at $4 12½@4 25.

WHEAT—The market has been quiet but firm, at a slight decline in prices, since our last weekly review. At the close we quote the range at $1 57½@1 60 for shipping grades, and $1 62½@1 65 for good to choice milling; to $1 70.

BARLEY—The market has ruled firm for brewing at unchanged rates. For new a fair demand has been noted at unchanged rates since our last weekly review. At the close we quote new bay at [illegible] and [illegible] for low to.

OATS—The market has remained quiet, at unchanged rates, during the past week. Ordinary to choice sold at $1 [illegible] @ 2 00 for seed, and 1 [illegible] @ 1 [illegible] for feed at the close.

RYE—The receipts have been fair during the past seven days, with a fair demand. Quotable at the close at $1[illegible] for ordinary to choice new to [illegible].

STRAW—[illegible] at $[illegible] 25 @ [illegible] for cargo lots.

CORN—Market quiet at $1 [illegible] 55.

CORN MEAL—Sales at $[illegible] 75 @ 3 00 for fresh ground.

BEANS—We note a fair demand, and the following are the leading rates: Bayos, [illegible]; Butter, $[illegible]; small White and Pea, $[illegible]; and Red, $[illegible] @ [illegible].

POTATOES—At the close we quote the range at $1 [illegible] 75; Carolines, $1 50 @ 1 [illegible].

ONIONS—Market [illegible] 50 lbs.

VEGETABLES—We quote [illegible] as follows:

MIDDLINGS—We quote feed at $23 @ [illegible] from the [illegible].

BUCKWHEAT—Sold at $1 25 @ 1 [illegible].

HAY—Sales at $[illegible] @ [illegible] 00 for Barley, [illegible]; Alfalfa, [illegible]; and Mixed Grass, $[illegible]; and Timothy, $[illegible] @ [illegible] 00 for Wheat and Oat, and Timothy, $[illegible] @ [illegible] 00 for Barley, Oat and Timothy, and [illegible] @ [illegible] 00 for Wheat and Barley, and [

Mrs. Bowling, my good woman, are you anything better?"

"May the Lord bless your reverence for counts' all the way," said a feeble voice, from the corner. "Sure, only for the drop o' wine and broth that I got made with my wife the reputed synonym for legalised robbery hard to say what would have come of us, Jemmy, gal Father Quaid the stood."

The priest sat down silently, and for awhile his eyes, which had just been gazing on the grace and the glory of the moon path, were unable to make out objects with anything like distinctness. Gradually they became accustomed to the semi-darkness of the place, and then the scene which they took in was enough to move a stouter heart than Father Quaid's.

In the corner, lying on a bundle of straw and broom, lay a young woman in the last stage of consumption. Her thick, dark hair was loosely twisted into a knot over her forehead, an arrangement which led an adventitious strength to the deadly whiteness of her temples, and the vivid scarlet spots that glowed on either cheek. Her delicate and thread-like hands were laid listlessly on the ragged blanket, serving for sheet and counterpane, and a mysterious, settled light filled her large eyes with unnatural lustre. At the foot of the miserable bed crouched a little boy, of seven, three years, with a tattered coat thrown over his shoulders and a crownless cauboon on his head. His face rested at the priest, and grasping his forlock, made a child's reverence, which the pitying clergyman returned by tapping him under the chin.

"Jemmy," said the latter, "I'll give you the picture of St. Patrick now," drawing one from his breviary, "and I'll send you a whole gridiron for yourself when I get home. If you'll go and play on the hillside till I call you."

"Do, alanna," said the lad's mother; and the little fellow, having kissed her, scrambled through the doorway, and disappeared in the open.

The priest kissed his stole, put it over his head, and prepared to hear poor Peggy's confession. It was not a long one, and would have been short if the interruptions of the penitent had not interrupted occasionally by the hacking cough which was sounding her strength and reducing her to a shadow. Absolution being given, Father Quaid rose.

"I will send what I have spoken of the minute I get back," he said, "and now command your child to God and the Blessed Virgin, and take the crosses they send you with patience. Good bye."

"Father Quaid," said the sufferer, as the priest turned to depart, "there's something weighing on my mind that I'd like to tell you afore you go."

"And what is that, Mrs. Dowling?"

"Only about Phil, your reverence. I'm afeard he'll be doin' harm and gettin' into throuble, and that what out beconse of poor Jimmy?"

The priest looked at the woman with a newly aroused interest in his pale and sunken face.

"I shall be going to do wrong and you can stop him doing it, it is your duty to stop him, if you would not be a sharer in his sin. What is it, will you trust me?"

"Why my heart's blood, your reverence." The coughing resumed with great violence, and the hectic bearer of the sufferer's chest seemed as if it would be the last. "He's been told," she continued, as soon as the fit had subsided, "that Mother Ellis she turned us out of our little houldin'—may the Lord forgive her!—and we'll be gone to-night by the road, and he's gone, he wouldn't tell me where; but I know that Phil, my boy, is heavy for my big feare; too well I guess where he's gone and what he's after doing—following on the same topic, Norry could give no information whatever. The few words already spoken, seemed to sap all the life from her.

The short day was dying out, and the rain was beating in the dusk and cracks of the mountains, as the priest, with the sick catechist, darted out of the shieling, and held up his head to inhale the fresh air which he suspected Phil might be lying in ambush. The lane was in with awful rapidity, and solid darkness seemed to close the hills. Still the brave priest held on, nothing daunted by the discomforts to be met in the life of his enemy, if needed, with his own.

At times he fancied he heard voices addressing him, but his common sense at once resolved these airy syllablings into the female-tricks played by the wind to the carved interstices of the rock. Then a tall figure would seem to loom up in his path, which, on approaching, would be proved to be a withered ash or a gaunt fir, standing alone in the moorland night.

He felt with his stick and satisfied himself that he had found a narrow pathway—one of those ancient lanes so common in hilly districts. Surely that would lead him somewhere! He followed it fully an hour, and was increasing his speed, when he was dashed by a massive cloud, split in twain by the lightning, and he came to shine to other.

The priest's heart gave a bound as if the last trumpet had sounded in his ear. A few steps, and he was lost; for he was standing on the brink of a precipice whose vast hollow his eye could not penetrate. Thanking God fervently for his miraculous preservation, he resolved to trust to that of the chasm. The faint watery light at the same time enabled him to see his surroundings, and his quick glance took in the whole circle of familiar country at once beyond. He retraced his steps somewhat leisurely, and was at length rejoiced to find himself on the embankment skirting the road along which Ellis was expected to come.

But where was Phil Dowling to be found? He shouted his name until he was hoarse, and was glad to refresh his throat at a little rivulet into which he had inadvertently dipped his boot. No answer but the echo's. "I cannot go, too, in the name of God to show yourself," he exclaimed, but only had no response. Vexed and disappointed, he paced the bank for some minutes, and then seated behind a heavy elder which in some measure protected him from the piercing wind.

He waited, and listened, as the storm rolled in fitful gusts, each more fierce than the other—short, anguish breathing—the exhaustion of pent-up hatred and fiercest vengeance. He stooped—his hand touched the boot of a man's foot, and, at the same moment, Phil Dowling leaped to his feet, and confronted him!

CHAPTER XIV.

"And what are you doing here, at this hour of the morning, Phil?" asked Father Quaid, "Honest men are generally in bed at this hour."

"Honest men that have beds to sleep in are, of course, your reverence," was the answer. "Them that haven't must sell themselves as best they're able."

There was something at once disingenuous and defiant in Dowling's answer that confirmed Father Quaid's worst fears, and satisfied him that Norry's story was no hallucination, but a serious and well founded alarm.

He looked sorrowly at Phil, who refused to eye him in turn, but kept gazing on the ground in a sort of sullen, fretful distraction. The cornered peasant, whose roofree had been burned, whose crop had been seized, whose prospects had been for ever blasted by Ellis, in the name of law—then the reputed synonym for legalised robbery—was a giant, in his way, standing on six feet in his vamps.

His face, once frank, open, and handsome, was now so narrowed and disfigured by incessant brooding over his wrongs—over the (fancied) ill-usage and insults he was compelled to endure in his lanonest and child-like—that people remained for days from each other who lived for you, and who forgave his murderous on Calvary—

As if struck powerless, the hasting of Dowling's frame ceases; the weapon drops from his hands, and the peasant, who until this appeal was made had behaved like an incarnate fury, falls flat on his face to the ground, and sobs until his whole frame shakes with convulsive emotion; while Ellis rides past, unconscious of the danger he has escaped."

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

ENGLAND.

Peers and Members of Parliament in Receipt of Money.

Two returns have just been published showing respectively what peers and what members of the House of Commons are in receipt of public money from the National Exchequer, and the amounts and allowances which they so receive, whether by way of salary or compensation. The peers receive army votes £29,741 11s. 10d.; under navy votes, £3,042; from civil funds, £235,225, 7s. 10d.—in all, £268,268, 11s. 10d. The House of Commons receive under army votes; £7,540, 4s. 8d.; under navy votes, £2,066, 7s. 2d.; from civil funds, £79,771, 18s. 10d.—total, £89,396, 8s. 1d., or about a third of what is received by the Upper House. The largest sum paid to any peer out of the Royal family is £29,000 to Lord Spencer, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland—the lowest, £3 4s., with £1, 4s. 6d. allowance to the Archbishop of Canterbury, Lieutenant, the Marquis of Downshire, the Earl of Dunraven, the Earl of Jersey, the Earl of Bolton, the Earl of Carnarvon, and Viscount Hardinge. The largest sum paid to any member of the Lower House, as a member of the Cabinet, is £1,000 received by Sir H. Storks as colonel of the 70th Foot, and the smallest £3 3s., as allowance of a cornet of yeomanry, (e Mr. M. A. Bass, Lord F. Cavendish, Mr. Chaplin, and Mr. Cheetham. A vote of £60 15s. is received by Sir T. E. Colebrooke as compensation for being a Lord in Waiting. Pensions for civil services, in no case amounting to more than £2,000, are received by seventy gentlemen. The large sum of £7,700 paid to the late Lord Ellesborough as compensation for the abolition of the office of Chief Clerk in the Court of Queen's Bench, to which he was appointed by his father the Lord Chief Justice, reduces the holders of abolished offices to be represented by only two—Lord Broughsam, as formerly Master in Ordinary in the Court of Chancery, and the Duke of Grafton, late Controller of Seals in the Courts of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas.

The Irish in England.

The Dublin Nation has sent a "Special Commissioner" to England to examine the social condition of the Irish residents in that country and report thereon. The following is the first instalment of some very interesting. From one of them we extract the following testimony to the moral purity of our race:

"The Irish people in England. That they are immeasurably superior to the English people in the metropolis is an undisputed fact in single and of which he has given me authority to use his name. When asked if since he wrote his pamphlet he saw any reason to alter a word of his judgment, his reply was "certainly not, but the contrary. In such a course of vice the Irish are pure to a marvel. The standard of purity has to be judged by comparison with a people nearly as vicious as they are strant, and though relatively very high, there is still a dreadful loss. The cure for all this is to be found in the Irish race, and this can only be done by a radical alteration of the relations existing between Ireland and England. The Irish people in England, as a consequence of the present system, are debased to a fearful degree. The strength of our manhood is crushed and worn out in the struggle, and must wasting later here—labor and in the majority of cases breaks down man's strength and vigor by four or five years, whilst the land which nature designed as the heritage of our race is converted into profitless waste by the very system which opens his drives the people here. It is the same with the moral tone of the people, as to the good and virtuous daughters of Ireland, who under a different regime would be respected, and be in a state of living children at home. The system, however we look on it, is a curse to Ireland, to the Irish people in England, wastes our wealth and resources, degrades our manhood, and destroys the purity of our womanhood who has been compelled to be forced to seek a living in England. The curse is wide as the world, and is only inferred when I add that at the very least one in ten of the Irish in London and their offspring—both sexes and all ages—are given to morals—and to fatal and the percentage would be higher in some of the other towns in England, as I shall hereafter have occasion to point out. This, so-called to the most accurate estimate we can form, and be decidedly less instead of being under 40,000 for London alone, and from three to four times that number for the whole of England. Ireland threatened Irish race to the Anglo-Saxon race, civilly, in the name of God to show yourself," he exclaimed, but only had no response. Vexed and disappointed, he paced the bank for some minutes longer, and then gained behind a heavy elder which in some measure protected him from the piercing wind.

He waited, and listened, as the storm rolled in fitful gusts, each more fierce than the other—short, anguish breathing—the exhaustion of pent-up hatred and fiercest vengeance. He stooped—his hand touched the boot of a man's foot, and, at the same moment, Phil Dowling leaped to his feet, and confronted him!

CHAPTER XIV.

"And what are you doing here, at this hour of the morning, Phil?" asked Father Quaid, "Honest men are generally in bed at this hour."

"Honest men that have beds to sleep in are, of course, your reverence," was the answer. "Them that haven't must sell themselves as best they're able."

There was something at once disingenuous and defiant in Dowling's answer that confirmed Father Quaid's worst fears, and satisfied him that Norry's story was no hallucination, but a serious and well founded alarm.

He looked sorrowly at Phil, who refused

"Tramp, tramp, tramp!" Every stride of the beast he rides brings the exterminator nearer and nearer to his doom."

"Would you redden your hands with blood, madman!" asks the priest, and his voice is full of rich, agony and excitement. "I must have that weapon."

Dowling eyes him fiercely, slope back and distance. Again the priest tries a hint on himself on him and gets the barrel of the pistol into his hands. Recovering it, they relapse about, but as yet neither side has the advantage.

Tramp, tramp, tramp.

The beating of the horse's feet grows more terribly distinct. There is a red light in Dowling's eyes, but his lips are ashen grey, and his frame trembles all over with a maddening excitement. He makes one tremendous effort to disengage the pistol, but does not succeed. Another, but still the priest clings to it like grim death.

Tramp, tramp, tramp, tramp.

The ground where they are struggling is torn up, and they can hardly hold their feet on the slippery grass and sodden earth. They reel round, stagger, and look up down, the priest below, and Dowling uppermost.

Tramp, tramp, tramp, tramp.

There is a sharp click, and the pistol is

* Two of the actors in this scene—which is correct almost exactly as above described—are still alive.—EDITOR.

hurled from the hands of the struggling combatants, and, as it falls, it explodes!

"Ha!" Bowling hoarsely murmurs, "he deserves his doom, and now"—

Suddenly, as they writhe in unequal struggle, the priest thrusts his hand inside his vest, and pulls out a crucifix. Pressing it on the lips of the howling murderer, he gasps into his ear:

"Here, wretched man, kiss the wounds of your Redeemer who died for you, and who forgave his murderers on Calvary—"

As if struck powerless, the hasting of Dowling's frame ceases; the weapon drops from his hands, and the peasant, who until this appeal was made had behaved like an incarnate fury, falls flat on his face to the ground, and sobs until his whole frame shakes with convulsive emotion; while Ellis rides past, unconscious of the danger he has escaped."

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

ENGLAND.

Peers and Members of Parliament in Receipt of Money.

Two returns have just been published showing respectively what peers and what members of the House of Commons are in receipt of public money from the National Exchequer, and the amounts and allowances which they so receive, whether by way of salary or compensation. The peers receive army votes £29,741 11s. 10d.; under navy votes, £3,042; from civil funds, £235,225, 7s. 10d.—in all, £268,268, 11s. 10d. The House of Commons receive under army votes; £7,540, 4s. 8d.; under navy votes, £2,066, 7s. 2d.; from civil funds, £79,771, 18s. 10d.—total, £89,396, 8s. 1d., or about a third of what is received by the Upper House. The largest sum paid to any peer out of the Royal family is £29,000 to Lord Spencer, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland—the lowest, £3 4s., with £1, 4s. 6d. allowance to the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Marquis of Downshire, the Earl of Dunraven, the Earl of Jersey, the Earl of Bolton, the Earl of Carnarvon, and Viscount Hardinge. The largest sum paid to any member of the Lower House, as a member of the Cabinet, is £1,000 received by Sir H. Storks as colonel of the 70th Foot, and the smallest £3 3s., as allowance of a cornet of yeomanry, (e Mr. M. A. Bass, Lord F. Cavendish, Mr. Chaplin, and Mr. Cheetham. A vote of £60 15s. is received by Sir T. E. Colebrooke as compensation for being a Lord in Waiting. Pensions for civil services, in no case amounting to more than £2,000, are received by seventy gentlemen. The large sum of £7,700 paid to the late Lord Ellesborough as compensation for the abolition of the office of Chief Clerk in the Court of Queen's Bench, to which he was appointed by his father the Lord Chief Justice, reduces the holders of abolished offices to be represented by only two—Lord Broughsam, as formerly Master in Ordinary in the Court of Chancery, and the Duke of Grafton, late Controller of Seals in the Courts of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas.

The Irish in England.

The Dublin Nation has sent a "Special Commissioner" to England to examine the social condition of the Irish residents in that country and report thereon. The following is the first instalment of some very interesting. From one of them we extract the following testimony to the moral purity of our race:

"The Irish people in England. That they are immeasurably superior to the English people in the metropolis is an undisputed fact in single and of which he has given me authority to use his name. When asked if since he wrote his pamphlet he saw any reason to alter a word of his judgment, his reply was "certainly not, but the contrary. In such a course of vice the Irish are pure to a marvel. The standard of purity has to be judged by comparison with a people nearly as vicious as they are strant, and though relatively very high, there is still a dreadful loss. The cure for all this is to be found in the Irish race, and this can only be done by a radical alteration of the relations existing between Ireland and England. The Irish people in England, as a consequence of the present system, are debased to a fearful degree. The strength of our manhood is crushed and worn out in the struggle, and must wasting later here—labor and in the majority of cases breaks down man's strength and vigor by four or five years, whilst the land which nature designed as the heritage of our race is converted into profitless waste by the very system which opens his drives the people here. It is the same with the moral tone of the people, as to the good and virtuous daughters of Ireland, who under a different regime would be respected, and be in a state of living children at home. The system, however we look on it, is a curse to Ireland, to the Irish people in England, wastes our wealth and resources, degrades our manhood, and destroys the purity of our womanhood who has been compelled to be forced to seek a living in England. The curse is wide as the world, and is only inferred when I add that at the very least one in ten of the Irish in London and their offspring—both sexes and all ages—are given to morals—and to fatal and the percentage would be higher in some of the other towns in England, as I shall hereafter have occasion to point out. This, so-called to the most accurate estimate we can form, and be decidedly less instead of being under 40,000 for London alone, and from three to four times that number for the whole of England. Ireland threatened Irish race to the Anglo-Saxon race, civilly, in the name of God

The Jesuits.

We presume that the character of the present Sir Robert Peel is so well known that there is no risk of public opinion being in any way influenced by his words or actions in or out of Parliament. He was at once the subject of an amusing caricature in Punch as the "dirty boy" whom Lord Palmerston was always lifting out of the mud. That was on the occasion of the Italian War. The O'Donahue ghue, and then consulting his person, the not-genuine Premier, as to the propriety of choke-b-tween valor and discretion. On Tuesday evening the chivalrous lar-d-t was in no such difficulty. It was then safe to be insolent, for the Jesuits were in the minority by a challenge, and the weapon they use is not a bladed pand, Ace-ding, not in perfect consistency with his character, Sir Robert Peel, a friend of the Communist commander-in-Bombasatti. This commissary took it into his head that a clerk in the Premier's quotation "with reference to an equally dangerous and obnoxious class of persons, the Order of Jesuits." If the person who used this language were not a member of Parliament we should

Shocking Case of Murder.

A shocking case was tried on Friday, July 26th, before the Court of Assizes of the Seine, namely, the murder of a son, who was in the Versailles army during the insurrection of 1871, by his parents, the names of the accused are Pierre Joseph Louis and Marie Euphrasie Hanard, both 51 years of age, and parents of (strange to say) twenty children. The murdered son, Jules Hanard, was a member of the Catholic Relief Act, and if he will only read the letter of his illustrious father, published in the memoir of that truly great and good man, he will see why the Duke of Wellington and Sir Robert Peel consented to disfigure their noble measure of justice and wisdom by the miserable provisions against the Jesuits and Monastic Orders. Those penal clauses were a sop to Cerberus. They were the means of inducing the Tories to give consent to the emancipation of the Catholics. It was never intended that they should be enforced, and so O'Connell well understood. And they never have in a single instance been enforced by the Liberal and Tory, Whig or Liberal, that have held the reins of power in the United Kingdom since April, 1829.—Weekly Register, July 27.

The Origin of "Punch."

The London Dispatch informs it readers that the well-known periodical named Punch was originally projected in the parlor of the Harp Tavern, Russell street, Covent Garden, by the great master of concern where the journal in question was projected; indeed, the world and its morals would be much the worse if it had never projected into space. In the meantime, contemporary history, if it be written with an eye to the truth, requires that publicity ought to be kept straight in its dealings with facts. Punch was projected in the parlor of the Shakspeare's Head, an irredeemably low public-house, kept by Mark Lemon, at the corner of Wine Office Court, in Fleet street. The foulest and least reputable thoroughfares of the East Central District. Those who believed that a publication on the plan of the Paris Charivari would "take" in London saw Henry Mayhew, the late Albert Beckett, Leech and Doyle—the latter related to Richard Doyle, the artist—and the late Archdeacon Mayhew, and from these formed the nucleus of the staff of Punch. Thackeray was also a member of the Punch staff, and so was Douglas Jerrold, who had originally established the Shilling Magazine, which was so much in advance of the time that it died of inanition. So much for the history of a "comic" "I contemporary."—Nation.

FRANCE.

Just Reward.

Four thousand francs, given by an American to the French Academy as a prize for the most remarkable action of devotedness performed in France during the year, was awarded to the Brothers of the Christian Doctrine. At a time when a blind, ridiculous hatred of the Church is pretended—by many—to be an attraction is being displayed against the admirable instructors of youth, it is well to point out the action of religion as the opinion formed of the Christian Brothers by the élite of educated France.

Shocking Case of Murder.

A shocking case was tried on Friday, July 26th, before the Court of Assizes of the Seine, namely, the murder of a son, who was in the Versailles army during the insurrection of 1871, by his parents, the names of the accused are Pierre Joseph Louis and Marie Euphrasie Hanard, both 51 years of age, and parents of (strange to say) twenty children. The murdered son, Jules Hanard, was a member of the Catholic Relief Act, and if he will only read the letter of his illustrious father, published in the memoir of that truly great and good man, he will see why the Duke of Wellington and Sir Robert Peel consented to disfigure their noble measure of justice and wisdom by the miserable provisions against the Jesuits and Monastic Orders. Those penal clauses were a sop to Cerberus. They were the means of inducing the Tories to give consent to the emancipation of the Catholics. It was never intended that they should be enforced, and so O'Connell well understood. And they never have in a single instance been enforced by the Liberal and Tory, Whig or Liberal, that have held the reins of power in the United Kingdom since April, 1829.—Weekly Register, July 27.

The Origin of "Punch."

The London Dispatch informs it readers that the well-known periodical named Punch was originally projected in the parlor of the Harp Tavern, Russell street, Covent Garden, by the great master of concern where the journal in question was projected; indeed, the world and its morals would be much the worse if it had never projected into space. In the meantime, contemporary history, if it be written with an eye to the truth, requires that publicity ought to be kept straight in its dealings with facts. Punch was projected in the parlor of the Shakspeare's Head, an irredeemably low public-house, kept by Mark Lemon, at the corner of Wine Office Court, in Fleet street. The foulest and least reputable thoroughfares of the East Central District. Those who believed that a publication on the plan of the Paris Charivari would "take" in London saw Henry Mayhew, the late Albert Beckett, Leech and Doyle—the latter related to Richard Doyle, the artist—and the late Archdeacon Mayhew, and from these formed the nucleus of the staff of Punch. Thackeray was also a member of the Punch staff, and so was Douglas Jerrold, who had originally established the Shilling Magazine, which was so much in advance of the time that it died of inanition. So much for the history of a "comic" "I contemporary."—Nation.

FRANCE.

Just Reward.

Four thousand francs, given by an American to the French Academy as a prize for the most remarkable action of devotedness performed in France during the year, was awarded to the Brothers of the Christian Doctrine. At a time when a blind, ridiculous hatred of the Church is pretended—by many—to be an attraction is being displayed against the admirable instructors of youth, it is well to point out the action of religion as the opinion formed of the Christian Brothers by the élite of educated France.

Shocking Case of Murder.

A shocking case was tried on Friday, July 26th, before the Court of Assizes of the Seine, namely, the murder of a son, who was in the Versailles army during the insurrection of 1871, by his parents, the names of the accused are Pierre Joseph Louis and Marie Euphrasie Hanard, both 51 years of age, and parents of (strange to say) twenty children. The murdered son, Jules Hanard, was a member of the Catholic Relief Act, and if he will only read the letter of his illustrious father, published in the memoir of that truly great and good man, he will see why the Duke of Wellington and Sir Robert Peel consented to disfigure their noble measure of justice and wisdom by the miserable provisions against the Jesuits and Monastic Orders. Those penal clauses were a sop to Cerberus. They were the means of inducing the Tories to give consent to the emancipation of the Catholics. It was never intended that they should be enforced, and so O'Connell well understood. And they never have in a single instance been enforced by the Liberal and Tory, Whig or Liberal, that have held the reins of power in the United Kingdom since April, 1829.—Weekly Register, July 27.

DARKNESS.

The line of one sighing has come, and the cries are cold and drear!
The heart of the land is ice, that was warm and brave all year!
We frown as they stagger abroad, there is wrath in the children's eyes,
We abide no moaning along in their fullness of birth and of rise.
Where the mantling ocean preach patience what patience we know,
The wild-eyed troops of murderers shoot out to the waves their woes—
Cannot us, good God! for we want it, poor slaves to Discreet and wrong,"
Or the hooves-colored seas in their anger cry out,
"Oh, Lord, how long!"
We wonder? the reeds are broken they lent on last prosperity,
And the tall great idol of beauty turns out to have feet of clay!
The anger that they loved to hearken, when Proclaim was their's alone
Is the deep of our night and fervor, now fall upon hearts of stone.
The men of our pride and promise, in the clamor of Gods and of days
Have not the thirty pieces, and with them the come that stays;
They want flesh, black-hearted cravens—no honor for them or stories—
In the future or glistening glory, or the presence of and praise.
The heart of the hills is sick, and the reapers no more are there;
Famine no more is Spring, howl curses along the air;
The sowers of deserted were built of granite, cement and grace,
And have to be done, to be nothing—unable to hold life's race.
Famine is the might of your kings with the rifle of lore and gold,
Your royal sons are no more—they who fought your fight of old!
You are scattered like chaff to our land, there is it any will go suffer for them, when ye know they are not alone.
Famine is the moment they gave re-love, duty, and duty's call!
For of the promise unblocking to answer to God com, praise, they faced the lions ay, face them to ain their needs in their hands for an offering, and their wrath at your feet alway.
Suffer—the honest, the fearless—there is pain in the land to share they live;
They would die, if they dared, and ye know it, oh! ye,
ye who are sacrificed!
If they want is your voice, your endurance to prove s the enemy's hand
The most cowardly wars are wars in the battle, that they good by their soldiers and land.
—Dublin Irishman.

IRISH INTELLIGENCE.

The "Superior" Race!

The journal to whose condescending recognition of us as "an inferior race" we had occasion to refer the other day, kept up another highly-spiced congeries of horrors for the healthy appetite of its readers on Saturday. Among the wide achievements of the great Anglo-Saxon race, we find the following circumstance. It appears that the stranger was wholly grounded; and the circumstances having been brought within the notice of the President of the Republic by the action of the Spanish Minister, who demanded justice upon the murderers of her husband, M. Thiers ordered the accused to be tried at Lyons, the scene of the crime, by a court-martial, of which Marshal Baraguay d'Hilliers was President. At the trial it was proved that Serres had assumed the title of "Delegate of the Minister of War," although he was not the representative of clemency in Court proposed that he had no right—his proper duty being to look after the accused. Serres replied that it was upon the authority of this person that General Cremer, without even the formality of a trial, seized and shot an innocent French citizen. The defense set up by Serres was that he did not mean his misdeeds to be taken as an imperative order to shoot the man; and he further declared that he was simply that he misconceived the position of Serres, and thought he acted under the plenary powers of tribunals. That a brutal murder was perpetrated seems to be beyond all doubt, but the tribunal treated it as a comedy of errors, and sentenced the culprits to the nominal punishment of one month's imprisonment. This will be the justice, all we can say is that many Communists who have been sentenced to death or transportation at Versailles have had hard measures dealt unto them.—Weekly Register, July 27.

GERMANY.

Swiss Shooting.

The gallant Switzers are holding their annual festival—shooting matches—in the world, having the English—is flocking into Zurich, where the targets are erected. The Americans are there in great force, but the noble fellow-countrymen of Tell are there at Wimbledon hanged back. Their firing is, indeed, inferior to that of the Swiss and Yankees, but the universities for both their modesty and their absence. On Saturday last, a Swiss took the prize, Mr. Corbaz, Chaplin, to the great delight of the people, and in a few voice said that the popular discussion pronounced by an which I declared to all the powers that refused to listen to those who would rise against Austria, and said, "The Very Christ must keep at peace with all the people, but he might suffer guilt, but he might suffer guilt, but he might suffer guilt

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINS SEPT. 1.

Sept. 1—Sunday—Fifteenth Sunday after Pentecost.
2—Monday—St. Stephen, King of Hungary, Conf.
3—Tuesday—Of the Feria.
4—Wednesday—Of the Feria.
5—Thursday—St. Laurence Justinian, Bishop and Confessor.
6—Friday—Of the Feria.
7—Saturday—Octave of the Immaculate Conception.

THE MONITOR:

THE ONLY

Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....AUGUST 31, 1872.

THE LOUISVILLE CONVENTION.

We confess we cannot understand the action of the men who are working in favor of the Louisville Convention. They profess to be Democrats and to have great attachment to their party, but they are really acting like Radicals or Know-Nothings bent on destroying it. The adoption of the Cincinnati platform and the nomination of Horace Greely saved Democracy from a good deal of odium which had been unjustly cast upon it and opened up a glorious future. Consequently these, sepa were highly approved of by an overwhelming majority of the people and heartily endorsed by the leading journals. The administration party were terror-stricken. They affected to treat the "Bolsophet's" nomination as a capital joke, and indulged in countless witticisms, which were apparent their hilarity was a hollow sham intended to conceal their misgivings and to the result of the approaching contest. They knew very well that the Baltimore Convention would be followed by the saddest joke perpetrated during the last twelve years. The most blatant Radical boasters were compelled to acknowledge, where they would not concede a foreclosure to victory; that the fight would be an unusually close and severe one.

Thus on all sides it was agreed that the prospects of the peoples' party were never brighter or more promising. But while all the bulk of the Democrats were engaged like Carnot in organising victory, a clique of malcontents suddenly sprung up, and, under the pretence of finding fault with the past record of Horace Greeley, flung the apple of discord into the popular ranks. Those revolters are about holding a convention in Louisville and it is believed they will nominate Charles O'Conor for the Presidency. We entertain the very highest respect for Mr. O'Conor, and we believe there is no man in the United States better fitted for or more worthy of the chief magistracy than he. We should only be too well pleased to find him occupying the White House, being sure that his administration would reflect honor on the country. But what are his chances of success? That is the important question. It would be worse than useless—indeed, it would be criminal—to pay that gentleman such a snob compliment as a nomination for a representation thereof, and they will undoubtedly support both.

If Mr. O'Conor had been chosen by the Baltimore Convention we believe he would indubitably be beaten next November. His name, his faith, his well-earned renown as an antagonism that is almost impossible to overestimate. It is certainly humiliating to have to confess before the world that in this land of free and free Republic a man's creed and blood will act as a barrier against his advancement, and prevents the proper recognition of his merits. But such is the undeniable fact of melancholy fact. There are thousands—we may go so far as to say hundreds of thousands—of men in this country who would repudiate the strongest party obligations and vote against any candidate—no matter how pure unsullied his character, no matter how prominent his abilities, no matter how unswerving his patriotism—who happened to be a Catholic and have Irish blood in his veins. The day is, we trust, fast passing away ing when such unchristian and illiberal prejudices shall be unknown, but at present they are strong—much stronger than many people would imagine.

If, then, Charles O'Conor would be sure of defeat, when put forward under the most favorable circumstances, what chances can he have when nominated by a small fraction of malcontented Democrats? Evidently none at all. He cannot carry a single State in the Union; or, we are sure, even go near accomplishing that much. Those who intend to nominate him cannot be so foolish as to imagine for a moment that there is the smallest probability of his success even granting that he undertakes the contest. And for our part we do not believe he will undertake it because we think him too high spirited and too honorable to allow himself be used as a cat's-paw by a petty faction misculling themselves Democrats. It is possible, nay, even highly probable, that a number of Democrats sufficient to overbalance Greely's Liberal Republican supporters may be induced by their admiration for Mr. O'Conor's character, career and principles to vote for him. But this, in itself a highly commendable tribute of personal esteem, would not elect him. It would only elect Grant by rendering inevitable the defeat of Greeley. This is the reason why some of the administration organs encourage the Louisville Conventionists, and why in terms of extravagant praise of the merits of Mr. O'Conor. It will answer their purpose admirably to have him elected, as it will ensure a defeat on which the Democratic ranks large enough at all events to give them an easy victory.

Why did they never think of bringing him forward before? His claims upon the esteem and honor of his fellow countrymen are not new any more than they are scanty or insignificant. The Democrats, as a body, however, will not vote for him, and that, we daresay, he knows himself. It is not that they do not think highly of him, the honor, not that they do not believe he would make one of the best Presidents America ever had; for it would be sheer folly to attempt to compare either of the present candidates to him so far as culture, refinement, intellect and integrity are concerned; but because they are convinced there is not yet sufficient liberality in the country to elect him. They do not want to fight a losing battle. There is nothing particularly attractive in going to the poll and voting for a man foredoomed to defeat however estimable he may be. That sort of devotion is ridiculously quixotic, and is indefensible as when by supporting a man of identical principles on the most important matters of policy, though decidedly inferior in intelligence, culture and rectitude, a substantial triumph may be achieved.

THE GERMAN CATHOLICS.

The meeting recently held by the German Catholics of Cincinnati for the purpose of adopting resolutions condemnatory of the expulsion of the Jesuits from the German Empire, was in every way creditable to those who attended it. It was an expression of devotion to faith of which people might well be proud. Ever since the late war there has been a continued effort to underestimate the Catholic element in Germany and to make little of its power. This is done for the sake of flattering the Protestant element, giving the defeat of the French a particular significance not really belonging to it.

There are people who want in have the Franco-Prussian campaign go down to posterity as a struggle between Catholicity and Protestantism, in which the latter, as usual, came off victorious. To do this effectually, it is of course necessary to altogether ignore the very large proportion of Catholics existing in the Prussian army, and also to forget the services rendered by the Bavarians, who admittedly did some of the hardest fighting of the war. Indeed, if the history of the campaign be conned over, it will be discovered that the Catholic soldiers were always in the van, and invariably occupied the post of danger. They fought gallantly and successfully because they believed the battle was in defense of the honor and safety of their beloved country. Had they thought otherwise, they had been told how to turn into the field that the contest was one of Protestantism against Catholicity, they would not have fired a single shot against the French, for they certainly would not have sought to destroy their own faith. And if they had not borne the brunt of the battle the end would have been exactly the reverse of what it was. Berlin would have experienced the fate of Paris, if indeed it did not fare even worse.

Thus the German Catholics are in truth and reality the saviors of their Fatherland, and compliments are a meagre recognition of valor and fidelity. They have not met the return they had a right to expect. On the contrary, they have been repaid with the basest ingratitude. They find not on foot by the wily and astute Chancellor a deliberate plot to crush the Catholic Church in Germany and make it a mere department of State of the government. They find the zealous and pious Jesuits exile a simply because they are Jesuits and for no other reason. They find their schools interfered with and the eternal salvation of their little children endangered. This is what they earned by the lavish expenditure of their blood and treasure!

For the present their persecutors have the upper hand and can do just as they please; but this security is not always, however Emperor William is preparing; secretly but rapidly, for another war which he hopes will realise the wildest dreams of his ambition. France is to be deprived of yet more territory, Austria destroyed, Bavaria annexed to the Empire, so that the Hohenzollerns may rule despotically over all Central Europe. If he counts without his host able to accomplish this vast scheme without the assistance of, or still worse, in spite of, the Catholics of Germany, he overrates his own power exceedingly, and his courts disastrous defeat. The Cincinnati meeting, though comparatively speaking it was small, expresses the sentiments of millions of the best and bravest in Fatherland, and we will not be duped a second time even by Prince Bismarck. They will know very clearly what they are to fight for, and that are to be their rewards in case of success. Unless they can be satisfied upon those points, they will remain neutral if they do not actually take sides against Prussia. Things are every day assuming a aspect which must be very distrant them in adopting the latter alternative.

Hon. J. K. Luttrell,

Who, on the 22d inst., received the unanimous nomination of the Democratic and Liberal Republican Convention for Congress in the Third District, is unquestionably a man of the people. He came to this State when quite a lad, blessed with a stout heart, a strong will, robust health, a buckskin pants and a red shirt; and this capital he invested to such good advantage that to-day he is financially independent, while his mental and physical powers have increased in more than equal ratio. He has filled many public positions, and often represented his country in the State Legislature, where he made a magnificent record for probity, foresight and fair dealing. As a debater he had few equals in the late Assembly. Many of his fellow members have cause to remember the fearlessness with which he attacked their nefarious schemes, and the success that usually crowned his efforts. He is sound on subsidies, sound on the Chinese question, wants the public domain reserved for actual settlers, and, like Horace Greeley, never tasted evilest spirits in his life nor used tobacco.

"PRIESTLY INFLUENCE IN IRELAND."

Some days ago the Sacramento Record published an article entitled "Priestly Influence in Ireland." Taking Keogh's Galway Judgment for its text, it preached a short but bitter homily concerning the alleged use of "spiritual intimidation" by priests during parliamentary elections. We want so far as to assert that all the religious feuds now existing in Ireland were mainly owing to the bigotry and intolerance of Catholic clergymen: With a semblance of fairness and an affectation of sympathy for our co-religionists, it did them as much injustice and maligned them as foully as their deadliest enemy could desire. Moreover, the Record displayed an ignorance of Irish affairs utterly inexcusable in a journal presuming to instruct the public on such matters.

Any man at all acquainted with the condition of affairs in Ireland knows right well that such a thing as the priests coercing the people is an absolute impossibility. Priests and people have identical interests, they stand or fall together, their views —religious and political—are the same, there is no necessity whatever of coercion between them and none is ever exercised. It is easy enough to understand what the Record and other papers of the same stamp mistake for coercion. A vacancy occurs in a parliamentary borough and two candidates immediately come into the field. The first is a rank Tory, a Conservative, a Protestant ascendancy man, a firm believer in the divine right of kings and all that. The second is a Liberal, a man of progress, a friend of religious equality, a firm believer in the rights of the people, an incipient if not a fully developed republican. Naturally enough the landlords adopt the first candidate; equally naturally the peasantry favor the second. If the contest were a fair one the liberal representative would be elected by a majority of twenty to one. But the landlords begins to coerce, they tell their agents, the agents tell the bailiffs, and the bailiffs tell the tenantry that unless the Tory candidate is supported eviction and its necessary consequence pauperism will follow. This is where the spiritual intimidation exists. Now, come the priests sprung from the people sympathizing heartily with them, and they say in effect "Do not give way to this landlord coercion; follow the dictates of your own conscience; vote for the man of your own choice; let not your fears induce you to do that which you know to be wrong." There is no coercion about—nothing but an encouragement to persevere in manly independence. That is all the priests want.

But there are cowards and time servers, who have not soul enough to "grin and bear it," and there are knaves and time servers, who hope to win a smile from a great man by persecuting the poor voters and endeavoring to extort promises of support for their honest candidate." "His honor" himself broasts at his club of this the idea of "his voters" doing anything that he does not approve of can scarcely enter his head;it is so "monstrous, you know." Well, the priests denounce the great despot, his creatures and his deeds more or less forcibly, more or less elegantly, according to their individual abilities. The language used sometimes appears extravagant, but it is never false, or in an excited moment. People who see tyranny of the grossest kind practiced under their own eyes, who see men treated worse than beasts if the field, can not always measure their language as philosophically as those living thousands of miles away. This precisely what happened in Galway. The landlords exposed the cause of the Hon Mr. Trench, one of themselves, a Tory of the Tories, who wished to perpetuate class divisions. The people favored Captain Nolan, a gentleman of moderate means who had endeared himself to the peasantry and earned the hatred of the aristocracy by his liberal and generous dealings with his tenantry.

The first and only coercion was used by the landlords who sought to compel their tenantry to vote for a man they held in abhorrence. The priests resisted this intimidation and exhorted the people to stand true to themselves, to defy their "masters" and assert their independance. That is the head and front of their offending. Individuals among them may not have been very nice or precise in the phrases used against those sought to coerce the voters, but these are purely matters of good taste and discretion. The people carried the day—nearly three thousand of them voting for Nolan, while all the power of the landlords, unscrupulously used, could only rake up six hundred to support Trench. Keogh's judgment was pronounced in the interests of the landlords, and had for its main object the keeping of the Irish peasantry in a state of serfdom.

The Record may not understand this; nevertheless, it is the case. Several English journals of high repute, the Spectator among others, declared it was ridiculous to call the priests' "spiritual intimidation" when every one knew that if the voters were left free to choose they would almost to a man go for Nolan. That is a new kind of coercion which makes a man do that which he is only too anxious to do himself, but such is the "coercion" charged against the priests! American journalists ought surely not endorse the accusation. The candidate whom the Galway priests supported, whom the peasantry supported in spite of the wrath of their landlords, was just the man whom every lover of freedom should vote for. The principles held by Trench are those in vogue with the infatuated adherents of antiquated monarchy; those held by Nolan are advocated by liberal-minded and liberty-loving men all over the world. In Ireland, our contemporary last learn, the much calumniated priests are foremost among the party of freedom, progress and enlightment.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The third quarterly meeting of the Catholic Sunday School Teachers' Union was held last Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the basement of St. Mary's Cathedral. The attendance was very large, and included the following named clergy: His Grace Archbishop Alemany, Rev. Fathers Gibney, Prendergast, Cassidy, Specchio, Slittery, Deegan, Accolti, and Brother Justin.

THE MEETING.

Was called to order by H. N. Adams, President of the Association, and a select choir of Sunday School children, led by the "Hymn to our Patron Saint, St. Charles Borromeo," the beautiful words having been written by Mrs. Adams. The singing was excellent, and was under the supervision of Mr. McCabe, who presided at the piano.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The report of the Secretary was then read and as it contains many articles of interest we publish it as follows:

During the time which has intervened since my last report, the affairs of the Union have been quietly but steadily progressing. The work in which we have been immediately engaged not being of a character to obtain the attention of the public, little has been said on the outside concerning our organization, a fact which has led some few persons to imagine that the work of the Union was suspended, or that we had entirely ceased to exist. Being engaged in a

WORK OF CHARITY,

The members of the Union had no desire to herald their good works in the world, but, like the "Master" whom they serve, preferred to labor in silence and to wait. Sufficient, however, has been accomplished during the past three months to assure our friends the good work is still in progress, and that the Catholic Sunday-schools of the city has become a permanent institution.

After a working experience of six months we have deemed it expedient to amend our Constitution in some particulars. Accordingly, it was revised and amended during the month of June.

The monthly meetings of the active members of the Union were discontinued, and only business of the Union will henceforth be conducted by the Board of Directors, composed of the officers elect and one delegate from each Sunday School.

The collection of dues from members has been abolished, and a contribution of 25 cents quarter from each Sunday School will hereafter defray its expenses.

Power has been given to the members to fill vacancies in the names of distinguished Catholic ladies and gentlemen for in the Union. Since last meeting, the Rev. Brother Justin, of St. Mary's College, was unanimously elected an honorary member of the Board of Directors.

HONORARY MEMBERSHIP

For the greater convenience of the children, and to meet a want which has long been felt in the schools, it has been decided to publish, with the approbation of the Archbishop, a monthly catechetical exercise, prayer and hymn-book combined.

The Chaplain of the Union, Rev. Father Gibney, and the Ladies' Visiting Committee of gentlemen, has been preparing and compiling the command which those people seem to have never heard of—"Remember to keep holy the Sabbath day," and are not to be found when during the quarter Catechism exercises. The evil this year has been considerably aleviated by the zeal and devotion to the revered pastor, aided by the good example of the teachers. And here let me remark that if parents would only earnestly second the efforts of the pastors and teachers throughout the city, hundreds of young persons would be saved from the moral degradation which the associations of those Sunday parties are certainly producing. Some two or three hundred volumes have been added to the library, and a thousand people of the Young Catholic Series have been distributed to the children during the past quarter; and on next Sunday week a public examination of the pupils will be held.

ST. PATRICK'S.

Under the able superintendence of Mr. P. J. Sullivan, this school has taken a long stride forward during the quarter. The Sunday School is now held in the large basement of the church, a Christian Doctrine Society has been organized, numbering thirty teachers, with the following officers: President, J. J. Sawyer; Secretary, Miss M. A. Hassell; Treasurer, Miss ——. There are three hundred boys in attendance.

ST. JOSEPH'S.

The nine others' class in this church is said for the children, who, to the number twelve hundred, assist at the devotions, singing appropriate hymns and devotional music. At its conclusion the children are marched into the school, and Rev. Father Cullen opens the session with prayer. The girls are instructed by the Sisters in the Christian Doctrine, and the boys are taught by the Christian Doctrine Society. The boys are instructed by the gentlemen of the Society, which numbers thirty-three, with Mr. Hogan over forty members. Superintendent Hart speaks very highly of the zeal of the pastor's efforts in getting so large an attendance of children. Much credit is due to Mr. Hart and Father Cullen for their devotion, and also to the teachers and their President, Mr. Wards. The children in the number of three hundred, and the Society of the Clients of Mary to the number of five hundred, receive Holy Communion each month.

ST. IGNATIUS'.

The boys of this school number some five hundred, are orderly and are well instructed by the Rev. President and his assistants, to the great care in which their charitable work. The greater portion of them are organized into Sodalities, and receive monthly. The attendance is not as large as it should be, and the discipline excellent. The Sunday

ST. BRIDGET'S, MISSION DOLORES AND HOLY CROSS

Is reported in a flourishing condition. At St. Bridget's the library has been increased, and a noteworthy feature of this school is the excellent singing of the pupils.

The Mission Sunday School is progressing favorably, and the Holy Cross, a younger organization, bids fair to outstrip the older schools in the number of its pupils and in the additional number of teachers and pupils during the year. The children to attend dance at the different

CONVENT SCHOOLS,

It is unnecessary to add, are receiving at the hands of the pious sisters a thorough course of training which their experience and life long devotion enables them to give. It is the earnest desire of the parents of their pupils is the only legitimate reason of the effect which their teaching, and above all their example, has upon the minds of the children under their charge.

REV. FATHER GIBNEY.

After another hymn entitled "We'll Bind Us Together," sung by the children, Rev. Father Gibney was introduced, and delivered the following ADDRESS.

The work inaugurated by the Sunday School Union, where reduced to active shape less than a year since, is now the pressing want of the age in improving our system of sunday Schools; and I am happy to be able to bear testimony to the gratifying fact, that the above anticipations have been fully realized.

The Union has brought to play an activity hitherto unknown in the history of the different schools, it has promoted a praiseworthy spirit of rivalry, each endeavoring to excel in doing good, thus successfully carried out the worthy project. Pleasant visits, calculated to awaken a spirit of gratitude for this, as well as for other favors, have been paid, being among the most effectual of our Sunday School exercises. While reflecting on the many blessings we enjoy in dwelling on the Sunday School exercises, I will give you to-day.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER

Is a very important personage. His position is honorable, and his duties are many. He is placed by the child; he is the guardian and dispenser of true wisdom. He is the child's instructor, and as such his life ought to be above reproach. The influence of the teacher over the child is great, and it is his duty, as a conscientious man, to endeavor to fulfil the duties of his position, so that the child may look up to him with confidence and respect. Nothing will more surely destroy that confidence than a want of punctuality, and a failure to be present at the appointed time. Punctuality indicates in the person an earnest and conscientious desire to fulfil the duties of his position, and commands the respect and confidence of the child. Punctuality is the life and soul of the Sunday School. Without it the best regulated school will be a failure. Punctuality is a virtue, and a virtue is always rewarded. Punctuality is the first step to success in life, and the child who is punctual in attending his Sunday School will be punctual in attending to his duties in after life

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

We understand the Rev. Father Coghlan, S. J., is appointed to the mission of Kansas.

The Right Rev. Mgr. Capel has been appointed by the Holy Father to be one of his domestic prelates.

We regret to announce the death, at the Convent of Mercy, Cahir, of Sister Mary Berchmans Dunne, in the 33rd year of her age and third month after her solemn religious profession.

We regret to announce the death of an estimable lady, one of the Sisters of the Convent of the Visitation in this city—Sister Justina.—St. Louis Watchman.

Very Rev. James A. Corcoran, D. D., has been appointed Rector of the Seminary of St. Charles Boromeo, vice Very Rev. James O'Connor, D. D., resigned.

Bishop Hennessey confirmed two hundred and forty persons at St. Patrick's Catholic Church, Baltimore, on Sunday, August 4th.

The Archbishop of Manilla, the Capital of the Philippine Islands, has forwarded to Rome 12,544 piastres, as an offering from Catholics of his Diocese our Holy Father the Pope.

The diocese of Liverpool has again to mourn the loss of a priest, just in the prime of manhood. The Rev. James Singleton, of St. Mary's Chorley, died at his residence on Monday morning, July 29, after a short illness.

On the 26th of July, Feast of St. Ann, Miss Olivia Crichlad, in religion Sister Mary Joseph, was admitted to the white veil and received the habit of the Order of Mercy, at the hands of the Rt. Rev. A. M. Martin.

The Very Rev. Augustine Canon Magaire of the Parish of St. Paul's Cork city, has been appointed pastor of the parish of Ballincollig, rendered vacant by the death of the late Canon Horgan.

The Rev. John MacNamara, C. C., of the Cathedral North Parish Cork has been appointed to the dignity of Canon, a vacancy in the chapter of the diocese having been occasioned by the death of the late Rev. Canon Horgan of Ballincollig.

RELIGIOUS PROFESSION AT MT. ST. CHANTEL, W. V.—On July 16th, Feast of St. John the Baptist, St. Mary Almee, formerly Miss Sadie Robertson, of Wheeling, W. V., made her vows with the usual ceremonies. Rt. Rev. P. J. Whelan presided, assisted by Rev. M. Fitzpatrick.

It has been rumored here for the last few days that the Rev. U. J. Boarke, President of St. Patrick's College, has been appointed Vice-Rector of the same, in room of the late ever-to-be-lamented Archdeacon Brown. Up to the present we have received no authentic information on the subject.—Oakdale Telegraph, July 23.

The funeral of the Rev. J. V. Moyes at Hinsdale was very largely attended, all the adjacent towns being represented. The service was preached by Bishop Lynch of Toronto, who is visiting at Pittsfield, and will occupy the recent pulpit at Hinsdale on that Sunday. The remains were interred in the Roman Catholic cemetery at Hinsdale.

The Very Rev. Father Pius, of the Order of Passionists, late Rector of St. Paul's College, Harold Cross, Dublin, Ireland, arrived in New York on the 16th of July. He is accompanied by the Rev. Father Lawrence, of the same order. Both priest and gentlemen are here for the sake of recovering their health and visiting the United States.

TAKING THE WHITE VEIL.—Rev. J. J. Power, in the absence of the Bishop, on Sunday received the vows on Friday, 24th inst., at St. Anne's Church, Worcester, Miss Mary Ann Heslon and Miss Mary Agnes Higgins. Having passed their novitiate at St. Anne's Convent, they assumed the white veil of profession and worship, taking in religion the respective names of Sister Mary Cecilia and Sister Mary Agnes.

RELIGIOUS PROFESSION.—On Monday, July the 22nd, in the beautiful little chapel attached to the Convent of Mercy in this town, Miss Johanna M. Ryan (in religion Sister Margret Mary Alacoque of the Sacred Heart) youngest daughter of Mr. Ryan, Tomcoole, Tagshmon, made her solemn religious profession.—Wexford People.

The law for the expulsion of the Jesuits will affect a member of the Prussian Imperial party. Prince Frederic William Wladislas de Radziwill, who is a direct descendant of the Emperor. He is at present in Berlin. Some Sundays ago, a meeting of several thousands persons was held in Berlin, to protest against the law for banishment of the members of the Society of Jesus. Only a few hundred of the persons who assembled were Catholics.

Father Dawson, S. J., the founder and the architect of the College of St. Ignatius and the Holy Family Church, is to have his headquarters, as heretofore, in the college, and will continue to conduct the series of religious missions which have already given him so wide a fame, and effected so much good in various parts of the United States. Father Dellbeck, S. J., the orator and philosopher of the college, has gone to his post in St. Louis.

RECEPTION OF NUNS.—At Clondalkin Protestant in Convent, on the 2nd of July, two young ladies received the white veil. The celebrant was the Rev. J. G. Moore, P. P., Clondalkin. The preacher on the occasion was the Rev. T. L. Hickey, O. S. A., Prior of St. Augustine's Priory, Tallaght. The names of the young ladies are Miss Katie McDermott, Collinstown, Kildeek county Kildare, in religion Sister Mary Gabriel; and Mary Jane Teeson Grivin, of Irish Hill, Cratloe, county Clare, in religion Sister Mary Angela.

A LADY IN HIGH LIFE CONVERTED TO CATHOLICITY IN CHARLESTOWNSHIRE.—The Hereford Journal that Mrs. Duff the wife of Captain Duff, and mother of Mr. Ambrose Smith, of Varnol, near Bangor, the wealthy owner of the great Llanberis slate quarries, has been converted to Catholicity, and has been received into that Church by Monsignor Capel. Mrs. Duff is a member of the Pile family, and has therefore been a powerful local Church woman but with especial leaning to high Church, or ritualistic doctrines.

On Monday, 12th inst., Rt. Rev. Bishop Foley, of Chicago, promoted Mr. Aloysius Antony Lambert, B. A., to the sub-deaconship in the Church of the Holy Family. On Tuesday, the same gentleman was promoted to the deaconship, and on Wednesday, in the presence of a numerous congregation, he was raised to the priesthood. The Rev. Father Lambert has held a professorship for two years in the St. Ignatius College, Chicago, and has enjoyed the confidence and affection of all the students of the institution. He will continue in the college.

NEWS from Rome announces the decease of the eldest member of the Sacred College, Cardinal Cirille de Alameda Y. Brea, M. O., Archbishop of Toledo, and Primate of Spain. The venerable Cardinal was born at Torralon, Valasco, July 14th, 1781. He was appointed to the Archiepiscopal See of St. James, Cuba, September 30th, 1831; transferred to that of Burgos, April 20th, 1849, and that of Toledo, August 3d, 1857. He was created and published a Cardinal in the Consistory of March 15th, 1858. His was a man of great attainments, true hidalgo, and the most energetic of the Spanish episcopacy. R.I.P.

Within the last three weeks the Archbishop of New Orleans has confirmed in his diocese nearly six hundred applicants. On Sunday, August 4th, in the Church of St. John the Baptist in the city, he confirmed fourteen, minor orders and subdeaconship on Magin Palmer, of this diocese, and Mr. Michael Robinson, of the congregation of the Holy Savior, and elevated to the dignity of the priesthood, the Rev. Jeremiah Moynihen, John Dumas and J. G. Foote. On Monday, August 5th at St. Mary's Church adjoining the Archbishop's residence, the Revs. Magin Palmer and Fracois Rouge were ordained deacons.

The Keogh Debate.

If political wisdom were the necessary consequence of political knowledge, experience were never wasted or its teachings thrown away, we might well expect in Ireland to reap substantial advantage from the debates of the last few weeks. The hard, practical lessons that the hour of national trial brings with it have been shrewed on us thick and fast; and, if the intelligence of intelligent men of future guidance are best taught, the people of Ireland can hardly complain of the instruction at present being supplied to them. The Galway Judgment, its exposition in Ireland, its effect upon British opinion, the revival of bigotry, the exhumation of penal statutes, and the proposals to repeal the Ordinary power in some quick succession to enlighten and guide us, and to remind the Irish people of the real nature of the relations subsisting between themselves and their rulers. Finally, we have the debate on Judge Keogh in the House of Commons—especially intended, one is tempted to believe, to complete the course of education which commenced in the Court house in Galway.

Bitter and deep as was the indignation already convulsing the Irish mind, it has received additional bitterness by the whole record of that debate. Galling as were the words already inflicted on the Irish nation by the slanderous tongue and lying pen which found a theme in the Galway harangue, they have been widened and lengthened by the history of that memorable discussion. The claim for justice spurned, the cry of the injured denied, the appeal of a nation mocked at, its sorrows stifled in callous brutality, and the wrong-doer extolled into public jubilant cheer,—this is the spectacle presented to us by that tribunal to which our country men are expected to look for succor, sympathy and redress.

If the result of Mr. Butt's motion in the House of Commons could be affected by the logic of facts or the weight of arguments, there would be little left for the pathos of Judge Keogh to rejoice over. If the discussion of the House could be affected by considerations of right and wrong, there would be but a poor chance of a repetition of the Galway performance. Strong as such a measure as the removal of Mr. Justice Keogh from the Bench may appear, it is clear from the debate on the impartial review of the arguments urged by the member for Limerick in its support must have failed to have fully established his case. That Mr. Keogh had succeeded not only in lowering the dignity of the Bench, but in shaking the confidence of the people in the administration of justice—already effectively undermined—Mr. Butt had no difficulty in proving. In the case of the London papers Punch and Judy, and the Irish Shamrock and Shillelagh, the Judge had established a claim to the sympathy and admiration of the Court house in Galway. But the British House of Commons recked nothing of all this. Little heed they gave whether Judge Keogh acted on evidence or without it, or whether he had or had not outstepped the limits of decency and duty. True, he had outraged the feelings of a whole race, and filled the land with a deep portent sedition of her Majesty's subjects with anger and indignation. But it was all in the day's work. Shafts were aimed, it was Irish feelings he insulted; and so the legislators passed on, instead impatiently to the exposure of his offenses and cheered to the echo the unblushing defiance of Judge Keogh. Between Mr. Henry Jones and the Hon. Mr. Plunket they got much to satisfy them, and, having heard as much as could possibly be urged in defense of the Galway scandal, they magnanimously determined on listening to no more. The Government lent its assistance to the work of muzzling the Irish members and a chorus of all forces the expression of the feelings that agitated the country. By 350 votes to 59 the House decided on shelving the subject and virtually endorsing the mass of slander disseminated from Galway, and it was only by rescinds and parliamentary endeavors that the Irish members prevented the debate from being summarily strangled on the spot.

To would the sensibilities of Irishmen, to deny them their constitutional rights, and to encourage their revilers and defamers, were apparently the objects aimed at by the supporters of Judge Keogh in the House of Commons, and it cannot be said that their labors were unattended with success. But they accomplished much more, and there is one important portion of their results which we can survey with satisfaction. —The despair of a heavy legislative union, which an English weekly journal mournfully admits to be a consequence of the action of the House of Commons in this matter, is a sentiment which we rejoice to see strengthened and developed, and it would be hard to imagine anything better calculated to foster it than the combination of English contentment, Whig and Tory, in favor of Mr. Justice Keogh. To the bigoted and tyrannical the Keogh debate will, doubtless, afford some short-lived gratification, but to the people of Ireland it will remain a lasting proof of the total want of sympathy and incompatibility of feeling between them and the nation with whom force and fraud have temporarily united them.—Nation, August 3.

Industrial Condition of the State.

The lack of ships to carry away the surplus wheat of the State furnishes a new proof, if any more were wanted, that the production of grain is large quantities, for exportation, is a very unsafe business in California. Many of the farmers will make less profit this season than they did from the small crop of last year. When the supply of freight exceeds that of ships the ship owners have the farmers at their mercy—of course they will be in business. The future presents no assurance that the experience of the present will not be repeated in every favorable year, so long as we export so best largely wool, cotton, brandy, wine, hops, dried fruit, sugar, and, indeed, nearly every other thing we can produce, can bear transportation by rail. It is not an easy matter to change the basis of agriculture; those who succeed best, with profit, in a dry climate; but the extension of the irrigating canals will facilitate the inevitable change. In many places combining wool will be a good substitute for wheat. At a late meeting of the Napa Farmers' Club a statement was made that 1,600 sheep are kept the year round, pasturing from field to field, on forty acres of alfalfa, or 25 sheep on an acre. The land was irrigated in both cases. Five acres are allowed for one cow or five sheep, of good natural pasture; so that one acre of irrigated alfalfa is as good as twenty of wild grass, not irrigated.

Among our numerous imports which might perhaps be produced in California with profit, is white lead, which is made by exposing the metal in the form of vinegar and spent tan-bark, which last material supplies the carbonic acid to convert it into carbonate. Neither fuel nor machinery is necessary for this process, but the carbonate lead must be ground dry before it is ready for the market. We export more than 100 tons of lead monthly; we have a large surplus of vinegar, and tan-bark is abundant. A gentleman who superintended a white lead factory in an Eastern city, gives us the following estimate of the monthly expenses and receipts in a mill of a capacity to work up 100 tons per month:

| | |
|---|---|
| 100 tons of lead at $100 | $10,000 |
| 10,000 gallons vinegar at 15 cents | 1,500 |
| Labor, 61 men 26 days, $3 | 5,000 |
| Incidentals | 500 |
| Interest on investment | 300 |
| Total | $18,300 |

The product would be 260,000 pounds of white lead, worth 12 cents, or $31,200, leaving $12,900 profit. These figures are based on present prices; but a considerable reduction can be made in them by changes of circumstance.—Alta, Aug. 26.

PUBLIC COURT TERMS.

Butte county has 353,067 acres of land under cultivation, and the total value of real and personal property is $7,174,924.

Ex-Governor J. Neely Johnson, who was stricken by paralysis near Salt Lake, July 29, is very low, and believed to be beyond recovery.

A new at Los Nitos, Los Angeles county, recently gave birth to three calves. The mother and calves are doing well, and will be seen at the State Fair.

The earnings of the Central Pacific Railroad for the week ending July 27th, were $76,200; for the first seven months of the present year, $6,767,800.

The agent of the Texas Pacific Railroad—engineered by Tom Scott of Pennsylvania—was in the Santa Cruz forests last week, to see what the chances are for ties.

SAN DIEGO, August 19.—Mr. Geo. Blair, late from Arizona, reports that Colonel Jack Swilling has been murdered by the Apaches somewhere beyond Arizona City.

The famous Kentucky farm, Woodburn, has been sold, containing 4,000,000 pounds of wheat this season. Its proprietor proposes to put in upward of 12,000 acres of wheat.

An Apache chief and sixty men, women and children, recently left the reservation near Fort McDowell, Arizona, to surrender their arms and take up their residence on the reservation.

VIRGINIA, August 17.—Jack Morrison and James Cain, two of the men supposed to have been connected with the Nusbaumile stage robbery near Reno, yesterday morning, were arrested in the city to-day.

PORTLAND, August 18.—Track-laying on the Northern Pacific Railroad has been resumed, and forty miles will be completed by October 1st. Two thousand laborers are at work, and work is proceeding rapidly in the mountains and valleys.

LOS ANGELES, August 20.—The Citizens' Committee is making arrangements for the reception of Governor Booth and party. Relays have been arranged for every fifteen miles of the route, from Santa Barbara overland to the city.

SALT LAKE CITY, August 18.— Isaac Moore, late Postmaster at Hughes, Juab county, was arrested for stealing a package containing $10,000, mailed at San Francisco to the first National Bank of this city. He is held in custody in default of $20,000 bail, for examination next Monday.

The Santa Cruz Gem reports that Quicksilver Mining Company have struck very rich rock in the their claim, a few miles south of Pacheco Pass. The claim is located about six miles south of Pacheco Peak, at the head of Los Espalios Creek.

BRANCH HAILROAD.—A subscription paper for the building of a branch railroad to this place is in circulation. The first person it was presented to subscribed $5,000, and it is thought the movement will succeed. The intention is to incorporate, and to offer stock to the town to own the whole thing.—Visalia Delta.

SALT LAKE CITY, August 17.—Three companies of United States troops left this morning for the field of Indian troubles in San Pete County. Cavalry arriving to-day from the line of the Union Pacific are hurrying on. A fourth company of cavalry has been ordered by General Gird on this city to keep the roads open. General Morrow left for the front, and General Gird on Monday, from the scene of operations.

BANKING.

HIBERNIA SAVINGS

—AND—

LOAN SOCIETY

Office—Northeast corner of Montgomery and Market streets.

OFFICERS:

President.....M. D. SWEENY.
Vice-President.....C. O'DONNELL.
Cashier.....JOHN O'KANE.
Secretary.....JOHN SULLIVAN.
Attorney.....RICHARD TOBIN.

DIRECTORS:

M. J. O'CONNOR, D. SWEENY, P. McGRAN,
C. O'DONNELL, AUSTAVE TOUCHARD,
JOHN SULLIVAN, JOS. A. DONAHOE,
J. J. TOBIN, PETER DONAHOE.

Remittances from the country may be sent through Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express office, or any reliable banking house, but the Society will not be responsible for their safe delivery. The signature of the depositor should be given in his first deposit. A proper pass book will be delivered to the agent by whom the deposit is made.

Deposits received from $1 to $5,000.

Office hours—From 9 A. M. to 3 P. M.

JOS. A. DESMOND, San Francisco. EUGENE KELLY, New York.

DONOHOE, KELLY & Co.

SAN FRANCISCO.

EUGENE KELLY & Co.

NEW YORK

BANKERS.

EXCHANGE ON

NEW YORK, LONDON, AND BANK OF IRELAND.....DUBLIN.

Payable at all the Branches,

AND INVERT COUNTY TOWN IN IRELAND.

SAN FRANCISCO

Savings Union,

531 California st., cor. Webb.

Deposits.....$1,911,[illegible]
Guarantee Capital and Reserve Fund.....[illegible]

President.....JAMES de FREMERY.
Vice-President.....ALBERT MILLER.

DENIS[illegible], OLIVER,
CHARLES BRUN, A. DOLPHE LOW,
WASHINGTON BARTLETT, CHARLES PACE,
ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, Sr.

Cashier and Secretary.....LOVELL WHITE.
Surveyor.....JOHN ARCHBALD
Attorney.....HENRY C. CAMPBELL.

RECEIVES DEPOSITS AND LOANS MONEY on real estate security.

The accumulations may be sent by Wells, Fargo & Co.'s, or by checks of reliable parties payable in San Francisco, but the responsibility of the Bank commences only with the actual receipt of the money.

The Directors will meet every Wednesday at the first deposit.

Office hours—9 A. M. to 3 P. M. Open Saturday evenings from 7 to 9 o'clock.

aug24

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

THE HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY, northeast corner of Montgomery and Market streets, for the half year ending July 31, 1872—A meeting of the Board of Directors of this Society, held this day, a dividend was declared on all deposits at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum for the half year ending with the 31st of July, 1872, payable on demand, and free of Federal tax.

aug17 M. D. SWEENY, Secretary.

HOTELS.

Removal.

THE SECOND STREET HOUSE

Is Removed to 113 Second street,

Northeast corner of Minna. Furnished Rooms to let, with or without board, on the most reasonable terms Call and examine.

aug3 M. O'NEIL.

CENTRAL HOTEL,

SIGARI DE SANGONE STREET,

Between Commercial and Pacific.....San Francisco

HIS NEW, LARGE AND COMMODIOUS Hall has been thoroughly renovated by the present proprietor, and is now open for the reception of the travelling Public, where he will be pleased to greet his friends and the public generally. The Bar will be supplied with the choicest brands of Liquors, and no pains or expense will be spared to render the House a comfortable home for travellers.

The Grand House Coach will be at each car depot and steamboat landing on the arrival of each train.

Free Hack for Passengers.

Parties calling for their friends at the above Hotel will please inquire for the name of MICHAEL FARRELL, who will attend to them on their arrival. All friends of Mr. Farrell will please call and see him at the above Hotel.

The strict attention will be paid to the comfort of the guests of the House.

aug17 MICHAEL FARRELL, Proprietor.

RAILROAD HOUSE,

Corner of Sansome and Pacific streets, San Francisco, is now owned by

I. CASSERLY,

(Late of the original House) where he will be happy to see his friends and the public generally.

The Bar is thoroughly fitted up on the latest principles, and will be supplied with the choicest Liquors.

The Rooms are large and airy, and can be had by the day, week or month.

The restaurant is all to the comfort of the guests.

Board and lodging per week.....$8 to $9
Single meals, 25 cents. Lodging, 25 cents.

Free Coach to the House.

aug24 I. CASSERLY, Proprietor.

FRANKLIN HOTEL,

CORNER 616 PACIFIC STREET,

Between Sansome and Montgomery.....San Francisco.

HUGH CHAN.....Proprietor.

Board, per day.....$1 00
Board and lodging, per week.....6 00
Board and lodging, single room.....8 00
Single meals, 25 cents. Lodging, 25 cents.

Family accommodations on reasonable rates.

Every attention paid to guests by the House present; also from the Rooms to the boats and cars.

A CHOICE BRANDY, and all the other liquors before the counter.

INVITE AN ATTRACTION

—TO—

MRS. RIORDAN'S

CULINARY EMPORIUM,

121 Kearny Street.

The latest Gospel of EUROPEAN and NEW YORK STYLE dishing at the lowest figures. Ladies, please take examine for yourselves. mh30

EDUCATIONAL.

CONVENT OF THE IMMACULATE HEART OF MARY

—FOR THE—

EDUCATION OF YOUNG LADIES,

GILROY, SANTA CLARA CO.,

Conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.

TERMS FOR BOARDERS:

Board, tuition, washing and mending, per annum.....$300
Entrance fee, to be paid but once.....10
Tuition on piano, per month.....2 50
French.....5 00

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

TERMS FOR DAY SCHOLARS:

Primary, per month.....$1 00
Elementary and Senior, per month.....1 00
Tuition on Piano, " .....2 00
French, " .....3 00

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

Remittances from the country may be sent through Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express office, or any reliable banking house, but the Society will not be responsible for their safe delivery. The signature of the depositor should be given in his first deposit. A proper pass book will be delivered to the agent by whom the deposit is made.

Deposits received from $1 to $5,000.

Office hours—From 9 A. M. to 3 P. M. Open Saturday evenings from 7 to 9 o'clock.

JOS. A. DESMOND, San Francisco. EUGENE KELLY, New York.

DONOHOE, KELLY & Co.

SAN FRANCISCO.

EUGENE KELLY & Co.

NEW YORK

BANKERS.

EXCHANGE ON

NEW YORK, LONDON, AND BANK OF IRELAND.....DUBLIN.

Payable at all the Branches,

AND INVERT COUNTY TOWN IN IRELAND.

SAN FRANCISCO

Savings Union,

531 California st., cor. Webb.

Deposits.....$1,911,[illegible]
Guarantee Capital and Reserve Fund.....[illegible]

President.....JAMES de FREMERY.
Vice-President.....ALBERT MILLER.

DENIS[illegible], OLIVER,
CHARLES BRUN, A. DOLPHE LOW,
WASHINGTON BARTLETT, CHARLES PACE,
ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, Sr.

Cashier and Secretary.....LOVELL WHITE.
Surveyor.....JOHN ARCHBALD
Attorney.....HENRY C. CAMPBELL.

RECEIVES DEPOSITS AND LOANS MONEY on real estate security.

The accumulations may be sent by Wells, Fargo & Co.'s, or by checks of reliable parties payable in San Francisco, but the responsibility of the Bank commences only with the actual receipt of the money.

The Directors will meet every Wednesday at the first deposit.

Office hours—9 A. M. to 3 P. M. Open Saturday evenings from 7 to 9 o'clock.

aug24

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

THE HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY, northeast corner of Montgomery and Market streets, for the half year ending July 31, 1872—A meeting of the Board of Directors of this Society, held this day, a dividend was declared on all deposits at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum for the half year ending with the 31st of July, 1872, payable on demand, and free of Federal tax.

aug17 M. D. SWEENY, Secretary.

HOTELS.

Removal.

THE SECOND STREET HOUSE

Is Removed to 113 Second street,

Northeast corner of Minna. Furnished Rooms to let, with or without board, on the most reasonable terms Call and examine.

aug3 M. O'NEIL.

CENTRAL HOTEL,

SIGARI DE SANGONE STREET,

Between Commercial and Pacific.....San Francisco

HIS NEW, LARGE AND COMMODIOUS Hall has been thoroughly renovated by the present proprietor, and is now open for the reception of the travelling Public, where he will be pleased to greet his friends and the public generally. The Bar will be supplied with the choicest brands of Liquors, and no pains or expense will be spared to render the House a comfortable home for travellers.

The Grand House Coach will be at each car depot and steamboat landing on the arrival of each train.

Free Hack for Passengers.

Parties calling for their friends at the above Hotel will please inquire for the name of MICHAEL FARRELL, who will attend to them on their arrival. All friends of Mr. Farrell will please call and see him at the above Hotel.

The strict attention will be paid to the comfort of the guests of the House.

aug17 MICHAEL FARRELL, Proprietor.

RAILROAD HOUSE,

Corner of Sansome and Pacific streets, San Francisco, is now owned by

I. CASSERLY,

(Late of the original House) where he will be happy to see his friends and the public generally.

The Bar is thoroughly fitted up on the latest principles, and will be supplied with the choicest Liquors.

The Rooms are large and airy, and can be had by the day, week or month.

The restaurant is all to the comfort of the guests.

Board and lodging per week.....$8 to $9
Single meals, 25 cents. Lodging, 25 cents.

Free Coach to the House.

aug24 I. CASSERLY, Proprietor.

FRANKLIN HOTEL,

CORNER 616 PACIFIC STREET,

Between Sansome and Montgomery.....San Francisco.

HUGH CHAN.....Proprietor.

Board, per day.....$1 00
Board and lodging, single room.....8 00
Single meals, 25 cents. Lodging, 25 cents.

Family accommodations on reasonable rates.

Every attention paid to guests by the House present; also from the Rooms to the boats and cars.

A CHOICE BRANDY, and all the other liquors before the counter.

INVITE AN ATTRACTION

—TO—

MRS. RIORDAN'S

CULINARY EMPORIUM,

121 Kearny Street.

The latest Gospel of EUROPEAN and NEW YORK STYLE dishing at the lowest figures. Ladies, please take examine for yourselves. mh30

GENERAL NOTES.

The War Office has sanctioned the erection of a monument to King Robert the Bruce on the esplanade of Stirling Castle.

According to the official returns the construction of the Indian Railway during the last six months has been favorable than during the corresponding period in 1871.

Women work at bricklaying in Austria, and we are told that it is common to see them carrying loads of bricks and mortar up long ladders. And this is what it will end in here, if women persist in their decided for women rights.

It appears from a local paper that at a quiet coast watering-place there lea dog which has severely bitten no less than seven children. After tasting a few more perhaps the insidious creature will be good enough to make a choice.

A restaurateur of Tours having used the French Government for the keep of Prince Frederick Charles (the Red Prince), and his staff in February and March 1871, to the amount of £1,200, has had awarded him one-half of his claim, £600.

Marshal MacMahon is going on a visit to a relation of his, the Marquis de Rosambo, the resides at Fontenay Saint-Pere. A grand fete will be given in his honor on the magnificent estate of the Marquis, which was nearly destroyed by the Prussians.

Few people can form an exact idea of the number of cafés, estaminets, and eateries spread this there are 5,800 establishments where liquor is supplied to 2,500 individuals. The amount of business done nearly is 150 millions.

It is authoritatively stated that the diary of Dr. Livingstone, forwarded to Miss Livingstone, will in no case be published unless satisfactory proof be given that he is still reaches England. The diary was handed by the Doctor himself, with instructions to this effect.

Assuredly odd practice regarding the employment of the Sabbath prevails in Australia. It seems that no sooner does there appear in the Times the announcement of the marriage of any colonist, than a telegram is forthwith the hapless bridegroom is posted to a ship about to start on a voyage to a distant station.

The journals announce the death, in her 91st year, of the Marquise de Cornicuelle-Jodonaine, at her chateau in the Vosges. The deceased was lady of honor to Queen Marie Antoinette, and was present at the arrival of a band of ruffians who came to dig the lineaments for the liberty and life of his captive.

MISCELLANEOUS FOREIGN NEWS.

[SPECIALLY COMPILED FROM CONTINENTAL JOURNALS.]

Monsignor Hassoun, the Armenian Patriarch, has arrived at Rome.

The Ottoman Government has banished Mgr. Hassoun, the Catholic Armenian Patriarch.

Father Beck, general of the Jesuits, has been seriously ailing in the Province of Bohemia for some time past. He has now quite recovered his health, and is about to resume his duties.

The Empress of the French, with the Prince Imperial and suite, left Chiselhurst on Wednesday, and traveled by the Venice route to Mestrae, where they left the train, and after a short stay went to Abbotsford. The distinguished party returned to the Grande Hotel, Mestrae, for luncheon. On their return they left the train at Eelsbank and spent some time at Mount Melville. They left Eelsbank for Edinburgh by the Caledonian Railway.

MEETING OF THE GERMAN SAVANS.—The fiftieth annual meeting of the Deutsche Naturforscher und Aerzte, a body somewhat similar to the British Association for the Advancement of Science, takes place this year at Leipzig from the 18th to the 24th of August. It may be interesting to scientific men in Britain, and also to the New England, during the year 1871, France contributed to the Society £140,000; the total of Switzerland was only £50,000. The income of the Society is only £8,000 less than it was before the war.

The Italian Government has refused to admit the pupils of the Catholic schools to any examinations, and to consider their studies as valid. The pupils are placed in painful dilemma of being compelled either to send their sons for training to the public schools, or to see them excluded from employments in every capacity, whether public or private.

THE ARMENIAN SCHISM.—A telegraph says that an encyclical letter of the Pope is expected soon. It is to be addressed, in which the schismatic Armenian Catholics of the East will be declared to be separate from the Church, and to be under the power of the major excommunication.

Sunday being the anniversary of the death of the celebrated Pere Vianney, cure of Ars, a grand ceremonial will be held at that place on Monday next. Mgr. Devie and Mgr. Mermillod will be present. The commemorative services will commence at 10 o'clock, and on the same occasion the statues of St. Peter and Paul, Francis de Sales and Vincent de Paul, will be inaugurated.

CATHOLICS AND ELECTIONS IN ROME.—Despite the efforts of the members of the Government and the radical parties, some 8,000 Catholics have succeeded in getting their names upon the lists of the municipality. This has somewhat disturbed the ruling parties, and every effort is being made to unite all parties against the friends of the Pope. A circular has even been issued to the soldiery, calling on them to be ready with their votes to crush the aspirations of the Blacks, as the Catholics are called.

GREAT RELIGIOUS DEMONSTRATION IN THE PALATINATE.—On the 21st ult. a vast procession took place in the city and Sanctuary of Kongisau. Some 20,000 pilgrims visited the shrine, and communion was given in the chapel to 4,000 persons. The feast was inaugurated by a procession of the Blessed Sacrament; after which High Mass was celebrated, and a discourse delivered on the indissolubility of marriage. The procession was then formed, and shortly afterwards a sermon was preached from the balcony. Finally the ceremony was closed by prayers for the Vicar of Christ, our chiefs injured pontiff, Pius IX.

PILGRIMAGE AT BOULOGNE.—On the 25th inst., the inhabitants of Boulogne, to the number of 1,400, went in pilgrimage to Notre Dame des Miracles at St. Omer, for the deliverance of the Holy Father and the welfare of France. During the whole of the present month of August, Boulogne will be scene of ceaseless pilgrimages. There have been two already—that of 1,200 fishermen of the quarter St. Pierre before leaving for the fishing season—and that of the male population of the Portal, for the same intention. On the latter occasion more than 600 men communicated. Next comes the turn of the females to pray for their absent husbands, fathers and brothers—and then each village in this neighborhood will take its own day to visit Notre Dame de Boulogne.

THE ELECTIONS IN ITALY.—Although Rean-

MISCELLANEOUS.

ST. J. BRODERICK

(Late Broderick & Kent.)

IS RE-ESTABLISHED AT

NO. 24 THIRD STREET,

West Side, two doors below Mission.

T. J. B. begs to acquaint his old friends and the public that he keeps a large stock of Fashionable Boots and Shoes,

At lower rates than at other house in the city.

Ladies', Gentlemen's and Children's Boots and Shoes made to order, of the best material and workmanship. A fit guaranteed.

Please call and order for yourself, at aug31 No. 24 Third Street.

C. JOSEPH

HAS REMOVED HIS STORE TO

403 KEARNY STREET,

Between Pine and California.

IT IS THE ONLY FRENCH HOUSE IMporting the manufacture of

PH. HERBER OF PARIS.

C. JOSEPH has the honor to inform his numerous friends that he has received from Paris a large assortment of

Boots and Shoes

—FOR—

Ladies', Gentlemen and Children's Wear

403—KEARNY STREET—403

Between Pine and California streets.

C. DESMOND,

PRACTICAL HATTER,

No. 5 New Montgomery Street,

GRAND HOTEL BUILDING.

IS SELLING OFF HIS LARGE AND VARIED Stock of Hats and Caps at reduced rates, in order to make room for a large invoice now in transit.

Will and Must be Sold,

So bargains may be expected. You can assure your self of the truth of this statement by personal examination. The stock embraces everything, from the FINEST SILK HAT to a 50c CAP.

All who are in need will find it to their interest to call.

His Hats are fair when others flee.

They neither break nor bairn!

Of perfect shape and glossy wind

Those Hats DESMOND sells you find.

C. DESMOND, 5 New Montgomery St.,

mh8-tf Under Hesmond Hotel.

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL,

CORNER FIRST AND BRANNAN STS.,

SAN FRANCISCO.

THIS INSTITUTION IS UNDER THE MAN agement of the Sisters of Mercy.

JAMES MURPHY, M. D.....Visiting Physician.
E. C. LANE, M. D.....Visiting Surgeon.
P. A. A. BELINGE, M. D.....Resident Physician.

TERMS:

Payable monthly in advance for ward, medicines, attendance, etc.:

In the wards.....$12 per week.
In rooms with one or more.....15 "
Private rooms.....$1 per day.
Liquors and washing, extra.
Children under ten years of age.....half price.

Money always refunded in case patient leaves before the expiration of the month.

Entrance—Dentistes are not respect to pay or receive visits.

dec17

OUTSIDE LAND CLAMS.

ALL THOSE HAVING REMVED INSTEAD one per cent. of their claims on lands taken by the city for public uses, under Ser. 800, will please hand to the undersigned, and thirty days from date, their statements of bakery fees.

San Francisco, July 31, 1872.

A. AUSTIN,

Collector of Municipal Revenue.

aug3 No. 1, City Hall.

PROFITABLE EMPLOYMENT

For Ladies and Gentlemen their own homes that will not interfere with usual occupation. Address Randall & Co., Providence, R. I.

aug10

SHAW'S

PECTORAL COUGH SYRUP,

For the Cure (Relief of all

PULMONARY COMPLAINTS,

For sale at SHAW'S DEPOTS, corner Sutter and Powell and San Francisco.

$10 made from $1. Call and examine, or 12 Samples mailed free. Sec for Circ. that will retail quick for $10. I. WOLCOTT, 181 Chatham street, New York. 'y1-1yow

MEDICAL, ETC.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER.

Every year increases the popularity of this valuable Hair Preparation; which is due to merit alone. We can assure our old patrons that it is kept fully up to its high standard; and it is the only reliable and perfected preparation for restoring GRAY OR FADED HAIR to its youthful color, making it soft, lustrous, and silken. The scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean. It removes all eruptions and dandruff, and, by its tonic properties, prevents the hair from falling out, as it stimulates and nourishes the hair glands. By its use, the hair grows thicker and stronger. In baldness, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, and will create a new growth, except in extreme old age. It is the most economical HAIR DRESSING ever used, as it requires fewer applications, and gives the hair a youthful, glossy appearance. A. A. Hayes, M.D., State Assayer of Massachusetts, says, "The constituents are pure, and carefully selected for excellent quality; and I consider it the BEST PREPARATION for its intended purposes."

Sold by all Druggists. Prepared by Medicines.

Price One Dollar.

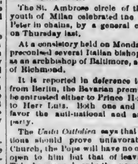
Buckingham's Dye

FOR THE WHISKERS.

As our Renewer in many cases requires too long a time, and too much once, to restore gray or faded Whiskers, we have prepared this dye, in one preparation; which will quickly and effectually accomplish this result. It is easily applied, and produces a color which will neither rub nor wash off. Sold by all Druggists. Price Fifty Cents.

Manufactured by R. P. HALL & CO., NASHUA, N.H.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,



For the relief and cure of all derangements in the stomach, liver, and bowels. They are a mild cathartic, and an excellent purgative. Being purely vegetable, they contain no mercury, mineral, or other noxious substance, and may be taken with safety by their timid patient. Their sugar coating makes them pleasant to take, and renders them easy of administration to children. For derangements of the digestive organs, such as Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listless-ness, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach, and Biliousness, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach, and restore healthy action to the digestive organs.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic, and as a Cathartic, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the disordered action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one bottle is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continued for some time, as good report and through ill report has stood behind what he thought the rights of his countrymen and of his beloved fatherland. Hasenforth he shall "pain his ineffectual fire," and concluded he has done a virtuous, sentanced by that upright Judge. But, sir, is there not a cause? Did not that same Archbishop once brand with infamy the violation of a self imposed oath, and mark with shame the first step in the official ladder which enabled the hasted politician of 1852 don the judicial ermine; and does this House suppose the people of Ireland are too stupid not to appreciate the coincidence? One name still remains, that of the Bishop of Galway. A fine and elegant scholar—a voluminous ecclesiastical writer, of whom Judge Keogh is good enough to say that he is "an intellectual, educated, solemn, grave, and religious pastor," and whom he has the incredible audacity and bad taste publicly to single out of the association of the venerable Archbishop of Tuam, a few days before actually cross-examined for hours in that very court house, and who, as the Judge says, "exhibited all his mental as well as his physical faculties unimpaired." Does the House clearly appreciate what this means? Imagine an English judge in the courses of a trial, in which both were examined, publicly giving it as his opinion that a particular bishop would be duly promoted to the See of Canterbury, if he did not, lately before him, should shortly die. Come from what quarter they may, it seems to me that in such observations the "force of impudence could no further go." Sir, you may invest a judge with the authority of the Crown, you may clothe him in all the dignity of the judgment seat, but there is no power on earth, nor on any exist in heaven or beneath the earth, to make others respect a man who does not respect himself. Pause before you reject this motion or give it to the go-by by adopting such an amendment as that of the learned and learned member for Taunton. Pause, that you may think what worthless and miserable men the judge who scales his hearers with the sinuilitions of an unruly temper and a flattering tongue. You may crush the great fault of Ireland is, that she has no respect for the law; be deeply rancid, therefore, whom you make. Of what stature of the law. The judge, I say (whether evidences establishes his charges or not), who cannot command his passions, and let loose his tongue among a Catholic population to speak of the religion and their character as this man has done, is a recruiting sergeant to increase the number of your troops. In Ireland, suppose you array you may stretch your coercion laws you can, but there is one thing you cannot do—refuse justice and demand in your Empire in peace. If such a judge is permitted to roam about the country on the plea of judicial duties, dishonoring the delivery of the law, then must England think that Irishmen are dead indeed to shame, and the God of justice has retired his face.

(Continued from page 5.)

History of Missions and Missionaries.

NO. 1.—FATHER CROQUET, OF RONDE, OREGON.

EDITOR INDEX REPUBLICAN:—I see with pleasure that in the last number of your journal you have given a most interesting history of the Catholic missions of the northwest. But your most able notice of these missions is still incomplete, and in order justice to such an important subject I am of the opinion that you should review each of the missions singly. Therefore, to-day I shall give you a short history of the Catholic Oregon, mission, by which I feel from the importance of the subject, will be of interest to your readers, even if it should be written hastily.

The Grand Ronde reserve was put into operation in the spring of 1857, by a treaty made with the Indians in 1855. The bands of Indians that were put upon this reserve were the following: the Chasonach, the Molalley, the Tenlaxin, the Tonwvra, the Takemeh, the Kalapuya, the Hunkpapa, and the Rock River. These several bands numbered, in 1857, about this time or thereabouts. To-day they count but 1,500! They have perished by the insalubrity of the climate, the sacrifices of the reserve and the ill-treatment of the Department, which kept agents there who were nothing but birds of clay, without brains or religious sentiments. The consequence has been, that the Indians have become poorer, and the order of agents have become rich, to the disgrace of the Christian Government of the United States.

In 1857 those Indians had a noble agent —Upsain Miller. In 1861 he was superseded by a man named Dixon, and in 1862 Harvey, occupied the position of Indian Agent of Grand Ronde from 1862 to 1870. Three years during those years, was the terror of not only the Indians, but the inhuman proceedings of Father Croquet, who considered him more of a barbarian than the adored him more of a barbarian than the agent of a civilized government. The second in 1871 by a man named Dyer, a more worthless man than his predecessor, if possible.

To give you an idea of the state of affairs in Grand Ronde during these years would occupy too much of your space.

In 1866 an election took place, under the direction of the then agent, Captain Miller, a Protestant gentleman, and in presence of Rev. Mr. Condon, a Methodist minister, who desired to see the interests of the Indians and who had been receiving subsidies from the Government. The election was to decide the religion and teachers which the majority of the Indians desired. The entire vote—about six hundred—of the agency was given in favor of Catholicity and Catholic priests. There was no priest at or near the agency, but Father Mesplie—who must be now in Washington—arrived with Father Croquet a few days after the election. There was one Indian who voted for Condon, and on being upbraided for it, he said that he did so to be rewarded for his labor without some friend in the agency.

The result of the election and the portion of those Indians were sent to the Indian Department where they must be on file with. "That good American gentleman, Captain Miller, will bear testimony to all these facts. Captain Miller sent the result of the election to Archbishop Blanchet, who at once sent Father Croquet to the mission. Matters went on smoothly while Captain Miller remained in the agency; but from the hour when Harvey succeeded him the troubles and sufferings of the great and good Father Croquet commenced.

Time after time has this brave Harvey waited on Father Croquet to tell him that if he dared to open his mouth on the score he would kick him out of it. Imagine the sufferings of this priest for almost twelve years with this tyrant!

Father having endowed with the courage of a hero, although deprived of his schools and the emoluments from that source, kept on teaching and comforting the Indians in the very teeth of the wild beast, Harvey. The Father erected a nice church at his own expense and the expense of the Archbishop of Oregon, and for twelve years he administered the consolation of our holy religion to the Indians without having received a cent from the Government, while his persecuting agents were drawing their subsidies for taking care of the Indians!

To-day Father Croquet is surrounded by a most beautiful congregation of Christian Indians, who are intensely devoted to him. These Indians are employed in agriculture, raising, etc., and never cease blessing the "black gown" which taught them the blessings of pure Christianity.

Father Croquet is only fifty-three years old. He is a man of ordinary size, but of the most robust constitution. He was born in Belgium, graduated in the University of Louvain, and for his great talents received the degree of D. D. from that celebrated institution. He took charge of a parish in his diocese in Belgium, but in a few years the spirit of missionary life took hold of him, and he started for Oregon in 1850, and was sent immediately to Grand Ronde by Archbishop Blanchet. At last the Almighty has heard the prayer of his faithful servant, for last Spring, by direction of the present able Secretary of the Interior and by advice of the President, Grand Ronde was fully restored to the Catholic Church. Thus, after twelve years of persecution and perseverance, the good Father can teach, preach and direct his Indian neophytes in peace. His reciving a compensation as teacher, from the Government. In a little while the good Sisters will be at Grand Ronde, under whose angelic influence the Indian children will grow up in the love and fear of God.

This is but a rough sketch of one of the great priest of this Catholic Church. Some day I may be able to fill up the imperfections, and make a book not inferior in interest to the history of martyrs to the lives and heroism of our early martyrs.

M.

MONTREAL, August 9, 1872.

Catholic Indian Missions.

The Irish Republican, of the 26th ult, published in Washington, D. C., by Mr. Scanlan, contains a very interesting article on this subject from which we extract the following striking facts relating to the new policy of the Government towards the savages which has been under the direction of Rev. Father Mesplie, the distinguished missionary now sojourning in Washington:

"Fort Hall, in Idaho Territory, contains about 1,900 Indians, 1,000 of whom are Catholic, and have been Catholic for years. The remainder were to be brought into Christianity, and were already under missionary influence. There was a nunnery and church there, and the Indians were also trained to reading and writing, and were as truly Christian as any congregation in Washington. Yet this was turned over to the Methodists, and a young man trained high opinioned agent. He and some of his friends are large stock-raisers there, and the more saving of Indian scrip is a farce. He is not even a minister. Father Mesplie knows that he could have 5,000 Indians in and around Fort Hall inside of three years if the mission was left in the hands of the Catholics. There never was a Protestant nunnery among those Indians.

"At the Warren Springs Agency, Oregon, all the Indians are Catholics. Pa ter Mesplie has attended them for ten years.

"At Simcoe, Washington Territory, there are 1,700 Catholics. There is a church and a priest.

"The Blackfeet Indians of Montana number 6,000 Catholics. In fact, all the Montana Indians are Catholics. Yet the Indian Superintendent of Montana makes no opportunity of insulting and harrassing the Catholic priests in their intercourse among the Blackfeet.

"The Poncz Round Indians number two thousand, and are Catholics. They were able before the organization even of the Indian Department to have a Catholic agent—only a sub-agency from the Government. This mission is considered by the departments a model mission. It is under the charge of Messrs and Brothers.

"The Cœur D'Alenes are all Catholic. They received the name of Cœur D'Alene, Crooked Heart," from the trappers, on account of their treachery before they were converted. Now they are the most peaceable tribe in the Great West. But the old spirit only slumbers, and nothing but fair treatment can keep them peaceably. Father Mesplie informs us that the Government set apart a reservation for the Cœur D'Alene, which places the old mission established over forty years ago by Father De Smet in the center of the reserve.

"It is of the utmost importance that measures should be taken to prevent the encroachment of the whites on the reservation, for the Cœur D'Alenes will not be the imposition or prosecution. They being Catholic, it is only simple justice to appoint a Catholic agent. Father Mesplie informs us that the able Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Delano, who is the chief of the Indian Bureau, who is the chief of the Indian Bureau, who knows Father Mesplie, who represents the Archbishop of Oregon, on such appointments, will, we have no doubt, soon bring into the cruel treatment in '58, and were it not for the labors of Father Jouet, the result would have been a massacre. Father Mesplie has been the means of saving the lives of hundreds of the Indians.

"General Tilton, who commanded the United States forces, bore testimony to this in his reports.

"Chamash, Oregon, has a thousand Indians, five hundred of whom are Catholic. The new venerable Archbishop Blanchet has established a mission and a mission in his young days, long before it was a reserve. The Catholics have no priest.

"The Neo-Perces Indians at Lapway Agency, Idaho, number four thousand, and all are Catholics, with a few exception. They were first converted by the great French Jesuit, Father De Smet, about forty years ago. Father Jouvet, was the companion of Father De Smet. He has been dead about a quarter of a century. He died in Santa Clara, California. His missionary work was continued by Father Ravalli, (priest), Catholic, and the present priest, Father Cathalde. The Presbyterians had sent representatives among the Indians several years, but they were haunted off for some reason by the Neo Perces. Yet the mission was turned over during the last Spring to the Presbyterians—more than three thousande Catholic Indians. Father Cathalde is now added to the number of the Indians about one hundred miles from the agency. (Of course all this impediments fell on the heavers in the way. The Presbyterians are paid for leading to about fifty Indians, while the Catholics get nothing for taking care of 3,000.

"All these mistakes taking from the Catholics are only those which were under the supervision of Father Mesplie. They constitute but a small part of the mistakes done from the Catholics."

We clip the following from the Troy (N. Y.) Whig of some three months since, Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., commenced advertising in the Whig, as of late custom for Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy." We inferred at that time it was one of the many contemporary arrangements to swindle people out of their money for curing the sick a few weeks have become convinced to the contrary. We know of several prominent citizens who have suffered from this confidence dreaser, unfairly, and they promptly by Sage's Catarrh Remedy as humbug, and by giving numerous facts have entirely cured. We desire to give Dr. Pierce the benefit of the same.

FIRST ANNUAL PICNIC

OF THE

SARSFIELD

INDEPNT GRENADIER GUARD,

AT THE

CITY GARDENS.

SUNDAY.....SEPT. 8, 1872

ADMISSION.....FIFTY CENTS

CHILDREN.....HALF PRICE

au17

BORN.

CURLEY—In this city Aug. 19, to the wife of Patrick Curley, a daughter.

MARRIED.

MITCHELL—BELLEAU—In this city, Aug. 26, by Rev. Father Prendergast, John L. Mitchell to Clara J. Belleau.

ARD—THOMAS—In this city, Aug. 13, by Rev. Father Prendergast, Thomas P. Ard to Fannie V. Thomas.

DIXON—HOLMES—In this city, Aug. 21, by Father Conway, John J. Dixon to Elizabeth G. Holmes.

DIED.

GERMAIN—In this city, Aug. 26, Christina, only child of Jessie and Mary Ordnegan, aged 3 days.

SHEEN—In this city, Aug. 24, George Washington, youngest son of Timothy and Alice Sheen, aged 5 months and 2 days.

HURLEY—In this city, Aug. 24, Ellen Elizabeth, daughter of J. P. and Hannie Hurley, aged 6 Mon. and 14 days.

MURPHY—In this city, August 24, John Murphy, a native of Ireland, aged 75 years.

ROBIAN—In this city, August 21, Bridget Borgan, a native of Ireland, aged 52 years.

MAHONEY—In this city, August 25, Daniel, son of Andrew and Mary Mahoney, a native of Bangor, Parish of Murrogh, county Cork, Ireland, aged 31 years.

O'BRIEN—In this city, August 28, Edith Mary, daughter of John and Mary O'Brien, aged 5 days.

CROWLEY—In this city, August 26, Ann Crowley, a native of County Cork, Ireland, aged 50 years.

JORDAN—In this city, August 27, Grace, youngest child of William and A. A. Jordan, aged 4 months and 12 days.

McAVLEY—In this city, August 27, Margaret Ann, daughter of Denis and Fannie McAvey, aged 3 mos.

The use of simple bottles of Mair's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer is sufficient to show its efficacy in restoring the natural color of the hair and cleansing the scalp.

Wholesale Market Report.

MORNING OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO.
THURSDAY, August 29, 1872.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export only a moderate inquiry has existed, at a decline. We quote as follows: Extra at $5 12½@$5 50, superfine, at $4@$4 50 for interior and Oregon brands—Extra at $4 75@$5 25 in sack @ 100 lbs.

WHEAT—The market has been quiet but firm, as a slight decline in prices, since our last weekly report. At the close we quote the range at $1 45 for shipping grades, and $1 45 for good to choice milling @ 100 lbs.

BARLEY—The market has ruled firm for brewing at unchanged rates. For new a fair demand has existed at unchanged rates since our last weekly report. At the close we quote feed at $1 15@$1 17½ @ 100 lbs.

OATS—The market has remained quiet, at unchanged rates, during the past week. Ordinary to choice sold at $1 @$1 30 @ 100 lbs, which is the nearest at the close.

HAY—The receipts have been fair during the past seven days, with a fair demand. Quotable at the close at $@$ for ordinary to choice new in bales.

STRAW—Quotable at $@$ 25 @ ton for cargo lots and $@$ 50 @ ton for small lots.

CORN MEAL—Sold at $@$ 75 @ 100 lbs from mill.

BRANS—We note a fair demand, and the following are our latest prices: Bran, $@$ 00; Shorts, $1 50; small White and Pea, $@ $@; Red and Pink, $@ $@ @ 100 lbs.

POTATOES—At the close we quote the range at $1 25@$1 75 in sacks @ 100 lbs.

ONIONS—Scarce at $@ $@.

VEGETABLES—Quotable at $@$ @ ton for cargo lots.

MISCELLANEOUS—We quote feed at $@$ @ ton for small lots.

BUTTER—Fair to choice, 25@30c.

EGGS—Quotable at $@$ @ doz.

CHEESE—Quotable at 12½@13c.

BEANS—We note a fair demand, and the following are our latest prices: Bayos, $@ $@; Sieurs of protection for the people whom he now urges to this struggle."

"I hope so."

"Hope so!" Why, he has sworn it; has called upon the Most High God to witness and attest his oath. Is a man ready to perjure his soul a devil out of hell in human shape would betray or mock a people under such terrible circumstances?"

"Well, I suppose you must be right, friend Power. Forgive me my ugly-going prudence. I am a touch older than you are. Yet, as I say, perhaps you are right. As we are in for this fight, we must box it in all force or not at all. I, too, will do my best in the name of God!"

"Bravely spoken," shouted Father Power. "Let us, in Tipperary, return Frank Scully and James Sadleir; Cork will be good for Vincent and Burke Roche; J. D. Fitzgerald, an amiable and unselfish jurist, will carry Kerry; Limerick will give us Mossell, a friend of religion, largely trusted by Mr. Sadleir; then there will be Duffy and Lucas—two more after our own hearts, only they are more in the mind than the bright. George Henry Moore will sweep Mayo; Maguire will be safe in Dungarvan; Wexford looks safe for Mc-Mahon; Leitrim for Brady; Sligo for Swift; Dundalk for Bowyer—why, man alive, we cannot count them all! At least fifty or sixty Tenant-Righters will enter the new House of Commons; and this is a power able to conquer the concession of the last Land Bill!"

"And God—Ulla; so be it; we'll try the issue, John."

Well, then, come over and dine with me to-morrow, you'll meet our honored friend Sadleir, who, with his brother James, is staying with me just now; you remember him and Mr. Crowe coldly enough when they called on you the other day;" and Father Power rose to depart.

"I can't promise that; but you may rely on it I'll do my part by your side in the coming fight. Good night."

"Yes," soliloquized Father Quaid, as he paced slowly up and down his little garden while his hearty and genial companion's footsteps died away on the high-road—"yes, he is right, after all. We will try it, we will try the struggle. The our last chance in this generation, and, if we be true to ourselves, we must win."

Father Power, with the noble and fiery spontaneous characteristics of his Celtic nature, headed his people—a race whom he might have led by a silken thread through all the barren seas of Sahara. He attended Mr. Sadleir to place his brother's election bills at the office of the clerk of the crown on Sunday after Sunday, when, denouncing the legalised robbery of the tenants, and the ferocious and hideous injustice of the Establishment, he exhorted his hearers to be true to the Church and country in the impending crisis, and to vote for "those trusted, tried, and incorruptible patriots, Scully and Sadleir," usually adding a warm tribute to the merits of the great brother, John himself. This gentleman, who invariably knelt close to the altar rails, manifested profound emotion at hearing his good qualities so generously and openly eulogised. The congregration beheld him with feelings of reverence approaching to awe, as he covered his face with his hands and lay there prostrate around him but at a respectful distance—when, on leaving the chapel, he dipped the fingers in the holy water font, and devoutly made the sign of the cross on his forehead. "He is a most eminent man, indeed," observed to the priest, and universal opinion confirmed the assertion.

What further helped to confirm the good [illegible] was an incident which [illegible] but which, nevertheless, got general circulation. One night, as he prowled, as usual, about the house before the family retired to rest, with a equally baby in his arms, he met Mr. Crowe at the door of the chapel-house, and begged to see his reverence. He was admitted, and told his story. It was a painful and pitiful one. After the "husband" (as she called him) and she had lived together for many years, but never been received into the Church's embrace. And now tied bless you both. Farewell—don't mention a word of this to anyone."

Notwithstanding this disingenuous appeal to the peasant's reticence, the story rapidly flew from mouth, and the Catholic peasantry began to see in their Parliamentary representation an angel of light, who, at some Heaven-directed moment, might behold his wings and disappear from their eyes up the luminous road which marked Elijah's ascension beyond the clouds.

Still, although his prospects were of the brightest, Mr. Sadleir's mind was ill at ease, and it was only by the strongest mental effort he could restrain himself from openly expressing an impatience and vexation with his circumstances. As he tossed wearied and sleepless in bed, during the long nights, the image of that naughty English girl who had sent him, all his blood in his head, and all his flesh quivering with pain, out of her presence, rose up in the darkness of his chamber to torment him with the magnificent mockery of her mouth and eyes. As the spectrum faded into the phosphoric background, he would strike his head with his clenched hand, and find comfort in the sound of the falling blow, as proving that he was displeased. He would have her yet. He was doomed to see her writhing at his feet, and laugh even a month of repentance from him whose love she had scorned. The struggle between his passion and humiliation was reflected distinctly in the sombre mirror of his unhealthy imagination, and afforded him a fiendish delight. He had ceased to love—he had learned to hate her; and his vengeance was of that implacable sort which knows not the name before. He'll be smashed to death before he's ten yards nearer."

"Paddy Maithews!" exclaimed Father Power, "is the famous reporter of the Limerick Pioneer. He roame the country for a season or two and sometimes, they say, takes a free lance, and is the standing terror of all the parish priests in the three counties."

"Is borne them, perhaps."

"Then as they seem up—and drinks them up too! but the corollary is self evident. He'll hare he comes."

And Father Power reigned up the panting and foam covered horse at the side of the gentlemen with a sudden jerk which almost threw the animal on its haunches, flung the reins carelessly into the well, and leaped to the ground with surprising nimbleness.

"How do you do, my dear and reverend friend?" he exclaimed, extending both hands and grasping the clergyman's with contagious enthusiasm. "Ah, what a glorious sun you must have preached on Sunday! They're all taking of it Clonmel—high and low, gentle and simple. The heavens themselves, I suppose, is most infirm. Could the entire crowded on a more luminous occasion trusted a more beloved bell!" And Mr. Matthews noticed significantly to the [illegible] old [illegible] bell.

"Ah, you're long," said Father Power, with a quiet laugh. "Do you bring us any news from the seat of war, Mr. Matthews?"

"Augh, arrow, as the poet Shakespeare remarks," answered the latter. "I've none to disclosing, permit to pay my unaffected respects to the amiable gentleman and brilliant patriot whom I have the honor to recognise as forming one of our little trio.

---

* Poor Matthews has long since gone to his rest, but his name must still be a household word in many of the districts he visited. I trust they will bear me out in stating that the outline of his character in the page text is on the side of minimum, not exaggeration.—AUTHOR.

you and the people who boast so honorable a son. Do me a favor, will you?"

"Anything, your honor—just say it, and thry it!"

"Then, your wife will oblige me by wearing that ring for a week or thereabouts at happy meeting, and if you do not retain the money for your own use, do for the future what you will with it. I regret to have been received into the Church's embrace. And now tied bless you both. Farewell—don't mention a word of this to anyone."

Notwithstanding this disingenuous appeal to the peasant's reticence, the story rapidly flew from mouth, and the Catholic peasantry began to see in their Parliamentary representation an angel of light, who, at some Heaven-directed moment, might unfold his wings and disappear from their eyes up the luminous road which marked Elijah's ascension beyond the clouds.

Still, although his prospects were of the brightest, Mr. Sadleir's mind was ill at ease, and it was only by the strongest mental effort he could restrain himself from openly expressing an impatience and vexation with his circumstances. As he tossed wearied and sleepless in bed, during the long nights, the image of that naughty English girl who had sent him, all his blood in his head, and all his flesh quivering with pain, out of her presence, rose up in the darkness of his chamber to torment him with the magnificent mockery of her mouth and eyes. As the spectrum faded into the phosphoric background, he would strike his head with his clenched hand, and find comfort in the sound of the falling blow, as proving that he was displeased. He would have her yet. He was doomed to see her writhing at his feet, and laugh even a month of repentance from him whose love she had scorned. The struggle between his passion and humiliation was reflected distinctly in the sombre mirror of his unhealthy imagination, and afforded him a fiendish delight. He had ceased to love—he had learned to hate her; and his vengeance was of that implacable sort which knows not the name before. He'll be smashed to death before he's ten yards nearer."

"Paddy Maithews!" exclaimed Father Power, "is the famous reporter of the Limerick Pioneer. He roame the country for a season or two and sometimes, they say, takes a free lance, and is the standing terror of all the parish priests in the three counties."

"Is borne them, perhaps."

"Then as they seem up—and drinks them up too! but the corollary is self evident. He'll hare he comes."

And Father Power reigned up the panting and foam covered horse at the side of the gentlemen with a sudden jerk which almost threw the animal on its haunches, flung the reins carelessly into the well, and leaped to the ground with surprising nimbleness.

"How do you do, my dear and reverend friend?" he exclaimed, extending both hands and grasping the clergyman's with contagious enthusiasm. "Ah, what a glorious sun you must have preached on Sunday! They're all taking of it Clonmel—high and low, gentle and simple. The heavens themselves, I suppose, is most infirm. Could the entire crowded on a more luminous occasion trusted a more beloved bell!" And Mr. Matthews noticed significantly to the [illegible] old [illegible] bell.

"Ah, you're long," said Father Power, with a quiet laugh. "Do you bring us any news from the seat of war, Mr. Matthews?"

"Augh, arrow, as the poet Shakespeare remarks," answered the latter. "I've none to disclosing, permit to pay my unaffected respects to the amiable gentleman and brilliant patriot whom I have the honor to recognise as forming one of our little trio.

CHAPTER XVIII.

One of those clearances as the priest and his guest were strolling along the mountain road, they saw a wretched little boy, a balloo, and, on turning around to ascertain who challenged, they found the urchin hotly pursued by a gentle gentleman seated on a side-car, and driving as fast as his legs could carry him.

"Who can this be?" asked Sadleir. "He will break his neck against a stone, and his own is he comes down the incline at that rate. Is he mad?"

Father Power put on his spectacles and looked steadily for a moment at the headlong charioteer. "If I'm not deceived," he said, "that is a sensible looking man face, nay, also, the wretched pair had bother. He has got a drop of his own in his composition, and supplied it and his purse into the hands of the shrinking peasant, who dropped the reins in his shake, and wiped his eyes with the back of his weather-beaten hand, while the woman's face fell on her and fast on the ragged clothes which wrapped her babe.

Having obtained that the child was not baptised, Father Power led the way to his flock. But where were a godfather and godmother to be found? The poor man who had an old acquaintances in Ameriky, in whose name he was baptised, suggested them that his overture was well considered and definite, and the right was performed accordingly, the man of wealth and position and intellect set as sponsor to the child of a peasant.

"Now rise-rood," said the peasant bridegroom, as the little group passed from the chapel back to the priest's house, "if not fit to spake to the gintlemin like Mister Sadleir, and I don't know how to say that all I have, but my sowl, is at his biddin' for the good turn he's done us to-night."

"Oh Father Power, pointing to Mr. Sadleir, whose figure was some paces in advance of the speaker, "and now, good-night."

"But I want to give him back his ring and his money, your reverence," urged the man, in troubled, insisting voice. "The Lord foreland I'd be that mane as to keep them."

Father Power turned to the speaker, and was puzzled as to how he should proceed. After some seconds' hesitation, however, he called to Mr. Sadleir, who halted at the door of his car-carrier, the sensible man in his hand, and a benevolent smile rippling over his ordinarily imperturbable face.

"This honest man wishes to return your property," began the priest. I must leave you to put the matter straight between yourselves."

"What honesty, what rectitude, what rare nobility of character!" exclaimed the other. "Ah, my dear Father Power, well may we call our dear and noble country the Island of Saints!" My hard-learned son of toil," he continued, turning to the peasant, "your high spirit is a credit to Mr. Sadleir, I am delighted to meet you!" and the little man shook the great man's hand, as an American would say, "considerably."

"I fancy we have met before now," remarked Mr. Sadleir, in no whit offended by the other's familiarity."

"Deed dear! Of course we have. You may have forgotten my name, I am, in common parlance, Mr. Patrick Matthews, the honored guest of priest and prelate; and"—here he bowed deeply—"a poet, a, a man of letters, and an author of your service."

"Are you still on the Pioneer?" inquired the priest.

Mr. Matthews raised his hands and eyes simultaneously, yes le ciel. He next inserted his thumbs in his vest pockets, and uttered a terrific "No!" which astounded both his hearers. "That disreputable yard of flour cloth, gentleman," he explained, "had the benefit of my services as long as it kept the unclouded heaven of independence and the other manly torches burning in pristine purity. But when [illegible] the noble flame quenched in the breast of Tory corruption, I cut adrift from the compromising anchorage to ride in the main waters of honorable poverty and unprovoked neglect.

"I trust the press has not lost as valuable a connection," said Mr. Sadleir. "Really this men are scarce."

(To be continued)

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

ENGLAND.

Home Rule is Coming.

Lord John Russell's adherence to the principle underlying the Home Rule demand has startled the Gladstone people and amazed their press. "It appears to me," says his lordship, "that if Ireland had a legislature of her own for purposes of assembly for each of its four provinces, and if Scotland in a similar manner were to be divided into towlands and Highlands, having for each province a representative assembly, the local wants of Ireland and Scotland might be better provided for than they are at present. The Imperial Parliament might still retain its hold over the legislation, and refuse, if it so chose, to give a third reading to any bill that passed in first and second reading in the local assemblies." This scheme won't do; but any scheme, having as its object the "ultimate contentment" of the British Horse in Commons, should proceed from the hereditary head of the Whig party in England, is a sign most encouraging that the overhanging clouds are breaking up, and the lightning of the bright sky above is to be dear old Erin are opening on us.—Irish-town.

A British Holiday.

It seems that when the Prince of Wales and Princess Ireland breakwater the other day the yards of the ironclads were manned three times over though a gale was blowing, and that two sailors fell from their perilous position and were killed. This is indeed an illustration of court flattery—blindness to human life, and a disregard for the princes may be expressed with that the yards should not be manned. It is to be hoped that this lesson will not be lost on the proper authorities, but that they will sufficiently exposed to danger, resulting from official [illegible]. Nelson's [illegible] verse, "A [illegible]

A Singular Error.

Mr. Scully Bruce gave a very curious answer the other night in the House of Commons to Serjeant Shee. The latter asked him if his attention had been drawn to the report of the speech of the Bishop of Gloucester, in which they pass a passage distinctly [illegible] the [illegible] to know who had labourers in their rights, [illegible] and he had urged on the people to [illegible] in [illegible] business of ministers to inquire to carefully into the language of spiritual pastors and masters. Mr. Bruce said he was among the honorable members at the time of a tipsy babble, but that would have been said if a Roman priest, had uttered sentence half so objectative of breach of the law! The Attorney-General for Ireland has been ordered to prosecute him and Parliament would have applauded the order. Perhaps the Solicitor-General for Ireland will be good enough to explain why the Bishop of Gloucester has escaped prosecution.

Mr. Osborne Morgan Speaks to the Keogh debate. He declared that had no sympathy with Ultramontane vice, but that he was quite convinced of the practices of Mr. Keogh's opinions. He denounced the conduct of the Judge in departure from "judicial decency," adding that there would be a different tone if an English or Scotch judge had conducted himself of such a "passionate a manner." A sense of news and attentiveness, like a free lance, and is the standing terror of all the parish priests in the three counties."

"Is borne them, perhaps."

"Then as they seem up—and drinks them up too! but the corollary is self evident. He'll hare he comes."

And Father Power reigned up the panting and foam covered horse at the side of the gentlemen with a sudden jerk which almost threw the animal on its haunches, flung the reins carelessly into the well, and leaped to the ground with surprising nimbleness.

"How do you do, my dear and reverend friend?" he exclaimed, extending both hands and grasping the clergyman's with contagious enthusiasm. "Ah, what a glorious sun you must have preached on Sunday! They're all taking of it Clonmel—high and low, gentle and simple. The heavens themselves, I suppose, is most infirm. Could the entire crowded on a more luminous occasion trusted a more beloved bell!" And Mr. Matthews noticed significantly to the [illegible] old [illegible] bell.

"Ah, you're long," said Father Power, with a quiet laugh. "Do you bring us any news from the seat of war, Mr. Matthews?"

"Augh, arrow, as the poet Shakespeare remarks," answered the latter. "I've none to disclosing, permit to pay my unaffected respects to the amiable gentleman and brilliant patriot whom I have the honor to recognise as forming one of our little trio.

FRANCE.

Quick Subscribing.

The great loan has been the subject of a curious calculation by the subscription lasted twenty-two hours or 1,320 minutes. As forty-one milliards, five hundred millions of francs, were subscribed in that time, it follows that a sum of 31,439,022f. was subscribed each minute.

A Big-Little Man.

M. Thiers is a wonderful being. He is one of the youngest men of his age and biggest men of his size we know. Having acted as orator before the war, ambassador during the war and financier since the war, he is not content to give himself even the silvertired enjoyment of eight hours at the sea side, but works still and always. Down at Trouville sends he is to be found at cock-crow prattling with a four-pounder field-piece like a common artillery-man. Verily an Admirable Crichton come to life again! This is really the only news from France this week. It is not grander than the enormous gooseberry of old acquaintance or even the great sea serpent!

The Communists.

We have not seen the last of the Satory executions, for another Communist has been condemned to death. He was arrested more than a year since, but set at liberty then for want of proof. Some few months ago he was again arrested, and he now lies under sentence of death. The charge brought against him was that of pillaging and setting fire to the Palace of the Legion of Honor.

A new party has just sprung up in France, which styles itself the National Party, and has published an address to the country declaring that it will support M. Thiers in his efforts to free the territory from the foreign occupation. It also declares that the assembly for each of its four provinces, and if Scotland in a similar manner were to be divided into townlands and Highlands, having for each province a representative assembly, the local wants of Ireland and Scotland might be better provided for than they are at present. The Imperial Parliament might still retain its hold over the legislation, and refuse, if it so chose, to give a third reading to any bill that passed in first and second reading in the local assemblies." This scheme won't do; but any scheme, having as its object the "ultimate contentment" of the British Horse in Commons, should proceed from the hereditary head of the Whig party in England, is a sign most encouraging that the overhanging clouds are breaking up, and the lightning of the bright sky above is to be dear old Erin are opening on us.—Irish-town.

A British Holiday.

It seems that when the Prince of Wales and Princess Ireland breakwater the other day the yards of the ironclads were manned three times over though a gale was blowing, and that two sailors fell from their perilous position and were killed. This is indeed an illustration of court flattery—blindness to human life, and a disregard for the princes may be expressed with that the yards should not be manned. It is to be hoped that this lesson will not be lost on the proper authorities, but that they will sufficiently exposed to danger, resulting from official [illegible]. Nelson's [illegible] verse, "A [illegible]

A Singular Error.

Mr. Scully Bruce gave a very curious answer the other night in the House of Commons to Serjeant Shee. The latter asked him if his attention had been drawn to the report of the speech of the Bishop of Gloucester, in which they pass a passage distinctly [illegible] the [illegible] to know who had labourers in their rights, [illegible] and he had urged on the people to [illegible] in [illegible] business of ministers to inquire to carefully into the language of spiritual pastors and masters. Mr. Bruce said he was among the honorable members at the time of a tipsy babble, but that would have been said if a Roman priest, had uttered sentence half so objectative of breach of the law! The Attorney-General for Ireland has been ordered to prosecute him and Parliament would have applauded the order. Perhaps the Solicitor-General for Ireland will be good enough to explain why the Bishop of Gloucester has escaped prosecution.

Mr. Osborne Morgan Speaks to the Keogh debate. He declared that had no sympathy with Ultramontane vice, but that he was quite convinced of the practices of Mr. Keogh's opinions. He denounced the conduct of the Judge in departure from "judicial decency," adding that there would be a different tone if an English or Scotch judge had conducted himself of such a "passionate a manner." A sense of news and attentiveness, like a free lance, and is the standing terror of all the parish priests in the three counties."

"Is borne them, perhaps."

"Then as they seem up—and drinks them up too! but the corollary is self evident. He'll hare he comes."

And Father Power reigned up the panting and foam covered horse at the side of the gentlemen with a sudden jerk which almost threw the animal on its haunches, flung the reins carelessly into the well, and leaped to the ground with surprising nimbleness.

"How do you do, my dear and reverend friend?" he exclaimed, extending both hands and grasping the clergyman's with contagious enthusiasm. "Ah, what a glorious sun you must have preached on Sunday! They're all taking of it Clonmel—high and low, gentle and simple. The heavens themselves, I suppose, is most infirm. Could the entire crowded on a more luminous occasion trusted a more beloved bell!" And Mr. Matthews noticed significantly to the [illegible] old [illegible] bell.

"Ah, you're long," said Father Power, with a quiet laugh. "Do you bring us any news from the seat of war, Mr. Matthews?"

"Augh, arrow, as the poet Shakespeare remarks," answered the latter. "I've none to disclosing, permit to pay my unaffected respects to the amiable gentleman and brilliant patriot whom I have the honor to recognise as forming one of our little trio.

IRISH INTELLIGENCE.

A Well Merited Compliment.

On Tuesday evening the jurymen who inquired into the death of the late Lieutenant Smith-Barry, and Martin Hanley Carey met at Wynn's Hotel, Abbey street, for the purpose of presenting the young gentleman who had performed so gallant and praiseworthy an action. The meeting was presided over by Mr. Carey, who was honorary Secretary of the Society of Ireland during the agitation for Emancipation.—Universe.

Parliamentary Representation.

Mr. Butt has given notice of two important motions for next Session of Parliament. One is in reference to the Parliamentary representation of Ireland, and will declare the expediency of making provisions at an early period for the allocation of the seats in the House of Commons to the constituencies of Cabel and Sligo, and generally for the distribution of seats and the alteration of boundaries in Ireland. The other motion deals with the votes given for disqualified persons at elections, and proposes the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into and report upon the present state of the law in relation to the matter. The first announcement startling decision of the Court of Common Pleas will come under review.—Nation.

An Unwarrantable Compliment.

A large number of the Irish members of parliament and other gentlemen have lately presented to the Countess Waldegrave a strand of her husband. Mr. Chichester however, in recognition of the services as Chief Secretary for Ireland." It is quite in keeping this presentation had been made to the Countess Waldegrave instead of Mr. Forsecue's social habits in Dublin and the "genial hospitality and gracious kindness" of its counties, the compliment might pass without remark. But they are not. Mr. Forsecue is detested and despised, and ought to give a political significance to the affair. Mr. Forsecue ought to feel hanged to get the Disestablishment Act passed, and also the Land Act; but no matter, we have not the minister who abolished the Coercion Acts (still the law unrepealed), and so long as Ireland is in a state of [illegible] Government! The Irish people will not be [illegible] by [illegible] and [illegible] Under the heat of the southern summer. But they had shrunk from being drawn to pay the "tribute of blood," or from the hearths they feel labored to support. They were contents de loin, Men who had had the courage to assert their rights, and to exercise the liberty others are content to brawl about in drunken songs; for this they were seized and chained like dogs and dragged in fetters like convicts. Those who talk so much sentimentality about the sufferings of African slaves, might find a hearer and more congenial subject of sympathy in the history of home and the thousands who died under a civilized lash. As they passed along, murmurs of sympathy and indignation were every where uttered, and many a servant at the cabindoors who gazed them along, testified to the concentrated hatred of the Roman population for their Italian and Irish oppressors. Remains that the present day—evidences of their displeasure otherwise than by expressions. Remains that the people themselves of that privilege, by holding a monster demonstration and unarming the constabulary in every town and village in the suburbs of the city, on Thursday, the 15th of August. Every man in the procession was the working and respectable class in the city, and the procession took about two hours to pass a given point. Fifteen o'clock Mass, and after the principal thoroughfares of the city, it came to a halt, to bring the proceedings to a close. Speeches followed a black boy, five years of age. The quick memory, and ready tongue of the little fellow made in a few weeks had learned to make himself easily understood by the Italians, were highly amusing. Pity a precocious development of this kind too often implies that it will stimulate the child to a premature order. The appearance of this poor Abyssinian waif excited the estate in a high degree. It is very well to see such a spirit in the play and equally enlaying between two rivals within the walls of the house.

The Priest Prosecutions.

The Galway prosecutions will take place before Chief Baron Pigot at the Autumn Assizes, said the Attorney-General for Ireland on Saturday, in the House of Commons, in reply to a question put by Mr. McCarthy Downing. Mr. Bowes added, however, that "much depended on the result of the Trial, we venture to think, is not very likely to be eligible. Counsel for the Government order the trials to take place at any time they like. The incriminated gentlemen surely are not sensible that they had anything to fear before it can be changed to any other place. Mr. Butt's speeches on the question of the Irish fisheries have shamed the Government into doing a small share of their duty in this matter. The motion of the Marquis of Hartington announced that there was a ballance of £30,000 remaining from a fund raised for the relief of distress in Ireland in 1822, and that of this sum £20,000 may be made immediately available for the purpose of assisting by loan our poor fishermen to buy fishing requisites.—Nation.

Consecration.

His Eminence Cardinal Cullen consecrated on Sunday last, August 11th, a new church at Killown, in the neighborhood of Newry. There was a large concourse of persons, lay and clerical, at the ceremony, and in the evening the parish priest, Father O'Neill, gave a banquet. From the speeches delivered at this dinner we learn the gratifying fact that the kindest relations prevail among the clergy of all creeds in the district. It appears that the site of the new church was given gratuitously by a Protestant gentleman — Mr. Walmsley—and that other Protestant gentlemen contributed liberally to the building fund.

Operation of the Coercion Act.

A Parliamentary paper issued on Wednesday, August 14th, gives the list of persons detained in custody under the Coercion Act, under warrants signed by the Lord Lieutenant, under the authority of portion of the above named Act. The following is the list. Patrick Walsh—the ground stated for his arrest on the warrant, under which each person is detained, being a member of the Fenian Society: Stephen Turney, the same; Patrick Casey, the same; Luke Walsh, the same; John Seery, the same;

---

MONSTER PROCESSION IN LONDONDERRY !!

The Party Procession Act being repealed, the Catholics of Derry, in connection with the temperance movement, resolved to show themselves of that privilege, by holding a monster demonstration and marching through the principal streets of the city and suburbs of the city, on Thursday, the 15th of August. During the week previous to the working men were requested to be in their lodges by seven o'clock Mass, and there principal thoroughfares of the city, a halt was made in front of the Bishop's residence, when the Bishop came out and addressed the assembled multitude. The procession was the largest and most respectable ever witnessed in the city, and the enthusiasm displayed by the people was unbounded. The whole affair passed off in the most orderly manner, and the utmost good feeling prevailed throughout the entire proceedings. The Bishop's address was received with loud cheers, and the people dispersed to their homes.—Belfast Morning News, Aug. 17.

Extension in the West.

The organ of Trenton Bay party (Sentinel), commenting on it, says: "The Protestant party have enjoyed their day, and we see no reason why the Roman Catholics should not enjoy theirs. Let the principle be carried out. It is very well to see such a spirit in the play and equality existing between two rivals within the walls of the house.

The Priest Prosecutions.

The Galway prosecutions will take place before Chief Baron Pigot at the Autumn Assizes, said the Attorney-General for Ireland on Saturday, in the House of Commons, in reply to a question put by Mr. McCarthy Downing. Mr. Bowes added, however, that "much depended on the result of the Trial, we venture to think, is not very likely to be eligible. Counsel for the Government order the trials to take place at any time they like. The incriminated gentlemen surely are not sensible that they had anything to fear before it can be changed to any other place. Mr. Butt's speeches on the question of the Irish fisheries have shamed the Government into doing a small share of their duty in this matter. The motion of the Marquis of Hartington announced that there was a ballance of £30,000 remaining from a fund raised for the relief of distress in Ireland in 1822, and that of this sum £20,000 may be made immediately available for the purpose of assisting by loan our poor fishermen to buy fishing requisites.—Nation.

Consecration.

His Eminence Cardinal Cullen consecrated on Sunday last, August 11th, a new church at Killown, in the neighborhood of Newry. There was a large concourse of persons, lay and clerical, at the ceremony, and in the evening the parish priest, Father O'Neill, gave a banquet. From the speeches delivered at this dinner we learn the gratifying fact that the kindest relations prevail among the clergy of all creeds in the district. It appears that the site of the new church was given gratuitously by a Protestant gentleman — Mr. Walmsley—and that other Protestant gentlemen contributed liberally to the building fund.

Operation of the Coercion Act.

A Parliamentary paper issued on Wednesday, August 14th, gives the list of persons detained in custody under the Coercion Act, under warrants signed by the Lord Lieutenant, under the authority of portion of the above named Act. The following is the list. Patrick Walsh—the ground stated for his arrest on the warrant, under which each person is detained, being a member of the Fenian Society: Stephen Turney, the same; Patrick Casey, the same; Luke Walsh, the same; John Seery, the same;

---

The Rev. James Magee, P. P., has been promoted to the Archbishop of Tuam to the parishes of Castlebar, Ballyhaunce and Finally.

The Mayor of Belfast, Mr. Savage, and is Chairman of the Harbor Commissioners—the Most Rev. P. J. Ryan, D. D. The Chairman of the Poor Law Board presided on the occasion. An address was adopted fully executed by Sister Mary Frances Clare, of Kenmare Convent.—Nation.

The Bishop of Ossory.

The Most Rev. Dr. Walsh, Bishop of Ossory, died on Sunday morning last. The venerable prelate reached the patriarchal age of 82, was in the 55th year of his priesthood, and in the 25th year of his episcopate. He was specially remarkable for the simplicity of his character, his fervent piety, his unbounded charity, and the zeal with which he watched over the interests of his flock. He was moreover a man of very considerable literary and scientific attainments; in proof of which we may mention that even before he was ordained he fell in Dushfield College (of which he was afterwards President) the Chair of Moral and Natural Philosophy. On Tuesday his remains were interred in the vaults beneath the Catholic Cathedral of Kilkenny. After a solemn religious ceremonial and a public funeral, in which the clergy and gentry of the surrounding neighborhood, as well as the inhabitants of the town, took part. The Most Rev. Dr. Walsh is succeeded in the See of Ossory by his coadjutor—the Most Rev. Dr. Moran.—Nation, August 17.

Foul Play at the Limerick Races.

Mr. H. S. Brooke, the stroke oar of the Glenbrook who competed for the Limerick Cup last week, complains that at the crisis of the race his boat was deliberately run down and stopped by a semi-barbarian in a steam launch, who, last there should be any doubt as to his identity, he states is named Cochrane should be allowed to win upon the Shandon. The matter is now under the consideration of the stewards, and we have procured a canoe for the purpose. He has not gone far upon the river when a heavy steam launch comes down upon him, and the doctor was adjusting his coat, he was run down by the latter. Steering Oyer reach the bat the boat capsized, and he precipitated into the water. The steamer came on and the Irish boy to [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPT. 21.

Sept. 15—Sunday—Seventeenth Sunday after Pentecost. Holy Name of Mary. St. Nicomedes, Martyr.
16—Monday—St. Cornelius, Pope and Cyprian, Bishop, Martyrs. St. Euphemia and others, Martyrs.
17—Tuesday—Stigmata of St. Francis.
18—Wednesday—St. Joseph of Copertino, Confessor. Ember Day.
19—Thursday—St. Januarius, Bishop, and Companions, Martyrs.
20—Friday—St. Eustachius and Companions, Martyrs. Ember Day.
21—Saturday—St. Matthew Apostle and Evangelist. Ember Day.

THE MONITOR:

THE ONLY

Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....SEPT. 14, 1872.

THE SUPERVISORS AND THE RAILWAY QUESTION.

Are the Supervisors supreme autocrats in San Francisco? They ought not to be; they are not; nevertheless, they act as if they were. The one great question now being discussed by the citizens is that of railway communication with the East, and it is most intimately connected with the future welfare of the city. There projects are placed before the public, all of them demanding money. Two look for that money in the shape of an absolute donation; one offers to give the city, or rather representatives of the city, a certain amount of stock as value for the grant. Mr. Stanford only wants ten and a half millions of dollars. The Colorado Company require ten millions; the Atlantic and Pacific Company ask ten millions also. It is in the power of the Supervisors to say that not any one of these projects before the people, all three, or none at all, as it pleases them. They are lucky men, and they have a rare chance of doing a "nice thing" for themselves. There is money in this railway job, and, unless they are very grievously maligned by their fellow-citizens, these Supervisors are the identical men to earn it. It would pay Stanford to spend a hundred thousand dollars, or three times that amount if necessary, in buying up the Guardians of the city, and, literally, bribing them in order to put either of the two other schemes before the people for approval or rejection by vote. There are many persons who say that the shameful sale and transfer has been consummated already, that the great Central Pacific magnate owns the Supervisors, and that there will be no ballot on the railway question. It remains for the Supervisors to prove by their acts that they have not been bribed to betray the city, and that they are not the personal property of any man or any party. They can do so readily enough by resolving to lay all those three projects before the people, and let them decide which they will give their money to. This plan of dealing with the question would be a fair one, and would not well be complained of by any party. Stanford, Colorado, and Atlantic and Pacific would stand on the same footing, a minor one providing the city with a railway on the water-front. Should the Supervisors adopt the extreme plan of putting their veto on the several issues, the citizens will be forced to the belief that they are not soldiers, but lackeys of the New York Tammany ring.

RIOTS IN GERMANY.

The German Catholics are not quite disposed to lie down at the feet of Prince Bismarck and allow him trample upon them. They will not tamely submit to outrage upon their consciences, nor to insult heaped upon all they hold sacred. Therefore it is that they have chosen to express very emphatically their disapprobation of his late exciting the Germans from the impartial dominions. The Rhenish Prussians are nearly all Catholics, and they are, moreover, the wealthiest, best educated, most intelligent and hard-working of Prussians. In all their wars with France, Austria, Sweden and other powers, they stood foremost and bore the brunt of the fighting. In the late war they and their Bavarian brethren particularly distinguished themselves. They earned the gratitude of the Emperor and his Minister, but it has not been paid to them. The only return for their services they have yet been favored with, is a relentless persecution of one of the most zealous and able religious communities of which their Church can boast. They put their protest against the treachery in the form of a procession in honor of the Jesuits, and they have been answered by the edge of the sabre and the butt-end of the musket. The Government torched the procession and dispersed it by armed force, killing several people and wounding a great many. As usual, an attempt has been made by the telegraph agents to trump up the Catholic party, and the dispatches are so worded that one would imagine the processionists made the riots and endeavored to wrick the houses of obnoxious individuals. But the whole story is clear enough to all who investigate the ascertained facts. The demonstrationists wanted no riots and made none; the disturbances were created by the troops who broke up the procession. Consequently, the Government alone is accountable for what has happened. It would be absurd to maintain that Prussia is a free country, or that liberty is at all favored by the authorities. If people are to be bludgeoned and sabred by dragoons for marching in procession in honor of a religious order whose piety, charity, learning and zeal entitle them to the very highest respect, they must come to the conclusion that they are living under an abominable despotism, and that they are regarded by those in power as having no rights whatever. The German mind is slow to receive ideas, but when once it has fairly entertained them, it clings to them tenaciously and works them out to their fullest development. The true Teuton is patient and long-suffering, but terrible in his wrath. When, therefore, the Prussian Catholics collee to the resolution of gaining redress of their grievances, they will do so in a manner the reverse of pleasing to Emperor William or his unprincipled creature, Prince Bismarck. They will, however, have to make up their minds very soon, or else their religion will be so hampered and bound down with restrictive enactments that it will be little more than a department of government presided over by secular functionaries.

THE POPE AND ITALY.

Once again we find appearing in the newspapers reports to the effect that his Holiness the Pope intends to abandon Rome and seek a refuge in some foreign country. It may be that the wish is father to the thought. We know that when the infamous work of annexation was completed, and Victor Emmanuel was master of the Eternal City, the revolutionists were extremely desirous that the Vicar of Christ should fly. It was thus they hoped to "put an end to the Papacy," and utterly destroy religion. The special correspondents," the compilers of telegraphic news, and all the scandal mongers that gather in Rome from every quarter of the world, who have the thorough sympathy with the Massinians, and hated Catholicity with the venom of fanatics, gave shape and form to these wishes, and authoritatively declared that the Sovereign Pontiff should go. It appeared, however, that the illustrious personage most nearly concerned was of a different opinion, and expressed a firm resolution of staying where he was, in his own city and palace, to the very last, until he was forced out by violence. So, from that time to the present, the Holy Father has remained at his post, though practically a prisoner. Yet, if he so seem as if he would at last be compelled to quit the spot so dear to him and seek a home among strangers we will not say, for surely the Sovereign pastor of the Church cannot find strangers anywhere—but among foreign sympathizers. To effect this—to exile an aged man and drive him from the land of his fathers—no artifice or trick has been spared. Every little party personality has a mean and dastardly spirit could devise has been resorted to by the Italian Government and approved of by the Italian people. To this abyss of shame and degradation has revolution dragged a nation once the proudest and most chivalrous in Christendom! Pius IX. finds ecclesiastics of all grades insulted, beaten and hunted through the streets of Rome by howling mobs; he finds his late defenders, the gallant soldiers of his little army, deliberately assassinated in open daylight and their murderers escape unwhipt of justice; he finds the monasteries and convents built for religious men and women turned into barracks and stables; he finds the colleges suppressed altogether or else turned over by Victor Emmanuel's Government. Pius IX. is a very mark less in devotion to Victor Emmanuel's Government. Pius IX. is aware that if he ventured to show himself to the gaze of the public he would be insulted and not unlikely assaulted by the dregs of the populace; he is aware that the windows of the priest-shops are filled with the vilest caricatures of himself, and with the inimitable buffoonery upon the most sacred subjects; he is aware that the images of the Redeemer and His Blessed Mother, which a pious custom placed in niches on the principal thoroughfares, are insulted in the same way that this world and its cares most not absorb all their time, are every day flung prostrated on the ground or else bedashed with filth; he is aware that the journals most widely circulated teem with blasphemy, scurrility and obscenity. It would certainly, then, be no wonder if he turned away in grief and contempt from a people apparently so utterly bereft of spirit, honor, decency and faith. There are good Catholics, moral, order-loving, God-fearing men in Italy—millions of them we might safely say—but, owing to the present extraordinary and their invincible dislike of assertion, to their culpable timidity, they leave their beautiful country to be governed and represented to the world by men who are a disgrace to humanity. We are not using the language of exaggeration by any means. We need take a file of no more than three months issues of the leading journals of Rome, Turin, Florence, Milan or Naples and ask any man, we care not his creed so long as he loved God and virtue, what opinion would he give of a people who could support such prints or favor their doctrines. We know very well what the answer would be. The cool ignoring of the difference between right and wrong, the revolting ribaldry with which things holy are assailed, the sneers at the restrictions of decency and decorum, the undisguised appeals to the passions, the abominable communisms preached, could not possibly fail to shock and wound his feelings. It is truly time for the Pope to quit Rome, for the Roman's have given a sweeping answer to him. The pure character is quite above their comprehension. Only such refined and irreproachable personages as King Victor Emmanuel can they understand. We confess we shall not be surprised to learn that his Holiness Pius IX. has quitted the Eternal City or intends to quit it at an early

TO SUBSCRIBERS.—It is extremely inconvenient to us to be again compelled to politely notify our subscribers that we are in earnest, that we desire them to pay for our paper, and that we have been for months past, and still are, very nearly all bankrupt, while others have had several washings up since the Spring opened, so that it will inconvenience some-body when we have to shut down on them. We cannot, without further delay. Separately the amount that each subscriber owes us is small, but the whole sum is an object to us. Some have small, but the whole sum is an object to us. Some have small, but the whole sum is an object to us. Some have

MY SPIRIT'S HOME.

Where is the home my spirit seeks,
Amid the world of sin and care,
Where eyes joy of mirror speaks,
And feets is lacking everywhere?
No! sorrow is its fading bowers
My wearied soul can find repose,
For serpents lurk beneath its flowers,
And thorns surround its fairest rose.

The home of earth is not for me!
Far off my spirit's dwelling lies;
The joys of faith alone can see
Its pearly gates beyond the skies;
The var of faith alone can hear
The music of its ceaseless song,
As nearer with each passing year
Its rapt chorus rolls along.

Then is the home my spirit seeks,
Above the fadeless stars on high!
Where not a note of discord breaks
The silver chain or harmony!
Where first without a shadow lies,
And joy can equal without a tear,
And Death alone—the tyrant—dies:
The home my spirit seeks is THERE.
—Catholic Herald.

GENERAL NOTES.

The Cross Gazette says that most of the German Prince's will be present at the three Emperors' meeting at Berlin.

The town of Kehl and five villages in the Grand-Duchy of Baden are now comprised within the rayon of the fortress of Strasburg.

The Avenir National says that M. Thiers, before his departure for Trouville left his will with M. Grevy, the President of the Assembly.

It is stated that the eldest daughter of Mario is residing in Scotland with a noble family. The youngest is in Florence with her parents.

Queen Isabella de Bourbon, who was to have gone to the seaside with the Prince of the Asturias, has decided upon making an excursion for a few days to Switzerland. The Queen Isabella leaves Paris for Interlaken, where she will remain for a week.

Wagner is said to intend suppressing the applauses in the famous Bayreuth Theatre with a view to render it the complete model to transfer it behind the scenes, the composer assuming that the visible working of the instrumental mechanism destroys the illusion of the music.

The Duc de Guise, who was the only remaining child of a family of eight, was to have inherited £680,000 from his mother. The property will now revert to his grandmother, the Princess of Salerno, to be by her divided amongst the Imperial family of Austria and some members of the Royal d'Orleans and Sicily families, Louis Philippe's Queen of Naples having been the sister of the late Prince of Salerno.

The monumental church erected in memory of the late Queen Louise Marie of Belgium, at Laken, was consecrated on the 6th inst., with solemnity. The King attended by the officers of his household and those of the Queen's, arrived at noon and was met at the principal door by the Archbishop of Malines, Archbishop. After the usual ceremonies had been performed the Archbishop delivered an eloquent discourse in the course of the ceremonies terminated at about 2 P.M., when his M. left the church for the palace.

The following pleasant news for wine connoisseurs is contained in a letter from Carlsruhe: "Just, as usual now at this season of hilarities are coming through our city en route for Wurtemberg, where they will undergo the process of preparing and sold to the wine dealers for coloring wines, &c. Many a wine dealer thinks, while he quaffs his red wine, that he is now that the Government from the glowing sun of Bordeaux or the Upper Rhine, where as in reality it is to be detained for it is to the pine forests of the Odenwald."

The watering-places of France have never been so much frequented as they are this year. The Casinos of the Rhine are the theatre by many of their visitors. Vichy is crowded, the esports of Normandy invaded, and never have the Pyrenees been favored by such a lot of water-drinkers. At "Eaux-Bonnes" the colony is half of French, half Spanish. The baths of l'Yeres are full; at Uriage it is difficult to find a room. All these bathers lead an easy life. A bath in the morning, a walk till 10 P. M., breakfast, a ride or drive, to admire the beauties of nature in the afternoon, a ball regularly followed by dancing from 9 P. M. till midnight.

It is stated that Livingstone's two letters to Mr. Gordon Bennett were cabin at a cost of about £3,000. To the descriptions of Stanley's personal appearance which here been given it may be added that, though quite a young man—not more than thirty—his hair is very nearly gray. He is about five feet seven, powerfully built, and has a moustache, frank, English-like face. A sore shot, an expert swimmer, a practised horseman, and a trained athlete, with a very wide and varied experience of "roughing it," he was admirably fitted for the duty he has so successfully and successfully performed.

A large part of the apartments at Versailles are now open to the public, and all the central part and the west wing may be visited. The former Queen's rooms, which were recently occupied by the Political Direction of Foreign Affairs, will shortly be added, with the Galleries des Batailles. As for the private apartments of Marie Antoinette, near the Œil de Bœuf, they can only be seen by special permission. In the celebrated chamber of Louis XIV. has been replaced a very handsome bedstead and a medallion representing the King in 1700, M. Grevy, President of the Chamber, slept in the room once occupied by Louis XV. and Louis XVI. and has their library for a study. In the right wing are also handsome rooms are used as committee rooms.

A curious invention has just been patented for coating wood with metal. An galvanic current in sufficient quantity, when passed over fine platinum wire, raises the temperature to a white heat. The inventer discovered that wood, a comparatively dry substance even when green, could be cut in the same way. By arranging the wires with handles or other means, so as to guide it readily, trees, logs, or planks may be cut as desired. There is here, therefore, a simple and easily applied force, which may be employed to fell trees, divide them into logs, and perform all the operations of the saw and the axe. The surface of the wood is slightly charred, but the black layer is very thin. The battery employed need only be of the simplest character.

Count Emanuel de Mirafiori, the natural son of King Victor Emmanuel, is shortly to be united with the Countess Blanch de Larderel. This is the great event of Florence, and, moreover the affairs relates to a charming girl not sixteen, and a fine young man of twenty-two. The family of the bride, established but recently in Italy, is very rich. The grandfather of the lady was the architect of the immense fortune of the family. It was in the important trade of borax that he gained his millions and his nobility; the Grand Duke of Tuscany, had named him Count and Gonfalonier of Leghorn. General Menabrea was the officer charged by his Majesty to demand officially from the Countess de Larderel the hand of her daughter Blanch, from the part of the Countess de Mirafiori, my wife, and on my part for the Count Emmanuel. Such are the very terms of the Royal letter. It is needless to say that after lavishing the most courtly flattery to consider the mother of the young girl declined the messenger with a favorable reply.

The journals of Vienna relate a mysterious occurrence which took place some eighteen back in the Imperial Palace, and which has not yet been cleared up. A sentry saw a female figure in a long white veil issue from the apartments of the late Archduchess Sephia. Being terrified, he ran away and informed the chamberlain, who, although disbelieving the story, caused the passages to be occupied. The next night the apparition was again seen by several persons, disappearing, however instantaneously. But on a subsequent occasion another sentry, of firmer nerves, saw both the figure advancing towards him barefooted and passage, on which the sentry cried, and the soldier pursuing and overtaking it, prostrated it by a buyonet thrust through the back. Gendarmes came up at that moment, and discovered that the pretended ghost was a handsome young woman, and first taken for a priest. He was mortally wounded. Since then the employes of the Court have maintained as a shocking secret on the event, and the soldier has been put in prison and locked up in an isolated cell.—Westminster Gazette, Aug. 17.

Does Rome Rule Mean Rome Rule?

Let not those of our Northern friends who, when the fit is on them, cry out against Home Rule as Rome Rule, lay the flattering unction to their souls that they may with impunity damping our hopes or frustrating our designs. They are at the best only a portion of the people of Ireland, and as the history of the past has established, are by no means the most influential portion. It has been their unhappy lot to stand opposed to many excellent reforms, in the advantages of which they have come largely to participate, and it is their unhappy lot still, led or driven no doubt by the less thoughtful and more bigoted of their clergy, to lift up their voices against Home Rule, the realization of which would in all probability have the effect of consolidating and extending their material interests in a way and to a degree not possible under the present uncertain and unsatisfactory order of things. Our Northern friends fought desperately against Catholic Emancipation, which their clergy led them to believe would revolutionize British Society, overthrow the British Constitution, and in all likelihood upset the British throne. Their delirium on that subject has long since passed away, and now not a wreck behind." They protested many long years against the abolition of the Corn Laws and were the chief representatives into the House of Commons to denounce the ruin that would be brought on the agricultural interests of Ireland by the withdrawal of protection to native industry. It [illegible] and extending till all sections and classes of the people will take up and decide questions of common interest on their own merits, and altogether irrespective of whether the so-called leaders of this sect or that faction are by is benefitted or injured by them. Protestants in the south and west of Ireland do not let towards their Catholic neighbors as Protestants in the North do; nor do the Catholics of the North of Ireland regard their Protestant neighbors with anything like the same friendly feeling that those in the South do. There is a substantial reason for this, and it is bound in the fact, which bigots and intolerants have not yet been brought clearly to see that Protestants being greatly in the minority in the South and West feel it to be their interest to be on good terms with their Catholic neighbors, while Protestants in the North, forming the large majority, are not predisposed to insult and smug those who religiously differ from them. When our Presbyterian friends in the kingdom the North carry out against Home Rule as Rome Rule we ask them to consider just a few facts. Belfast has a population of, say in round numbers, two Protestants to one Catholic. How many Catholics has it in the Town Council? How many of the Board of Guardians? How many on all the Public Institutions of the town? Has it ever had a Roman Catholic Parliamentary representative; a Roman Catholic Mayor; a Roman Catholic Provost? Has the head of any of its numerous public schools? Dublin has a population of, say, two Catholics to one Protestant. It has Protestants in its Town Council, in its Boards of Guardians, and in nearly all Public Institutions. It gives "a turn about" to Protestantand Catholic Mayors, and Protestant and Catholic Societies, and it has always one and sometimes more than one Protestant M. P. One fact on the subject is this: that Home Rule is worth a thousand arguments. We give this one; we undertake to prove by a rather contrast in the same manner the liberality of all the Southern and Western towns where Catholics form the overwhelming majority with those of the leading Northern towns where Protestants are only a bare majority, and we point to the recent returns of Protestant M. P.'s for four of the most Catholic constituencies in Ireland, as if possible a still more conclusive proof that Protestants have no fear, even for the free exercise of the franchise by Catholics than Catholics have from the free exercise of the franchise by Protestants. It is offeld the amour propre of the more arrogant and presumptuous of our Northern friends to say so much. We do so in neither sect nor party, however, we shall state the truth, "language is whom lies," and trusts to time to rid us of this new Northern bugbear, as it has already rid us of old ones—that of Rome Rule, of Home Rule, or is so understood by those who urge it, and who are straining every nerve and employing every legitimate influence to make it good.—The Home and Home Rule Journal, Dublin, Aug. 10.

The Church of the Law.

The occasions when we get an authentic description of what the Church of the law—the Church established in these realms—is, are rare, therefore to be valued. Such a description is given in an editorial article in the Observer apropos of the marriage of a divorced woman recently in St. George's, Hanover Square, by a clergyman of the Anglo-Catholic type, who performed the ceremony at the request of the husband that if marriage were sacred and divorce impossible as in our Church, such troubles could not occur. To pass by the cheap gross further and dogmatize (as it has a perfect right to do under a religious system where private judgment is supreme) on what the Protestant Church is. Here are some of its opinions:

"Our bishops and minor clergy should be taught a wholesome fear of insubordination and obedience. They must understand for once and for all, that the Church of England, like the Irish Episcopalian, the Welsh House, or any other chartered body, depends upon the State for existence: that the State has absolutely power to end that it has had a Roman Catholic Parliamentary representative; a Roman Catholic Mayor; a Roman Catholic Provost? Has the head of any of its numerous public schools? Dublin has a population of, say, two Catholics to one Protestant. It has Protestants in its Town Council, in its Boards of Guardians, and in nearly all Public Institutions. It gives "a turn about" to Protestantand Catholic Mayors, and Protestant and Catholic Societies, and it has always one and sometimes more than one Protestant M. P. One fact on the subject is this: that Home Rule is worth a thousand arguments. We give this one; we undertake to prove by a rather contrast in the same manner the liberality of all the Southern and Western towns where Catholics form the overwhelming majority with those of the leading Northern towns where Protestants are only a bare majority, and we point to the recent returns of Protestant M. P.'s for four of the most Catholic constituencies in Ireland, as if possible a still more conclusive proof that Protestants have no fear, even for the free exercise of the franchise by Catholics than Catholics have from the free exercise of the franchise by Protestants. It is offeld the amour propre of the more arrogant and presumptuous of our Northern friends to say so much. We do so in neither sect nor party, however, we shall state the truth, "language is whom lies," and trusts to time to rid us of this new Northern bugbear, as it has already rid us of old ones—that of Rome Rule, of Home Rule, or is so understood by those who urge it, and who are straining every nerve and employing every legitimate influence to make it good.—The Home and Home Rule Journal, Dublin, Aug. 10.

The Church of the Law.

The occasions when we get an authentic description of what the Church of the law—the Church established in these realms—is, are rare, therefore to be valued. Such a description is given in an editorial article in the Observer apropos

TELEGRAPHIC JOTTINGS.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Mr. and Mrs. Bouchenell sailed on Saturday for New York in the Scotia.

DUBLIN, Sept. 6.—Many of the Jesuits as passed from Germany will come to Ireland, where they are promised a hearty welcome.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Andrew Carrigan a well-known citizen and one of the Commissioners of Immigration, died to-day, aged 56.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The steamship Minnesota, from Liverpool for New Orleans yesterday, took out six hundred Mormon emigrants for Utah, the majority of them saints-in-law.

A World special from Geneva states that the Tribunal have made an award for losses by the Alabama, Florida and Shenandoah, and for the expenses incurred by the United States in pursuing them. The award is said to be fifteen millions.

CARLISLE (Pa.) Sept. 5.—S. M. Weakley, State Senator and editor of the Herald, was beaten nearly to death last evening by A. B. Sharp, a prominent lawyer, in a quarrel growing out of a contemptuous allusion in the Herald to a recent speech of Sharp.

MADRID, Sept. 6.—The Igualidad, in referring to the suggestions of English papers, indignantly repudiates the idea that the Spanish will part with Cuba upon any consideration.

LEWISTON, Sept. 11.—The Lewiston Journal publishes the returns from 340 towns, making more than nine-tenths of the vote of the State, which gives Perham 16,-838 majority. The remaining towns gave last year 185 Democratic majority.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—It is rumored that Nellie Grant is to be married to Davegier de Haussez, author of a work on the Institutes of the United States, and the son of the distinguished historian of parliamentary government in France. [Hauseau indignantly denies the said impudent lie].

BERLIN, Sept. 7.—There was a grand military parade to-day, at which the three Emperors were present. The eldest son of the Crown Prince, Frederick William, was born on the 27th. Andrew Johnson was one of the Order of the Black Eagle conferred on him this morning by the Czar.

The Czar has made Princess Frederick Charles and Fredrick Henry Albert, Field Marshals of the Russian Army. Today, after review, Bismarck had a long private interview with the Czar. He was afterwards closeted for two hours with Gortschakoff.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The President has issued a proclamation abolishing jail fines and imprisonment for Japan in Japanese vessels, so long as Japan observes a similar rule in relation to exports to that country from the United States.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—The following call is published this morning, signed by seventy of the most prominent of our citizens, including Henry Greenebaum, as well as Democrats. Mayor Wilson, editor of the Tribune, and Andrew Shuman, editor of the Journal:

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 11.—At the Liberal State Convention to-day, the following nominations were made: For Governor, Charles Sumner: Lieutenant-Governor, Alexander H. Bullock: Secretary of State, George H. Monroe: Treasurer, Levi Haytaken with Francis Kernan, A. Schell, Lucius Robinson, A. Beech and H. A. Nelson. In the ballot Kernan received a majority of votes, and the nomination was made unanimous.

S. S. Cox was then nominated for Congress for the State at large, and John F. Hubbard for Canal Commissioner.

The Liberal Convention then ratified the nominations of Kernan, Cox and Hubbard by acclamation, and nominated Chauncy M. Depew for Lieutenant-Governor, and E. C. Brooks for Prison Inspector. The Convention then adopted a platform embodying the principles of the Liberal party, and pledging a warm support to the State ticket, and a majority for and for Greeley and Brown equal to that given Lincoln.

After each Congressman had ratified the nominations and adopted resolutions separately, the Liberals closed their day in a body to the Democratic Convention. The two bodies then fused with great enthusiasm, and finally, with three cheers for the ticket, adjourned sine die.

Industrial Condition of the State.

We called attention last week to the figures given to the Federal Agricultural Report of the cost of fences in the various States of the Union, including California. This State is there represented as having spent $29,596,000 for her fences, and as paying $1,797,000 annually for repairs. The ordinary rate of interest in the farming districts is not less than 12 per cent, and at that figure, the annual interest on the cost of the fencing in the State, would be $3,551,760, making the entire annual cost of the fencing of California, $5,348,-760. The Report does not state the authority for the estimates, but as they are below the estimates generally made here, we do not object to them. The agricultural statistics of the Federal Census of 1870, tells us that the gross value of all the domestic animals of the State, is $35,000,000, and if we estimate the annual profit on that sum at 15 per cent., we shall have a total of $5,700,000. The fencing needed as fortification against some of these, half our live stock being in sheep, which are herded, and not fenced, is kept in town, or in stables in the country. The owners of beautiful fields, vineyards and orchards, must pay $5,348,760 every year, to enable the owners ofcertain cows, horses and pigs to make a profit of less than $5,000,000. Those figures give the condition of the fence question as nearly as we can get at it. A preparation, however, was made for the restoration of the abuse by the Fence laws of the last Legislature, and something more in the same direction may be expected at the next session.

So much as a transcontinental railroad shall reach the Pacific, by either the thirty-eighth or the thirty-fifth parallel, a branch to this city, running west of the Diablo Range, will be a necessity, and indeed the necessities of the business demands its construction, without regard to the Eastern traffic. Here is a district with an average width of fifty miles and a length of four hundred, established on the line between Sonoma and Marin, here a district with an average width of fifty miles and a length of four hundred, established on the line between Sonoma and Marin, from the Golden Gate to San Diego, containing a large part of the population and wealth of the State, possessing the most salubrious climate, sites for the most luxurious homes, and important advantages, not possessed by any other part of the world; and certainly not equalled to our continent. This district is cut up into a number of small valleys, by spurs branching out from the main mountain ridge, and containing many obstacles to railway construction. But no matter how great those obstacles may be they can be overcome by the expenditure of a energy all rail is necessary to bring the southern counties practically into this market. As twenty per cent. at least of the people of the United States die of diseases of the respiratory organs, and of these diseases caused by threats from other causes, it is safe to say that the people of San Francisco in the United States are now suffering with those diseases, and should, if they could afford it, make their homes in Southern California, the climate of which would do more to cure them than any all the remedies in Materia Medica. The American consumptives who could afford to make their homes in Southern California, number several millions.

We have heretofore spoken of the advantages of the ocean shore from Santa Barbara to San Diego for the cure of pulmonary and bronchial diseases, but perhaps a still better district can be found in the southern portions of the valleys of the Salinas and Cuyama rivers at the eastern base of the Coast Diablo ridge. The rainfall is greater there than on the southern coast, and the heat during the Summer air is much dryer, the ocean being thirty miles distant, and the trade winds being kept back by the coast range. Although the southern coast has little fog during the Summer months, with the exception of Santa Barbara, still the sea air always carries much moisture with it over the land in the day time. The winter part of the inner coast valleys ought to realize 25°, or of the ocean shore south of 34° 30', as more equable than any consumptives than the best place in the basin of the Mediterranean.

Healthy people prefer a cooler Summer climate than that of either the coast beyond Santa Barbara or the inland valleys, and they find it at numerous places between Santa Barbara and Point Conception on the oceans bore. Pascadero and Santa Cruz, the most accessible of these places, have received the attention of parties in search of pure air, and we doubt not that among many visitors after they shall be connected by rail with San Francisco. A Summer so cool, with a Winter so mild as that of Santa Barbara will be found to be a most delightful resort for those afflicted with pulmonary complaints, and we have no doubt that this many of the invalids who now spend their rich quarts leads in the district. The mine is owned and worked by a company of poor, hard-working men, and we were pleased to know they have the prospect of a nice thing that will pay them for their labors.

NEVADA.—The Nevada City Transcript of the 7th says: "The lost channel of Alder Hill, Grass Valley, has now been struck by the Hope Gravel Company, after a systematic exploration of more than four years, and the result is one of brilliant promise to the Company. The last three runs of the Hope of eight days each, ending Saturday, September 8, 1872, produced 850 ounces of gold, worth in this market $17 20 per ounce. This makes this year's yield of thousand dollars for the three clean up, that is a little more than one hundred dollars per day, and more running a tunnel into this channel. There is no doubt in the minds of experienced miners that they will succeed in their efforts, and that they will prove one of the most valuable claims in this county."

Sunday School Examination at St. Francis' Church.

On Sunday last St. Francis' Church, Valejo street, was well filled with Sunday School children, parents and friends, the occasion being a public examination of the school and presentation of prizes. A competent present were the Most Rev. Archbishop, Fathers Valentini, Gerrigs and Prendergast. The pastor, Rev. J. H. Arden, conducted the exercises as all critically examined the pupils. At each class was examined the following hymns were sung with much feeling by the children. Glorious our Lord has chosen for His song:" "To love thee, O Mary, is our daily joy;" "Hymn to St. Joseph;" "Mary, Queen, is at my side," and "Jerusalem, my happy home." The music during the pastor part of the organ and the singing was extremely creditable.

At the close of the examination—which was very satisfactory—the Archbishop presented the most meritorious pupils in each class with books, as a reward for their proficiency in their studies of the Christian Doctrine; Miss Willie, Ellen Cashin, Mary Cashin, Maggie Grosil, Mary and Sara Donovan, Mary Cosgrove, Kate Mogher, Lale Byrne, Jennie Houston, Katie Manning, Annie Gillespie, Ellen Bodkin, Louise Laule and Mary Duffy. Also the following pupils: Joseph Reed, Ambrose Watson, Owen Hevorin, Ambrose Magher, Jesse Cullen, Seymour Carty, Samuel Cashin, John Gillespie, James Cosgrove, Peter Fay, John Shiven and Charles Reynolds.

The Archbishop then delivered a very instructive address, dwelling I length on the great importance of knowing the Love of God and practicing it, and illustrating his little hearers to practice everything in the teachings of Christianity, and to adhere to the instruction of our Sunday School teachers in the precpts of the Christian religion.

The names of the teachers as Misses Elizabeth Cashin, Smith, Seamon, Rodgers, Byrne, Quigley, Delevera, Biffy, Harrigan, Watson, Sullivan, Ward, Wood and Vidella. Messrs. J. H. Ryan, H. N. Adams, A. D. Kenniff and M. J. McGrath are the male teachers. Mr. Thomas Sullivan, Secretary of the Sunday School Union, is Superintendent of St. Frank' School.

The grave of "Miles O'Reilly" (Halpine), in Cypress Hills Cemetery, lies the very picture of neglect and desertion. Noticing it devoid of stone or inscription, lit the weeds grow rank and high all over it. Of the hundreds who flattered him, and the many more who received of his bounty, not one has dropped a tear upon the grave, or a sprig of sorrow tarf above his bones kept clear of brambles.

Messrs. Early and Bowie of Sacramento, have contracted with the late lamented Most Rev. Br. Power, Coadjutor Lord Bishop of Killaloe, which is to be erected in the Pro-Cathedral, Killaloe.

MINING NEWS.

At the Horse-thief mine, near Jesus Maria, ten tons of rock crushed in the arastra lately put up yielded $423—an average of $42 per ton.

SONORA.—Reliable parties just from the mountains, six miles east of this place, report the discovery of quartz veins from four to six feet wide, rich in silver and gold.

AMADOR.—The Kennedy mine, after another run of fifteen days, cleaned up Monday a little over $9,000. This mine has become one of the most reliable paying institutions in the county.

SANTA CLARA.—The Sentinel says: Otis Ashley, who is now running a tunnel into his mine, above Fall creek near the San Lorenzo, has struck a ledged rock which assays $50 per ton—$30 in silver and $20 in copper. The main ledge is not yet struck.

The Silver State, Humboldt, Nevada, says a drift in the Arizona mine, from the old work south of the turn-tale, discloses a large body of excellent milling ore. In the new tunnel the ledge is four feet thick, and the ore is of excellent quality. There is more ore in sight in the mine at present than at any previous time during the past year.

EL DORADO.—C. H. Cummings, a cashier of the Sacramento Valley railroad, and Governor Sanford, are the owners of a mine in El Dorado county, which is now being worked, and has developed such fine ore that they have been offered $200,000 for their claim. Mr. Cummings owns twothirds and Governor Sanford one-third.

MONO.—A silver vein has been discovered eight miles south of Benton, in the slate belt on the flank of the Sierra Nevada. It contains argentite, stephenite, rich gray sulfates and sinchlend, trace of copper carbonates, etc. Two companies have been formed. One and one-half tonnors, worked at Columbus, assayed nearly $60 per ton. Many of the miners' claims are very promising. We one shown a piece of quartz a few days ago from the Belle mine which was very rich, and the ledge is said to carry this same rock when pounded fine and washed will yield a very handsome amount. Considering this rock comes from near the surface, we have no doubt that this may in time prove to be one of the most valuable rich quartz leads in the district. The mine is owned and worked by a company of poor, hard-working men, and we were pleased to know they have the prospect of a nice thing that will pay them for their labors.

NEVADA.—The Nevada City Transcript of the 7th says: "The lost channel of Alder Hill, Grass Valley, has now been struck by the Hope Gravel Company, after a systematic exploration of more than four years, and the result is one of brilliant promise to the Company. The last three runs of the Hope of eight days each, ending Saturday, September 8, 1872, produced 850 ounces of gold, worth in this market $17 20 per ounce. This makes this year's yield of thousand dollars for the three clean up, that is a little more than one hundred dollars per day, and more running a tunnel into this channel. There is no doubt in the minds of experienced miners that they will succeed in their efforts, and that they will prove one of the most valuable claims in this county."

Wholesale Market Report.

MONTHLY OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, Saturday, Sept. 14, 1872.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has been quiet, while for export only a moderate inquiry has existed. Quotations are unchanged. Extra at $7 75@8 00, and superfine, at $6@6 37½; Oregon brands—Extra at $7 75@8 00; superfine at $6 25@6 50.

WHEAT—The market has been quiet but firm, and prices have ruled steady for all grades of wheat. At the close we quote the range at $1 52½ for shipping grades to $1 60 for milling.

BARLEY—The market has ruled firm for feeding at unchanged rates. For new crop we have had sales at 80c@$1 05 per ctl., and last month's crop at $1 10@1 15. The closing range of prices is 80c@$1 05 per ctl., which is the outside figure for choice.

OATS—The receipts have been fair during the past seven days, with a fair demand. Quotable at the close at $1 75@2 per ctl. for fair to prime.

STRAW—Quotable at $7@7 25 per ton for large bale.

CORN MEAL—Sales at $1@1 25 @ 100 lbs from mill.

BEANS.—We note a fair demand, and the following are the jobbing rates: Bayo, $4; Bener and Small White, $3 75@4; Pink, $3@3 25.

POTATOES—At the close we quote the range at $1 50@1 75; Carsons, $1 12½@1 25 per 100 lbs.

ONIONS—Quotable at $1 75@2 per 100 lbs.

HIDES—We quote Salted at $12@13 per 100 lbs.

TALLOW—Quotable at $6@6 50 per 100 lbs.

WOOL—The market continues to be inactive trade, the great importance of knowing the Love of God and practicing it, and illustrating his little hearers to practice everything in the teachings of Christianity, and to adhere to the instruction of our Sunday School teachers in the precpts of the Christian religion.

The names of the teachers as Misses Elizabeth Cashin, Smith, Seamon, Rodgers, Byrne, Quigley, Delevera, Biffy, Harrigan, Watson, Sullivan, Ward, Wood and Vidella. Messrs. J. H. Ryan, H. N. Adams, A. D. Kenniff and M. J. McGrath are the male teachers. Mr. Thomas Sullivan, Secretary of the Sunday School Union, is Superintendent of St. Frank' School.

Valuable Hints.

A regular habit of body is absolutely essential to physical health and clearness of intellect. Nor is this all. Beauty of person cannot co-exist with an unnatural condition of the bowels. A free passage of the refuse matter of the system through these natural waste pipes, it is necessary to the purity of the body as the free passage of the offal of a city through its sewers is necessary to the health of its inhabitants.

Indigestion is the primary cause of most of the diseases of the discharging organs, and one of its most common results is constipation. This complaint, besides being dangerous in itself, has many disagreeable concomitants—such as an unpleasant breath, a sallow skin, contaminating blood and bile, hemorrhoids' headache, loss of manner, and general debility.

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters remove all these evils by removing their immediate cause in the digestive organs, and regulating the action of the intestines. The combination of properties in this celebrated preparation is one of its chief merits. It is not merely a stimulant or a tonic, or an anti-bilious agent, or a corrective, or a blood depurent, or a cathartic, but all these qualities entering judiciously into its make-up render it restorative. It lends activity and vigor to the bestand most exhausted stomach, relieves the most obstinate of its obstructions, and gives tone to the most debilitated liver. Dyspepsia, biliousness, liver, bowel, nerves and chronic rheumatic agonies. No other remedy possesses such a variety of hygienic virtues. It is to these characteristic virtues that it owes its prestige as a household medicine. Experience has proved that it is as harmless as it is efficacious, and hence it is as popular with the weaker sex as with the stronger.

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are sold in bottles only, and the trade-mark blown in the glass and engraved on the label in the test of genuineness. Beware of counterfeits.

LEGAL.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA.—IN JUSTICES' Court of the City and County of San Francisco, before Justice of the Peace, JOHN A. ANDREWS. E. CORNWELL, Plaintiff, vs. DAVID MOLONEY, Defendant. The people of the State of California, to DAVID MOLONEY greeting: You are hereby required to appear before me, the undersigned, one of the Justices of the Peace of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, at my office, on the 20th day of September, A. D. 1872, at 10 o'clock A. M., to answer the complaint filed herein by E. CORNWELL, Plaintiff, and to answer unto him in a civil action, and you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, or show reason, the said plaintiff will take judgment against you for said sum of $50 and costs. Given under my hand, this 28th day of August, A. D. 1872.

JAMES C. PERRIN, Jr.,
Presiding Justice of the Peace, City and County of San Francisco.

GEORGE L. WEDEKIND,
Clerk of said Court.
PETER DEMPSEY, Attorney for Plaintiff. [s12-19]

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE NINTEENTH Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the city and county of San Francisco. MARY ANN ROBERTS, Plaintiff, vs. S. ROBERTS, Defendant.

Action brought in the District Court of the Nineteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the city and county of San Francisco, and the complaint filed in said city and county of San Francisco, in the office of the County Clerk thereof.

The people of the State of California send greeting to S. ROBERTS, Defendant. You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff, in the District Court of the Nineteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the city and county of San Francisco, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this county; or within thirty days after the service hereof if served elsewhere within this district; or within forty days, or judgment by default will be taken against you according to the prayer of said complaint. The said action is brought to obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant on the ground of wilful desertion and wilful neglect of duty for the period of one year next preceding the commencement of this action, and for such other and further relief as may be meet in the premises, as will more fully appear by reference to said complaint, to which reference is hereby made. And you are notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will take judgment against you for said relief, or for such as to the Court may seem meet.

Given under my hand and seal of the District Court of the Nineteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the city and county of San Francisco, this 20th day of August, A. D. 1872, and of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two.

[L. S.] WILLIAM HARNET, Clerk.
By REES M. NEWBY, Deputy Clerk.
Dudley & Dudley, Att'y's for Plaintiff. sl2-9m

Buyers will find it to their advantage to examine our stock.

STOCK OF DRY GOODS

Which compress every variety and class of goods in our line, and at

Prices which Defy Competition

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.

No. 7 MONTGOMERY STREET.

NOTICE! NOTICE!

The Public are Respectfully advised that

THE GREAT SEMI-ANNUAL

CLEARANCE SALE

—OF—

DRY GOODS

—AT—

J. J. O'BRIEN'S

606 MARKET STREET.

IS NOW DRAWING TO A CLOSE. A large and fashionable assortment of Fancy Dry Goods Embroideries now offered had bottom prices. No one can afford a sacrifice of

50 Cents on the Dollar!

We will offer during the next week

78 pieces Heavy French striped SILKS, all new shades, at 75c per yard.

50 pieces Plain Colored SILKS, $1 50 per yard.

Our entire stock of Black SILKS reduced from 10 to 15 per cent.

10 pieces Black Satin Rhadames, 22 in. wide, at 75c per yard; reduced from $1 25.

10 pieces Black Satin Rhadames, 27 in. wide, at $1 per yard; reduced from $1 50.

15 pieces Black Satin Rhadames, 36 in. wide, at $1 25 per yard; reduced from $1 75.

15 pieces Black Satin Rhadames, 40 in. wide, at $1 50 per yard; reduced from $2 00.

15 pieces Japanese SILKS, 22 in. wide, at 50c per yard.

25 pieces Polka Dotted Japanese Poplins, 27 in. wide, at 50c per yard; reduced from 65 cents.

Our entire stock of

SPRING DRESS GOODS

Reduced in half price, consisting of several thousand yards of Poplins, 12½, 15, 20 and 25 cents per yard.

A splendid line of Black Alpacas, from 20 cents per yard upward.

A beautiful assortment of STRIPED SERGE, at 25 cents per yard.

Our Heavy Corded French Plaids, 22 cents per yard; warranted fast colors.

200 pieces White and Colored Piques, from 12½ cents per yard upward.

1,000 Yards Corded French Plaids, 22 cents per yard; warranted fast colors.

1,000 Yards Plain Linen Lawns, at 8 cents per yard.

1,000 White and Colored Marseilles Quilts, from $1 25 upward.

1,000 Dozen All-linen Napkins, $1 a dozen; worth $1 50.

75 pieces Heavy Linen Damask Doilies, 50 cents a dozen; worth $1 25.

75 pieces Heavy Scotch Table Linen for 50 cents; worth from 75 cents.

500 pieces Heavy Linen Crash, 6 cents per yard; worth 10 cents.

100 pieces 4-4 Irish Linen, 25 cents a yard; worth 37½ cents.

200 pieces Nottingham Lace, 25 cents per yard; worth 37½ cents.

60 pieces Plaid 3-band Shirting, 12 cents per yard; worth 18 cents.

1 bale all-wool White Flannel, 10 cents per yard.

200 pieces Brown and White Canton Flannel, a yard; worth 25 cents.

150 pieces Scotch Diaper, $1 a piece; reduced from $1 50.

25 pieces Boys' Cloths, 50 cents a yard; reduced from 75 cents.

All makes of Muslins and Shirtings at unprecedented prices.

Ladies, Misses and Children's Hosiery, from 10 cents per pair upward.

100 dozen Jouvin's Undressed Kid Gloves, 2 buttons, at $1 per pair; reduced from $1 50.

All makes of American Prints, in every variety of style, at 10 cents per yard; reduced from 15 cents.

A full respectfully solicited.

J. J. O'BRIEN,
606 Market street,
Between Kearny and Grant Avenue.

mylt-6m

WANTED—A LADY TEACHER FIRST-CLASS in French, English, French and Music. Address MONITOR Office in the handwriting of the applicant. sl1-4t

DRY GOODS, ETC.

KERBY, BYRNE & Co

NO. 7

Montgomery S

—HAVE—

THE BEST SELECTED STO

—OF—

DRY GOOD

—ON—

THE PACIFIC COA

AND ARE RECEIVING

NEW GOODS FROM NEW YO

DAILY.

Buyers will find it to their advantage to examine our stock.

STOCK OF DRY GOOD

Which compress every variety and class of goods in our line, and at

Prices which Defy Competit

KERBY, BYRNE & C

No. 7 MONTGOMERY STREE

SEWING MACHINES.

WM. B. HIGGINS,

NO. 310 THIRD STREET, (WEST SIDE),

Bet. Howard & Folsom, San Francisco.

WHO HAS HAD THE ADVANTAGE OF SEV eral years' experience as a Machinist in the United States, and in the city, having gone into business for himself, now offers his services to the public who may favor him with their patronage. Repairing and cleaning sewing machines on the most reasonable terms, and warranted to give satisfaction.

☞ Sewing Machines adjusted. ☜

Machines always on hand for sale or for rent by the month. Office 3½m a call

apl6 1f

WANTED—A LADY TEACHER FIRST-CLASS in French, English, French and Music. Address MONITOR Office in the handwriting of the applicant. sl1-4t

THE MONITOR!

A WEEKLY JOURNAL, DEVOTED TO

Irish and Catholic Literature AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY

LYONS & BARRY

ARRIS LYONS. JOHN T. BARRY.

DENIS LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.

OFFICE—526 JULIA STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts. (Rooms 1, 7 and 8, up-stairs.)

☞ All communications, whether relating to the paper or editorial departments, should be addressed to "LYONS & BARRY."

ONLY IRISH and CATHOLIC JOURNAL IN CALIFORNIA.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):

Served by Carriers, per week.....10c
Mailed to subscribers, per year.....$4 00
Six months.....2 25

ADVERTISING RATES:

1 square, 1 time.....$1 50 | 1 square, 3 months.....$10 00
1 " 1 month.....4 00 | 1 " 6 months.....12 00
1 " 2 months.....7 00 | 1 " 9 months.....18 00
1 " 3 months.....9 00 | 1 " 12 months.....24 00

☞ The above rates will be strictly adhered to. ☜

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

ROMAN LETTER.

ROME, August 25.

Garibaldi is once more a'Dordre du jour. The population of Nice are raising a monument to him, consisting of a bronze statue on the Piazza del Focesi facing the sea, on the spot which witnessed the first exploits of the hero—namely, his betrayal of the Sardinian frigate Costitutione on board of which he was a midshipman, to the agents of the revolution. It was in consequence of this act on the part of Garibaldi that he was obliged to leave the Sardinian service, and take up the cause of Tunis. The city of Genoa is also erecting a medal in honor of the campaign of Garibaldi in France, of which in a military point of view it is the least said the better. It is enough to remind our readers that the legion was everywhere safe in the rear, and that the only occasions on which it met justifiable contempt for its fighting power.

If Garibaldi's sword rusts in its scabbard, his pen is not idle. The Unpolitic publishes a new letter from the hero, based on the style which is happily in this case—a mixture of threats, flattery, blasphemy and bragging. The flattery is addressed to the members of the Italian committee established in Rome, and which is the nucleus of the monster meeting in the Colosseum, while the threats are addressed to the neighboring haughty nation, i. e., France. "Alas," exclaims the ex-contrabandist of Monte Video, "why is not the Italian fleet at least equal to the French navy?" thereby because the Breton foupe de mer, whose young gallant sailors are fervent Christians, and see the wonders of God when they go down to the sea in ships." The brigandage of Italy continuing more formidable proportions in Sicily, the Calabrias, and the frontiers of the Pontifical State. We will remember the state and extent of the brigandage in Italy, by the recent discussions in the Times, and Mr. Russell's dispatches, regarding the support given by the Vatican to the brigands. Such religious and harmless cruelty of such an accusation is before the Pope in a despatch, bearing on the sins of Christendom, and has before the officers for the necessities of the Church, and the consequent responsibility of complaint. The said action is brought to obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant on the ground of wilful desertion and wilful neglect of duty for the period of one year next preceding the commencement of this action, and for such other and further relief as may be meet in the premises, as will more fully appear by reference to said complaint, to which reference is hereby made. And you are notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will take judgment against you for said relief, or for such as to the Court may seem meet.

Given under my hand and seal of the District Court of the Nineteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the city and county of San Francisco, this 20th day of August, A. D. 1872, and of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two.

[L. S.] WILLIAM HARNET, Clerk.
By REES M. NEWBY, Deputy Clerk.
Dudley & Dudley, Att'y's for Plaintiff. sl1-2m

MISCELLANEOUS.

INFORMATION WANTED—OF PATRICK Smith, from Limerick. Emigrated to California eight years ago. Last heard of in Sacramento. Any one knowing his present address will confer a favor by addressing his brother, Thomas Smith, Fairfield, Solano county, Cal.

INFORMATION WANTED.—OF JOHN DANORA FLYNN, late of Dublin, Ireland. When last heard of was in Virginia City, Nevada. Was left New York in October, 1871, for San Francisco. Any information will be thankfully received by her sister Ann and her friend, Michael Farrah, at No. 100 West Fourth street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

INFORMATION WANTED—OF PATRICK Dolan, a native of Ireland, aged 25 years and 7 months. Emigrated to America from Liverpool, 1871—was in Sacramento, Cal., in the month of May last. Any one who will be kind enough to address Patrick C. Jordan, San Francisco postoffice, Washington street, will be suitably rewarded.

INFORMATION WANTED—OF JOSEPH GRIMLY, from Scarries, county Dublin, Ireland. Left Liverpool for San Francisco in 1870. Any one knowing his address will please write to the Rev. C. C. Orphan Asylum Market st., San Francisco.

SEWING MACHINES.

WM. B. HIGGINS,

NO. 310 THIRD STREET, (WEST SIDE),

Bet. Howard & Folsom, San Francisco.

WHO HAS HAD THE ADVANTAGE OF SEV eral years' experience as a Machinist in the United States, and in the city, having gone into business for himself, now offers his services to the public who may favor him with their patronage. Repairing and cleaning sewing machines on the most reasonable terms, and warranted to give satisfaction.

☞ Sewing Machines adjusted. ☜

Machines always on hand for sale or for rent by the month. Office 3½m a call

apl6 1f

Fashionable Intelligence.

Reduced prices for Dress Goods.

Reduced prices for Dress Goods.

Reduced prices for Dress Goods

said Mr. Sadlier, "and now good-bye for a moment."

As he was mounting the stairs, he met Mrs. Hennessy, whose kindly eyes and gracious state of admiration compelled the gentleman to pause and address her.

"The good lady of the house, I presume," he said.

"I am Pat Hennessy's wife, sir, and I am so glad to see you under his roof. Oh, Mr. Sadlier, that bank will be the making of us. My sister, Kate Leary, has three of her—put seven hundred pounds in it the week before last, and faith the nanny s free boy will be looking after her."

"What a beautiful house you have got," said Jemmy Sadlier, as he peered at the door and then ran round the stairs, and the drips of faded tarpaulin edged out to cover the landing. And what a noble prospect towards the Waterford mountains!"

"You may call it noble sir," exclaimed Mrs. Hennessy, as a wonderful light stole into her quiet eyes. Over that roof John O'Mahony ran in forty-eight, when I had the house filled with policemen. 'Where is he?' says they. 'Look for him,' says I, and sad look to the look, stook and barrel o' ye."

"You might have been tried for high-treason, Mrs. Hennessy."

"And what about it, sir, if I was? John was nervous them, and skidaddled over the fields and dropped into Bryan Martin's family, and stopped there till the forge. God bless Bryan. 'Will you sell me that house, Bryan?' says John. 'Would I sell myself to the divil?' says Bryan. 'Did you ever hear of such a thing, Mary, in the cold stook? And to be thin and be that,' says he, taking up his sledge, the first policeman that axes for John O'Mahony here,' says he, 'will go home with the butt end of this in his head.'"

"And this is actually the spot in which that historic escape took place?" said Mr. Sadlier. "Oh! dear lady, I did not calculate upon so happy a piece of good luck when I made up my mind to call. This shrivel spot will be for ever sacred in my memory. Sweetest, I think, is your husband's name is Patrick. How fortunately Irish, is it not—so sweet! And your husband's name is Patrick. How suggestively Irish, to be sure!"

"Well, sir, we knew what it was to get into good luck till you came to Tipperary, Mr. Sadlier. May the heavens bless your father, brother, and the whole seed, breed and generation of the Sadliers, and give this country a lift which it sorely wanted."

Mr. James Sadlier bowed his acknowledgments, and passed towards the drawing-room. To his modest entreprendre, he heard a cheer, and "Sadlier for ever!" "Hurrah, Sadlier," and Father Quaid, rising from his chair, and cordially extending his hand to the visitor, "I am exceedingly happy that this meeting can take place, and does take place. I hope it may be a good omen for the cause we own, but I can offer you a chair."

Mr. James Sadlier took the chair and was seated.

Said Father Quaid: "I am very fond of my people, and my fondness is not altogether independent of religious and of race. I respect those two living elements in the Irish c s great and noble people, which, I trust to be acknowledged, the Irish people must be."

Mr. James Sadlier inclined his head in the acknowledgment of the truism.

"Are you aware of the reverence," continued Father Quaid, "that I don't want to use any other word, for the term—

"Quite right, sir," said Mr. Sadlier. "Who would call them?"

"Certain politicians," was the reply.

"Men who would go to Mass to-day and serve the devil to-morrow? Men who would swear to him bound to protect my flock.

"Sir," said Mr. Sadlier, as he composed his face in the glass over the chiffonier, "I find my present position one to regard peculiar. Do you imagine for a moment that I would be the enfan of a banking cur constituents over to the common enemy."

"I detest theorists," said Father Quaid, "and I have a poor notion of your theorists in general. Will you vote for Mr. Sharman Crawford's Land Bill, Mr. Sadlier?"

"With all my heart."

"And support a measure of Church Disestablishment?"

"Why not? Is there any other point on which you feel troubled?"

"Except the bank, none."

"Then your mind ought to—may—be at rest. John is so fool."

"Certainly not. I admire his enterprise and prudence—he has immense prudence, hasn't he?"

"Abounded!" said the other.

"And no too much prudence!" said Father Quaid.

"But I'm not my brother's keeper," was the answer.

"Oh! it comes to that. I had the hope of a common policy among relatives."

"And I have the misfortune of being the most curiously uncomfortable. Your people will have tied up down my hand and foot to the details of a programme which everyone might feel justified in qualifying everyone might feel justified in qualifying as—high-minded, honorable to the last degree. They are prepared to run any risk, if in a fraternity of honor will confide them to something better than the law gives them at present. What are you going to do for your country?"

"Everything in my power. Everything in John's power. Why do you look upon him as the sole exception? What cause have we given you to form so grossly low an estimate of us and mine?"

"You exaggerate the force of my conception," answered the priest, "if by the way, would you have the kindness to open that door? I have a sprained hand."

Mr. Sadlier rose willingly, and admitted Father Power.

"My dear Power," he began, "you are always right, and I am right in this case. There is dear Father Quaid catechising me on the question of political principles, and it is amusing of him!—as if I were a person not to be trusted beyond the length of my nose."

"My dear sir," said Father Quaid, "I never gave you so much discretion. I only wanted to know what you meant to do for Tipperary."

"Tut, tut," put in Father Power, with his best laugh. "You don't mean to say that we shall swear a man to a certain line before we accept him?"

"Not I am willing to be sworn," observed James Sadlier. "Thrice is he armed who has justice on his side. Tis a je ne sais quoi, to be sure; but you are to the men to excuse a hasty intimacy."

A knock at the door, and young Prendergast, his eyes radiant with surprise, entered.

"I hoped to find you here, Father Power," he said. "The balcony is up in front of the hotel, and everyone is waiting to hear Mr. Sadlier.

"You will open the business by recommending him to the confidence of the county—won't you, Father Quaid?" asked Father Power.

"To be sure he will," said Prendergast. "I wish, Mr. Sadlier, I were a speecher; but I never can say two words on my legs without making a fool of myself."

"My dear Mr. Prendergast," replied Mr. Sadlier, "as your enemies could not affect that imputation, I don't see how it is possible to your best friend—I mean your-self. But surely Father Quaid will not be so perfidious as to say—to the front."

"I'm afraid my modesty will keep me back this time," observed the priest. "Go on the window whilst I say my office, and I'll pray God to direct you the best."

"The multitude is assembled—all ye bidding," said Mr. Matthews as he entered the room, and pointed to the made purpose cambric which had been hastily put up in front of the house. "You will have the goodness to make no delay, as the unseemly demeanor is impatient to hear me."

"How many people are there in the street, Mr. Matthews?" asked Father Power.

"About forty thousand."

"Forty thousand!"

"Tis a moderate estimate," said Paddy; "but the number is large enough to influence the decision of the county. Of course Father Quaid, as the eldest clergyman present, will preside."

"Not this time, Mr. Matthews."

"Not this time! Do I trust my senses? And the fate of Ireland trembling in the balance! Do you hear the cheering?"

Loud and vehement shouts were, indeed, audible in the room. The day had waxed late, and the people had fatefully tortured so that the heart part of the street was illuminated, and the reflection of the lights thrown from the windows of the hotel and some made a queer glamor in the room. Then sounded another shout, and some one drove hurriedly through the dispersing crowd, and made straight for the hotel. A path was made for the new-comer, who smiled on all sides in return for the courtesy of the people.

"Come out, and speak, sir," said Mr. Matthews.

"I wish I were somewhere else," said Father Quaid. "This is very awful."

Matthews looked tired and sulky. And while he was again preparing to appeal to Father Quaid, a hoarse demand rose up to the windows, and the popular excitement grew to fever heat. He took up his position on the balcony.

CHAPTER XXI.

The streets were thronged, and a hollow, vehement and sustained roar burst from the throats of the multitude as Mr. James Sadlier appeared on the balcony. The gentle man graciously raised his hat in response to the welcoming cry that hailed him from the depths below, and the dusky congregated streets extending right and left. Only one of the windows opposite was lit. The Conservative fraction of the town considered it decorous and dutiful to keep their blinds down, and to hide their faces in behind the same. The tranquility of their repose must have been rudely disturbed by the tempestuous bands, several of a number of people wearing green ribbons and rosettes, marched into the approach before the hotel, and the close bands of instrumentalists played "Garryowen" with unmistakable fervor, whilst the other regimental bands and its followers in playing "Kell Roos"—an air destitute of anything like political significance. Then the party cry who paid their dues to-day, and shirked Mass to-morrow, gloriously breed name Mr. James Sadlier—model Papist, model patriot, model reformer. What could not be accomplished by the Tipperary flung their hats in the air, and danced in delirious excitement, and a few lieutenants of the brass band turned out of his lodgings to address them.

Mr. Sadlier had not seen them, but he attacked the popular point—which was a rare discretest. "Why," he asked, and his voice rose in correspondence to the swing of his chest—"should Ireland be the perpetual there in the flesh of the ass of the nations? Is there a countryman well, and he was in a position to say that a finer race never existed." Here he was met with a full and flattering cheer. "He did not," he asserted, "come a mongst them for place or profit. Everyone present knew his antecedents and antecedents, and would bear him on in saying that he could disclaim the charge before he died to see a great Catholic party in Parliament—a party that would not be the tools of the Castle—because upnorious—"who would go to the stake rather than forsake a principle, and who would perish to obtain that essential to the common interest and the common safety. To be sure, in the old country men with whom he had the honor of being associated were opposed to the attacks of persons of no religious creed at all, and who—he would say it with all the consequence starring him in the face—had no religious creed to lose. He took up that fiendishly miserable rag the Nation, and studied the foul and feculent details with that abomination of journalism blisted against his colleagues and himself, he thanked God that he deserved to earn the wicked insinuations of an organ of systematic slander and barefaced sedition.

"We're all sedit ous in that sense," exclaimed a voice. "Bully is not the black devil you would paint him. And, talking devil you would paint him. And, talking devil of the devil, may I ask who are you?"

"My facetious friend," said Mr. Sadlier, "wishes to provoke me into a controversy."

"It is a piece of assurance to call me your friend," said the voice.

"Then my enemy," said the conceding James.

"Not unless I quarrel with my self-respect," was the reply. "I look upon the county as already had. I was out in '82 and carried a pike—though I never used it—when the only Sadlers we knew in Ireland were people who covered the backs of land were people who covered the backs of horses. It is your ture to cover the backs of asses; and we're the donkeys."

"Pray don't knock the gentleman down," said Mr. Sadlier.

The words were warm on the speaker's lips, when the crowd opened right and left, and a scoundrel—bottom boy was the Colonial appellation—advanced towards "the voice." The latter, nothing daunted, stood his ground, and quietly faced Mr. Sadlier's enemy. He undid his neck-tie, gave it to a friend, and waited with the considerate calmness of a man sitting down to breakfast for which he has no appetite.

Jack O'Shea, the Whig bully, strode through the crowd, knocking the people right and left about him. He was a favorite to whom Mrs. Radcliffe would have delighted—a base vagabond who had been a pervert a dozen times before—had gone to Mass—had gone to "church"—and had entailed disgrace upon all his connections. He walked up to old Tom Dwyer (the voice), and thrust his fist in his nose. Tom, who had seen the world in New York and Melbourne, and to whom the Continent was no sealed book, quietly put out his hand, and with one tremendous blow, laid O'Shea on his back. Even the hired ruffians who had come to answer Mr. Sadlier's purpose, roared in approval of the deed.

(To be continued)

MISCELLANEOUS FOREIGN NEWS.

[SPECIALLY COMPILED FROM CONTINENTAL JOURNALS.]

ASSUMPTION DAY IN ITALY.—On the 15th ult., the Holy Father said Mass in the Sistine Chapel, and afterwards in the Sala del Trono, where a solemn meeting for beatification and canonisation of Frate Carlo da Sezza, Franciscan lay-brother, was held before him. The Promotor of the S. Congregation of Rites were afterwards admitted to audience, and those concerned in the cause of the above-named beatification. In the evening the Romans kept up their old custom of illuminating their houses very generally, in the afternoon there was a tridue of thanksgiving at S. Peter's, which was instituted by a work-man who fell a few days before from the cornice of the church, and, invoking the aid of our Lady, received no sort of hurt, —a preservation which he openly speaks of as miraculously miraculous. As he is acquired some notoriety, and in accordance with which a gentleman who had pushed his spouse under the wheels of a passing train in order to insure himself money by a brief term of imprisonment. It appears that it all depended upon the success or riddance selected by the husband. Thus a Liverpool tailor, named Speight, indicted his wife, and after having tried to poison her drown his wife, has found himself amitten with the sentence of penal servitude for life. Another liverpudlian who drove himself and his wife down to the river side upon pretence of sending her to heaven, and observing a favorable opportunity, pushed her into the water. To the husband's credit be it said, he was not equal to the job of drowning her, and after having made several attempts to do so, gave it up in despair, and brought her home. Another Liverpool husband, named Speight, indicted his wife by pushing

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPT. 28.

29—Sunday—Nineteenth Sunday after Pentecost. St. Michael Archangel.
30—Monday—St. Jerome, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.
Oct.
1—Tuesday—St. Remigius, Bishop and Confessor.
2—Wednesday—The Holy Guardian Angels.
3—Thursday—Vottve of the Blessed Sacrament.
4—Friday—St. Francis of Assisi, Confessor.
5—Saturday—Vottve of the Immaculate Conception. 50 Vaches and Pompadours, Martyrs.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....SEPT. 28, 1872.

THE SUBSIDY QUESTION.

The Supervisors have persisted in their arbitrary opposition to the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad. They have also confirmed their subserviency to the great and wealthy monopoly of which Mr. Stanford is the representative. On Monday evening last, by the fixed and unalterable majority of ten against two, they decided to let the people declare whether or not they will give ten millions of dollars to the Colorado Railway and two millions and a half of dollars in aid of the Central Pacific Ravenswood Bridge project. So now it is for the citizens of San Francisco to determine whether they will give this immense sum of money away to men who are already rich enough, or keep it in their own pockets for their own purposes. We earnestly hope they will come to the latter resolution. Property of all kinds in this city is at the present moment too heavily taxed, and to demand twelve and a half millions of dollars more is putting a strain upon the citizens that they cannot bear. Even if the people could afford to donate the amount mentioned to a Railway Company, it would be the height of folly to do so in the manner approved of by the Supervisors. It is not prudent or business like to part with all that money without seeing whether we could not get more or better value for it from some other parties. There are many capitalists in the East who would not be averse to engaging in the construction of a transcontinental railway if they were properly encouraged. It is more than probable that some of them would be willing to give our city easier terms than the Directors of Company are offering. But this is a matter which no one appears to have taken any pains to investigate. According to all appearance we are in such a tremendous hurry to make Stanford and his friends a donation of twelve millions and a half of dollars that we will not pause to consider whether somebody else would not give us a better return for our liberality. Honestly speaking, there is not the slightest necessity for any subsidy at all. The construction of another line of railway from the Eastern States hither is a legitimate commercial enterprise, giving promise of more than ordinary profits, from which even the most cautious speculator need not shrink. The amount of money that would be required to build it is large, of course; yet there are associations of capitalists in America that would not find the smallest difficulty in procuring it according as it was wanted. Moreover, we are convinced that a very large proportion of the sum would be subscribed for in this State. We have seen proof of this assertion already shown in the popular support given to the Atlantic and Pacific project. Now, these things being so, is it not monstrous that the citizens should be asked to give twelve millions and a half dollars of their money to a number of rich men for graciously condescending to engage in an enterprise which is certain to make them richer still? And will not the citizens deserve to be accounted arrant simpletons if they agree to lavish their gold in this absurd and unbusiness-like manner? We trust, therefore, that the people whose property is at stake, whose dollars Stanford and the Colorado Company are angling for, will see to it that their wishes are not misrepresented. They should term out in full strength, go to the polls, and vote against both subsidies. If they are supine, stop at home, or prefer the gain of one or two hours' work, the consequence will be that a few hundred roughs, idlers and bad characters will be bribed by money and whisky to pass themselves off as the people and vote the twelve millions and a half into the pockets of the railway gentry. That is how it happened before, and that is how it will happen again unless proper precautions are taken. For this reason we ask the workingmen particularly to be for once alive to their own interests and vote against this monstrous imposition. It is their manifest duty to do so, and they ought not neglect it when the time comes. If they do they will be saddled with the payment of twelve and a half million dollars, in return for which they will get actually nothing.

THE "THREE DARK DAYS."—On Sunday next, at 3 P. M., the Rev. Father Kaiser will preach in St. Joseph's Church, Tenth street, on the "Three Dark Days," which, according to the alleged prophecy of the venerable Anna Maria Taigi, were to have come upon the world some time ago. It is now satisfactorily established that that holy nun never made such a prediction at all; still the "Three Dark Days" may be treated from another point of view and be taken to mean the three great scourges of Christian society. Father Kaiser, we know, can frame a most eloquent discourse upon this singular text. As the proceeds are to be used in aiding the magnificent free-schools—the largest, most communodious and best situated in the State, thanks to the zeal of Father Gallagher—we venture to hope that a great audience will assemble to hear Father Kaiser.

THE HEIGHT OF LIBERALITY.

It is extremely amusing to read the comments made by the Protestant and secular press upon the few cases of apostacy from the Catholic faith with which they are made happy every year. The tone of jubilation with which the "authorized version" of each abandonment of truth is given would be of itself sufficient to excite the merriment of a stoic; but there are other matters still more ludicrous which are often, somehow, passed unnoticed. One of them is the readiness to praise and applaud every one that renounces Catholicity, no matter from what cause or with what intention. Most of the alleged "converts" who figure in the public papers are notoriously unfortunate, suspicious, if not positively disreputable, antecedents; yet none of their new brethren appear to think the less of them on that account. Moreover, they do their best to prevent the crimes or scandals of which the "regenerated" have been guilty from becoming known. It is not so long ago since we had a striking example of such deliberate suppression of truth exhibited in this city. A person claiming to be a "convert" to some form of Protestantism, created a great deal of excitement and was extensively patronized, it being known all the while that this precious "brand from the burning" had been guilty of penitentiary offences. It employed very forcible pens of respectable society. But because the individual in question had forsaken the "errors of Rome," and professed, relatively, one of the so-called reformed faiths, past was completely ignored and condoned. Another remarkable feature in this general rejoicing over "conversions" is the absurd and illogical liberality the sects display towards each other on these occasions. Nobody thinks of inquiring, or, indeed, cares to know, what particular church or communion is joined by him or her who has abandoned "popery." It seems to make no difference whatever whether the Episcopalians, Methodists, Baptists, Shakers, Quakers or Mormons enjoy the honor of the "convert's" allegiance—as long as Catholicity is flung aside everything else is right. The misguided Dollinger apostatized, according to himself, merely on account of the proclamations of the dogma of Papal infallibility—that was all the fault he found with Catholicity—confession, the sacrifice of the Mass, prayers for the dead, the Host Precious, all the other distinctive doctrines and practices of the Church occasioned him no trouble at all—yet the sects forgave him all his "papistical" infelings for the sake of the single fact of his rebellion. M. Loyson, once Père Hyacinthe, also, forsook the faith of his fathers because the great Council did not decide certain matters exactly as he thought fit, and immediately he became quite a hero in the eyes of the Protestant world, and received generously the support. Charles, his son, entered the office of, and studied law with, a Mr. Key. He was tall of his age and presented long before others usually do the appearance of manhood. His hair was quite dark and his eyes a light blue, and of a bright and penetrating character.

There never has been penned a grosser libel concerning a man's personal appearance, than that which has recently been given of Mr. O'Connor by some malicious scribbler in the following language: "His countenance is decidedly Irish, and is of that medium stamp that is found between the gentry and the kern of that island. He might reasonably be taken for a successful grocer, or a thrifty dry goods merchant, or even for a second rate physician."

Now, in reply to this diluted and dingy portrait of revengeful malice, we have only to say that Mr. O'Connor's bearing and aspect is that of a highly intellectual character, and although like Mirabeau and John Philpot Curran, he has not been an Apollo, yet always and unmistakably the dignity of his mind is mirrored in his face.

Mr. O'Connor's great grandfather was the Charles O'Connor of Ballinagar, the friend and correspondent of Samuel Johnson, the revered of English literature. Mr. Heavell, in his life of Johnson, has preserved two letters addressed by Johnson to "the Chevalier O'Conor, soliciting him to persevere in his philological researches, a subject dear to the heart of that lexicographer.

The present Charles O'Connor's ancestors, for he is both by his father's and mother's side an O'Connor, have left behind them the evidence of their literary ability in clever treatises, the most of them in the Latin language, while others of them again have been distinguished as soldiers and have won high orders and decorations for their valor on the field of battle.

The present O'Connor Don, member of Parliament, is his kinsman, and it was once within the bounds of possibility, as hair presumptive, that Charles O'Connor's father would have inherited the estates of this historical family. Not improbably the O'Connor entertained this kinsman at his beautiful residence at Fort Washington on the Hudson river. Nothing, perhaps, was more suggestive in the darkest of the brief days of Irish bondage than the hale and gracefully sustained, and the other a descendant of an exiled cadet of the same family who had won for himself on the battle of his birth, although starting on his career friendless and moneyless, great wealth and an exalted fame, not inferior to that of any lawyer from the time of Lord Coke in England to Kent in America.

For such is Mr. O'Conor's proficiency in knowledge of the law in all its numerous branches, of the civil and the common law, the feudal system and the land laws of England, the real estate in England, the laws of nations and of commerce, that he could stand at any hour in Westminster Hall, and argue the most abstruse legal point that ever that has so benefited the city of Brooklyn.

Many years ago, Mr. Carrigan secured a spacious residence and grounds at Hoboken in that city, where he resided and dispensed a bounteous hospitality. It was here he constructed an extensive and elegant conservatory, and had collected during many years from the great exotic regions of flowers and exotics in New York until unfortunately destroyed by fire.

It was Mr. Carrigan who called the attention of the late Archbishop Hughes and arranged the terms of purchase of that valuable property known as St. John's College at Fordham. It was through him, too, that other desirable locations were secured for the church, convent and seminary purposes; such as the grounds where the Ladies of the Sacred Heart have their institution at Manhattanville, and the Sisters of Mercy their beautiful home at Fortieth on the Hudson River.

It was, however, in the organization and establishment at the present Irish Emigrant Savings Bank in New York, and the putting on a firm basis of the facility of safe remittance of money to Ireland, in place of the many swindling and rotten concerns that had devoured their means, and in the establishment of the present Board of Commissioners of Emigration, having the care and protection of the immigrant, that Mr. Carrigan is to be regarded with honored esteem for the invaluable and long protracted services he rendered in connection with these institutions.

They were regarded with more than ordinary jealousy from the many interests they controlled etc., and balled in attempts to wrong the umigrant; and they would early and log ago have been murdered and have perished, but for the vigilance and integrity of such men as Andrew Carrigan.

A notable instance of his sterling qualities was displayed in his appointment as the Receiver of one of the Wall street banks on the occasion of its suspension of payment.

Under Mr Carrigan's management the bank went on with its business as usual, its obligations and permanently established itself again, within the shortest time on record after suspension, as a sound and solvent bank, which it would not have been but for it if it had not been for a confidence in his integrity, and for the financial ability and economy he exercised.

Intimately connected with the building and influential men of the day, he was at all times consulted for his judicious opinions by men men as Thurlow Weed; and he served the adopted country with patriotic efficacy in the liberal contributions of his means, when those means were pressingly needed.

He has left, to cherish his memory and mourn his life, his wife and several children, among whom we have as residents more or less for some years on our coast, his sons Andrew and John, and his daughters Mrs. V. J. O'Connor and Mrs. Robert Pardow, Jr., of San Rafael. A man of sterling character and remarkable business talents, beloved by his friends and family, useful as a citizen and serviceable to his country's, he has gone to his rest with all the consolation that a life of virtue and the steady practice of Catholic piety afford.

The loss of such men is to be deeply deplored, shining lights, as they are, for initiation, and rocks to be admired for their incorruptible integrity, honorable accumulations and steady devotion to the best literature and the highest science. We always sympathize with his family and friends in the great loss they have sustained.

HANDS OFF, OF RELIGION!

The following article, from a leading Republican paper of the tirant stripe, the N. Y. Evening Post, is, with the exception of a few needless words here and there, very excellent reading about these days.

A FORBIDDEN GROUND.

There is, we suppose, no hope, that is never to be introduced into our politics, and that is the question of the religious opinions of the candidates for office. The distinction between the political and the religious spheres of duty is so clear, so broad, so marked, that there is never any occasion for confounding them; and to do so, in any case, is not only wantonly or wilfully impertinent, but falsifies, with that generation, subtlety and comprehensiveness of judgment that characterizes so much of their public work, made it a constitutional principle that Congress should pass no law respecting the establishment of religion, or forbidding the free exercise thereof. And a like spirit pervades the Constitution of nearly all the States. They but express the liberality of religious intolerance in the Old World, and they determined, so far as it depended upon them, to sever for ever in the New World from its effects. Among the most sacred rights of the individual they recognized the right to worship God according to the dictates of his conscience, and right they placed on a level with the right of free speech, free press and free association.

The same noble determination has animated their descendants, at all periods of their history, except when some "Native American" frenzy swept over the land, and a special party was organized against the Roman Catholics. It is no more than a frenzy, and, though many distinguished politicians engaged in it, and many more gave it a sympathizing glance of favor, it passed away speedily, and the instigators of it, as well as their dupes, became heartily ashamed of their temporary meanness. Now it is used as a ground of reproach against a public man that he has exhibited in that direction. Mr. Greeley, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Banks, and we do not know how many others, would be glad to be able to say that had never seen, even so much as a suspicion of that monstrous perversion of American principles. They carefully hide their complicity, though it was practically, provincials about it, and try to excuse their weakness by ascribing it to some other motive than the true one, which is, not only in its central hopes and fears, but in all its outlying dispositions and prejudices, a religious spirit. It becomes difficult, if not impossible, to compress or confine it, or to exercise it within the limits self-generated beat kindles into the rage of fanaticism, and burst every restraint of reason, manliness and charity. At this very moment we are receiving from a foreign land the dreadful reports of outrages, conflagrations and murders, growing out of religious feuds that their origin from our own country back, that have ever since ceased to smoulder in their ashes, even when apparently extinguished, were quick to inflame again, on the least provocation, or with no provocation at all.

The riot that recently stalked with blood the streets of Belfast, instigated by insane Protestants, and the riot that last year cost some fifty lives in New York, instigated by no less insane Catholics, [No, sir!] had neither of them any other instrument than the brutal grudges and hatreds. To state, ling oppressions, no present injustice, no meditated wrong, can maintain application of a wrong to be inflicted, set on those hellish passions of mutual slaughter, that have hereditary animosities that hang after hundreds of years with a lurid and malignant glare.

It, then, we desire to avoid the reoccurrence of such scenes, which are religious intolerance and suspicion. That noble spirit of justice which informs our laws must also guide our conduct and opinions. Let us not be worse than our institutions, which would be to be unworthy of them, and consign them soon to ruin. When candidates ask our votes, let us ask in return whether they are honorable men, capable of declaring their political and earnest for the commonwealth; but let us leave their religious faith to their own consciences. With that it is not ours to deal; we are incompetent in the premises; but of their intelligence, their probity, their patriotism and the rightfulness of their views of political affairs we are ably judge, and when they are commanded by these qualities we may safely leave the rest to another tribunal.

Tipperary Election Fund.

At the usual weekly meeting of the committee of this Fund, held at Irish Confederation Hall, on Monday evening the 23rd inst., the following subscriptions were handed in: Per Mr. P. M. Toner, T. H. Connelly, Lakeville, $1; S. McDonough, Lakeville, $1; total, from Lakeville, $2; per Mr. Thomas Bellew, $0 50; per L. Curran, Thomas Bellew, $0 50; total, $1; per J. J. Cunningham, $1 00; per J. Canitts, M. F. Walsh, $2 50; Richard Jamieson, $1 00; Pat. Preston, $2 0; Edward Hughes, $1 00; J. G., $1 00; J. $1 50; John Kirkpatrick, $2 00; R. Foley, $1 50; John Hughes, $1 00; total $14 50; per John Kenealy—M. J. Gavan, $2 00; total handed in, $22 50. Reported up to last week, $724 50. Grand Total, $747.

The Committee adjourned to meet again on Monday, 30th inst.

THE A. O. H. IN VIRGINIA AND GOLD HILL.—A division of the Ancient Order of Hibernians was formed in Virginia City, Nevada, last July, which already numbers 120 active members; and another in the adjoining town of Gold Hill a couple of weeks since. The officers of the Virginia City division are: Hayes, State Secretary; Patrick Tierney, Delegate.

Division No. 1, Virginia—President, Thomas Kelly; Vice President, Edward Dolan; Financial Secretary, John Cosgrove; Treasurer, J. E. Larkin.

Division No. 2, Gold Hill—President, Thomas Kelly; Vice President, Edward Dolan; Recording Secretary, John Cosgrove; Financial Secretary, James Moore; Treasurer, Denis Flynn.

HARSH TREATMENT OF A POLITICAL PRISONER.—DUBLIN, MONDAY, September 2.—Michael Davitt, one of the Fenian prisoners, who has been sentenced to fifteen years' penal servitude, complains to the Dublin papers, complains of the cruel manner in which he has been treated in prison. He has only one arm, and he says he was compelled to do the work of a full laborer on one occasion while drawing a cart with a rope over his shoulder. On another occasion he caused the bone to protrude through the skin of the amputated arm, and was then compelled to labor. He also complains of the extreme harsh medical treatment, and says that the Governor of Pentonville Prison he was immediately sent to Dartmoor.

THE POPE'S RESIDENCE.—A rumor has been set afloat in Rome to the effect that the Pope is about to take up his residence at Pau, where a chateau has been placed at his disposal by the French government. It would appear that both Germany and Italian governments are anxious that his Holiness should leave Rome and city, and so learn from the Times that Prince Bismarck has recently addressed a note to the German representative at the Quirinal, calling upon the Italian Government to put an end to the existence of the sovereignty at Rome, and urging the step as a measure of conciliation for Europe.

HANDS OFF, OF RELIGION!

The following article, from a leading Republican paper of the tirant stripe, the N. Y. Evening Post, is, with the exception of a few needless words here and there, very excellent reading about these days.

A FORBIDDEN GROUND.

There is, we suppose, no hope, that is never to be introduced into our politics, and that is the question of the religious opinions of the candidates for office. The distinction between the political and the religious spheres of duty is so clear, so broad, so marked, that there is never any occasion for confounding them; and to do so, in any case, is not only wantonly or wilfully impertinent, but falsifies, with that generation, subtlety and comprehensiveness of judgment that characterizes so much of their public work, made it a constitutional principle that Congress should pass no law respecting the establishment of religion, or forbidding the free exercise thereof. And a like spirit pervades the Constitution of nearly all the States. They but express the liberality of religious intolerance in the Old World, and they determined, so far as it depended upon them, to sever for ever in the New World from its effects. Among the most sacred rights of the individual they recognized the right to worship God according to the dictates of his conscience, and right they placed on a level with the right of free speech, free press and free association.

The same noble determination has animated their descendants, at all periods of their history, except when some "Native American" frenzy swept over the land, and a special party was organized against the Roman Catholics. It is no more than a frenzy, and, though many distinguished politicians engaged in it, and many more gave it a sympathizing glance of favor, it passed away speedily, and the instigators of it, as well as their dupes, became heartily ashamed of their temporary meanness. Now it is used as a ground of reproach against a public man that he has exhibited in that direction. Mr. Greeley, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Banks, and we do not know how many others, would be glad to be able to say that had never seen, even so much as a suspicion of that monstrous perversion of American principles. They carefully hide their complicity, though it was practically, provincials about it, and try to excuse their weakness by ascribing it to some other motive than the true one, which is, not only in its central hopes and fears, but in all its outlying dispositions and prejudices, a religious spirit. It becomes difficult, if not impossible, to compress or confine it, or to exercise it within the limits self-generated beat kindles into the rage of fanaticism, and burst every restraint of reason, manliness and charity. At this very moment we are receiving from a foreign land the dreadful reports of outrages, conflagrations and murders, growing out of religious feuds that their origin from our own country back, that have ever since ceased to smoulder in their ashes, even when apparently extinguished, were quick to inflame again, on the least provocation, or with no provocation at all.

The riot that recently stalked with blood the streets of Belfast, instigated by insane Protestants, and the riot that last year cost some fifty lives in New York, instigated by no less insane Catholics, [No, sir!] had neither of them any other instrument than the brutal grudges and hatreds. To state, ling oppressions, no present injustice, no meditated wrong, can maintain application of a wrong to be inflicted, set on those hellish passions of mutual slaughter, that have hereditary animosities that hang after hundreds of years with a lurid and malignant glare.

It, then, we desire to avoid the reoccurrence of such scenes, which are religious intolerance and suspicion. That noble spirit of justice which informs our laws must also guide our conduct and opinions. Let us not be worse than our institutions, which would be to be unworthy of them, and consign them soon to ruin. When candidates ask our votes, let us ask in return whether they are honorable men, capable of declaring their political and earnest for the commonwealth; but let us leave their religious faith to their own consciences. With that it is not ours to deal; we are incompetent in the premises; but of their intelligence, their probity, their patriotism and the rightfulness of their views of political affairs we are ably judge, and when they are commanded by these qualities we may safely leave the rest to another tribunal.

TELEGRAPHIC JOTTINGS.

Eastern.

CONNECTICUT, Sept. 22.—Hon. Gurrel Davis, United States Senator from Kentucky, died of his residence in Bath, Kentucky, of which this morning, after an illness of four weeks duration.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—A party of six hundred Mormon converts, English and Scandinavians, passed through this city last night en route for Utah. They were under the charge of a good-looking set of people, and in charge of four Elders from Salt Lake.

COLUMBUS (O.), Sept. 20.—Joseph Crilish, of California, while en route home from New York, was robbed, somewhere on the road, of a pocket book containing one hundred dollars in currency, and the same amount in notes.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—A Washington says trouble between this country and Mexico is imminent. It is said that if the Republic is being built from Washington being constituted on her border. President will suspend diplomatic relations already intimated.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Fourth Auditor Allen is now busily engaged in making out warrants to pay the Navy employés second due them for the reduction of pay under the eight-hour law. About seventeen hundred persons are entitled to this relief, under the law of May last.

Foreign.

PARIS, Sept. 24.—Minister Washburn of Admiral Alden dined with Thiers to-day.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—The examination of Marshal Bazaine, at Strasbourg, resulted in a verdict of guilty.

It is reported that an engagement has taken place at the Caldera, in which three hundred were killed and wounded.

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—The authorities have issued the transportation of 5,000 persons to Spain, and 1,500 words, signed "Napoleon."

BUDAPEST, Sept. 21.—The festival of the Holy Virgin was celebrated to-day, and Charles pardoned fifty persons convicted of crime, including a number of bandits.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 21.—Edgar, brother of Edward King Charles XV., has succeeded to the throne of Sweden and Norway. All the Ministers have taken the oath of allegiance to the new monarch.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—A meeting of the officers of the League St. Bavian, at Dublin yesterday, has led to the formation of an organization to afford material aid in restoring the temporal power of the Pope.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—Eighteen thousand Communists are yet confined. It is the intention, however, to immediately release the most innocent. Only those accused of murder, robbery, and arson are to be tried.

HAVANA, Sept. 20.—The Gazette publishes a new and stringent law, compelling Chinamen now here to again make contracts for their labor for another five years. Those who can not obtain employment will be deported.

MADRID, Sept. 24.—The removal of a public prose here, by the Swiss Government, has caused considerable excitement. It is the right of any secular power to refuse the clergy, and maintains that his action is the Pope is superior to all laws.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—A report is current that Prince Bismarck has declined to appoint as German Minister to Paris, in consequence of the unpleasantness of that mission.

It is stated, if his resignation is accepted, the Embassy to France will be offered to Count Arnim.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The Daily professes to have received from Spain the authenticity of the announcement which it makes that the Government of Prussia has recently been in communication with the Spanish Government with a view to connect the Baltic with the North Sea, and thus doubling, it says, will be denied out of the French indemnity.

Caleb Cushing, seventy-three years old, is being buried in Newburyport. It is said Caleb has written and spoken French for forty years, but he is getting pedantic in his old age. He was a warm friend of "liberty for expression" in the language of diplomacy and banning.

A private letter from a French military man of rank to a friend in New York, states that it is quite certain that the project of the court-martial upon Marshal Bazaine will find him guilty of indefinite delay, and that the Marshal will be sentenced to death.

Michael and Terrance Joyce, two bachelor brothers, who emigrated from Ireland to this country nearly half a century ago, and who have lived in New York together ever since, died last week in Harlem, only two hours apart from each other, in their eighty-first year.

The death of the Very Reverend, the Dean of Montreal, rendered vacant one of the most important livings in Canada, both in point of emolument and attractive; and as the holder of the living has the right of appointment to all the offices in connection with the parish, the selection of the successor to the late Dean is a matter in charge are most energetic, large sum ought to be realized.

THE ERNEST GUARD OF VIRGINIA numbers 60 stalwart men, and is officered by the following gentlemen: Captain, Richard Arnold; First Lieutenant, John J. Young; Second Lieutenant, Joseph Hayes. The Emmets are making arrangements for a picnic to Sandy Bowers' handsome place at Washoe Valley, within a couple of weeks.

THE new Catholic church at Livermore, Alameda county, will be dedicated by the Most Rev. Archbishop on Sunday, the 29th inst. Title to the land on which the church on the line of the railroad from San Leandro to Stockton, and is the gift to the real of the energetic pastor, Rev. Father Nugent of San Leandro.

HON. JOHN WILLIS of Gold Hill is on a visit to our city. As a member of the Nevada Legislature, Mr. Willis made an excellent record for intelligence, probity and liberality. The Catholic Female Orphan Asylum of Virginia City and other charities had reason to thank him for the noble fight he made in their behalf.

OFFICERS OF THE SARSFIELD GUARD OF DONN HILL, NEVADA.—Captain, John Cosgrove; First Lieutenant, John E. Walsh; Second Lieutenant, Luke Comiff. The company numbers 50 members.

CLERICAL CHANGES.—Rev. L. Serda from Oakland, to be assistant pastor of St. Patrick's, San José. Rev. Thos. Phelan, assistant pastor at St. Francis' Church, Telegraph street. Rev. D. Buckley, pastor at Oakland. Rev. John Valentine, Spanishtown.

J. BARRY & SON, Main street, near Dock Hall, Stockton, are the exclusive agents for the Monitor in Stockton.

MINING NEWS.

The last run of the Eagle Company gave $2,000.

The Illinois, at Moore's, paid $8,000 for their run, which ended last week.

The hydraulic claims at Moore's and Woolsey's flats are yielding splendidly this season.

Rich bank diggings have been discovered on the Klamath river, below Buckeye flat, which are paying $30 per day to the hand.

There seems to be no longer any doubt about the richness of the mines recently discovered in Santa Barbara county.

The Boston claims at Woolsey's have yielded $30,000 this season, and to this it is expected $7,000 will be added by the cleanup this week.

Rich bank diggings have been discovered on the Klamath River, below Buckeye flat, which are paying $30 per day to the hand.

The Blue Bank Company, at Woolsey's flat, is paying well, and the Oriental Company at the same place in their last run took out $6,000 at an expense of $2,000.

The vein of gold quartz recently discovered near Fort Tejon, sixty miles from Santa Barbara, is said to be very rich on the average. A mill is to be erected at once, for working it.

A correspondent of the Nevada Transcript, writing from Grizville, under date of September 16th, says that quartz mining and prospecting runs at fever heat in this district.

The Rising Star or Grizzly mine is a paying one, and the owners are working a number of men. Canon Ridge presents features to all those interested both in quartz and gravel.

TUOLUMNE COUNTY.—The Santa Maria quartz mine, situated four miles east of Mæslin's mill, and within twenty miles from Sonora, in Tuolumne county, was sold on Friday last to L. Tilson for $16,000, cash. Contracts are already let for the erection of a 10-stamp mill thereon.

CALAVERAS COUNTY.—The Chronicle of the 21st has the following: Lewis and Smith, who recently discovered a very rich lode of quartz near Mosquito Gulch, have struck a shaft sixty feet deep upon it. The last crushing yielded $40 per ton. We understand the proprietors have now about three hundred tons of ore in their dump, a large portion of which will pay fully as well as that first crushed.

The Trinity Journal says: Last Monday W. H. Nichols of Minersville sold M. F. Griffin of Weaverville 133 ounces of apparent gold dust we have seen for a long time. It was the result of a recent clean-up on Nichol's claim, on the mountains of Canon Creek, and equals the nuggets found in the days of the first excitement in this county.

NEVADA COUNTY.—A Grass Valley correspondent, under date of September 16th, says: "The Empress mine was about to close down a few days ago, when, fortunately, the miners struck a rich streak, and have taken out $10,000 in specimens in two days. The strike was made in the 700 foot level, running south toward the old Rush & Laton ground. The ledge at this point is ten feet in thickness."

The Folsom Telegraph, of the 21st, states that an extensive deposit of asbestus has been lately discovered in Granite Gulch, in this county, by Mr. Frank Bowman, of Folsom. The location of the deposit is described as being within a mile and a half of the town, and miles distant from Folsom. We have tried a practical test of it, and fire has no effect upon it whatever.

SISKIYOU COUNTY.—The Yreka Journal says: The sale to the London and Yreka Mining Company of the Yreka Creek mining property has been completed. It sells, we understand, for $200,000. Mr. Gutierrez was in this city on Saturday, and has left for Yreka to-day. The Union Bank has declined to make any further advances to the company, and will immediately place a large amount of money in circulation besides at least $200,000 additional which the company will expend in building tunnels, flumes, etc., to open claims during the coming year.

Pera's Debt to Meiggs.

Among the prominent actors in our recent disturbances appears Harry Meiggs, but in most a favorable contrast to those who endeavored to ruin the Republic and plunge the country into anarchy. The Dictator Gutierrez was in urgent want of money. No one could be found willing to advance a dollar to such a dubious cause, and Gutierrez had recourse to the treasury of Peru, a forced loan on the banks and commercial houses in Lima.

The profound consternation caused by this determination may be readily imagined. The people, once aware that an impoverished government considered itself authorized to procure funds in such a manner, would have lost all confidence in the banks and all credit and commercial transactions would be at a dead lock. Meiggs, who had long series of services to the late Peruvian Government, came forward and proposed to himself and entire satisfaction to the community. The Rev. Canon Baldwin has been entrusted to fill the vacancy.

The European monarchs are generally fond of horses and good ones too. Queen Victoria has given $50,000, the late Czar, Nicholas, $65,000, Prince William's at $65,000, Francis Joseph's at $140,000, Victor Emmanuel at $10,000, Czar Alexander's at $65,000, Leopold's of Belgium at $20,000, and the Sultan's at $300,000.

Captain P. S. Wilcox and Dr. Samuel Merritt fitted out a ship a few months ago to visit the Arctic Ocean in search of whales, the oil and bone left in vessels from that in a year ago. The ship just heard from was the Superior, commanded by Captain Williams, of Oakland. He reports that they have secured 2,500 whale oil, 16,000 pounds of ivory, and a quantity of valuable fore.

The distinguished Californians have selected the city of Boston for their future home. The Hon. George C. Gorham, now secretary of United States Senate, has built a house in Dorchester. The Hon. John Conness, United States Senator from 1863 to 1869, has purchased an estate in Milton. The Hon. T. N. Machin, Lieutenant-Governor from 1863 to 1867, has bought a residence in South Lincoln.

The Polish Countess, Maria Vera Kaminski, of Yreka, who was married in 1863, in Western Russia, recently, for the murder of her husband, was executed in the city of Irkutsk in the Polish insurrection of 1863.

The question of the closing of the Ecumenical Council has been again and urgently brought before the Pope by influential prelates of the Church. The French Cardinals have requested his Holiness to reconvoke the Council to some French city where he has no hostile influences to fear, but the Pope insists upon closing the Council at the Vatican, or leaving his successor to do so.

PERSONAL.

William Penn's house in Philadelphia is now a drinking saloon of the lowest grade.

It is published in Washington that Senator Sumner has applied for a divorce from his wife on the ground of incompatibility.

The Marquis of Bute has established a line of steamships from Cardiff, Wales, to New York, of the first vessel of the line has been launched.

Thomas Mooney has been enlightening the people of Dublin in a series of lectures on "The Structure of the Swiss and American Governments," "Irish Rights and Wrongs," "The Land, Labor and Money."

Miss Spines, of Montreal, a Catholic lady and a Canadian heiress, has just been married in England to the Marquis of Hastings, son of the Grand Chamberlain of Napoleon III., and grandson of the late Duke of Hastings, secretary of Napoleon I.

Caleb Cushing, seventy-three years old, is being buried in Newburyport. It is said Caleb has written and spoken French for forty years, but he is getting pedantic in his old age. He was a warm friend of "liberty for expression" in the language of diplomacy and banning.

A private letter from a French military man of rank to a friend in New York, states that it is quite certain that the project of the court-martial upon Marshal Bazaine will find him guilty of indefinite delay, and that the Marshal will be sentenced to death.

Michael and Terrance Joyce, two bachelor brothers, who emigrated from Ireland to this country nearly half a century ago, and who have lived in New York together ever since, died last week in Harlem, only two hours apart from each other, in their eighty-first year.

The death of the Very Reverend, the Dean of Montreal, rendered vacant one of the most important livings in Canada, both in point of emolument and attractive; and as the holder of the living has the right of appointment to all the offices in connection with the parish, the selection of the successor to the late Dean is a matter in charge are most energetic, large sum ought to be realized.

THE ERNEST GUARD OF VIRGINIA numbers 60 stalwart men, and is officered by the following gentlemen: Captain, Richard Arnold; First Lieutenant, John J. Young; Second Lieutenant, Joseph Hayes. The Emmets are making arrangements for a picnic to Sandy Bowers' handsome place at Washoe Valley, within a couple of weeks.

THE new Catholic church at Livermore, Alameda county, will be dedicated by the Most Rev. Archbishop on Sunday, the 29th inst. Title to the land on which the church on the line of the railroad from San Leandro to Stockton, and is the gift to the real of the energetic pastor, Rev. Father Nugent of San Leandro.

HON. JOHN WILLIS of Gold Hill is on a visit to our city. As a member of the Nevada Legislature, Mr. Willis made an excellent record for intelligence, probity and liberality. The Catholic Female Orphan Asylum of Virginia City and other charities had reason to thank him for the noble fight he made in their behalf.

OFFICERS OF THE SARSFIELD GUARD OF DONN HILL, NEVADA.—Captain, John Cosgrove; First Lieutenant, John E. Walsh; Second Lieutenant, Luke Comiff. The company numbers 50 members.

CLERICAL CHANGES.—Rev. L. Serda from Oakland, to be assistant pastor of St. Patrick's, San José. Rev. Thos. Phelan, assistant pastor at St. Francis' Church, Telegraph street. Rev. D. Buckley, pastor at Oakland. Rev. John Valentine, Spanishtown.

J. BARRY & SON, Main street, near Dock Hall, Stockton, are the exclusive agents for the Monitor in Stockton.

PACIFIC COAST ITEMS.

About 10,000 chairs have been made at the Amerille, Sonoma County, Factory and, keeping forty men steadily employed.

Company "H," of the Twenty-first Infantry, now stationed at Vancouver, left Portland on Saturday, from Portland to San Francisco, to which place they have been ordered.

SAN JOSE, September 23.—A young man, 20 years of age, named John Hyde, was killed this morning on the Guadalupe Road, was killed this morning in an old landmark.

Farmers in the vicinity of San Andreas are busily suffered extensively by having their hay burned. Losses are estimated at $50,000, one farmer alone, William's at $65,000, Francis Joseph's at $140,000, Victor Emmanuel at $10,000, Czar Alexander's at $65,000, Leopold's of Belgium at $20,000, and the Sultan's at $300,000.

Cotton picking has commenced in Merced and the yield is very good. The first of the Merced packages alone, Spalding Argus thinks, will be worth the market not less than thirty thousand dollars.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, September 22.—Wm. Yates, and other Directors of the Pacific Railroad, have resigned, and left to-day for Puget Sound, via San Leandro, to determine on the Pacific terminus of the road.

SAN LUIS, September 20.—The attention of the people here is occupied with the sensational reports of discoveries of silver lodes, twenty-five miles north of here on the Central Pacific Railroad.

Butterfield & Co. have over 2,000 Angora goats on their ranch fourteen miles above Hollister. They are raised principally for exportation. Ten thoroughbred Angoras, recently, brought $2,400.

LOS ANGELES, September 22.—A man named Magee was thrown by a horse last Saturday, while on the road to the city, and soon after died. He had a leg and three children in Grass Valley. There was quite a row at Calaveras Big Tree, on the other day, in which three men, the steward of the hotel, who declined himself effectually with a knife, killing his assailants quite severely.

SANTIAGO, September 14.—A. S. Oliver, a pioneer employed in taking out cement on the Bull-Head' Ranch, about one from this place, was instantly killed on morning by a cave in the bank falling on him.

PORTLAND, September 24.—A collision occurred to-day on the Oregon and California Railroad, near Roseburg, between two construction trains, by which five or six Chinamen were killed, a car smashed to pieces, and the locomotive damaged slightly.

Dr. Robinson, a passenger by the Union Pacific Railroad, reports that immense work is going on along the line to protect the track from snow. The division superintendents are confident that there will be no blockade the coming Winter.

SAN JOSE, September 22.—All the salaons and business houses, save three or four, were closed to-day, in accordance with the Sunday law. A test case will doubtless be made of these to secure a decision upon the constitutionality of the law. Considerable feeling is manifested in the matter.

SALT LAKE CITY, September 25.—Affidavits taken to-day concerning the Mountain Meadow massacre fully corroborate the testimony of Bishop Smith, and give further details, showing still more positively the guilt of the Mormon leaders. Testimony is also being obtained proving the identity of the assassins.

On Wednesday night a dastardly attempt was made to fire the town of Angels, Calaveras County. The would-be incendiary saturated a linen coal with coal-oil, wrapped it around a piece of charcoal, set it on fire, and threw the burning mass upon the roof of the building adjoining Cosgrove's Hotel. Fortunately the fire was discovered in season to extinguish the flames.

CASTLE MURRAIN.—The Gilroy Advocate says the dry murrain has appeared among the cattle at San Felipe. It first made its appearance in the herds of James Dunne. So fatal was the disease at first

SUNDAY RECREATIONS OF QUEEN ELIZABETH.

In Catholic countries, and according to Catholic usage, it is not lawful to hold courts, serve process, administer judicial oaths, or examine witnesses, on Sundays or holidays; but it was one of the refinements of cruelty in Elizabeth's reign that priests were subjected to torture on Sunday's or other great Catholic festivals. It was on a Sunday, July 30th, that the Lords of the Council wrote to the Inquisitors, Dr. Hammond, Hopton, Norton, and Beale, to instruct them how to proceed with the saintly Campion; and directing them "to deal with them by the rack" if he refused to answer the question put to him. It was on a Sunday, or on the anniversary day of St. Ignatius' death, or on the Festival of St. Peter and Vincula, that he was first led to the rack-chamber; but the function for which the Council in mockery chose a holyday was to bim a function of religion—a glorious confession which was to win his eternal crown. As he passed the threshold of the door, he crossed himself on the breast and whilst he was being stripped and bound to the rack, he invoked the names of Jesus and Mary. They racked him, but they racked in vain, although they asserted the contrary, as was their wont, to astute others; but Lord Burghley wrote to Lord Shrewsbury that he would confess nothing of moment, and Campion himself wrote to a fellow-prisoner, Proud, that he "had discovered no things of secrecy"—that is, which were not already known—"nor would he, even rack come rope." And yet whilst this heroic and innocent man thus wrote, he had declared "that reckling was more grievous than hanging, and that he had rather choose to be hanged than racked."

His appearance proved the truth of his words, when he was brought to a conference in the Chapel of the Tower; for his sickly face and mental weariness, his memory destroyed, and his force of mind almost extinguished, showed to the bystanders how he was worn with the rack. "Was it," he asked, "an answer to his challenge to rack him first, and to deprive him of books, and to set him to dispute? When life was in question, with the gallows before and the rack behind, the mind was hardly free for philosophy. He did not compare

THE CRUELTY OF THE RACK

With that of others; he only complained of the positive tortures inflicted. He never persecuted; it was folly to make distinctions when there was no difference, for the Elizabethan racks were as bad as the Marian expertness, and he had rather be hanged than racked. He told Hopton he did not complain of what he had suffered, he only deplored the sufferings of Catholics, who were daily treated in prisons like thieves and murderers." The audience was seriously moved at this, when Beale interposed, and said the racking and torture was not for religion, but for treason; whereupon Campion rose, and with indignation cried out, "If you can prove me guilty of any crime except my religion, I will willingly agree to suffer the extremest torture you can inflict." The minions of Elisabeth were silent.

On Monday, the 29th of October, 1581, directions were again given by the Council to put Campion on the rack as he was thought the blood of a few Catholics was required to reassure the Puritans, in consequence of the spread of revolt in the Catholic Duke of Anjou, with whom Elisabeth thought she was in love, as she had been with so many others. For the third time was Campion then put on the rack, and irsted more cruelly than ever; he was, in fact, so cruelly rent and torn upon the tortures that he thought they meant to make away with him in that manner. And Lord Hunsdon said that one might sooner pluck may know more of that Virgin Queen of whose greatness England is never tired of boasting;

"You must go to the place from whence you came, there to remain until ye shall be drawn through the open city of London upon hurdles to the place of execution, and there be hanged, and let down alive, and your privy parts cut off, and your entrails taken out and burnt in your sight; then your heads to be cut off, and your bodies to be divided into four parts, to be disposed of at her Majesty's pleasure. And God have mercy on your souls."

Campion then cried aloud, "We praise, thee, O God, we confess thee to be our Lord." Sherwin took up the song, "This is the day which the Lord hath made, let us exult and rejoice therein." All the other prisoners expressed their contentment and joy, some in one phrase of Scripture, some in another; whereby the multitudes in the hall were visibly astonished and affected. They were then taken back to their respective prisons, were put in irons, and otherwise hardly treated.

IN THE COUNCIL-CHAMBER

There was some indecision as to the execution of Campion. Some of the councillors considered him a man of Campion's genius, knowledge, scholarship, European reputation, gentleness of manner, and integrity of life, could not be executed without rousing the indignation of Europe without wantonly sacrificing one of the ornaments of the English name, or without disgracing the fair fame of English justice, since the trial had been public, and had convinced every body except the jury that he was innocent of treason. Lord Burghley, which by nature was the purisanical part of the council, overruled all doubts, and clinched the matter by saying that Campion and Sanders were in the same boat; and as they could not punish Sanders, they must hang Campion instead. This was an avowed principle of action during the reign of the Tudor dynasty, that if the real culprit could not be caught or could not be punished, punishment should be delivered on the first substitute that could be found. Friday, the first of December, was eventually appointed the day of execution, and Campion prepared himself for it by five days' fast from temporal and bodily refreshments, and by two days abstinence from sleep and bodily rest, bestowing these two nights in meditation and prayer. He met death calmly and observfully. In the splash and mud of a rainy December morning, he was brought forth from his cell, clad in the same gown of Irish frieze which he had worn at his trial, was bound on a hurdle which was laid to the tail of a horse, and with a smile on passing the wicket was dragged through the gutters and filth, followed by a rabble of ministers and fanatics to Tyburn, the altar on which so many martyrs shed their blood for the faith. "There was throng on Tower hill," says the writer of his life from whom these details were taken, "there was throng also through all the streets; but the throng at the place of execution at Tyburn exceeded all that anybody could remember. They had been gathering all the morning in spite of the rain and wind; and when at last the hurdles were driven up, the clouds dividedd, and the sun shone out brightly. Campion was put into the cart under the gallows, and, with his head in the halter, after the mighty murmur of so many people was somewhat stilled, lifted up his sweet voice and with a grave countenance stoutly spoke out,

THESE WORDS OF ST. PAULARE VERIFIED

"The hope that I have in my heart I speak unto my Lord God, a spectacle unto his angels, and unto you men. As to the treasons which have been laid to my charge, and for which I am come here to suffer, I desire you all to be witness with me that I am therefore altogether innocent. I am a Catholic man and a priest; in that faith I have lived, and in that faith I am ready to die. If you esteem my religion treason, then I am guilty; as for other treason, I never committed any. God be my judge. But you have now what you desire. It remaineth you to have patience, and suffer me speak a word or two for discharge of my conscience." He protested that he was guiltless and innocent of all treason and conspiracy; craving credit jio be given to his words, as to his last answer made upon his death and soul. The jury might be deceived, but his forgave all, and he desired to be forgiven. "I pray for Elizabeth, your queen and my queen, unto whom I wish a long quiet reign, with prosperity." While he was speaking these last words, the sheriff unseemly interruptions on the part of bawling ministers and officious officials, the cart was drawn away, and amid the tears and groans of the vast multitude, he meekly and gently yielded his soul to his saviour, possessing it at he died a perfect Catholic, the body which had been allowed to hang until he was dead, was cut down and quartered, and chopped to pieces, and flung into a cauldron of boiling water, according to the barbarous sentence pronounced upon him. He has left to Catholic England the precious inheritance of his glorious martyrdom, and an unstained memory; for his very enemies were obliged to confess that he had won a marvelous goodly report as well among the wise as he was not to be found either for life, lacking, or any quality that appertained to a man. He died guiltless of all treason; though, in the words of his latest biographer, "the government of Elizabeth was such that any Catholic who could destroy it had every right to make the attempt."—Catholic Times, August 31.

Communism in Germany.

In these days plain speaking is more than ever necessary, for not the least of the dangers which beset Catholics is self. Deceived by false principles, and that we are on the point of victory, but we forgot that victory over strong and determined enemies on alone be obtained by hard fighting, and often only after a long series of defeats. Taught by faith that the Church will eventually triumph over her adversaries, we swait with folded arms, for the coming of the triumph, and to begoile our hopes or soothe our weary, tired natures, we invent or interpret prophecies, and predict for ourselves all sorts of smooth things which, as yet, we have done but little to deserve. In Italy, especially, there are some Catholic politicians so sanguine as to look upon the triumph of the Church in Europe as a mere matter of time or years, and who even predict that Pius IX. will live to witness the final victory. But such delusions only show that they who cherish them fail to understand the real nature and extent of the apostacy of which Europe is guilty. That the Church will triumph in the end, no Catholic for a moment doubts, but we should very much that she will triumph but until Catholics display a far more heroic spirit than they now possess. Let us, in the name of common sense and of Christian prudence, put away all such delusions, and look at things as they are in reality.

IN TRUTH WE ARE IN AN EVIL PLIGHT.

Not only is the Pope a prisoner in the Vatican, abandoned by Europe, but the priesthood everywhere is persecuted by one Government after another, until scarcely a single State can fairly claim to be regarded as Christian. Where, then, shall we look for the approach of the predicted triumph? Not in the Parliaments and National Assemblies, for they, almost without an exception, are the open and avowed enemies of the Catholic Church. Not to the literature of the day, for it is anti-Christian in its spirit. Not in public opinion, for the public opinion of Europe is so perverted by those who have assumed its direction as to denounce the Catholic Church as the enemy of civilization. Where, then, can we look? we see signs of active and bitter hostility against that form of Christianity which alone possesses a corporate existence, and a vitality capable of resisting the progress of infidelity. The final contest, therefore, lies between the Catholic Church and infidelity. From this conflict there is no escape; in vain Catholics may seek, as they have done too much already, to avert the evil day by holding their peace, by shrinking from their public duties, and by separating religion from politics. But to remain within the walls of the sanctuary is to give up the vast field of political life to the enemy, and to concede a vantage ground from which he is enabled, as is now the case in every State in Europe, to sap the foundations of religion. How often have we not heard of the Catholic reaction which was about to set in, of the reconciliation of literary, whose glorious task it was to rescue Europe from the political tyranny, and to stay the progress of religious unbelief! At one time Napoleon III. was hailed as the leader of the Catholic revival, at another time, the Emperor of Austria; and recently, Lord Beaconsfield as the great revolutionary Empire of Germany with the mission of protecting the Catholic Church, and of restoring her to her rights. Each one these delusions have vanished, and the broad fact remains that, in spite of local gains or of partial and temporary successes achieved by the Catholic cause, the progress of the Revolution in Europe has been uniform and rapid. It is hastening to its ultimate and inevitable triumph, and Bismarck Cesarism, the military centralized State that relies by brute force, and recognizes no right but that of might, is only prepared the nature of things, be of long duration. It is a mere parenthesis, its inevitable successor is the Commune.

IN FRANCE, GERMANY, AND AUSTRIA,

In Hungary, in Italy, in Portugal, and Spain, they who govern are in reality in public life—they who make themselves heard and obeyed—do not belong to the Catholic party, they are Liberals and Revolutionaries, or they belong to the various shades of opinion, such as Socialists, Socialists; or they are crafty politicians, who make a pretense of holding no contradictory opinions; or, finally, they are the holders of the sword, who maintain order, as the Emperor Napoleon for a time maintained order in the streets of Paris, and as Prince Bismarck and King Victor Emmanuel at Rome, and King Amadeo at Madrid, and all the rest of the Revolutionary kings and princes and presidents who have to do, in order to hold down that power and open conspiracy which is surveyed, not only against the throne, but against the whole existing order of society. We all know what the Commune of Paris was capable of; its power was not equal to its will. In Germany the Socialistic Democracy is a power which is not to be trifled with those of the Commune of Paris, but with the leaders of the Democratic party, who declared at a late trial that the time of action for the Socialistic party would be when, owing to the rural population in Germany were reduced to poverty. The proletariats of the towns be at last driven to despair, and to seek revolutions; but to effect a successful conflict with the army, and to gain over the horny hands of the peasantry. The men who are at the head of this original party—

THE LEADERS OF THE INTERNATIONAL

Of which the three Emperors, about to meet at Berlin stand in such just dread, know well how the peasantry of Europe, as a rule, is the conditions of the Prussian military system, and how completely it has estranged that class from which are drawn, not only the chief supplies, but the very material of that gigantic army. It is not surprising in France, but which threatens, in the end, to ruin quite apart from the ruin of the military burdens, in which are included the conscription, that takes away from the cultivation of the soil the best workers, and has increased taxation, progress at the same rate as during the last two years, then there is but little room to doubt that the whole class of peasant proprietors will have entirely disappeared. Take, for instance, the splendid peasantry of Bavaria, of a few years ago, a strictly religious people, powerful class, cultivating their own lands, and standing as a bulwark against every revolution, they are now, as a class, disappearing, are already in a state of dissolution; in ten years' time, for want of labor applied to the barracks, and burdened with the heavy taxation imposed upon the Prussian model, they will have become the victims of semi-pauperism, in which the agricultural classes in Lombardy and the fertile districts of Germany have been reduced. Emigration, too, in a country where the population increases so rapidly, is another of the decay which threatens to throw the rural population into the arms of Socialistic Democracy. Into the arms of the rural population, as in France, offered the strongest barrier to the plans of the German Communists; but now they see in the poverty and discontent of the peasantry their strongest support. Such is the present war, a war of labor against capital, has, as well it may, an ominous sound in German ears.

THE INTERNATIONAL HAS ALREADY MADE GREAT PROGRESS

Among the populations long inflamed their minds, and incited more than one turbulent rising. The splendid army which Prince Bismarck holds in his hand may suffice to down the Communists in the large cities, as the Commune was crushed in Paris, but when the town proletariate is recruited by the almost numberless hands of brawny, armed peasants, organized, drilled, armed and inflamed by the idea of a redi'ction of the land, of a war against the only real army for which so much has been sacrificed?

Whilst the three Emperors are concerting measures to put down the International Society, and whilst Prince Bismarck, in sacrificing the Jesuits, throws a sop to the whale, the International itself, undaunted and unsuppressed, has resolved itself again into a secret society. As long as in all the present holders of political power in their warfare against the rights of legitimate and Christian monarchy, and in their conspiracy against the Church, the International was patronized and protected by the Liberals; but now that it completes its work by carrying out the designs of the Commune of Paris, and of the Socialistic Democracy of Germany, it is denounced and proscribed by those even who by its aid have obtained supreme power. What fate awaits the Catholic Church when the Democracy Socialists of Germany, the Communists of Paris, and the Red Revolutionists of Italy let loose their hordes upon Europe, we can faintly imagine from the action of the Commune at Paris. What we do know, however, is that the Church, which withstood the perquntions of the Roman Empire, will not flinch before the rage of modern atheism. Martyrdom is a sure path to victory. But the question which is of more immediate and practical consequence to us is the treatment the Catholic Church is likely to receive in that preparatory period in which we seem to be entering. This inquiry, our space warns us, we must reserve for consideration in our next number. What, however, at least humanly speaking, seems certain, is that this generation can scarcely hope to witness the triumph of the Church over her two inveterate enemies—impious Liberalism, now in possession of political power, and atheistical Communism, preparing for a life-and-death struggle with its formidable rival.—Westminster Gazette, August 31.

BANKING.

HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY

Office—Northeast corner of Montgomery and Market streets.

OFFICERS:

President.....M. D. SWEENY.
Vice-President.....C. D. O'SULLIVAN.

TRUSTEES:

M. D. SWEENY, C. D. O'SULLIVAN, JOHN SULLIVAN, JAMES PHELAN, M. J. O'CONNOR, J. DONAHOE, PETER DONAHOE.

Treasurer.....EDWARD MARTIN.
Attorney.....RICHARD TOBIN.

Remittances from the country may be sent through Wells, Fargo & Co., or any reliable banking house; but the Society will not be responsible for their safe delivery. The signature of the depositor should accompany his first deposit. A proper pass book will be issued to each depositor, to whom the dividends and interest will be credited in the pass book.

Dividends received from 15th upwards.

OFFICE HOURS—From 9 A. M. to 3 P. M.

JOS. A. DONAHOE, San Francisco. EUGENE KELLY, New York.

DONOHOE, KELLY & Co.

SAN FRANCISCO.

EUGENE KELLY & Co.

NEW YORK

BANKERS.

EXCHANGE ON

NEW YORK, LONDON, AND BANK OF IRELAND.....DUBLIN.

Payable at all the Branches,

AND IN EVERY COUNTY TOWN IN IRELAND.

SAN FRANCISCO Savings Union,

532 California st., cor. Webb.

Deposits.....$1,561,848 94
Guarantee Capital and Reserve Fund.....$10,000 00

President.....JAMES de FREMERY
Vice-President.....ALBERT MILLER

Directors.

DENIS J. OLIVER, CHARLES RAU, CHARLES BAUBLET, JAMES PACE, ALEXANDER CAMPBELL.

Cashier and Secretary.....EDWARD KELLETT.
Surveyor.....JOHN ARMITAGE.
Attorney.....HENRY C. CAMPBELL.

RECEIVES DEPOSITS AND LOANS MONEY on approved security.

Drafts on the principal cities of the world may be had on application.

Savings Deposits may be made any day, and withdrawn on any business day after ten days' notice.

Dividends declared semi-annually in January and July, and not withdrawn are added to the principal and bear interest.

Office hours from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M. Open Saturday evenings from 6½ to 8½.

HOTELS.

Removal.

THE SECOND STREET HOUSE

Has Removed to 115 Second street, Northeast corner of Minna. Furnished Rooms to let. Table supplied with the best the market affords. Call and examine.

M. O'NEIL, Proprietor.

CENTRAL HOTEL,

814 AND 816 SANSOME STREET,

Between Broadway and Pacific.....San Francisco

THIS NEW, LARGE AND COMMODIOUS House has been recently opened by the well known proprietor, M. FARRELL, late of Pioneer Hall, Sacramento, who will be happy to receive his numerous friends and the public generally. The Central is the most convenient house in the city for business men. There is a first-proof fire-escape to the House, where money and valuables will be kept at the risk of the proprietor.

The Central House Coach will be at each car, boat, and steamboat landing, to convey passengers to the House Free of Charge.

Price of board to suit the times.

Parties sending for their friends to the States, or who expect any, will please notify MICHAEL FARRELL, Central House, San Francisco, and forward them a letter from their friends with date, care, and there were much trouble.

The undersigned will be found to the comfort of the patrons of the House.

MICHAEL FARRELL, Proprietor.

RAILROAD HOUSE,

Corner of Sansome and Pacific streets, San Francisco,

IS NOW OPENED BY

P. CASSERLY,

(Late of the Fremont House, where he will be happy to receive his friends and the public in general.

The House is thoroughly fitted up on the latest plans, with Elevator, Baths and all modern improvements. The Rooms are large and airy, and can be had either single or in suits for families.

Every attention will be paid to the comfort and convenience of Boarders.

Board and Lodging per week.....$9 to $12

There is a fire-proof safe in the House, where valuables may be kept at the risk of the proprietor.

Free Coach to the House.

P. CASSERLY, Proprietor.

FRANKLIN HOTEL,

814 AND 816 PACIFIC STREET,

Between Sansome and Montgomery.....San Francisco.

HUGH CURRAN.....Proprietor.

Board, per week.....$7 50
Board and Lodging, single rooms.....$1 50
Board and Lodging, Meals, Lodging, 25 cents.

Family accommodations on reasonable rates.

Passengers and baggage conveyed to the House free; also, from the House to the boats and cars.

A city livery, and all the city papers taken.

WESTERN HOUSE.

GENERAL STAGE OFFICE,

Marysville, California.

GEORGE WAPPLE.....PROPRIETOR.

EDUCATIONAL.

CONVENT OF THE IMMACULATE HEART OF MARY

FOR THE

EDUCATION OF YOUNG LADIES.

GILROY, SANTA CLARA CO.,

Conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.

TERMS FOR BOARDERS:

Board, tuition, washing and mending, per ann.....$200
Entrance fee, to be paid but once.....10
Tuition on piano, per annum.....50
French.....10

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

TERMS FOR DAY SCHOLARS:

Primary, per month.....$2 00
Elementary and Senior, per month.....3 00
Tuition on piano.....5 00
French.....2 00

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

For Prospectus and further particulars apply to SISTER CARMEN ARMAGIA, Superior.

GROCERIES, WINES AND LIQUORS.

WILLIAM B. DOLAN,

104 Third Street.....San Francisco,

Importer and Dealer (Wholesale and Retail) in

French Wines and Brandies,

AND

Irish Whiskey,

Imported direct from Ireland.

HE HAS ALSO ON HAND A LARGE AS-sortment of California Wines of every description, which he will dispose of, in bulk or in case, for cash or approved credit.

All orders left at the store, 104 Third street, will be promptly delivered free of charge to any part of the city. 1713

JOHN FLANAGAN & CO.,

Importers and Jobbers in

Fine Brandies, Wines, Liquors, etc.,

Fire-proof Store, 413 Front street, bet. Clay & Washington; also Fireproof Cellars in Rear. Fine Brandies, Refined Gin, Port, Claret, etc., sold in quantities to suit the purchaser.

Also, dealers in native California Wines and Brandies. Feb 17

M. H. KELLY.

Kelly & Egan,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

FINE WINES AND LIQUORS

No. 604 Battery street,

Corner Clay, San Francisco.

E. Commins & Co.

(Successors to P. Riley & Co.,)

WHOLESALE LIQUOR MERCHANTS

No. 606 FRONT STREET.

THOMAS J. POWER, 102 SECOND STREET, Marysville. Only the very best brands of Wines, Liquors and Cigars on sale. A first-class Lunch set daily. 11

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.

SULLIVAN, KELLY & CO.,

Northwest corner Pine and Front Sts.,

Where they offer for sale

THE LARGEST STOCK OF

PAINTS, OILS, GLASS,

ETC., ETC., ON THE PACIFIC COAST,

AT THE LOWEST MARKET RATES.

101, 103 and 105 FRONT STREET, and 110 PINE STREET. tf

DAY SCHOOLS

FOR

Boys and Girls.

THE SISTERS OF MERCY HAVE JUST opened a commodious School Building on Stevenson street, near Fifth, where they will be glad to receive applications for admission. The course of instruction will be the same as that pursued in the Academies of the Order, and will be placed in charge of competent Teachers. Both Schools will be under the direction of the SISTER MARY B. RUSSELL, Superior of Sisters of Mercy.

San Francisco, May 27, 1871.

GEORGETOWN COLLEGE, D. C.

THE ACADEMIC YEAR BEGINS ON the first Monday of September, and ends the last week of July.

The regular course of Lectures in the Medical Department will commence on October 1st.

For further particulars address

REV. JOHN EARLY, S. J.

Jy27 30m

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

DEGREES CONFERRED

Rev. JAMES McGILL, C. M.

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, which in 1868 passed according to the law of the State, empowered to confer academical honors, rewards of merit, and diplomas, will open its Fifth Session on the First Monday in August, 1872. The course of instruction will embrace the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once.....$10 00
Board and Tuition, per month.....20 00
Washing, per quarter.....2 50
Physician's fees (unless it may be preferred to pay the bill in case of sickness), per month.....1 00
Harp.....5 00
Piano.....5 00
Use of Library.....1 00
Drawing and Painting.....5 00
French, Spanish or German Language, each.....5 00
Sewing and Fancy Needlework.....5 00

Pupils are required to be provided with bed and bedding. Terms to be paid in advance. Pupils will find it much to their advantage to be present at the opening of the school.

REV. J. J. O'KEEFE, S. J.

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE,

Robson'ille, Humboldt County.

CONDUCTED BY THE FRIENDS OF THE ORDER OF THE MOST PRECIOUS BLOOD.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN A most salubrious part of the country, and will open its session at the conference of the Feast of the Most Precious Blood, on the 1st of August. It is accessible from the rural districts in the vicinity of the county seats, and from the principal towns and steamers, via San Francisco and Humboldt Bay. Its object is to afford a solid and commercial, splendid appearances have been made for the reception of pupils.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

For board, lodging, tuition, washing and mending, including Bed and Bedding.....$300
Entrance fee, to be paid only once.....10
Vocation at College.....10

Physician's fee and Medicine.....5 00
Modern languages, Music and drawing, each.....10 00
Studies will be resumed on the 5th of August.

REV. B. JUSTIN, C. P.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL,

PETALUMA.

Day and Boarding School, conducted by the Sisters of Charity.

TERMS for Boarders, including tuition in the English branches, Plain Needlework, Bed, Bedding, Board, Washing, Use of Bath, per month.....$20 00

EXTRA CHARGES.

Music with use of Instrument.....$10 00
Drawing, Painting and Embroidery.....5 00

Only a limited number of Boarders can be received. The next session will commence on the 1st of August. Payments invariably in advance.

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,

SANTA BARBARA.

THE SIXTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUTION, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, will open on the first Monday in August.

The object of the Institution is to give a practical education to youth, and to prepare young gentlemen, at the lowest possible cost, as a starting point in life—and thereby bring the advantages of education within the reach of all.

TERMS.

Entrance Fee, to be paid but once.....$ 5 00
Board and Tuition, per month.....15 00
Short term months.....1 50
Medical Attendance and Medicines, per month.....1 00
Use of Library.....1 00
Washing, per month.....1 00

Parents will please furnish their children with bed and bedding, towels, and two suits of clothes. Payments required in advance.

REV. J. O'KEEFE, O. S. F.

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE,

Conducted by the Christian Brothers,

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Commercial, or Scientific.

Those who complete the Classical Course receive the Degree of B. A. (Bachelor of Arts); the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Institute has been established in the most convenience of those who wish to give their children a solid education, at the lowest possible rate.

While proper care is bestowed on the moral training of the pupils, their literary progress receives special attention. The daily exercises of the Class-rooms are supplemented by Lectures, Compositions and Recitations.

TERMS:

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

Board, Tuition and Washing.....$200
Bed and Bedding.....20
Physician's fee.....5
Use of Library.....2
Drawing.....10
Use of Instrument.....10

REV. BR. JUSTIN, Director.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY,

Very Rev. P. KENNEDY, Superintendent.

N. B.—One of the Rev. Fathers of the College will be in attendance every day of the week, except Wednesday, at the Academy, corner of Fifth and Howard streets, to meet parents who wish to call and confer with him in regard to the education of their children in the Academy. He will also receive pupils on their journey.

Premium Cutler.

First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1871
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1869
First Premium of Mechanics' Institute, 1868
First Premium of Mechanics' Institute in 1867
First Premium of Mechanics' Institute in 1866
First Premium of Mechanics' Institute in 1865
First Premium in New Orleans, 1870.

M. PRICE,

FOR HOME-MADE CUTLERY,

STORE: 615 KEARNY ST., bet. Pine and Bush.

FACTORY: 10 STEVENSON STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

Razors, Knives, shears, etc., made to order and warranted. Particular attention paid to lodging. Razors set and put in order. Saws filed and set. Scissors polished equal to new. Country orders promptly attended to. jy11

GENERAL NOTES.

An extensive coal bed has been discovered about two miles from Waterford.

Lesseps has arrived in Paris, on his way to Rome, where he hopes to retrieve his fortunes.

Count Paraine is preparing a reply to Count Moltke's history of the recent campaign.

The Swiss Federal Council has ratified the agreement with the contractor, M. Favre Geneva, for the construction of the St. Gothard tunnel.

Count Milan, of Servia, has just come of age and there have been great festivities in Belgrade. The dispatches say "perfect peace prevails throughout Servia."

Prelat Civilta says that Cardinal Antonelli has just consecrated a new church at Ellenzen, the site for which was given entirely by a Protestant gentleman resident in England.

Dublin the small-pox, which has already about 12,000 persons, is now almost at an end. It has lasted from July, 1871, and has caused about 1,500 deaths.

The Secretary of State for the Colonies has approved of the following device for a flag of South Australia: The Union Jack, with a star, intended to represent the Southern Cross, emblazoned in the centre, and surrounded by a wreath.

The Napoleon has sold his house, 109 Piccadilly, and has left London for Paris. It is said that he is to reside in Italy. Prince Emmanuel has given a palazzo as one of the members of the Royal Family of Italy.

The Hotel de Ville of Paris does not speedily from its ruins, it will not be for want of money, as the sum of 2,000,000 francs have already inscribed their claims to take part in the competition for the construction of the new building.

It is curious fact, one well worth knowing, that the death rate of Europe is nearly double that of the United States, and is nearly one out of every forty-three persons, while there it is only one out of every eighty-one.

The paper that undertook to report the speeches and addresses at the Ecumenical Council in Rome, and to publish for some days boldly and successfully in the enterprise, at last took fright at the word "Dinitrobrombenzene."

Members of Belgian and Dutch peasants in the modern Panorama, on their return home, after assisting in the harvest in the fields of France. They will be at the Crystal Palace, England, shortly, with a full complement of the many that will leave their homes for a harvest in the land that hitherto has given employment to so many of their countrymen.

The population has been brought out by the name of fulminaine, which is the name of a mixture of nitro-glycerine and silicous earth, and which is said to be of such a nature the composition of which is kept secret, which is dissipated as gas on the French Geographical Society, after having received information about the discovery, is now having a gold medal struck for the discoverer. The medal is to be presented to the Emperor Napoleon on his departure from Paris as a souvenir of his visit.

FAMILY SETTLEMENT.—The Norfolk (Va.) Virginian says that Cardinal Antonelli has just consecrated a new church at Ellenzen, the site for which was given entirely by a Protestant gentleman resident in England.

Public

Industrial Condition of the State.

The prospects for the next farming year—to begin on the 1st of October, when agriculturs are busy and contracts for farm labor, to continue for twelve months are made—are fair throughout the Pacific Slope. In the State more depends on the rainfall than in Nevada or Arizona, where although the drought is greater, the tillage is so limited that a severe drought would cause less loss than a light one in California. We anticipate no less than the average rainfall in four years out of five at least, and the presumptions to be formed of any one season in advance, are always favorably by four to one. Attempts have been made to learn the character of our approaching wet season from the Summer rains of Northwestern Mexico, the snows in the higher mountains of the Pacific Slope, the rising of the springs, the forms of vegetable growth, or the conduct of wild animals in the Fall; but no trustworthy basis for calculation has yet been found, and all the deductions from such premises are useless, if not pernicious.

Presuming that the season will be favorable, we say that the prospects of the agriculture of our Slope for the next year are encouraging. The area of irrigated plain and reclaimed tule will be considerably increased, and will help to break up the present subjection of our farmers to the necessity of devoting themselves almost exclusively to wheat. Tulare Valley having been made accessible by rail, will no doubt attract many settlers, and the peculiar character of its soil, lying, as much of it does, in inland deltas, may develop peculiar forms of industry. The production of wheat there for exportation would not pay the cost of delivering at sea port being too great. The Federal Agricultural Report for 1871 recommends as suitable for cultivation in the warmer parts of the United States, Turkey rhubarb, supposed to be the species known to botanists as rheum palmatum, ginseng (aralia quinquefolia), liquorice (glycyrrhiza glabra) and jute. The liquorice roots are not fit for digging until the third year, and are then found from three inches down to a depth of three feet. A moist, sandy loam is the best for it, and it would probably thrive in the valleys of the Southern Coast. Jute has been tried in Louisiana, and has borne and thrive, and it produces what is nearly as much fibre per acre as cotton, it might be tried here. The stalk grows in five months to be eight or even twelve feet high,and after cutting they are laid for a week in water, when the fibrous bark is ready to fall off from the unclean wood. The annual export of jute from India now amounts to 250,000 tons in weight at $25,000,000 in value.

The yield of this State in precious metals is decreasing nearly four millions. Numerous claims that have been worked by shinning and hydraulic process are exhausted every year, and very few are opened. The productive auriferous quartz mines are not increasing in number and importance, perhaps because many of the most intelligent and enterprising miners and mining engineers find a larger profit in the Nevada silver mines, which more than compensate by their rising importance for the decline in the yield in California. At present, the Ely District is the favorite of both miners and speculators, and the wonderful productiveness of a few mines, and the richness of the ores found in a number of others, contribute with the rapid increase of the yield for the last two years, to excuse if not fully justify the expectation, that Pioche will in 1873, export more silver than Virginia City.—Alta, September 23.

The Old Trade Again—An Atrocious Calumny.

To bludgeon to death and shoot down their unoffending Catholic fellow-citizens, and dye the streets of Belfast red with their blood, seems not to have been enough to satisfy the cravings of the Orangemen. They must, alone, morally assassinate them; and so the Dublin Express, the trusty organ of Orangeism and intolerance, true to itself, and in the manner characteristic of its antecedents, unable to fasten to the Catholics the charge of originating the late deportable riots that have rent the very heart of every true lover of Ireland, united through the instrumentality in the last week's latest issue that, on Friday night, a rumor was prevalent in Drogheda that the Catholics of that town were to "rise," and, on the eve of the tercentenary of St. Bartholomew, their blue-tigers, and Protestant neighbors, sparing neither age or sex. That, in consequence of the rumor, extraordinary precautions were taken by the authorities there—the military being confined to barracks ready to act upon at a moment's notice—the town patrolled by bodies of the Royal Irish—and desperadoes hurriedly forwarded to the north for additional reinforcements, &c. We need hardly assure our readers, at home and abroad, that the only foundation for this atrocious charge against our countrymen and co-religionists was in the benighted brain and distempered imagination of the cowardly scoundrel who invented it for his own vile party purposes, and who, no doubt, could be effect his purpose in the dark and without fear of detection, would at once send the bullet or knife of the assassin through the hearts of his Catholic countrymen, as his infamous and abominable charge against their characters and manhood through the columns of the press. The gallant men of Louth neither desire or seek any such unchristian retaliation; and whilst the patriotic Catholics of Ireland Drogheda—as firm and patriotic now as they ever were in the past to trials unflinchingly borne, hardships undergone, and sacrifices made by their heroic forefathers, in the defence of faith and fatherland, as the bloodstained annals of Irish history clearly show, they can well afford to at once pity and scorn the miserable wretch who, in the columns of the Dublin Express, was the first that ever dared to lay at their charge the crime of wholesale assassination.—Catholic Times, August 9.

BRIEF CITY ITEMS.

On motion of the Prosecuting Attorney, the case of M. J. Kelly, charged with conspiracy to murder B. J. Shay, was dismissed in the Police Court, it being stated that the testimony was insufficient to convict Kelly.

Messrs. Holladay & Bronham have sold all their steamers, their good will, right and title in the Northern Pacific Transporting Company to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. The sales include the steamers Californian, (side-wheel and propeller) Oriziba, Senator and Pacific. The steamers touching at that port are the Oregon, Santa Barbara and Anaheim, and the Mexican ports of Guaymas and Mazatlan. The first steamer to run under the new arrangements will be the Oriziba, on Monday, for San Diego, at Santa Barbara and Anaheim. After that all the steamers for the southern coast will leave from the Pacific Mail Company's wharf.

This hair thickener, baldness razor, and gray hair made to return to its youthful color by the use of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer.

Germany.

Our private information, derived from good sources, satisfies us that the main object of the forthcoming Imperial Congress at Berlin is the junction of the eagles, black and many-headed, against the anticipated resuscitation of French power, and the application of the latter to the natural purpose of revenge, and the legitimate purpose of recovering those provinces which Bismarck was so unwise as to sever from France. The worst deeds done by the Germans against the French during the war might, and in course of time would, be forgotten, and the monstrous war fine by which it was hoped, believed, and intended, that the French should be put hors de combat for at least twenty years, would cease to be held in bitter remembrance; but the severance of Lorraine and Alsace are permanent refreshers in the French memory of the sufferings and humiliation they have been forced to endure, and will, sooner or later, bring the French and Germans once into violent collision. Bismarck knows this, and hence his anxiety to reconcile Germany with Austria, and Austria with Russia. The Robber-King will not be present at the Imperial Congress, but he is ready, as Bismarck is well aware, to enter at any moment into the alliance against France, and his price is to be the re-annexation of Savoy to Piedmont when the Holy Alliance shall have effected its purpose. The policy would be masterly, if only circumstance favored its accomplishment. But, "there's the rub." Unless the conspirators achieve their purpose very speedily, circumstances are more likely to play against them. The Czar is a bad life, and with him goes all that unites Russia to Prussia. The Heir-Apparent and all that is influential in Russia are thoroughly anti-Germanic, and at any moment the occasion may arise for giving effect to the Muscovite feeling in favor of an alliance with France in the interest of the two nations. In such a state of circumstances there is not, we presume, a dotard in Germany so silly as to suppose that the Emperor could safely calculate upon the support of Austria in his difficulties. However the Austrians may dissemble and cook their real feelings, they do not forget or forgive Sadowa, and they do not, and will not, forget or forgive their contemptuous extrusion from Germany by Prussia. They can have not interest in upholding the ascendancy of Prussia—an ascendancy acquired by the foulest infraction of treaty stipulations and obligations—and they will, without a doubt, side with the strongest—i. e., France and Russia—especially as by so doing they will recover position and settle revenge. Bismarck and his master has shown how easily treaties may be broken when there are the will and the way. They broke without hesitation or compunction the Treaty of Vienna, and with supreme contempt for even the semblance of honor, they violated the treaty made at Gastein by the King of Prussia with the Austrian Emperor, by which the high contracting parties bound themselves to respect the rights of Denmark over one, at least, of the Elbe Duchies. The Seven Days' War, which lost Austria her European rank and her German ascendancy, was waged by Prussia against Austria solely because Austria insisted upon the fulfilment of the Gastein Convention. With such examples of Prussian faithfulness and disregard of treaties before the world, is it reasonable to suppose that the Austrians will stand unconditionally upon an understanding come to with Prussia, in favor of Prussia, should the moment arrive when Prussia is called to defend her predominance in Germany against two powerful antagonists ? That Prussia and the German Empire—in necessary and apprehensive of an early conflict with France, is evidenced by the heavy earthworks she is raising at Metz, and still more by the enlargement of the great fortress of Mainz, which the Mainzers were assured would be dismantled. They say that the Emperor gave them a promise to this effect. If he said so, he is respecting it as he respected the Treaty of Vienna, the Gastein Convention, &c., on both sides of the Rhine—at Mainz and Castein—they are increasing the strength of the great fortress on the one, and the fortified red and white paint upon the lamp-posts on the other. But where a Prussian soldier is as great a rarity as at Portsdown hill or Dover. The gentleman in short, light blue tights, dandy, blue tights, and jäegerist boots may be met with at Weisbaden or Homburg, or some other German bungling place, but at Mayence, and surrounded by the black trousers and long blue frocks with the plain red facings, which attest the presence of the dominant Prussian.—Weekly Reynster, August 31.

Rome Under Victor Emmanuel.

EDITOR CORK EXAMINER:—1. Rome in 1872 is inundated with soldiers and officers lounging about parading themselves and their uniforms.

2. There is forced enlistment, a conscription from which does not even spare those in Holy Orders.

3. Terrible dissension among the inhabitants of the same families, caused by the unjust usurpation of the Pope's sovereignty.

4. Great distress, especially amongst employés of the Pontifical Government, among artists, through the necessary absence of strangers from Christmas, and among the members of various professions, consequent upon the break of families, the poor misery and starvation to allegiance to the usurping government.

5. Taxation enormous—e. g., a small barrell of wine, before taxed at one franc, now is taxed at five francs, a hundred property of £500, which in England would pay £20 income tax, here pays £81.

6. Infidel teachers appointed as professors in the University and in the public schools.

7. Heresy and dissent allowed in their chapels and meeting-houses.

8. The marriage contract protected and privileged only as a civil contract.

9. Ecclesiastical interests no longer protected by special tribunals.

10. Charitable endowments taken from the ecclesiastical and subjected to secular administration—the intentions of pious founders ignored, and religious direction in most instances removed from hospitals, orphanages, prisons and asylums.

11. The Quirinal Palace, the Pope forcibly seized, and made the dwelling-place of Prince Humbert and his wife.

12. The dwellings, gardens and landed property of religious seized and expropriated in the most arbitrary manner, without any adequate compensation.

13. Eighty-six religious houses occupied wholly or in part as barracks, police stations, or municipal schools.

14. Religious silence in the occupied convents disturbed by trumpet calls, and the almost ceaseless shouting or singing of the soldiers. The grounds, gardens or courts of the religious overlooked by soldiers or police officials.

15. Public works carried on on Sundays and Holydays of Obligation without any necessity. Such as leveling earth, digging out ancient ruins, plaster and stone work and street paving.

16. Plays, indecent or grossly insulting to Church dignitaries and to the Sovereign Pontiff, allowed in the theatres.

17. Insulting mimicries of the Holy Father and other dignitaries printed and circulated.

18. Blasphemous and obscene pictures and books exposed for sale.

19. With the single exception of the Standard, a Catholic humoristic daily paper, impious and scandalous journals are the only ones hawked about the streets and placed in the cafés.

20. Sacrilegious robberies in churches, and insults to religious and priests, of frequent occurrence.

21. The Madonnas hung with lamps and votive offerings at street corners and on the walls of houses are frequently pelted with mud and stones by impious roughs with impunity.

22. Roughs from the libretto and elsewhere are allowed at times to parade the streets, and to mob the principal ecclesiastical institutions with cries of death to the Pope, Death to the Priests, &c., and with expressions against Christ and the Blessed Virgin too blasphemous to record.

23. Pope Pius IX cannot therefore leave the Vatican, and the Cardinals do not appear in the streets of Rome.

The Holy Father cannot visit the great sanctuaries of the city on the recurrence of their annual Festivals; and the Pontifical celebrations in St. Peter's and the great Basilicas are no longer continued.

I remain, Sir, yours faithfully,

AN EYE-WITNESS OF ROME.

August 5, 1872.

P.S.—Things are looking worse in Rome. More of the Gens house within a week or two will be exterminated, and there is little doubt but that the Piedmontese invaders intend as soon as they can to turn the Religious out of their houses and homes. You remember the beautiful convent of St. Martino on the heights above Naples.

Well, it is now a stable for the horses of the Kingdom or on the Continent. Many bridewells throughout the country are, I suppose, occupied by the Religious, and such a confession as to be unfit for the safe keeping of prisoners, or the maintenance of regularity or discipline. The Inspector also point out that in some of the prisons the cost of maintaining the soldier is as high as £50 a year. They attribute this to the existence of small prisons, where the officers outnumber the convicts, and strongly recommend that prisoners under sentence for long terms should be sent (as in Scotland) to a central depot under Government supervision.—Dublin Telegraph.

Crime in Ireland.

The recently issued report of the Inspectors General of Irish Prisons will be turned to with great interest, giving, as it does, an accurate idea of the present condition and statistics of Irish criminals. The first fact we gather from the report is a cheering one—namely, that comparing the returns for the last two years, we find a decrease (exclusive of debtors) of nearly 3½ per cent. in the number of committals, and of 3 per cent. in that of individuals committed to the several county and borough jails in 1871. The Inspectors also furnish some interesting figures which bear on the great liquor discussion now going on on all sides. The total of commitments for drunkenness in 1871 had largely increased amongst the female sex numbering 846 more than in 1870, while commitments of males show a decrease of 200, and they draw special attention to the progressive increase in the number of commitments for this vice since 1867, when they numbered 6,646, while in 1869 they amounted to 7,934, in 1869 to 7,510, and in 1870 they rose to 8,963, being 2,310 in excess of 1867, while in 1871 there was a further increase of 446 as compared with the previous year. These returns are only of persons committed to county and borough jails, but in addition we find that in 1867 7,524 persons were committed to bridewell for drunkenness, and in 1870 7,606, showing an increase of 82, on both sides of the Rhine—at Mainz and Castein—they are increasing the strength of the great fortress on the one, and the fortified red and white paint upon the lamp-posts on the other. But where a Prussian soldier is as great a rarity as at Portsdown hill or Dover. The gentleman in short, light blue tights, dandy, blue tights, and jäegerist boots may be met with at Weisbaden or Homburg, or some other German bungling place, but at Mayence, and surrounded by the black trousers and long blue frocks with the plain red facings, which attest the presence of the dominant Prussian.—Weekly Reynster, August 31.

Subscriptions Received.

Gold Hill—James Ferry.....$4 00
Judge A. A. Thomas.....2 25
Jno. Fitzgerald.....2 00
Jno. Sullivan.....2 00
Wm. Masterson.....2 25
G. M. Gribbon.....2 25
Dennis Leary.....2 25
John C. Welch.....2 00
Patrick Reardon.....2 00
John Wade.....2 25
Bernard Doyle.....2 25
J. F. Larkin.....2 25
Daniel Cassidy.....2 25
Daniel Cheslik.....2 00
Thos. J. Smith.....2 00
Wm. Bigley.....2 00
Rev. Father Haupts.....4 00
Michael Flea.....2 00
R. Hartigan.....2 00
Michael Fitzpatrick.....2 00
John Downey.....2 00
Rev. Father Michael McCloskey.....2 00
Mary Flaherty—Mathew McMahan.....2 00
R. F. Lee.....2 00
Wm. Lawton.....2 00
J. F. Foulks.....2 00
Edward Orr.....2 00
John K. Lovejoy.....2 00
Tracks—Owen Moore.....2 00
Alex. Cassidy.....2 00
Rev. Father Maher.....2 00
Carson City—Thos. Roche.....2 00
Jno. Dwyer.....2 00
Owen Brosnan.....2 00
A. Lepori.....2 00
John Peters.....2 00
D. J. Sullivan.....2 00
Jno. Sullivan.....2 00
San Pablo—Edward Fenson.....10 00
Jno. Hayes.....2 00
Mrs. D. O'Brien.....2 00
Vallejo—Jno. Kelly.....2 00
San Leandro—Michael Donovan.....2 00
Santa Cruz—Rev. Father Patrick Conlay.....2 00
Sonoma—Jno. Cain.....2 00
Northumbia—P. Monaghan.....2 00
Mission San Jose—Mary Parker.....2 00
John Heffer.....2 00
Jno. Mahoney.....2 00
John Farrel.....2 00
Tracks—Jno. Sullivan.....2 00
Stanton—Daniel Creed.....2 00
Jno. Kelly.....2 00
Patrick Mullen.....2 00
Jno. Sullivan.....2 00
Hilton—Patrick Allen.....2 00
New—M. Higgins.....2 00
O. Mahoney.....2 00
J. B. Gilbert.....2 00
D. McFarland.....2 00
Harry Blake.....2 00
Jno. Sullivan.....2 00
Wm. Burk.....2 25
Thos. Wm. Elliott.....2 00
Virginia City—Capt. Richard Arnold.....5 00
Jno. Hayes.....2 00
E. Hickey.....2 00
J. F. Daly.....2 00
Hayes & Co.....2 00
F. Eneis.....2 00
James Dockery.....2 00
Daniel O Connell.....2 00
Martin Fox.....2 00
Denis Callaghan.....2 00
Jno. Flinn.....2 00
Daniel Gaffney.....2 25
Jno. Sullivan.....2 00
Jno. Verdenal.....2 00
Timothy McCarthy.....2 00
Miss Ellen Sweeney.....2 00
Dan. McCarthy.....2 00
J. M. Edwards—Jno. Brennan.....2 00
Miss Hogan.....2 00
Thos. Carroll.....2 00
D. J. Mahony.....2 00
Camp Douglas, Utah—Patrick Coyle.....2 00

MARRIED.

DIXON—MARTIN—In this city, Sept. 16, James D. Dixon, Esq., to Mary C. Martin, both of Mayfield.

The readers of THE MONITOR are indebted to the kindness of a correspondent for a number of charming poetic effusions which appeared from time to time in those columns over the initials of M. G. M. They displayed much grace of style and a remarkable delicacy and harmony, proving that the writer was animated by no mere poetic inspiration. It may be that the duties of her own sphere of life prevent her from again contributing the Muses; but in any event the numbering 846 more than in 1870, while commitments of males show a decrease of 200, and they draw special attention to the progressive increase in the number of commitments for this vice since 1867, when they numbered 6,646, while in 1869 they amounted to 7,934, in 1869 to 7,510, and in 1870 they rose to 8,963, being 2,310 in excess of 1867, while in 1871 there was a further increase of 446 as compared with the previous year. These returns are only of persons committed to county and borough jails, but in addition we find that in 1867 7,524 persons were committed to bridewell for drunkenness, and in 1870 7,606, showing an increase of 82, on both sides of the Rhine—at Mainz and Castein—they are increasing the strength of the great fortress on the one, and the fortified red and white paint upon the lamp-posts on the other. But where a Prussian soldier is as great a rarity as at Portsdown hill or Dover. The gentleman in short, light blue tights, dandy, blue tights, and jäegerist boots may be met with at Weisbaden or Homburg, or some other German bungling place, but at Mayence, and surrounded by the black trousers and long blue frocks with the plain red facings, which attest the presence of the dominant Prussian.—Weekly Reynster, August 31.

Wholesale Market Report.

MORTON OLIVER, SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, Sept. 19, 1872.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export only a moderate inquiry has existed, at a decline. We quote as follows: Extra at $5 75@5 85, and superfine, at $5 25@5 37½; burrifle and Oregon brands—Extra at $4 75@5 25 in sak & $6 10@6 50.

WHEAT—The market has been quiet but firm, at a slight decline in prices, since our last weekly review. At the close we quote the range at $1 60@1 67½ for shipping grades & 100 lbs.

BARLEY—The market has ruled firm for feeding at unchanged rates. For new a fair demand has existed at our range of rates since our last weekly review. At the close we quote new bay at $1 10@1 17½.

OATS—The market has remained quiet, at unchanged rates, during the past week. Ordinary to choice sold at $1 50@1 75 & 100 lbs, which is the range at the close.

HAY—The receipts have been fair during the past seven days, with a fair demand. Quotable at the close at $20@25 for ordinary to choice new & ton.

STRAW—Quotable at $7 50@8 50 & ton for cargo lots.

CORN—Market quiet at $1 90@1 92½.

JOHN MEAL—Sales at $3@3 75 & 100 lbs from store.

BRAN—We quote a fair demand, and the following are the jobbing rates: Bran, $25; Butter and Feed, White at $1; Pea at $1; Chick, $1 & 100 lbs.

POTATOES—At the close we quote the range at $1 @1 50 for Sacramento, $1 @1 50 for Salinas.

ONIONS—Quotable at $1 12½@ for Silverskins & 100 lbs.

BEAN—Quotable at $1 75 @ from mill.

MIDDLINGS—We quote fresh at $1 75@2 & ton from the mill.

BEESWAX—Quotable at $1 @1 05 & 100 lbs.

HOPS—We quote at $1 75@2 for 1871 crop.

SEEDS—We quote California dry Timothy, and Red Top at 6@7c & lb.

HONEY—We quote Los Angeles Comb at 12@16c & lb, and Potter's Bulk comb at 8@9c & lb.

HIDES—We quote California dry Hides, and dry Kips at 20c & lb.

TALLOW—Quotable at 6@7c & lb.

WOOL—The market continues quite inactive state. We quote shipping grades at 32@35c, the latter price for choice. Fine grades, 17@22c & lb.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California fresh roll, 30@32½c; fresh Rodeo, packed, 28@30c; Eastern fresh, 30@37½c.

CHEESE—California fresh, 15@16c & lb.

CURED MEATS.

HAMS—California, 15@16c & lb; Oregon, 13½@14c; Eastern sugar cured, 15@16c; do in canvas, 13@14c.

BACON—California, 12@13c & lb; Oregon, 12½@13c; Eastern sugar cured, 13@14c; do in canvas, 12@13c.

PORK—Mess, $20 @ ; Prime, $18 @ ; Prime Mess, $19 @ ; Clear, $22 @ ; Extra Clear, dressed 13@13½c; Hams—[illegible] @ 9c.

POULTRY AND GAME.

Fowls—Mixed, per dozen, $7@8; Spring Chickens, $4 50@5; Roosters, [illegible] @ dozen.

Ducks—Tame at [illegible] @ dozen.

Geese—Tame at [illegible] @ dozen.

Turkeys—Gobblers, [illegible]; dressed 18@19c & lb.

Hare—[illegible] @ 50 & doz.

LEGAL.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA—IN JUSTICES' COURT of the City and County of San Francisco. Northwest corner of Montgomery and Jackson streets. E. CORMINN & CO., Plaintiff, residence of said City and County, vs. DAVID MULONEY, Defendant, late resident of said City and County. Action brought in the Justices' Court of the City and County of San Francisco, and complaint filed in the office of the Justices' Court, in said City and County.

The People of the State of California, to DAVID MULONEY, greeting: You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff in the Justices' Court of the City and County of San Francisco, and complaint filed in the office of the Justices' Court, in said City and County, of which the undersigned is Justice, and for the county and county aforesaid, and answer the said complaint, or a copy thereof, to the said plaintiff, within ten days after the service on you of this summons—if served within this county, but if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days—or judgment will be taken against you according to the prayer of said complaint.

This said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between the above named plaintiff and defendant upon the ground of habitual intemperance, and for the care, custody and education of the minor children of the marriage, and for general relief.

Given under my hand and seal of the District Court of the Fourth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the City and County of San Francisco, this second day of September in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two.

WILLIAM HAWLEY, [L. S.]
Ex Justice of the Peace.
O. Frank Smith, Atty for Plaintiff. sep6

MISCELLANEOUS.

INFORMATION WANTED—OF PATRICK DUNNE, a native of the parish of Kilrag, county Meath, Ireland, who left Ireland in the month of September, 1865. When last heard from, four and a half years ago, he was living in Virginia City, Nevada. Any information of him will be thankfully received by Mrs. M. Dunne, Oakland, California. sep28

INFORMATION WANTED.—OF MICHAEL and PATRICK MCGOVERN, natives of Ballyvan, A native of the Parish of Drumshaw, county Leitrim, Ireland. When last heard from they were in California. Any information of her will be thankfully received by Mrs. Mary McGovern, 1 Bowdoin Street, Medford Tercan, or, No. 726 West Fourth street, Los Angeles. sep28

INFORMATION WANTED.—OF PATRICK MAHON, a native of Ballyhaise, county Cavan, Ireland. When last heard from—February, 1871—was living in Stockton, California. Any information of him will be thankfully received by Patrick O. Farrell, San Francisco postoffice. Washington Territory and Montana papers please copy. sep28

INFORMATION WANTED.—OF JOSEPH GRIMLY, from Waterloo, county Dublin, Ireland. He left Ireland for California in April, 1871. Information to be sent to the R. C. Orphan Asylum Market st., San Francisco. sep28

SEWING MACHINES.

WM. B. HIGGINS,

NO. 241 THIRD STREET, (WEST SIDE),

Bet. Howard & Folsom, San Francisco,

WHO HAS HAD THE ADVANTAGE OF SEVeral years' experience as a Machinist in the first-class Sewing Machine Establishments in the United States, is fully prepared to do all kinds of work pertaining to Sewing Machines, and will guarantee satisfaction in every instance. Having also had a large patronage, Repairing and Cleaning Sewing Machines on the most reasonable terms, and short notice.

☞ Sewing Machines Machines adjusted.

☞ Skates of traveling handsup.

Machines always on hand for sale or for rent by the month. Give him a call. sep28

WANTED—A LADY TEACHER COMPETENT to teach Music, French and Music. Address Musician Office in the handwriting of the applicant. sep21

DRY GOODS, ETC.

KERBY, BYRNE & C

NO. 7

Montgomery

HAVE

THE BEST SELECTED ST

OF

DRY GOOD

OF

THE PACIFIC COA

AND ARE RECEIVING

NEW GOODS FROM NEW

DAILY.

Buyers will find it to their advantages to

Prices which Defy Compe

KERBY, BYRNE &

No. 7 MONTGOMERY STRE

THE MONITOR:
A WEEKLY JOURNAL, DEVOTED TO
Irish and Catholic Literature
AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.
PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY
LYONS & BARRY
JOHN V. BARRY,
PETER LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.
OFFICE—1022 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts. (Rooms 5, 7 and 9, upstairs.)
☞ All communications, whether relating to the publisher editorial department, should be addressed to "LYONS & BARRY."

ONLY IRISH and CATHOLIC JOURNAL IN CALIFORNIA.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):
Served by Carriers, per week.....10c
Subscribers, per year.....$4 00
Six months.....2 25

ADVERTISING RATES:
1 square, 1 time.....$1 50 | 1 square, 6 months.....$16 00
1 " 2 times.....2 50 | " 9 months.....17 00
1 " 3 months.....5 00 | " 3 months.....14 00
1 " 6 months.....9 00 | " 1 year.....25 00
☞ The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

CONTINENTAL LETTERS.

From Correspondents of the "Catholic Opinion."

ITALY.

Their Remuneasel sent one of his Court Chamberlains to a personage of high rank in the town, requesting an audience of the latter in order to propose some plan of action. The personage very speedily circumstances are more likely to play against them. The Czar is a bad life, and with him goes all that unites Russia to Prussia. The Heir-Apparent and all that is influential in Russia are thoroughly anti-Germanic, and at any moment the occasion may arise for giving effect to the Muscovite feeling in favor of an alliance with France in the interest of the two nations. In such a state of circumstances there is not, we presume, a dotard in Germany so silly as to suppose that the Emperor could safely calculate upon the support of Austria in his difficulties. However the Austrians may dissemble and cook their real feelings, they do not forget or forgive Sadowa, and they do not, and will not, forget or forgive their contemptuous extrusion from Germany by Prussia. They can have not interest in upholding the ascendancy of Prussia—an ascendancy acquired by the foulest infraction of treaty stipulations and obligations—and they will, without a doubt, side with the strongest—i. e., France and Russia—especially as by so doing they will recover position and settle revenge. Bismarck and his master has shown how easily treaties may be broken when there are the will and the way. They broke without hesitation or compunction the Treaty of Vienna, and with supreme contempt for even the semblance of honor, they violated the treaty made at Gastein by the King of Prussia with the Austrian Emperor, by which the high contracting parties bound themselves to respect the rights of Denmark over one, at least, of the Elbe Duchies. The Seven Days' War, which lost Austria her European rank and her German ascendancy, was waged by Prussia against Austria solely because Austria insisted upon the fulfilment of the Gastein Convention. With such examples of Prussian faithfulness and disregard of treaties before the world, is it reasonable to suppose that the Austrians will stand unconditionally upon an understanding come to with Prussia, in favor of Prussia, should the moment arrive when Prussia is called to defend her predominance in Germany against two powerful antagonists ? That Prussia and the German Empire—in necessary and apprehensive of an early conflict with France, is evidenced by the heavy earthworks she is raising at Metz, and still more by the enlargement of the great fortress of Mainz, which the Mainzers were assured would be dismantled. They say that the Emperor gave them a promise to this effect. If he said so, he is respecting it as he respected the Treaty of Vienna, the Gastein Convention, &c., on both sides of the Rhine—at Mainz and Castein—they are increasing the strength of the great fortress on the one, and the fortified red and white paint upon the lamp-posts on the other. But where a Prussian soldier is as great a rarity as at Portsdown hill or Dover. The gentleman in short, light blue tights, dandy, blue tights, and jäegerist boots may be met with at Weisbaden or Homburg, or some other German bungling place, but at Mayence, and surrounded by the black trousers and long blue frocks with the plain red facings, which attest the presence of the dominant Prussian.—Weekly Reynster, August 31.

VOL. XVI. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1872. NO. I.

"The Revolution is only to be dreaded when there is no longer anything to be sacrificed to it; but happily we have the Jesuits, the Religious Orders in general, and even Christian Kings all worn out matters was on such space. All we use the old lumber to make necessary somersaults of in the right time and place, the interest of Europe, they rely on it, being of existence."

The system of giving sops to Cerberus is almost worn out on this, and Prussia will probably find to her cost that no King or Kaiser can touch an idea, or the altar without danger.

Several beautiful Byzantine altar vessels and ornaments have just been found in the Carpellino in the excavation, now making at Sant Antonio del Camaldolese, close to Sta. Maria Maggiore.

Decrease at 32.—The Journal de Rome announces that seventeen Religious Orders of the Church in the East have protested against the closing suppression of Religious Orders, and that the protest has been received soon from the Turkish Legation calling upon them to respect their privileges.

The Italian Minister at the French Court duly protested at the presence of Father Secchi at the Medical Commission on the reconstruction of the Pantheon. According to the Opinione, M. Thiers has stated in reply that Father Secchi's commission being specifically in his capacity of an importance, that he could not be regarded in the light of a president.

The reason was that of the canonization Pope Eugene III., the disciple of St. Bernard, to whom he declared his book, "Considerations." The Holy Congregation replied in the affirmative to the postulation, and the decision of her safety were rigidly understood. The country is weary of agitation. A secret instinct tells it that the hereditary monarchy would give back to it the repose after which it sighs, and it is this that the revolution desires to hinder at any price."

As honest and moderate Republic in France is an impossibility, and to imagine it to be possible after the days in June, '48, and the second "Terror" of the Commune, is to forget too soon the warnings of Providence, and to treat the lessons of experience with too much contempt.

France at the present moment is awakening, and is strengthening herself by a great act of faith. The Comte concludes by maintaining that France is her heart, is Monarchy since the days of Clovis, and that His last words are, "The day of triumph is yet come of God's interest, but have confidence in the mission of France. Europe is why I am destined to live, and the Papacy needs her, and the Church her Christian nation cannot perish."

Upon the Pope was that it has not judged letting or in calm tone of grandeur; and oratorical excesses of those whom the best of the house of Bourbon, and the real enemies of society and French

The Pope engages to the different abuses of our Lady continue to take place every day. There was one to Immaculate last Saturday of the Pilgrims come from Paris and many parts of France to join in a great act of devotion to Notre Dame de Sacre Coeur.

The ceremony was presided over by the Archbishop of Bourges and numerous other bishops. Masses were all in the open air, and a Dominican Father preached an eloquent sermon on the glories of Mary, and on the great act of consecration of France to Notre Dame de Sacre Coeur.

More than sixty French bishops had signed their names to this interesting document.

With regard to these pilgrimages, the Union says that of the clergy-sighted and gravo men who have been present at the ceremonies and elsewhere, have been in the highest degree impressed by these manifestations. Sincerity of these vast concourse of devotion gives the expression to the masses and gives a character among the thousands of pilgrims particularly striking. They do not speak to each other, yet true Christian charity is manifest in their every gesture; so is the first sign of the presence of the Holy Ghost among men. The same holds and the same fruits. They love God; they love each other, they love Mary, who is called "Holy Mary, who prays for sinners." The Christian Church is the platform of the Incarnation, and is a more prominent position than lay edges. Nothing can be more consoling than to survey lay education for all the children of France; and they are wins from their point of view, for they know right well that they can never succeed in their war against God and society so long as the education of the children is not wholly in their hands. To this cry of the Reds, however, the Catholics of France give a practical reply by sending their sons to the colleges that are in the hands of Religious Orders, and by their donations for admission to these institutions have never been so numerous as this year. The Pope's encouraging language has not a little contributed to this effect.

The Pope's address to the Pilgrims was in the Italian army, and Italian spies liberally sworn in to the Italian and Alpine departments.

The Pope's address to the pilgrims of Italy can be imagined. She is by the mere institute of self-preservation, a deep danger to the Italian army, and her every increased towards the great Catholic Power. She is a danger to you on the authority of one of the guests, a Protestant Englishman, Lieutenant Col. Arnim, the Prussian Ambassador, was present, and on being asked what he thought of the feeling that exists in France, replied, "You have done all you could to destroy it, and you have failed; now what Government I think best in France. The Orleans are impossible; no Power in Europe will support the Bonapartists, which would be an example of revolt to the younger branch of the Spanish house. Henri V. is the only man we should wish to see on the throne of France. Perhaps it may be the most convenient thing, after all, to get the patched-up Republic lasts for a few years, and I consider it impossible that the Prince Imperial to ascend the throne. As for Gambetta, I tell you frankly, that if he or his friends ever get the reins of government, Europe will be in a conflagration."

The Pope concludes by saying that he has no guarantee as exact, has been much talked of, and as it is believed that Prussia is actively preparing for a war with France in concert with Italy, I need scarcely say there is a very uneasy feeling in Rome. Should there not have been so hazardous as now, and there is nothing impossible to Prussi politics, save a peaceful settlement.

PARIS, October 23.

The great event of the day is the letter of the Count de Chambord (Henry V). Even with reference to the pilgrimage of Lourdes I will limit myself to the few episodes omitted in the press, and which I owe to the friends who have just returned here from Lourdes.

In the first place, numbers of Communists, Agents were on the spot, ready to raise the cry of "Vive Napoleon!" and see if there was a Bonapartist reaction; but there was a political and religious impression that was irresistible, having been wrought in the souls of the pilgrims by the intercession of the Immaculate Conception with the Eternal Father. The Christian Church has received a most enthusiastic ovation, as did the Jesuits.

On this the Pere Chaloarne announcing the pretied absence of Mgr. Mermillod, there was a burst of applause. "Yes, he is with Hebron," "Vive la Suisse Catholique."

The gifts brought to Lourdes amount to a million francs in gold and jewels and silver, in coreless profusion at the foot of the statue of the Immaculate Conception. Some of the visions, and in all the immense assembly no base act of disorder or disrespect occurred.

It may be said with truth that no such demonstration has been witnessed in any part of the world in the two hundred years preceding it. As Meaghar said of Ireland, "We must, by the help of God, be a nation once more," and this is what France is doing today. Lourdes and Pontmain were but the signs of a revival of faith and prayer almost unexampled in history, and there is not a doubt in the mind of any one that it will date from the Feast of the Rosary 1872, and that 1873 will be a grand year in which to celebrate it as the double anniversary of the defeat of Islam, and the dawn of the salvation of Europe.

A very significant conversation took place on the 15th between Thiers and the President's table, which I am able to give you on the authority of one of the guests, a Protestant Englishman. Count de Arnim, the Prussian Ambassador, was present, and on being asked what he thought of the feeling that exists in France, replied, "You have done all you could to destroy it, and you have failed; now what Government I think best in France. The Orleans are impossible; no Power in Europe will support the Bonapartists, which would be an example of revolt to the younger branch of the Spanish house. Henri V. is the only man we should wish to see on the throne of France. Perhaps it may be the most convenient thing, after all, to get the patched-up Republic lasts for a few years, and I consider it impossible that the Prince Imperial to ascend the throne. As for Gambetta, I tell you frankly, that if he or his friends ever get the reins of government, Europe will be in a conflagration."

The Pope concludes by saying that he has no guarantee as exact, has been much talked of, and as it is believed that Prussia is actively preparing for a war with France in concert with Italy, I need scarcely say there is a very uneasy feeling in Rome. Should there not have been so hazardous as now, and there is nothing impossible to Prussi politics, save a peaceful settlement.

PARIS, October 23.

The great event of the day is the letter of the Count de Chambord (Henry V). Even the Republican journals speak of it with a manifest respect, and the other papers of all sides are loud in their praise of it.

"France would be saved," the Count says, "and we should see her come forth from her ruins, greater and greater than ever, if the moral condition of her safety were rigidly

Industrial Condition of the State.

The prospects for the next farming year—to begin on the 1st of October, when agricultural leases and contracts for farm labor, to continue for twelve months are made—are fair throughout the Pacific Slope. In this State more depends on the rainfall than in Nevada or Arizona, where, though the drought is greater, the tillage is of limited area, and the chief necessity would cause less loss than a slight one in California. We anticipate no less than the average rainfall in four years out of five at least, and the presumptions to be formed of any one season in advance, are always favorably by four to one. Attempts have been made to learn the character of our approaching wet season from the Summer rains of Northwestern Mexico, the snows in the higher mountains of the Pacific Slope, the rising of the springs, the forms of vegetable growth, or the conduct of wild animals in the Fall; but no trustworthy basis for calculation has yet been found, and all the deductions from such premises are useless, if not pernicious.

Presuming that the season will be favorable, we say that the prospects of the agriculture of our Slope for the next year are encouraging. The area of irrigated plain and reclaimed tule will be considerably increased, and will help to break the present antipathies of our farmers to the necessity of devoting themselves almost exclusively to wheat. Tulare Valley having been made accessible by rail, will no doubt attract many settlers, and the peculiar character of its soil, lying, as much of it does, in inland deltas, may develop peculiar forms of industry. The production of wheat there for exportation would not pay, the cost of delivering at sea port being too great. The Federal Agricultural Report for 1871 recommends as suitable for cultivation in the warmer parts of the United States, Turkey rhubarb, supposed to be the species known to botanists as rheum palmatum, rheum officinale, liquorice (glycyrrhiza glabra and lepa. The liquorice roots are not fit for digging until the third year, and are then found from the surface down to a depth of three feet. A moist, sandy loam is the best for it, and it would probably thrive in the valleys of the Southern Coast, as well as those of Louisiana, and has borne seed there, and as it produces nine stems as much thick paper as cotton, it might be tried here. The stalk grows in five months to be eight or even twelve feet high, and after cutting for a week or a week in water, when the fibrous bark is ready to fall off the tender wood. The annual export of jute from India now amounts to 225,000 tons in weight an $25,000,000 in value.

The yield of tin in precious metals is decreasing slowly but steadily. Numerous mines have been worked by sluicing and hydraulic process are exhausted every year, and very few are opened. The productive auriferous quartz mines are not increasing in number and importance, perhaps because many of the most intelligent and enterprising miners and mining engineers find a larger profit in the working of the mines which more than compensate, by their rising importance for the decline in the yield in California. At present, the Ely District is the favorite of both miners and speculators, and the wonderful richness of a few mines, and the riches of the ores found in a number of others, which will be blister on his pocket that he'll not part with for life. By G—d, I'll ruin him!

—Of his defying me in this manner, as if he was rolling in wealth."

—With a fellow like that it makes no difference, unfortunately," sighed Crowe.

"He says that if he is not wealthy, he is not poor.

"We'll make him poor."

—Ah! That depends. He's well enough off to be stiff and insolent to us; and you'd find it hard to cut his independence from him. Twouldn't do to be starting newspapers in every town; and we don't seem to have hurt Lucas or Duffy much by that experiment in Dunbar."

—We can load him with debt. We can drive him into expenditure. Suppose he gets in fifty thousand pounds, we'll hurt a petition at him in fifty days, we'll hurt a petition at him. That's a cool two thousand on the top of his election expenses. Next time, we'll treat him to another contest, and another petition if necessary. He can't stand that. There !!!"

—Aye, but God knows what may happen before then," put in O'Flaherty, rather dismally.

"What, sir? What? What's that you mean by insinuating?" cried Sadlier, with a fierce shrug, wild expression on his face.

"Oh, nothing; only that meantime you must get help in the House."

"Well, if that's what you mean, off with you to Ireland by the morning train. Be you to Ireland by the morning train. Be off to the Dungarvan hake; and let us see how far you can be of help to this newspaper fellow. Damn them! these fellows never to be said to have once put in a word—lasting everything. The landlord party, on the other hand, put forth their utmost strength, backed by all the resources at the disposal of the Government. The first step in every country was to subject it to military occupation. Every Tory landlord had soldiers for the asking. Every agent and bailiff canvassed in the voters, accompanied by a troop of dragoons. The "can vassing" consisted in delivering to the voter "the master's orders" as to whom he should vote for; the assumption invariably being that the vote should go with the rent, both being the property of the landlord. This doctrine the Catholic clergy set themselves vehemently to controvert and denounce as unchristian and immoral. The terrorism of the landlord style of "canvassing" may be enlarged against as naked tyranny and opposed as tyranny which degraded and an oppressed people. Every tenant was put to the option whom it forced to its against his conscience, his country and his God. All this the landlords called inflammatory incitement to violence and "priestly intimidation." Tories, foot and artillery—and, of course, consolatory reinforcements beyond count-ing—flocked to every village and the country seemed as if in the throes of a civil war.

(To be continued.)

* As the newspapers of the time report, this trick was actually played off by O'Flaherty at the Dungarvan election.

By the will of the late Miss Young, of No. 1 Harley Place, Regent's Park, who died on the 5th of this month, she bequeaths £60,000 for Catholic charities; £20,000 of the donation is to form a legacy, and Fund, from the interest of which persons over fifty years of age are to receive annuities of £20 a year each.—Universe October 19.

THE MONITOR.

FATHER BURKE'S LECTURE ON TEMPERANCE.

He Answers Froude's Taunt.

The Great Virtue of Temperance—Its Necessity and Importance.

(Specially Reported for the Irish-American.)

On the evening of Wednesday, October 23d, Father Burke delivered his promised lecture on "Temperance" in Newark, N. J., and received from the people of that city one of the grandest orations ever tendered to any man. Notwithstanding the disagreeable, drizzling rain that prevailed during the entire evening, thousands of citizens, of all classes, sects and nationalities, poured into the building until, shortly after seven o'clock, the immense structure was fairly packed with people. The galleries were crowded, every seat in the body of the house was filled, and hundreds were compelled to stand in all possible places. The audience, in numbers and intelligence, was a magnificent compliment to the eloquent and learned Dominican. Societies from many of the surrounding towns and villages attended; Jersey City, Elizabeth and New York being ably represented.

Father Burke, who was dressed, as usual, in the habit of his Order, was received with thunders of applause. He then proceeded to speak as follows: My friends, there is no gentleman among us who has come all the way from England to tell the American people

"WHAT HE KNOWS ABOUT IRELAND,"

And about her people and their history. One thing I can tell the American people, that, in tracing that history, even with all the prejudices of his race and of his Protestant religion, he may be able to bring home to Ireland many an impulsive, ill-considered, foolish act; he may, perhaps, prove us guilty, from time to time, of want of head; but I defy him, or any other man that speaks of Ireland's race or Ireland's people, to prove against them what even of heart. Your reception this evening of an Irish Catholic priest, whose only recommendation to you, whose only passport to-night among you, is that he is a Catholic priest and an Irishman; the cheer that you gave when I mentioned the very charge made by him or any other man, if he attempted to fix upon the Irish people the sin of disloyalty, of all sinnes, sects and nationalities, poured into the building until, shortly after seven o'clock, the immense structure was fairly packed with people. The galleries were crowded, every seat in the body of the house was filled, and hundreds were compelled to stand in all possible places. The audience, in numbers and intelligence, was a magnificent compliment to the eloquent and learned Dominican. Societies from many of the surrounding towns and villages attended; Jersey City, Elizabeth and New York being ably represented.

Father Burke, who was dressed, as usual, in the habit of his Order, was received with thunders of applause. He then proceeded to speak as follows: My friends, there is no gentleman among us who has come all the way from England to tell the American people

"WHAT HE KNOWS ABOUT IRELAND,"

And about her people and their history. One thing I can tell the American people, that, in tracing that history, even with all the prejudices of his race and of his Protestant religion, he may be able to bring home to Ireland many an impulsive, ill-considered, foolish act; he may, perhaps, prove us guilty, from time to time, of want of head; but I defy him, or any other man that speaks of Ireland's race or Ireland's people, to prove against them what even of heart. Your reception this evening of an Irish Catholic priest, whose only recommendation to you, whose only passport to-night among you, is that he is a Catholic priest and an Irishman; the cheer that you gave when I mentioned the very charge made by him or any other man, if he attempted to fix upon the Irish people the sin of disloyalty, of all sinnes, sects and nationalities, poured into the building until, shortly after seven o'clock, the immense structure was fairly packed with people. The galleries were crowded, every seat in the body of the house was filled, and hundreds were compelled to stand in all possible places. The audience, in numbers and intelligence, was a magnificent compliment to the eloquent and learned Dominican. So-cieties from many of the surrounding towns and villages attended; Jersey City, Elizabeth and New York being ably represented.

Father Burke, who was dressed, as usual, in the habit of his Order, was received with thunders of applause. He then proceeded to speak as follows: My friends, there is no gentleman among us who has come all the way from England to tell the American people

"WHAT HE KNOWS ABOUT IRELAND,"

And about her people and their history. One thing I can tell the American people, that, in tracing that history, even with all the prejudices of his race and of his Protestant religion, he may be able to bring home to Ireland many an impulsive, ill-considered, foolish act; he may, perhaps, prove us guilty, from time to time, of want of head; but I defy him, or any other man that speaks of Ireland's race or Ireland's people, to prove against them what even of heart. Your reception this evening of an Irish Catholic priest, whose only recommendation to you, whose only passport to-night among you, is that he is a Catholic priest and an Irishman; the cheer that you gave when I mentioned the very charge made by him or any other man, if he attempted to fix upon the Irish people the sin of disloyalty, of disaffection, blister on his pocket that he'll not part with for life. By G—d, I'll rain him! That fellow is driving me to this manner, as if he was rolling in wealth."

"With a fellow like that it makes no difference, unfortunately," sighed Crowe. "He says that if he is not wealthy, he is not poor—"

"Well make him poor."

"Ah! That depends. He's well enough off to be stiff and insolent to us; and you'd find it hard to establish independence from him. I wouldn't do to be starting newspapers in every town; and we don't seem to have hurt Lucas or Duffy much by the experiment in Dublin."

"We can lend him a little cash. We can drive him into expenditure. Suppose he gets in this time, we'll hurt a position for him. That's a cool two thousand on the line. We can lend two thousand on the top of his election expenses. Next time, we'll treat him to another contest, and another petition if necessary. He can't stand that. Pshaw!"

"Aye, but God knows what may happen before then," put in O'Flaherty, rather timidly.

"Well, sir? What? What's that you say about to insinuate?" cried Sadlier, with a stronger, still expression on his face.

"Oh, nothing only that meantime you may not want my help in the House."

"Well, if that's what you mean, off with you to Ireland by the morning train. He you to Ireland by the morning train. He off to the Dungarvan fellow, and tell him how far you can be a match for this newspaper fellow. Damn them! these fellows seem to be my friends, if not my only trouble."

"John, John! My dear soul, remember I am one of the craft now," put in Crowe with a leer. "Forget not, O noble sir, that I am on the editorial staff of the orthodox Holy Catholic and Apostolical Weekly Telegraph, under our learned and manly friend Maddiben."

"I'm very sure you dont forget; that is, you don't when new your money, Crowe."

"I am not allowed to forget it, John." I am not allowed to forget it, John." I have a goodly company of remembrancers; bailiffs, bailiffs, bootmakers, grocers, wine merchants; and as for Jew clothiers, they seem to consider me the very heaven of Israel are engaged in a perpetual blockade of my hall-door; I can't go out by the stable lane; but now an infernal bill-broker fellow seems to have taken to prowling about the place as his especial share of the general surveillance."

Sadlier grinned a sort of smile, as he rose from his seat; a signal for his worthy comrades to depart.

"Mind you, O'Flaherty, you must trumpet every card of Anglure player. If he mentions tenant-right, you go for it fully and heartily. If he is for tithes, you go for perpetuity and no rent."

"I know, I'll refer them to my own tenantry," cried Ned.

"Your tenantry!" shouted Crowe.

"Yes!"

"Where are they, may I enquire?"

"In my mind's eye," Crowe. In the moon, or in Spain, just as you please. There won't be time for them to discover that I have not a tenant or a foot of ground in the world, till the election will be all over; and meantime I may win a trick against Maguire by the dodge."

"Come on my arms, thou child of genius!" cried Crowe, with dramatic air and gesture. "Not, as you have been doing you—you fellow! You are fated to wive—one of the talented sex. There's a wife to you—Isaac is generally supposed."

FATHER BURKE'S LECTURE ON TEMPERANCE.

He Answers Froude's Taunt.

The Great Virtue of Temperance—Its Necessity and Importance.

(Specially Reported for the Irish-American.)

On the evening of Wednesday, October 23d, Father Burke delivered the promised address on "Temperance" in Newark, N. J., and received from the people of that city one of the grandest ovations ever tendered to any man. Notwithstanding the disagreeable, drizzling rain that prevailed during the entire evening, thousands of citizens, of all classes, sects and nationalities, poured into the building until, shortly after seven o'clock, the immense structure was fairly packed with people. The galleries were crowded, every seat in the body of the house was filled, and hundreds were compelled to stand in the aisles. Places, positions, in numbers and intelligence, was a magnificent compliment to the eloquent and learned Dominican. Solecties from many of the surrounding towns and villages attended; Jersey City, Elizabeth and New York being well represented.

Father Burke, who was dressed, as usual, in the habit of his Order, was received with thunders of applause. His address proceeded as follows:

THE VIRTUE OF TEMPERANCE.

And why? Because, my dear friends, in whatever light we look upon man—whether we look upon him as the father of a family—whether we look upon him as a citizen of a State—whether we look upon him as a member of a family—whether we look upon him as a child of God, and of law; we find that temperance is the greatest curse to man; as poor as England could make them and, God knows, that was poor enough) as proud as Lucifer, and as Catholic as St. Peter.

Well, my friends, to you—especially to you who have been brought out of the land of bondage, of persecution and of almost slavery; to you who, in this land breathe and have the glorious air of free America; to you who know the springing step of freemen, that you were never able to know upon the land you were born; to you, I say, that have already realized the magnificent truth of "equality before the law"—to you every temperance—this glorious land of America—Oh! may every blessing in the gift of Heaven come down upon you, my people and mean thus imperial head and heart! This great land—this noble constitution of Freedom—this land, where the rich and the poor, the high and the low, the first and the last, the learned and the ignorant, the wise and the foolish, are all equal before the law, by a vote as to make or not make, as to elect or not elect, as to be made or not made, as to make a civil magistrate as to be made or not made, as to make a civil magistrate as to be made or not made, as to make a civil magistrate blister on his pocket that he'll not part with for life. By G—d, I'll ruin him! The idea of his defying me in this manner, as if he was rolling in wealth."

"Whih a fellow like dat it makes no difference, unfortunately," sighed Crowe. "Sence, unfortunately," sighed Crowe. "Sence, unfortunately," sighed Crowe. "Sence

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK BEGINS NOV. 24.
November
17—Sunday—Twenty-sixth Sunday After Pentecost.
18—Monday—Octave of the Dedication of the Four Crowned Martyrs.
19—Tuesday—St. Elizabeth, Queen of Hungary.
20—Wednesday—St. Pantheus, Pope and Martyr.
21—Thursday—Presentation of the B. V. Mary.
22—Friday—St. Cecilia, Virgin and Martyr.
23—Saturday—St. Clement, Pope and Martyr. St. Felicite, Martyr.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....NOVEMBER 16, 1872.

THE CATHOLIC UNION OF IRELAND.

In another column our readers will find the prospectus of an Association recently started in Dublin under the title of "The Catholic Union of Ireland." Last week we published a communication duly setting forth the objects of the Society and the means by which it proposed to effect those objects. These two important publications did not come to us in the order in which they were issued, that which we print to-day being evidently the first; but we copied them according as they came under our notice. The first requirement, however, is not a matter of any moment, and does not detract in the slightest from the intelligibility of the documents in question. By reading them attentively our countrymen will be enabled to form a correct idea of the nature and value of the association, and to determine what amount of support ought to be accorded to it by their brethren in the old land.

We do not hesitate to express our opinion that the "Catholic Union" will be most beneficial, and that it deserves the cordial faithful. If we read aright the prospectus and the address, the sole scope of the Union is to bring forward the Catholic claims for a settlement of healthy agitation of the constitutional association. It is true, and nobody attempts to deny it, that His Eminence, who is universally revered for his piety, beloved for his charity and admired for his attachment to holy faith, is credited with holding political opinions not shared by the great bulk of his flock; but, with rare moderation, he has always refrained from obtruding them upon others, and, indeed, it is notorious that he has never taken part in political discussions, save and except in so far as they related to religious matters. So, although we admit the possibility of His Eminence not sympathising with the Home Rule Association, we do not believe that he founded the Catholic Union for the purpose of opposing it or interfering with its labors.

It seems to us that there is plenty of room for both societies, and that they can work in their different spheres without ever coming into conflict. The Home Rule movement is directed towards the attaining for Ireland of that degree of self-government which will enable her people to look after their own interests, and promote the prosperity of the country. It is, therefore, a purely political affair, concerning all classes of society, Protestants as well as Catholics. Its aims are such that they ought to be attainable by the men of any one creed, even the creed of the majority, for they demand the cooperation of the whole nation. The Catholic Union is formed to obtain the removal of certain grievances that still remain to harass one section of the community, and, of course, it appeals only to those concerned.

These things being so, we confess we are unable to comprehend how any antagonism can spring up between the two bodies, unless it is willfully brought about by the men of either or both of them. We can see no cause or indiscretion of some partisans. There are the two associations, with their separate fields of action, and no conflicting interests. The Home Rule Association will work for national objects, requiring all the efforts of the united people; the Catholic Union will work for religious objects, requiring all the efforts of those belonging to one creed. Each, we are convinced, is, if wisely managed, capable of fulfilling its mission, and we hope it will do so. Both have our warmest sympathy and our best wishes.

DEFALCATIONS.

It would, probably, be too much to expect that the departments of our City Government should be completely free from defalcations, but we think it is making such devastation in the East. This has been our opinion for a long time, and, with so abiding certainty that it would come, we awaited the day of reckoning with calmness. It has indeed arrived, and we know that plundering has been carried on in the Harbor Commissioners' office. Very little has yet been made public of a matter so important as a peculation to the amount actually stolen; but there appears little room for doubting that it will prove large. It may be that the city has been swindled out of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

We are the parties to blame? Of course the Commissioners are to blame to a certain extent, for if they did their duty properly, and looked after their subordinates, the defalcations could never have occurred. Whether there is a criminal, a sharer in the plunder, among the three gentlemen composing the Board remains to be seen. The public, under the impression that there is, have already begun to be very direct in their insinuations; but such peculiarly unsupported by any evidence, is extremely unjust. There is not a gentleman on the Board, long connected with this city, which he has seen grown up, as it were, from its infancy, and to which it is much indebted for its prosperity, whose honor is so unquestionably above suspicion or impeachment that every body cannot see the absurdity, in any way, be connected with the dishonesty that money will have to be replaced by those means. The insurance companies, it is feared that many of the local ones will succumb; and thus the order will be flung into circles that suffered nothing whatever from the flames. Several foreign companies were largely interested in the burnt district; but it seems taken for granted that they will be able to meet every cent of their liabilities. Yet it is also supposed that, warned by the conflagration of Boston disasters, they will eventually withdraw from all American risks. Probably from thirty to fifty per cent. of the insurances paid into our city go to share in it; but we fear our curiosity will not be gratified. There are wheels within wheels in these cases, and if the machinery were exposed to view, it would become apparent that the public were deceived by a trick of very portentous indeed to some parties, but by no means edifying.

We are glad that the INDUSTRIANUS have been reexplored, and hope that nothing will delay more injury to the community. From it strikes us that the munificence of the Board offered, and all the activity displayed by the insurance agents, are directly traceable to the fact that they were dangerous to the wealthy classes. Had they been triple-dyed murderers, there certainly would not have been so much excuse made about their escape. What trouble is being taken to secure the recapture of, Mr. "Pop" McLaughlin who so coolly walked out of Court after the capital conviction was recorded against him! What interest do the public show, whether or not justice is meted out to the score or so of red-handed assassins now awaiting trial in the State! A forger however, who might defraud a rich merchant or banker of thousands of dollars by merely changing the figures on a check, is a much greater criminal in the eyes of a modern society.

The Marysville Hibernian Benevolent Society.

We take the following paragraph from the Marysville Appeal of November 3d:

At an annual at ction of the Marysville Hibernian Benevolent Society, held October 31st, the following named gentlemen were elected officers for the ensuing year: President, Daniel Lahiff; Power (thrice elected); Vice-President, William Elliot (re-elected); Secretary, Thos. P. Ward (re-elected); Treasurer, Denis Hayes; Financial Secretary, Daniel Campbell, John Coughlin, Thomas Lallaway (re-elected); Committee for visiting the sick—First Ward, Matt. Woods, Thomas McMahon; Second Ward, Thomas C. Martin, M. Carew; Third Ward, John H. Burns, J. F. Lydon; Fourth Ward, D. H. Harney and M. Hayes.

We are glad to have to state at the same time that the Society is in a splendid condition, financially and otherwise, and is, thanks to its energetic officers, making great progress.

JAMES O. ROSSI, Esq., of Cheviston, is the authorized agent for San Francisco as that place and vicinity. All persons indebted for the paper, and those wishing to subscribe, can pay to him. He is authorized to receive all monies due and to receive for the same.

A beautiful dressing and an invigorator for the hair is Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer.

THE ESCAPE OF THE BROTHERTONS.

Last week we chronicled the escape of the BROTHERTON forgers from the County Jail. Our paper was scarcely in the hands of its readers ere long were recaptured and again placed in durance vile, to continue so, in all probability, until set free by due process of law. The escape created intense excitement, more especially in commercial circles, where it was felt no man's credit was safe as long as these skillful chevaliers d'industrie were at large and in a position to recommence manipulating checks and drafts. Inasmuch as there was grave reasons to suspect that the BROTHERTONS had bought their liberty from corrupt officials, and were aided in making their escape by persons outside the jail, many people inveighed loudly against the management of the prison, and vehemently declared that "money could do anything in this country." But the circumstances under which the criminals were rearrested, and the revelations which have been made since, show clearly enough that a great deal of the excitement and alarm was uncalled for.

There is neither romance nor mystery in the story of their prison-breaking. "It may sometimes all ideas of skill, or daring, or cunning, as connected with the method of escape. So also may we drop the notion of their liberty having been secured by bribing the jailors or any other individuals. In fact, there can now be no doubt whatever that the evasion was not premeditated, but was rather an accident resulting from sheer carelessness and neglect of duty on the part of the jailors. The only thing remaining to be accounted for satisfactorily is the note by which Mr. WILLIAMS was induced to leave the prison and visit our city, where he was arrested to the order of the city. The chances are that it was written at the instigation of RILEY, the "trusty," who saw by this manuever the opportunity of getting rid of one of his custodians. No knives or revolvers were passed into the BROTHERTONS by any one, and the melodramatic tale of Jailor FRANKLIN's wife may be set down, very charitably, as the offspring of a nervously excited imagination. There was no bribery connected with the affair, for if the forgers had had the money, they would not have been fleeing on foot. Their friend to whom they have been, as they were, in want of the necessaries of life most of the time they were out of jail.

Their arrest was an exceedingly simple matter; so much so, indeed, as to surprise those who believed the criminals to be very resolute and desperate characters. There was no bloodshed, no scuffle, no resistance of any kind. One man stopped and captured both the forgers and their confederate, RILEY. It is true a small army, fully equipped with clubs, revolvers and shotguns, went in pursuit, but the heroes who composed it were not called upon to display their valor. The murderers were accomplices, and induced them to convey information to the police. Considerable speculation is made with respect to the identity of the party who effected the betrayal. Circumstances seem to point strongly to a legal luminary who was engaged in the defense of the forgers, and got himself into trouble through his excessive cleverness. If this be so, it proves that the individual in question is utterly destitute of honorable principles, and is very foolishly themselves upon exhibiting traits of character. We should like to know how this reward is to be distributed, and who are the fortunate parties to share in it; but we fear our curiosity will not be gratified. There are wheels within wheels in these cases, and if the machinery were exposed to view, it would become apparent that the public were deceived by a trick of very portentous indeed to some parties, but by no means edifying.

We are glad that the INDUSTRIANUS have been reexplored, and hope that nothing will delay more injury to the community. From it strikes us that the munificence of the Board offered, and all the activity displayed by the insurance agents, are directly traceable to the fact that they were dangerous to the wealthy classes. Had they been triple-dyed murderers, there certainly would not have been so much excuse made about their escape. What trouble is being taken to secure the recapture of, Mr. "Pop" McLaughlin who so coolly walked out of Court after the capital conviction was recorded against him! What interest do the public show, whether or not justice is meted out to the score or so of red-handed assassins now awaiting trial in the State! A forger however, who might defraud a rich merchant or banker of thousands of dollars by merely changing the figures on a check, is a much greater criminal in the eyes of modern society.

Mosby, Byrne & Co.

Mosby, Byrne & Co., No. 7 Montgomery street, have now the largest and best selected stock of dry goods in this city. Their prices are extremely low on receipt of advertising from New York, so that they are enabled to keep their every issues styles and fashions on hand. Their prices are extremely moderate as low, indeed, as they can possibly be made consistent with fair profits. They have made it a rule to adhere to give every satisfaction in their power, and to this end they by carefully representing their goods as to what they are, without pretense or exaggeration. Ladies and Gentlemen, we invite you to call and examine their stock, which in every line contains something worth examining.

CONCERT.—The concert to be given for the benefit of St. Joseph's parish of this city will take place early in December, and promises to be one of the finest ever given in this city. Some of the best talent in the State has been secured for the occasion, including MRS. Martinez, of San Francisco; Jacob Leuzen, of San José; Professor Emil Gramm, of Santa Clara College; Mad. F. Hoffman and Professor Hisenduri, of Almaden. The Santa Clara College band will also take part, Father Varsi having kindly given permission.—Santa Clara Argus.

Father Acrdea and his Parishioners.

Another evidence of the affection with which the people of St. Francis' parish regard their late pastor, Rev. J. B. Ardea, was exhibited last Sunday. At the monthly meeting of St. Francis' Christian Doctrine Association, on the afternoon of that day, the preliminary business having been transacted, the reverend Father was conducted to a seat on the platform beside the new pastor, Rev. Father Harrington, and the President of the Society rose and spoke as follows:

REV. FATHER ARDEBA: Previous to your departure from the scenes of your late labors to other fields of usefulness, the teachers desire to express to you their sincere gratitude for your zeal and devotion in promoting the interest of the Sunday School. They desire to thank you for your unvarying kindness to themselves and to the children under their care, and beg you to assure you that the Sunday School, which owes its existence and its success to your untiring efforts, shall be continued under our new pastor as a monument of your care for the little ones of the flock. Having been associated with and working under your direction during the past seven years, the teachers take this opportunity of giving expression to their entire appreciation of your labors for the moral and religious welfare of the children of your pastoral charge. We cherish the hope, Rev. Father, wherever the will of Divine Providence may place you in the future, the remembrance of the happy hours spent among the children of this parish will be a hundred fold more pleasing to you than the praises of a world. There are a few differences between these two calculations, but it is hard to say which is the more correct. However, there can be no doubt that the differences are immense. The reason why the damages are fixed at such high figures, although the number of buildings burned is not supposed to be one-tenth of that destroyed during the Chicago fire, is that the houses which were swept away were, almost without exception, huge wholesale stores, crammed to the very roof with the valuable goods. They contained more than is usual at this season of the year, for the horse plague had deprived the merchants of the means of transportation, and left them with many large orders unexecuted. The same cause operated, to a certain extent, in lessening the chances of checking the conflagration at its commencement, inasmuch as horses were not available for pulling the engines to the scene of the fire.

Comparatively speaking, few dwelling houses were destroyed, so that the homeless are not by any means as numerous as at Chicago, where one hundred and ten thousand people were left by the flames without shelter. Nevertheless, a vast amount of suffering must have been entailed on the working classes, twelve thousand of whom have been deprived of employment. So the relief funds which have been already started will be urgently required to alleviate the distress among those whose resources are not sufficient to tide them over a prolonged period of enforced idleness. The direct money loss will fall nearly exclusively on the merchants themselves, and on the insurance companies, it is feared that many of the local ones will succumb; and thus the order will be flung into circles that suffered nothing whatever from the flames. Several foreign companies were largely interested in the burnt district; but it seems taken for granted that they will be able to meet every cent of their liabilities. Yet it is also supposed that, warned by the conflagration of Boston disasters, they will eventually withdraw from all American risks. Probably from thirty to fifty per cent. of the insurances paid into our city go to share in it; but we fear our curiosity will not be gratified. There are wheels within wheels in these cases, and if the machinery were exposed to view, it would become apparent that the public were deceived by a trick of very portentous indeed to some parties, but by no means edifying.

We are glad that the INDUSTRIANUS have been reexplored, and hope that nothing will delay more injury to the community. From it strikes us that the munificence of the Board offered, and all the activity displayed by the insurance agents, are directly traceable to the fact that they were dangerous to the wealthy classes. Had they been triple-dyed murderers, there certainly would not have been so much excuse made about their escape. What trouble is being taken to secure the recapture of, Mr. "Pop" McLaughlin who so coolly walked out of Court after the capital conviction was recorded against him! What interest do the public show, whether or not justice is meted out to the score or so of red-handed assassins now awaiting trial in the State! A forger however, who might defraud a rich merchant or banker of thousands of dollars by merely changing the figures on a check, is a much greater criminal in the eyes of modern society.

The Catholic Union of Ireland.

Last week we printed a document circulated by "The Catholic Union of Ireland." We now give the prospectus of that Association as we find it in the Dublin Freeman's Journal. There appears to be some fear entertained by certain parties that the Union may be used as a set off or counter-weight to the Home Rule Association:

CONSTITUTION, FORM, AND ACTION OF THE UNION.

1. The Catholic Union of Ireland consists of members and associates of both sexes, and of every profession and rank. An annual subscription is required of one pound from members, and one shilling from associates.

2. Its affairs shall be managed by a council consisting of ex-officio and elected members. The ex-officio members shall be the Bishops of Ireland, the Catholic peers and members of Parliament being also members of the Union. The elected members shall be thirty. Five members of the council shall form a quorum.

3. One-fifth of the council shall retire each year in the order of priority of election, but such retiring members shall be eligible for re election.

4. Accidental vacancies in the council shall be filled up by itself, subject to the ratification of the next annual meeting.

5. The council may appoint committees for specific purposes from the members of the Union, with such powers and for such duration as circumstances may demand. The chairman of such committee shall be qualified to vote and vote at the deliberations of the council.

6. The funds of the Union shall be vested in trustees under the control of the council.

7. Two general meetings of the Union shall be held annually.

8. The business to be transacted at such meetings shall be as follows: The reports which private members shall submit and motions as they desire to make at least fifteen days before the meeting.

9. The ordinary meetings of the council shall be held monthly, or oftener if circumstances may require. Extraordinary meetings of the Union may be convened when the council may deem it necessary. At meetings the chairman shall have a deliberative and casting vote.

10. The chairman of the council, the treasurers, and honorary secretaries, and the elected by the council, shall be empowered to appoint a paid under secretary. The appointment of such a servant is declared in a preliminary paragraph. The council of the Church have seized upon in Rome the opportunity with unparalleled audacity, completely declericalize the Deity, and relegate to the realm of fable the whole of the Bible as a virtuous and sacred learning. The Catholic Union must not relax their exertions until these horrible be explored and the consecrated property restored. Our sympathies all those who have suffered in the past, and still's fish in the tender minds of the young by banishing religion from the schools. Therefore, therefore, one of the most important duties of the Catholic Union is to oppose Catholic education, and to put whom infidelity and its attendant vice will continue to extend their influence in this country. Nor is this the case in this country alone, but in every part of the world, is, to a great extent, in the hands of our enemies. Faithful to the principles of Freemasonry, by misrepresentation and calumny, to undermine religion, and to destroy the Church of God. The duty of the Catholic Union is to meet them on this ground, and occupied by the forces at their command. Up-to-date, the Catholic Union will have to grapple with and overthrow the powerful organization of Freemasonry, and that these should have been put up on the back of the Bay lands. It points to the fact that the whole loss is only equal to one year's increase of Boston's wealth, which amounts in the last assessment to above $70,000,000 in twelve months. An expansion of currency, it shows, would increase the price of merchandise at the cost of rebuilding.

Great Fire in London.

LONDON, November 11.—A terrible fire broke out in this city to-day, causing general consternation and alarm. The flames originated in the extensive mills known as the London Grain Mills, and spread with great rapidity. The firemen were quickly on the ground and were aided in their endeavors to suppress the conflagration by numbers of the citizens, but without effect, the mills, together with a number of surrounding buildings, being entirely destroyed. A number of persons were in the burning buildings, when the walls fell with a terrific crash, carrying everything with them. The bodies of Mr. Kidd, the owner, buried beneath the ruins and were either crushed by the falling walls or burned alive. All efforts to save them proved fruitless. The exact number of lives lost is not known, but it is believed that eight or nine have perished in the burning mass. The fire burned with fearful rapidity, the flames were entirely subdued. The work of removing the bodies has commenced, and a large body of firemen are now engaged in the search. The total loss is estimated at seven hundred thousand pounds sterling.

A High Churchman on Catholicism in Ireland.

In Dublin, on the 23d October, the Archiepiscopal visitation took place at the Protestant Cathedrals. Rev. Dr. Travers, rector of St. Bartholomew's, delivered a sermon, the advanced High Church tone of which caused deep consternation. He said that certain persons sought to revise the prayer-book and the institutions of the Church of Ireland, and framed a revised Church, a church claiming to be a national branch of the Church Catholic, yet unmindful of the obligations of Catholicity; and Christian, yet not distinctively Puritan enough to win from their characteristic religious life those who refuse to prophesies when they would drive away her own most faithful sons. Such a Church would be burdened with the weight of the recollection of the penal laws and of political Protestantism, and it would be a continual source of weakness to the Roman Catholicism. On the Roman Catholic Church the preacher pronounced a glowing eulogium, declaring that that Church was the sole witness in the land for the Holy Trinity; that her religion withstood for nineteen centuries, and that she possessed in the Holy Eucharist, the divine institution of the Church, the sacrament of unity, visible grandeur and beauty of worship, and the preaching of the Gospel. Charitable ladies will hardly need to be reminded that the Christmas season is approaching, and that the Sisters of Mercy will be glad to receive any articles which may be contributed for the benefit of the poor. Such articles will be very thankfully received by Mrs. Mahon, Mrs. Tobin, Mrs. Casserly, Mrs. Mullany, Mrs. Tobin & Co., skirts and corset factory, Jansen, Temple & Co., furnishing co., Mrs. Baldwin & Davis, dry goods, Mrs. Tobin & Co., skirts and corset factory, Jansen, Temple & Co., furnishing co., &c. In fact, there can now be no doubt whatever that the evasion was not premeditated, but was rather an accident resulting from sheer carelessness and neglect of duty on the part of the jailors. The only thing remaining to be accounted for satisfactorily is the note by which Mr. WILLIAMS was induced to leave the prison and visit our city, where he was arrested to the order of the city. The chances are that it was written at the instigation of RILEY, the "trusty," who saw by this manuever the opportunity of getting rid of one of his custodians. No knives or revolvers were passed into the BROTHERTONS by any one, and the melodramatic tale of Jailor FRANKLIN's wife may be set down, very charitably, as the offspring of a nervously excited imagination. There was no bribery connected with the affair, for if the forgers had had the money, they would not have been fleeing on foot. Their friend to whom they have been, as they were, in want of the necessaries of life most of the time they were out of jail.

Their arrest was an exceedingly simple matter; so much so, indeed, as to surprise those who believed the criminals to be very resolute and desperate characters. There was no bloodshed, no scuffle, no resistance of any kind. One man stopped and captured both the forgers and their confederate, RILEY. It is true a small army, fully equipped with clubs, revolvers and shotguns, went in pursuit, but the heroes who composed it were not called upon to display their valor. The murderers were accomplices, and induced them to convey information to the police. Considerable speculation is made with respect to the identity of the party who effected the betrayal.

Circumstances seem to point strongly to a legal luminary who was engaged in the defense of the forgers, and got himself into trouble through his excessive cleverness. If this be so, it proves that the individual in question is utterly destitute of honorable principles, and is very foolishly themselves upon exhibiting traits of character. We should like to know how this reward is to be distributed, and who are the fortunate parties to share in it; but we fear our curiosity will not be gratified. There are wheels within wheels in these cases, and if the machinery were exposed to view, it would become apparent that the public were deceived by a trick of very portentous indeed to some parties, but by no means edifying.

We are glad that the INDUSTRIANUS have been reexplored, and hope that nothing will delay more injury to the community. From it strikes us that the munificence of the Board offered, and all the activity displayed by the insurance agents, are directly traceable to the fact that they were dangerous to the wealthy classes. Had they been triple-dyed murderers, there certainly would not have been so much excuse made about their escape. What trouble is being taken to secure the recapture of, Mr. "Pop" McLaughlin who so coolly walked out of Court after the capital conviction was recorded against him! What interest do the public show, whether or not justice is meted out to the score or so of red-handed assassins now awaiting trial in the State! A forger however, who might defraud a rich merchant or banker of thousands of dollars by merely changing the figures on a check, is a much greater criminal in the eyes of modern society.

THE BOSTON FIRE.

Terrible Destruction of Property.

BOSTON, November 10]—The fire first broke out Saturday evening, about six o'clock, in the rear end of the large five-story granite building on Summer street, corner of Kingston. The building was surrounded with a high Mansard roof, and adjoining all other buildings in the immediate vicinity. Directly the flames began to spread through the story beneath this roof, and before an engine or hose carriage was on the ground, great volumes of flames silently burst from the rear lower stories, and in less than twenty minutes the whole roof was ablaze, extending fully one hundred feet along Kingston street, was a sheet of flame, as was simultaneously the Summer street end, and in less than half an hour burst out of the roofs, and all up and down the broad and immense block, which was one mass of fire. There was no nearly a gale. The block in which the fire started was occupied by Baldwin & Davis, dry goods; Tenney, Tenney & Co., skirts and corset factory, Jansen, Temple & Co., furnishing co., &c. In fact, there can now be no doubt whatever that the evasion was not premeditated, but was rather an accident resulting from sheer carelessness and neglect of duty on the part of the jailors. The only thing remaining to be accounted for satisfactorily is the note by which Mr. WILLIAMS was induced to leave the prison and visit our city, where he was arrested to the order of the city. The chances are that it was written at the instigation of RILEY, the "trusty," who saw by this manuever the opportunity of getting rid of one of his custodians. No knives or revolvers were passed into the BROTHERTONS by any one, and the melodramatic tale of Jailor FRANKLIN's wife may be set down, very charitably, as the offspring of a nervously excited imagination. There was no bribery connected with the affair, for if the forgers had had the money, they would not have been fleeing on foot. Their friend to whom they have been, as they were, in want of the necessaries of life most of the time they were out of jail.

Their arrest was an exceedingly simple matter; so much so, indeed, as to surprise those who believed the criminals to be very resolute and desperate characters. There was no bloodshed, no scuffle, no resistance of any kind. One man stopped and captured both the forgers and their confederate, RILEY. It is true a small army, fully equipped with clubs, revolvers and shotguns, went in pursuit, but the heroes who composed it were not called upon to display their valor. The murderers were accomplices, and induced them to convey information to the police. Considerable speculation is made with respect to the identity of the party who effected the betrayal.

Circumstances seem to point strongly to a legal luminary who was engaged in the defense of the forgers, and got himself into trouble through his excessive cleverness. If this be so, it proves that the individual in question is utterly destitute of honorable principles, and is very foolishly themselves upon exhibiting traits of character. We should like to know how this reward is to be distributed, and who are the fortunate parties to share in it; but we fear our curiosity will not be gratified. There are wheels within wheels in these cases, and if the machinery were exposed to view, it would become apparent that the public were deceived by a trick of very portentous indeed to some parties, but by no means edifying.

We are glad that the INDUSTRIANUS have been reexplored, and hope that nothing will delay more injury to the community. From it strikes us that the munificence of the Board offered, and all the activity displayed by the insurance agents, are directly traceable to the fact that they were dangerous to the wealthy classes. Had they been triple-dyed murderers, there certainly would not have been so much excuse made about their escape. What trouble is being taken to secure the recapture of, Mr. "Pop" McLaughlin who so coolly walked out of Court after the capital conviction was recorded against him! What interest do the public show, whether or not justice is meted out to the score or so of red-handed assassins now awaiting trial in the State! A forger however, who might defraud a rich merchant or banker of thousands of dollars by merely changing the figures on a check, is a much greater criminal in the eyes of modern society.

The Fourth of November.

The 4th of November, according to the Roman Catholic calendar, is the Feast of San Carlos Borromeo, Cardinal of the Church of Carmelo valley, established A.D. 1770. To olden times it was the custom in the Catholic Church to celebrate this day with pomp and ceremony. The neighboring Indians of the Mission of Santa Cruz, San Juan and San Juan Bautista would assemble on the land and sea services, would come to assist at the services in church and at the hospitable table of the padres of San Carlos. After the religious exercises, the neophytes and gente de razon (Spanish population) were treated to a sumptuous banquet, and all enjoyed the grand day. The Feast is yet kept, but on a smaller scale. The Catholics of Carmelo valley, with many from this place, will be assembled in the Catholic church. The Holy Mass is celebrated by the parish priest of Monterey, a sermon is delivered by him and the Rosary is recited by those present, marching in procession around the church and the Mission. The ceremonies terminate with a feed, of which all partake.—Monterey Democrat.

Hyperion and brown spots on the face, eruptions, sunburns, scrofulous diseases, and all acne arising from impure blood, are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

BRIEF CITY ITEMS.

The Montgomery Guard is making preparations for a grand complimentary ball.

The Spring Valley Water Co. are now supplying San Francisco fire insurance companies with ice, something unheard of before.

It is reported that Nicholas Luning will shortly open a new bank and commission house on Montgomery street.

The bill for boarding the Fair jurors at the Lick House is just $700. The proprietor is urging the Court for the immediate payment.

George B. Scott, a printer, has been arrested for forging the checks of the Gamblers street Railroad Company. He has confessed his guilt.

The jury in the case of Henry H. McClintock, tried for the murder of Noah Mallender, being unable to agree on a verdict, was discharged. They stood six for manslaughter and six for acquittal.

The Scandinavian Society have resolved to employ counsel to defend Ole Johnson, who is under indictment for murder on the high seas, they having satisfied that the offense was committed in self-defense.

Rev. Father Buchard, S. J., commenced a mission in the Holy Cross Church, Lone Mountain, last Sunday. His services every morning at 6 o'clock, and again in the evening at 7½, to large congregations. The mission will terminate on Sunday evening next.

Judge Stanly, in his charge to the Grand Jury, admonishes severely, but justly, on the utter disregard of the sanctity office and duty of the Harbor Commissioners. He intimates that one or more of the Commissioners will be indicted by the Jury. Whatever charges they have discharged, and urged the Jury to make a thorough examination into the matter of public ballot boxes.

On Tuesday the orphans of the Catholic Orphan Asylum were the pleased recipients of fifteen dozen of beautiful apples from Mr. Adrianse, of Port Oakland. They were conveyed to the Asylum by the kind-hearted Captain Wells, from Oakland, free of charge. Many sincere thanks are expressed to the generous donor for such a kindness to the orphans.

The MacMahon Grenadiers turned out on Thursday evening last with their full complement of Chassars to the house. Captain Canavan had been presented with a handsome gold watch, guard, &c., by friends. We are reliably informed that he will soon leave for Europe, and we wish him a safe journey. We are sorry to lose him from among us, but we regret more to lose him from among us, but we regret more to lose him from among us, but we regret more

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOV. 24.

November 17—Seventeenth Sunday after Pentecost. 18—Monday—Octave of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin.
19—Tuesday—Elizabeth, Queen of Hungary.
20—Wednesday—St. Pontianus, Pope and Martyr.
21—Thursday—Feast of Valois, Confessor.
22—Thursday—Presentation of the B. V. Mary.
23—Friday—St. Cecilia, Virgin and Martyr.
24—Saturday—St. Clement, Pope and Martyr. St. Felicula, Martyr.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....NOVEMBER 16, 1872.

THE CATHOLIC UNION OF IRELAND.

In another column our readers will find the prospectus of an Association recently started in Dublin under the title of "The Catholic Union of Ireland." Last week we published a communication duly setting forth the objects of the Society and the manner in which it proposed to affect those objects. These two important maintenances appear from the people. We regret this extremely, as we are firmly convinced it proceeds altogether from a misapprehension of the real state of affairs. The movement is not a matter of any moment, and does not detract in the slightest from the intelligibility of the documents in question. By reading them attentively our countrymen will be enabled to form a correct idea of the nature and value of this association, and to determine what amount of support ought to be accorded to it by their brethren in the old land.

We do not hesitate to express our opinion that the "Catholic Union" will be a most useful, and a most glorious institution to the Catholic Church. We read with the prospectus and the address, the sole scope of the Union is to bring forward the Catholic claims for justice and redress, which claims will come and the attention of the Imperial Parliament and obtain recognition from the Government. An endeavor will also be made, by lectures, speeches and writings, we presume, to clear away all misrepresentations from those issues affecting the welfare of the Church which are being constantly and energetically set before the public. It is certainly most desirable that both these things should be done. Notwithstanding the passage of the Emancipation Act and the liberal spirit of the times, the Catholics of Ireland are still compelled to endure many grievances which millions in the power of the Parliament to remove. There is, for example, the inadequacy of their representation among the magistracy, grand-jurors, and, generally speaking, among the official, law-dispensing and governing bodies of the country. Then, again, the persistent refusal to grant a charter to the Catholic University, the enforcement upon the people of the miserable "national" system of education, and a perfect host of minor disabilities and annoyances are matters urgently calling for redress.

Of course, if Ireland regained her independence and had the making of her own laws, all these "things would have" very speedy solution, and there would be no necessity for making complaint about them; but that thrice-blessed consummation appears yet far distant; there is no immediate prospect of its achievement, and, naturally, many persons think it prudent to endeavor to obtain redress through the agency of the British Parliament. And as far as constitutional affairs are concerned, there can be no doubt whatever that the falsehoods and calumnies so incessantly put forward by the leaders and representatives have the effect of obscuring truth and seriously retarding the progress of the Church. It is a holy and wholesome thought, therefore, to frustrate their machinations and clear the good cause from their foul aspersions.

Inasmuch as the Catholic Union has determined to devote all its energies to the attainment of both these objects, it is plain one would imagine that it would meet the hearty support of all Irish Catholics. So it may, this does not appear to be the case. The fact, the Union has been received coldly by the press, and has not obtained much applause from the people. We regret this extremely, as we are firmly convinced it proceeds altogether from a misapprehension of the real state of affairs. We do not for one moment suppose that the Union was started as a sort of opposition to the Home Rule Association, and with the intention of destroying it.

It is asserted, we do not know on what grounds, that His Eminence Cardinal Cullen is strongly inimical to the Home Rule movement, and is the founder of the Catholic Union. We must say that we have not read a single sentence emanating from that distinguished Prince of the Church which could fairly be construed into a declaration of hostility against the national association. It is true, and nobody attempts to deny it, that His Eminence is most universally revered for his piety, beloved for his charity and admired for his attachment to holy faith, is credited with holding political opinions not shared by the great bulk of his flock; but, with rare moderation, he has always refrained from obtruding them upon others, and, indeed, it is notorious that he has never taken part in political discussions, save and except in so far as he interested to religious matters. So, although we admit the possibility of His Eminence not sympathising with the Home Rule Association, we do not believe that he founded the Catholic Union for the purpose of opposing it or interfering with its labors.

It seems to us that there is plenty of room for both societies, and that they can work in their different spheres without ever coming into conflict. The Home Rule movement is directed towards the attaining for Ireland of that degree of self-government which will enable her people to look after their own interests, and promote the prosperity of the country. It is, therefore, a purely political affair, concerning all classes of society, Protestants as well as Catholics. Its ultimate aim is that they cannot be attained by the men of any one creed, even the creed of the majority, for they demand the co-operation of the whole nation. The Catholic Union is formed to obtain the removal of certain grievances that still remain to bear on one section of the community, and, of course, it appeals only to those concerned.

These things being so, we confess we are unable to comprehend how any antagonism can spring up between the two bodies, unless it is willfully brought about by the malice or indiscretion of some partisan. There are the two associations, with their separate fields of action, and no conflicting interests. The Home Rule Association will work for national objects, requiring all the efforts of the united people; the Catholic Union will work for religious objects, requiring all the efforts of those belonging to one creed. Each, we are confident, is, if properly managed, capable of fulfilling its mission, and we hope it will do so. Both have our warmest sympathy and our best wishes.

DEFALCATIONS.

It would, probably, be too much to expect that the departments of our City Government should be completely free from defalcation plague which is making such devastation in the East. This has been our opinion for a long time, and, with an abiding certainty that it would come, we awaited the day of revelations. Now we have reached it, and we know that plundering has been carried on in the Harbor Commissioners' office. Very little has yet been made public of a nature to warrant a guess at the amount actually stolen; but there appears little room for doubting that it will prove large. It may be that the city has been swindled out of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

We are the parties to blame? Of course the Commissioners are to blame to a certain extent, for if they did their duty properly, and looked after their subordinates, the defalcations could never have occured. Whether there is a criminal, a sharer in the plunder, among the three gentlemen composing the Board remains to be seen. The public, under the impression that there is, have strictly begun to be very direct in their insinuations; but such promptness, unsupported by any evidence, is extremely unjust. There is one gentleman on the Board, long connected with this city, which he has seen grown up, as it were, from its infancy, and to whom it is much indebted for its prosperity, whose honor is so unquestioned that any suspicion or impeachment that every body concedes he cannot, in any way, be connected with the dishonest proceedings. Of the two remaining, one claims to be the discoverer of the frauds, and there is nothing to show that the other has proved unworthy of trust.

But some one must have stolen the money. Several of the wharfingers have been dismissed and others have been suspended; they are the small fry whilst are always made a peace-offering to public indignation on such occasions. But the citizens will, we trust, not be content with this, but insist upon a thorough and searching investigation that will discover the criminals, and end by locating them permanently in San Quentin. Our opinion is that the wharfingers had not all the spoils to themselves, and that, if guilty at all, they were only minor delinquents, who received a certain allowance for their silent complicity. But this is a matter it would be, perhaps, unfair to discuss at any length until we know the upshot of the investigation. More profitable were it to inquire why defalcations are so numerous throughout the country, and why the impression prevails that stealing is a systematised business in almost every branch of the public service—municipal, State and national. Undoubtedly the smallness of the salaries allowed is one reason.

For instance, a hundred dollars a month is no pay for a man like a wharfinger, who has to receive large sums of money every month in the year. If his services are worth anything they ought to be worth more than that miserable pittance. When all the successful of life are so high-priced a man to become efficient he offer him a small sum for a month's hard labor. Then it must be acknowledged that the inducements for thieving is so great, and the general morality of officials is so exceedingly lax, that for the one position which is sought for because of its legitimate profits at least twenty are sought for on account of what can be "made" out of them—that is, plainly speaking, for the bribes or the stealings that can be pocketed. Every day almost we hear of men, not desirous of office for the mere social distinction that it confers, spending twenty, thirty and even forty thousand dollars in electioneering for a position worth at most a couple of thousand dollars per annum, which can only be held for a few years. Take candidates strong propensities evidence that they mean to be dishonest from the start; yet we have never known of no instance in which it was made the subject or reproach or even objection to them.

Again, how many instances can be pointed out of officials, whose salaries are well known to be moderate, and who are ostentatiously have no other means of support, living in a style equal to that of persons with ten times their income! That circumstance alone ought be sufficient to arouse suspicion and call for an inquiry, but it never is! The truth must be confessed, bad teachings have lowered the moral tone of the community so that most officials take their positions with the tacit understanding that they may steal as much as they can without being found out. There are, to be sure, hundreds of thoroughly honest and honorable men in the public employ, but it is easy to know them by their quiet office quite as soon as they enter it. They do not build palatial mansions, keep fast horses or live in princely style upon the savings effected out of a third rate salary.

How is this great evil to be corrected? Simply enough—by the citizens making up their minds to elect none but honest men, and by keeping a very sharp watch upon them after they are in office. There is no other way.

THE FIRE IN BOSTON.

The wealthy capital of puritanic New England has been visited by the dread plague of fire. On Saturday night a conflagration broke out at the corner of Summer and Kingston streets, which, before it was checked, utterly consumed the business portion of the city, and left in a heap of smoking ruins. Although the destroying element did not overrun as much space as it did in Chicago, the actual money loss will be quite as great. The latest estimate yet given places the value of the property destroyed at eighty millions of dollars, and the highest at upwards of two hundred millions. There is a wide difference between these two calculations, but it is hard to say which is the more correct. However, there can be no doubt that the losses are immense. The reason why the damages are fixed at such high figures, although the number of buildings burned is not supposed to be one-tenth of that destroyed during the Chicago fire, is that the houses which were swept away were, almost without exception, huge and costly stores, crammed to the very roof with valuable goods. They contained more than is usual at this season of the year, for the horse-plague had deprived the merchants of the means of transportation, and left them with many large orders unexecuted. The same cause operated, to a certain extent, in lessening the chances of checking the conflagration at its commencement, inasmuch as horses were not available for pulling the engines to the scene of the fire.

Comparatively speaking, few dwelling houses were destroyed, so that the homeless are not by any means as numerous as at Chicago, where one hundred and ten thousand people were left by the flames without shelter. Nevertheless, a great amount of suffering must have been entailed on the working classes, twelve thousand of whom have been deprived of employment. So the relief funds which have been already raised in several cities will be urgently required to alleviate the distress among those whose resources are not sufficient to tide them over a prolonged period of enforced idleness. The Boston merchants themselves, and on the insurance companies. The good feeling evoked by Boston for sale and generous conduct has largely drawn against by their owners, and, of course, that money will have to be replaced by some means. As for the insurance companies, it is feared that many of these will succumb; and thus the disorder will be flung into circles that suffered nothing whatever from the flames. Several foreign companies were largely interested in the burnt district; but it seems taken for granted that they will be able to meet every cent of their liabilities. Yet it is also supposed that, warned by the Chicago and Boston disasters, they will eventually withdraw from all American risks. Probably from thirty to fifty per cent. of the insurance policies current in our great cities have been insured by English companies; and in case they decide upon abandoning their business, a monetary crisis will be rendered almost inevitable. Thus it happens that catastrophies like that which has fallen on Boston, although they seem merely local in their effects, really depress and paralyze trade all over the country.

With respect to the origin of the fire nothing has been made public yet, but there appears no reason for doubting that it was accidental. Nor was there any lack of energy on the part of the firemen, as their conduct has since been discovered. They admittedly did all that brave men could do under the circumstances. But it is evident that when once a fire gets possession of more than a single block of buildings, its subsequent course depends quite as much upon chance as upon human skill. In Boston the firemen worked under very great disadvantages. The streets were so narrow that it was impossible to bear the heat from the burning buildings at the other side, and thus no water could be thrown on. The only efficient means to check the ravages of the flames that could be devised was blowing up houses in the path of the fire, and this seems to have been resorted to with tolerable success. The high, slanting roofs, too, on which the firemen could not get footing, and which could not retain the water thrown upon them, made the progress of the destructive element more irresistible.

One good effect of this great disaster will be that other cities will look more sharply to their means of combatting fire. Here in San Francisco we are far from being as well provided as we ought to be, but some measures are being taken to remedy the deficiency. There is scarcely a city in America which has better reason to dread a conflagration. So many of the buildings are of wood that the flames could sweep our streets with appalling rapidity. The width of the streets and the moderate height of the houses are, however, some guarantee for our safety.

JAMES G. KENNA, Esq., of Cherokee, is the authorized agent for THE MONITOR at that place and vicinity. All persons indebted for the paper, and those wishing to subscribe, can pay to him. He is authorized to receive all monies due us and to receipt for the same.

A beautiful dressing and toilet article for the hair is Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer

THE ESCAPE OF THE BROTHERTONS.

Last week we chronicled the escape of the BROTHERTON forgers from the County Jail. Our paper was scarcely in the hands of its readers ere they were recaptured and again placed in the durance vile, to continue so, in all probability, until set free by due process of law. The escape created intense excitement, particularly in commercial circles, where it was felt no man's credit was safe so long as these skillful sharpers d'industrie were at large and in a position to recommence manipulating checks and drafts. Inasmuch as there was grave reasons to suspect that the BROTHERTONS had bought their liberty from corrupt officials, and were aided in making their escape by persons outside the jail, many people inveighed loudly against the management of the prison, and vehemently declared that "money could do anything in this country." But the circumstances under which the criminals were recaptured, and the revelations which have been made since, show clearly enough that a great deal of the excitement and alarm was unwalled for.

There is neither romance nor mystery in the story of their prison-breaking. We may eliminate all ideas of skill, or daring, or cunning, as connected with the method of escape. The whole affair was simplicity itself, and the success of the brothers having been secured by bribing the jailors or any other individuals. In fact, there can now be no doubt whatever but the escape was not premeditated, but was the rather an accident resulting from sheer carelessness and neglect of duty on the part of the prison officials. The only thing remaining to be accounted for is how so large a sum of money could be procured to bribe so much notice made about their escape. What trouble is being taken to secure the reception of Mr. "Tip" McLaughlin who so coolly walked out of Court when arraigned and sentenced for the same offence? What interest do the public show, whether or not justice is meted out to the score or so of red-handed assassins now awaiting trial in the State? A forger is never, we might defraud a rich merchant or banker of thousands of dollars by merely changing the figures on a check, is a much greater criminal in the eyes of modern society.

The Marysville Hibernian Benevolent Society.

We take the following paragraph from the Marysville Appeal of November 2d:

At an annual at olden of the Marysville Hibernian Benevolent Society, held on the 30th inst, the following named gentlemen were elected officers for the ensuing year: President, Timothy J. Power (Hibernia Lodge); Vice-President, William Pinkerton (re-elected); Secretary, Thos. P. Ward (re-elected); Treasurer, Denis Hayes; Financial Committee—Daniel Campbell, John Coughlin, Thomas Lallaway (re-elected); Committee for visiting the sick—First Ward, Matt Woods, Thomas McMahon; Second Ward, Thomas Cotter; Third Ward, John H. Burns, J. P. Lydon; Fourth Ward, B. H. Harney and M. Berdon.

We are glad to have to state at the same time that the Society is in a splendid condition, financially and otherwise, and is, thanks to its energetic officers, making great progress.

Father Jerden and his Parishioners.

Another evidence of the affection with which the people of St. Francis' parish regard their late pastor, Rev. J. H. Jerden, has exhibited last Sunday. At the monthly meeting of St. Francis' Christian Doctrine Association, on the afternoon of that day, the preliminary business having been transacted, the reverend Father was introduced to a seat on the platform beside the new pastor, Rev. Father Harrington, and the President of the Society rose and spoke as follows:

REV. FATHER JERDEN: Previous to your departure from the scenes of your late labors to other fields of usefulness, the teachers desire to express to you their sincere gratitude for your zeal and devotion in promoting the interest of the Sunday School. They desire to thank you for your unvarying kindness on themselves and to the children under their care, and beg leave to assure you that the Sunday School, which owes its existence and its success to your untiring efforts, shall be continued under our new pastor as a monument of your care for the little ones of the flock. Having been associated with and working under your direction during the past seven years, the teachers take this opportunity of giving expression to their entire approval of the manner in which you have conducted the affairs of the Association. But it is evident that when once a fire gets possession of more than a single block of buildings, its subsequent course depends quite as much upon chance as upon human skill. In Boston the firemen worked under very great disadvantages. The streets were so narrow that it was impossible to bear the heat from the burning buildings at the other side, and thus no water could be thrown on. The only efficient means to check the ravages of the flames that could be devised was blowing up houses in the path of the fire, and this seems to have been resorted to with tolerable success. The high, slanting roofs, too, on which the firemen could not get footing, and which could not retain the water thrown upon them, made the progress of the destructive element more irresistible.

One good effect of this great disaster will be that other cities will look more sharply to their means of combatting fire. Here in San Francisco we are far from being as well provided as we ought to be, but some measures are being taken to remedy the deficiency. There is scarcely a city in America which has better reason to dread a conflagration. So many of the buildings are of wood that the flames could sweep our streets with appalling rapidity. The width of the streets and the moderate height of the houses are, however, some guarantee for our safety.

The Catholic Union of Ireland.

Last week we printed a document circulated by "The Catholic Union of Ireland." We now give the prospectus of that Association as we find it to the Dublin Freeman's Journal. There appears to be some fear entertained by certain parties that the Union may be used as a set off or counter-weight to the Home Rule Association:

CONSTITUTION, FORM, AND ACTION OF THE UNION.

1. The Catholic Union of Ireland consists of members and associates of both sexes, and of every profession and rank. The annual subscription is required of one pound from members, and one shilling from associates.

2. Its affairs shall be managed by a council consisting of ex-officio and elected members. The ex-officio members shall be the Bishops of Ireland, the Catholic peers and members of Parliament being also members of the Union. The elected members shall be thirty.

3. One-fifth of the council shall retire each year in the order of priority of election, but such retiring members shall be eligible for re-election.

4. Accidental vacancies in the council shall be filled up by itself, subject to the approbation of the Union at its general meeting.

5. The council may appoint committees for specific purposes from the members of the Union, with such powers and for such duration as circumstances may demand. The chairman of such committees shall be qualified to submit and vote at the deliberations of the council.

6. The funds of the Union shall be vested in treasurers, under the control of the council.

7. Two general meetings of the Union shall be held in each year.

8. The business to be transacted at such meetings shall be arranged by the council, and the agenda paper thereof shall submit such motions as they desire to make at least five days before the meeting.

9. The ordinary meetings of the council shall be held each week, or each month, as may be determined by the council. Extraordinary meetings of the Union may be convened by any seven members of the council. At all meetings the chairman shall have a casting vote.

10. The secretary of the council, the treasurers, and honorary secretaries, shall be elected by the council. Power is reserved to appoint a paid under secretary.

The purpose of the society is explained in the following objects: The decline of the Church have seized upon in Ireland and denounced to the Italy, and religious houses which for centuries were the boast of the country have been suppressed. The Catholic Union must not relax their exertions until these sacrilegious laws are repealed, and the property restored. Our enemies have tried to undermine the true religion, and succeeded in a large degree with the young by banishing religion from the school. It becomes, therefore, one of the objects of the Catholic Union to promote Catholic education, which we who pay, subscribing some of the only reasonable buildings ever in this country, and occupied by the Irish people, are the Rev. Dr. Cahill & Co., Anderson, Heath & Co., Dr. Anderson, Heath & Co., and Mr. Jerden, Esq., Belle & Co., in mass of ruins. About eleven be seen on Lincoln, Kasez, South, and other streets in that immediate vicinity. The duty of the Catholic Union, in opposition to this, will be to uphold and defend the principles of religion, and to disseminate its own correct information bearing on the interests of religion. Hundreds of men, women and children are now starving, and every variety of household goods, which, if saved from the raging flames were carelessly dashed it, the divine forgiveness. In conclusion we call upon every gentleman strongly inveighed against the revision of the prayer-book.

BLOWING UP OF BUILDINGS.

Repeated solicitations on the part of the citizens of San Francisco, and especially Engineer Damrell, just before two days orders to everybody to keep away from the Jessie Mill street, gave the fireman leave to blow up buildings on the line of fire.

Were laid in Federal street about 2 p.m., and the street immediately in front of the Jessie Mill, and in the path of the conflagration, operations were begun at once, the shocks shaking the city for miles around.

Starting from a point in the Bay of San Francisco, on the line of twenty-foot tide, the fire swept up Jessie street on the north side of the Market and Fifth streets, through the counties of Marin, Sonoma, Mendocino and Humboldt, to a point in Humboldt Bay, a distance of two hundred miles; also a branch of main line from Tiburon to Bodega, a distance of forty miles; also a branch of main line, commencing at the Rafael, in Marin county, and running through the counties of Sonoma and Napa, and into the county of Solano, to a point on the Central Pacific Railroad. Near Donahue a connection will be made with the road from that point to Oakland, from which latter point Humboldt Bay is only one hundred and thirty miles distant. With the completion of new franchises granted to the Pacific Railroad Company, the city brought to a verdict of $10,000,000 will also receive the assistance of the Legislature, and judgment entered against the other defendants.

The investigation into the Brotherton forgeries, which commenced in the Police Court, on the 11th, a party of prosecutors had been examined, was brought to a close on Saturday last, when Judge Dwinelle, after hearing the arguments of counsel, said he had been favored with a written opinion of Judge Sawyer, of the United States Circuit Court.

The Santa Clara College Dramatic Society gave an entertainment on Wednesday evening of the week. The following were the pieces performed: "Mr. and Mrs. Peter White," and "Ici On Parle Français." We understand the entertainment was attended to all, and regret our inability to be present.

Colonel Henry M. Baker, formerly of Santa Cruz, from Brigade, died at Jersey City on the night of the 13th.

There is no feeling of despondency in Boston, but a determination to overcome misfortune soon to meet their reverses manfully and conquer them.

It is feared that six persons lost their lives in the burning of Jessie Mill street.

The Chronicle says there is no want of work. Up to last Monday had applied for shelter, probable that the great reserve and the thrift and forethought, besides the comprehensive regular charities will meet the condition of the people, and secure in their home in, and there is a reactionary

THE BOSTON FIRE.

Terrible Destruction of Property.

BOSTON, November 10.—The fire first broke out Saturday evening, about six o'clock, in the rear end of the large five-story granite building on Summer street, corner of Kingston. The building was surrounded with a high Mansard roof, owned jointly with other buildings in the immediate vicinity. Directly the flames began to spread through the story beneath this roof, and before an engine or hose carriage was on the ground, great volumes of flames already burst from the rear lower stories, and in less than twenty minutes the whole roof was enveloped in a sea of fire. The fire soon communicated with the adjoining building on Summer street, which was also a five-story granite building, and in less than half an hour flames burst out of the roofs, and all up and down the broad and immense block, fanned by the high wind that blew, soon had the whole block in a blaze. The fire started was occupied by Messrs. Farwell & Davis, dry goods, A. Twigg & Co., skirt and corset factory, and Messrs. Tapley & Co., furnishing goods. Its destruction had not progressed before the flames and sparks from it had set fire to the block of buildings on the north side, and the fire spread almost instantly

IN THREE DIRECTIONS;

while the adjoining block, then to Kingstock and a number of fine brick and buildings, occupied by wholesale and retail dealers in all kinds of goods. All were engulfed in rapid succession, about two o'clock this morning, a part of a building on Arch street, a store from Summer said almost instantly afterward of flames in that neighborhood. Soon they had spread down a thoroughfare, and were burning in a perfect line from all the windows in front of the good stores of Hawley, Folsom & Co., and Phillips & Sampson, dealers in fine stone and granite structures, and owned by large wholesale dealers in goods, clothing, fancy goods, furniture, millinery, &c. The French Church on Summer street, corner of Otis and Summer streets, was destroyed, and now the fire began to speedily up.

THE HOUSES OF SUMMER STREET,

from roof to roof opposite the church, enveloping the adjoining in almost in a moment. The flames then leaped across Arch street, and up toward Washington street, every scores of wholesale houses in the dry goods line, and all of which are very extensive establishments, and all of which are filled with goods of the most valuable description. The entire block on the west side of Washington street, from Summer to Winter, was soon in flames, and now the fire began to spread in the direction of Washington street, and the whole block on the west side of that Irish Barbarity vs. English Civilisation.

It has been the fashion with, unfortunately, too many English newspapers to gloat over and magnify to the utmost any instance of crime that can be cited, and to endeavor to extenuate and even excuse atrocities perpetrated by their own countrymen. The English father or the English mother may for weekend months be plodding over how he or she can best make away with some member of the family, and marching after morning we may read of the mutilated or poisoned body of this unfortunate victim and that. All this may become a matter of course. Such cold-blooded murders so frequently occur in London that we have become quite used to them. The writers in the English press too often treat their atrocities on a simple economic theory, and attribute them to the inevitable consequences of civilization and luxury. But as soon as an Irish peasant is—through the operations of what he looks upon as an unjust law and a tyrannical, shoe-driving landlordry—driven for consolation to habits of intoxication, and in a moment of drunken madness accepts the life of a person whom he believes to be his greatest wrong-doer; no sooner can it be said that an "agrarian outrage" has occurred in Ireland than we begin to hear of the brutal nature of the Irish people.

It is sad to think that any section of British journalism should be so blinded by their prejudices as to fail to recognize in such a course of conduct as this. It is not the proper way to treat such a grave subject. This is not the right course that could be pursued to smooth away the differences which have so long been insurmountable obstacles to the real union of England and Ireland. Editors of newspapers have before now gone to much trouble to deduce the character of a people from the nature of the crimes which prevail among them, with the object of endeavoring to make out that the Irish peasant is by nature unmoral or hopp a very low position in the social scale. What would such writers think if this same principle were applied to England? If this principle can be made to hold good, then we are about the most cold-blooding, throat-cutting, poisoning and barbarous nation that modern Europe can boast of. Has Ireland or has any other country produced anything superior in the way of crime to that which is to be found in almost all the newspapers of the past week? The case of Mary Ann Cotton, the heroine of the "West Auckland horrors," as it has been termed, ought to teach us not to be too ready in criticising what we consider the barbarity of other countries. The story of this vile woman's career has cast a thrill of horror throughout the length and breadth of England. Let us take for example of the lessons it teaches, and be in future less vain and more merciful and considerate towards our neighbors.—Universe, October 12.

Intemperance Meeting.

It is a significantly curious coincident that on the Sunday preceding the eighty-second anniversary of the birth of "the Apostle of Temperance" an English Catholic Archbishop should be found addressing a large open-air meeting in the principal city of the British empire in support of the very movement which made the name of Father Mathew celebrated all over the civilised globe. The meeting on Clerkenwell Green on the Sunday afternoon was one of the most remarkable demonstrations which the metropolis of England has ever seen. Ever since the "glorious Reformation" the great bulk of the people of England have been accustomed to see moving a real live Archbishop. Most reverend prelates under the Protestant regime are not expected to go far beyond the precincts of their palace or their cathedral or their luxurious bench in the House of Lords. Preaching to the vast bulk of the people, going out into the midst of the multitude, imitating the example set them by our Lord and His apostles, to beneath the dignity of the modern ecclesiastic as he is pictured by his servile toadies. All this real practical work of going into the highways and byways in search of lazy sheep, who had been left to the unbusinesslike care of the unsalaried undershepherds, was left to be done by one who in all the attitude he can boast of to anybody —be he Christian, Jew or Atheist—who will condescend to give him at a week during the open-air preaching season, England has had to wait for the arrival of a real Catholic hierarchy to see once more an Archbishop mixing familiarly among her people, and noble and noble and significant and telling was the appearance of the Archbishop of Westminster among the thousands crowded assembled on Clerkenwell Green, on Sunday afternoon, in support of the cause which the universally-revered Father Mathew had so much at heart. It is more than likely that just about the same time the Archbishops and bishops of Churches of by law established the ground flood with their power and their rent of the royal Indian Henry VIII., forced upon the people of England—were preparing to enjoy to the full the genuine luxuries which they do not scruple to make peculiar to their offices. What a contrast here I do England, when with you they see through the religious sham which you have inherited and have been obliged to put up with, through the ungodliness of your ancestors! If we are to judge by appearances, the hemlock is nearly exploded.—Universe, October 12.

The Italian King.

Victor Emmanuel has again quitted what, by a kind of sarcasm we suppose, his friends are pleased to call his capital. In other words, the meritorious usurper has fled from the city of the Pope-King. Naples is honored and blessed with his sacred presence. This persistent terror of the Piedmontese, this dread of staying in the midst of the violated shrines of the religion of his ancestors, this persistence remains which he has not yet been able to smother or harden himself against, is, after all, something in the sovereign of man's favor. He bears still an echo of his childhood's faith, and must that shall die quite away, Victor Emmanuel will be altogether lost. A ministerial crisis is spoken of as imminent. The representatives of the Italian Government at Florence and seem likely to stay there—at least there is no rumor of their removal to Rome. The law regarding the religious orders is likely to produce the greatest trouble in the Florentine Cabinet. Already bills have been presented with the Falco and Venosta. As for Lanza, he changes every day. It appears now, in spite of all the official and ex-official statements by which our enemies endeavored to stifle the truth, that the entry of the Piedmontese troops into Rome has never yet received the approbation of a single European State. Should Rattazzi be minister of the impending new Cabinet, two things will follow—its wholesale suppression of the religious orders and war with France. The veriest daughter of the Church" must unfold the Parliament and cry, Excusa Mentiyas, to which we say with Dondis, "Marry and amen, and in a most happy hour." France has a long account to settle with Italy, even laying aside the Church's quarrel.—Universe, October 12.

A Romance in Real Life.

The following is from a lady correspondent of the London Telegraph:

A good story for ladies is going the round of London society, which I believe, from information obtained from private sources to be perfectly true in its main points although exaggerated in its detail when told by those people of exuberant imagination whose business it is to provide food for the insatiable dietitics of the metropolis. The young lady is the daughter of one of the wealthy great London physicians, whose fortune she inherited. She was what the French call en petite sante—not absolutely ill, yet far from well; pale, languid, helpless, undecided as to what was needful to restore her to the robust health she once enjoyed. Her mother suggested a visit to Brighton, and thither she went with some indifference with which she had repaired to every other sea-side or watering place, feeling quite assured that the visit would be made in vain. But she was mistaken; for her future was awaiting her, in the shape of a sturdy broad-shouldered Teuton—the very one who blows the big bassoon in a German band. How the impression first was made no one can tell, but that it was while his cheeks were puffed out, and his fingers standing from his hands with the violence of the exertion of playing in the overture to "Guillaume Tell," or whether it was the languor which ensued on the cessation

Industrial Condition of the Slope.

The Alvarado Beet Sugar Mill has been running now a little more than two months on the best crop of 1872, and will probably be busy for four or five months more, working up fifty tons of beets per day. The Alvarado crop of 1870 yielded 500,000 pounds of sugar; that of 1871, 750,000 pounds; and that of 1872 will be between 1,000,000 and 1,250,000 pounds. The average per centage of sugar obtained from the beets was under eight in 1870, about eight last year, and is eight and a quarter now.

A company has been organized to cut a tunnel to drain Eagle Lake, which lies about one hundred miles east of Shasta, and covers an area of about twenty-five square miles, with a considerable body of swamp land about its edge.

Riverside, in San Bernardino county, produced twenty pounds of opium this year, the largest amount grown in any one year in the State. Complaint is made that not more than $2 50 per pound can be obtained for it here, while Smyrna opium, not better in quality, sells for $7 50. Some of the Italian chesnut trees, planted in Sonoma seven years ago, have commenced to bear. The taro (colocasium esculentum) of the Polynesian Islands has been grown several years near Oakland, but we have not heard that any of the tubers fit for cooking have been obtained. It would do better in the valleys south of Santa Barbara, and is worthy of attention there, as it is very prolific and not unpalatable. The Ventura Signal says that A. W. Lester, of Colonia, made some watermelon syrup this year as an experiment, and will next season make a large quantity of it.

The completion of the Utah Southern Railroad from Salt Lake City to Lehi, 40 miles distant, and the construction of several branch roads will give a large impetus (if thirty miles) leading to the mining districts, Indians a commendable spirit of enterprise in Utah, and will have much influence in stimulating agricultural and mining industry in that Territory.

At the Presidential election Santa Barbara county voted on a proposition to give $200, one to the county and one to build a road through the county near and parallel to the ocean shore, and rejected it. Santa Cruz county voted to give a subsidy to a railroad from Pajaro, near Watsonville, by way of the county seat along the shore to the San Mateo line. That part of the road between Pajaro and Santa Cruz, twenty miles, will probably be made soon: the other portion would be more costly and less profitable, and its construction may be delayed until the San Mateo provides for a road across its territory in this city. In Los Angeles county the voters rejected the proposition to give a subsidy of $577,000 to the San Diego and Los Angeles Railroad, and adopted that to give the same sum in addition to $150,000 of stock now held by the county in the Wilmington Railroad to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of Calcornelius for building fifty miles of road, half of it northward from the county seat and the other half eastward. Rumor said that if the votes were favorable, the Southern Pacific would buy the Wilmington Road. We should think that the railroad to Newhall Gosben (the railroad station of Visalia) and Tipton, built in May and June last, is modeled on the railroad policy adopted, not in the San Joaquin Valley Railroad Company which built the road from Lathrop to Goshen, but in the Southern Pacific of California, which has the Columbia river, will use its money to build up a great terminal city at Puget Sound, to the injection of which it has added a branch road to connect the Union Pacific Railroad with the navigation system of the Columbia would be of great service to protect the State. It is evident that such a connection would be of great service, even as an extensive district, and it is a matter of regret that Congress has not made a land grant to aid it. The distance from Walla Walla to Kelton (the nearest point of the road in Utah) is 490 miles by a direct line, and at least 500 miles by any particular railroad route, and the grant of land worth $1,000 per mile will probably not be asked to secure its construction.—Alta, November 11.

Cotton in California.

Los Angeles Star, Nov. 2.

Last year Mr. C. D. Davis raised a crop of cotton in Fresno county, and was so well pleased with the result of his venture that he put in twice the crop this year. The Expositor gives the following concerning this year's operations:

"Mr. Davis put in a field of forty acres and picked a million per acre rent for the land, and used thirty pounds of seed per acre, but he counted in drills and did not irrigate. There seems to be something peculiar in the growth of this cotton in the second crop. One hundred acres already has been completed, and preparations are now being made to commence picking the second crop. Many of the appear in as great numbers on the plant, as large and open as those of the first crop. Some of the plants have as high as 150 bolls on them. A sample of both plant and cotton may be seen at our office. All the labor attached to the cultivation of the crop was performed by one man, with now and then the assistance of Mr. Davis himself. The estimated expense of the crop, including rent, cultivating, picking and all incidentals, amounts to $772. The present situation of the crop furnishes many evidences that may not be seen at other times, and it would be well for parties contemplating to grow cotton to visit the field at this time. Mr. Davis is as well pleased with the success he has met with that he has rented 160 acres of land for the same purpose next year, so have many others in this vicinity, in all 1,000 acres. From present appearances we are led to believe that our county is soon to be known as a cotton-growing county."

The Salinas (Kern county) Southern Californian says: "Cotton picking is all the go out on the Cotton Ranch. The frost that occurred last week has opened the bolls and caused the whole field to bloom into dingy white. It is estimated that the crop will turn off 4,000 pounds to the acre, which, all things considered, is a most satisfactory exhibit. A ginning apparatus has been sent for to Los Angeles, and is expected here next week."

MR. PETER KEARNS, of Salinas City, has kindly consented to serve as agent for THE MONITOR in that locality. He has full power to receive subscriptions and pay and all matters connected therewith. We will recognize all his acts as agent.

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

CALAVERAS COUNTY.

The Calaveras Chronicle of the 9th contains the following: The Horse-thief mine, near Jesus Maria continues to pan out as well as ever. A recent clean-up after crushing ten tons of rock yielded $380. The ledge is looking splendidly, and now that everything about the mine has been got into shape for working to advantage, the returns from the Horse-thief will be larger than ever.

The Mokelumne Hill and Campo Seco Water Company inland again running water in the old ditch leading to the reservoir near Cal Camp. In anticipation of again having water for mining purposes in this vicinity, miners are actively engaged in making preparations so as to be in readiness when water can be obtained. Doubtless there is a great deal of ground that will pay good wages with water at a reasonable price.

NEVADA COUNTY.

The Empire, of Ophir Hill, is doing magnificently. A few days ago a new, large and rich ledge was struck in the eighth level. The new-found ledge is fully three feet in thickness, and shows well in heavy sulphurets and in free gold. The depth at which the discovery has been made, gives a great extent of backs.

The Transcript has the following: The North Bloomfield Gravel Mining Company have purchased the controlling interest and stock of the Badger Hill and Cherokee Gravel Mining company, and it is their intention to open out the claims of the company as soon as possible. They have already the claims under way and struck the ledge 20 feet below the old works. Since they struck ledge they have taken out between nine or ten rock, which has just been worked at the Pluckburg mill and paid $21 per ton.

BUTTE COUNTY.

The Hesilian Miner of November 2d says: The mining prospects of Hesilian and the surrounding districts are of a most flattering character.

Old mines have been lying idle for the past six years for the want of proper knowledge of the manner in which they could be worked profitably, and which were formerly under the control of superintendents who have never been in mine before they came here, have been re-located and worked to advantage. Seven years of constant working and experiment have overcome all former impediments, and mining in this county is no longer an experiment. Here conveys us safety, plenty and a later quartz mining locality, and one that, having extensively proved good and will forever, is now recovering from a long season of depression, with a most encouraging prospect of becoming a flourishing and progressive mining county.

PLACER COUNTY.

The Herald of the 9th says rich ore has been struck in the Auburn mine, in the bottom of the main drift, which has been in from the 175-foot level, through rich rock, some 50 feet, when another force was put to work running a cross cut drift from the same level, and at about 40 feet they struck a rich body of selling ore. At this point the ledge is widening and growing better, and is developing into another rich mineral pay-shoot.

SIERRA COUNTY.

The following is from the Mountain Messenger: The Highland & Mineral Mining Company of Allegheny have struck pay dirt in their tunnel on the West Fortune side of the ledge. The difficulty of which the New York company has been settled, they having decided to sell rather than spend their money in the unprofitable business of law-suit. There is every prospect of large dividends from this property, as the tunnel has to go a great enough from the tunnel to wash all their dirt, and the expenses of hoisting and pumping will be saved.

Nevada.

The Pioche Record gives the following summary of affairs at Pioche for the week ending November 3d: The week just ended is more interesting as it included the last close of the month of October. The bullion shipments for that month amounted to $464,537 97, which, considering the limited means of reduction afforded by the mills, is a splendid record. It also marked the end of the Pioche mine. The month of November will show a considerable increase on this amount, as the last run of the mill did not finish its monthly run until the 4th. It must also be recollected that the company did not commence crushing until the 15th of October. Now the Dry Valley mill is working up to its full capacity, and the effects of its work will have a very sensible effect on shipments. The developments can only have one impression, and that is that the more the mines of Pioche are explored and tested, the more convincing proof do they afford of their great value and assured permanence.

Breach of Promise Case.

At the Surrey Sessions on Monday, a jury was impanelled before the Under Sheriff of Surrey to assess damages in a case of breach of promise of marriage. The plaintiff was Miss Gilbert, is the daughter of a surveyor in Fulham, and was also organist of a church at Walham Green. The defendant, a young man named White, is the son of a banker and connected with the bank. In courtship, it was stated, began during a visit paid to the island by the plaintiff about the middle of last summer, and continued until Prior of the present year, when the defendant met Miss Gilbert a lodger in which he shortly announced that he had transferred his affections to another, and urged her to return all his letters and all presents. Some of the plants have as high as 150 bolls on them. A sample of both plant and cotton may be seen at our office. All the labor attached to the cultivation of the crop was performed by one man, with now and then the assistance of Mr. Davis himself. The estimated expense of the crop, including rent, cultivating, picking and all incidentals, amounts to $772. The present situation of the crop furnishes many evidences that may not be seen at other times, and it would be well for parties contemplating to grow cotton to visit the field at this time. Mr. Davis is as well pleased with the success he has met with that he has rented 160 acres of land for the same purpose next year, so have many others in this vicinity, in all 1,000 acres. From present appearances we are led to believe that our county is soon to be known as a cotton-growing county."

The Salinas (Kern county) Southern Californian says: "Cotton picking is all the go out on the Cotton Ranch. The frost that occurred last week has opened the bolls and caused the whole field to bloom into dingy white. It is estimated that the crop will turn off 4,000 pounds to the acre, which, all things considered, is a most satisfactory exhibit. A ginning apparatus has been sent for to Los Angeles, and is expected here next week."

MR. PETER KEARNS, of Salinas City, has kindly consented to serve as agent for THE MONITOR in that locality. He has full power to receive subscriptions and pay and all matters connected therewith. We will recognize all his acts as agent.

The Warning has been Heeded.

Since the exposure of the sidescripts made by certain unscrupulous local dealers in palm off the coarse astringents, made from cheap and impure materials in the place of the great national tonic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, public opinion has set strongly against these deceptive and dangerous preparations. Every imposition is gone, or soon will be. When the fight is let into description it soon will down. Persons who trifle with their own health, by using unknown preparations, with no guarantee to sustain them, or who to established specific, proven by twenty years experience, to be exactly what it is claimed to be, it is their own fault if they are made to repent their temerity. Many have done so, and are doing so daily. Not one of the great public speakers has advanced in favor in the same ratio the demand for the leading proprietary and remunerative medicines of America was ever so great as it has been this season. From the fever and ague districts of the West, southwest and South, it is literally overwhelming, and it may be said of the sufferer from all parts of the country of the curses it is affecting in diagnosis, bilious complaints, and chronic constipation, that "there name is legion." Everywhere the sick and feeble seem to have realized the fact that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is good, and trusting what is spuriously and dangerously the numerous "Bitters," under various names, which are but the miserable imitator to counterfeit the Stomach Bitters, should be avoided, for their own sakes, by the sick and the public at large. Hostetter's Bitters are procurable in bottles only, and never sold in bulk. 2

DRY GOODS, ETC.

PLEASE NOTE THE NUMBER

OF THE NEW

DRY GOODS

EMPORIUM,

No. 144 FOURTH STREET,

NEAR HOWARD,

WHERE YOU WILL SEE

The Best Selected and the Cheapest STOCK OF DRY GOODS IN THE CITY!

BROWN & BARRY BEG TO ACQUAINT their friends and the public that they are daily receiving large lots of Foreign and Domestic DRY GOODS, which they are offering at prices that will induce purchasers to favor a large amount of patronage. They think to mention a few articles, which will be found to be a few of what the judge said to Lewis in passing sentence:

"You have been found guilty of publishing a libel, in my opinion of a most atrocious character. You have thrown reflections on the character and integrity of a religious body, and that this body consists of women seems to me to add additional aggravation to your offense. It is a monstrous power that a person, having the use of the press, should be allowed to make his paper the medium for spreading abroad such foul aspersions as these fellow citizens. If this were allowed to pass unnoticed, no one's reputation would be safe. You could not contribute a more flagrant serious charge than that complained of—a charge which I have said before is of a serious kind. Before making a charge of attempted murder you ought to have been perfectly aware that there was adequate proof; but here there was no proof at all; it is only right for the interests of the people of the colony that their good name and reputation should not be assailed with impunity, and that men should not be allowed to make these groundless charges.

RAIN THIS ITEM.—From to-day until New Year's you can get the best bargains ever offered in this city in French cloths, overcoats, coats, cassimy, silver plate and jewelry, at the Golden Eagle Clothing House, 144 Fourth street, corner Howard. Not only will there be very large improvements in these goods, but there will be very large opening beautiful holiday presents, and the finest and most elaborate store in the city.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.,

HAVE JUST RECEIVED

From New York

LARGE AND WELL ASSORTED

ADDITIONS TO THEIR COMPLETE STOCK

—OF—

DRY GOODS

COMPRISING—

SILKS AND DRESS GOODS

OF THE LATEST STYLES,

Suitable for Fall and Winter Wear.

Plain and Embroidered Linen Sets, Collars, Sleeves and Cuffs.

Initial Handkerchiefs, Lace Collars, Sleeves, Sets and Handkerchiefs.

Ladies' and Misses' Hosiery and Gloves.

La Vella, Framed and Other Corsets.

Ladies' and Misses' Merino Undergarments.

Embroidered Flannel.

Linen and Linen Goods: Napkins and Tea's Cloths; all the brands in Cotton; Towels and Toweling.

Shawls, Flannels, Blankets and Quilts.

Laces, Curtains and Curtain Lace by the yard.

Piano and Table Covers.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Three Cases more English Serge, at 75 cents; worth $1 25.

Three cases more Salmon, at 75 cents; worth $1 25.

Four cases White Marseilles Quilts, at $1; worth $1 50

☞ All our Goods are new and of good quality, at prices within the reach of all classes of consumers.

E. SUPPLE,

—IMPORTER OF—

Foreign and Domestic Dry Goods

BLANKETS, QUILTS,

Sheetings, Linens, Drumasks & Towels,

No. 126 Third Street,

Near Howard.....San Francisco

A large assortment of Housekeeping Goods always on hand. no2-3m

DRY GOODS, ETC.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.

NO. 7

Montgomery St.

BROWN & BARRY,

144 FOURTH STREET.

s10 1m

IMMENSE STOCK

—OF—

DRY GOODS!

NORTON & GAVAN,

154 THIRD STREET,

HAVING PURCHASED FOR CASH AN ENTIRE Bankrupt Stock of

DRY GOODS,

WILL OFFER DURING THE

MONTH OF NOVEMBER

The greatest inducements ever offered to cash purchasers in this city. The stock comprises

Black, Cream Colors and Glace SILKS;
Irish, Frisian and Japanese POPLINS;
Empress Cloths and ALPACAS;
Plain, Striped and Fancy BEIGE GOODS;
Mourning BAREGE GOODS;
Scotch and Cashmere SHAWLS;
Scotch Plaid and Striped SHAWLS;
Blankets, Flannels and Sheetings;
Red Spreads, Towellings and Table Linens.
And a variety of other Dry Goods.

Terms Cash and Delivery Guaranteed.

Fancy Goods.

All of which will be sold at LESS than ORIGINAL COST.

☞ Ladies wanting bargains in Dry Goods are requested to examine our stock and compare prices with other stores.

SAMPLES GIVEN OF ALL GOODS.

☞ STRICTLY ONE PRICE. ☜

NORTON & GAVAN,

154 THIRD STREET,

at Near Howard.

TOBIN,

DAVISSON

& CO.

HAVE A FULL STOCK OF THE FOLLOWING Goods, which they offer at extremely low prices:

GENT'S FURNISHING GOODS,

HOSIERY, SCARFS,
LINEN BOSOMS, NECK TIES,
SHIRTS AND DRAWERS, SUSPENDERS,

Woolen EDGINGS,

ALL KINDS.

HAMBURG EDGINGS,

NEW PATTERNS.

Linen Goods.

BLACK ALPACAS

Of the celebrated DOUBLE-FACED BUFFALO Brand. Sole Agents for

Cheney Brothers Grey Grain Silks.

TOBIN, DAVISSON & CO.

s10-3m

DRY GOODS, ETC.

J. J. O'BRIEN & CO.,

606 MARKET STREET,

HAVE JUST RECEIVED FORTY CASES OF Foreign Goods, consisting of the newest styles and materials in

Mourning Goods.

Black Drap d'Ete, Papilla Alpaca,
Cashmeres, Henrietta Cloth,
Empress Cloths, Poplinette,
Merinos, Barrett Cloths.

☞ A very nice Black Alpaca for $25 Dress Pattern.

On account of the reduction in Wool, We have reduced all our Woolen Goods fully 25 per cent., and are now prepared to offer all makes of

Blankets, Flannels and Cassimeres

At greatly reduced prices. Also, Marseilles Spreads; Table Linens, Napkins, Sheetings, Cheney Plaid Silk, and all makes of Muslins at reduced prices.

A fine line of Ladies' and Children's Cotton and Woolen Hosiery, very cheap.

Ladies' Cotton from 25 cents upward.

Ladies' ruled Kid Gloves, very cheap.

Jouvin's colored and black Kid Gloves, $1 50 a pair.

J. J. O'BRIEN & CO.,

606 Market Street,

One door from Montgomery.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

GREAT ARRIVAL

—OF—

FALL AND WINTER

DRY GOODS!

KENNEDY, O'NEILL & BRENNAN,

116 and 118 Third Street,

HAVE RECEIVED FIFTY CASES OF NEW and FASHIONABLE GOODS, bought in the Eastern and European markets, for cash, during large discounts will enable them to offer their Goods at prices

LOWER THAN ANY OTHER HOUSE IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Comprising a full line of

BLACK SILKS, from the best makers.
Plain, Checked and Striped SILKS in great variety.
Irish POPLINS, from Brothers & Co. and O'Neill & Co., Dublin, in all the new shades.
Thirty cases assorted DRESS GOODS.
Satin De Chenes, Drap d'Ete, Merges, Empress Cloths, Tamise Cloths, Plaids, etc.
A splendid assortment of Ladies' and Children's English, French and German HOSIERY.
A full line of HOUSEKEEPING GOODS, at exceedingly low prices.

☞ Ladies will please examine our Stock before purchasing elsewhere.

KENNEDY, O'NEILL & BRENNAN,

116 and 118 Third Street,

CORNER MINNA.....SAN FRANCISCO

N. B.—A full line of Josvin and Alexandre Jouvin KID GLOVES, at $1 50 per pair. s10-3m

GRAND DRY GOODS STORE

ANNOUNCEMENT!

I WOULD RESPECTFULLY INFORM THE public that I have now complete

THE LARGEST AND BEST ASSORTED STOCK

—OF—

DRY GOODS

I have ever had the pleasure of offering, and in November, I rely on the very superior quality of my Goods to insure a continuance of the liberal patronage I have received. In order to

CLEAR OUT

The entire Stock this season, I will offer it at prices decidedly in favor of the buyer.

C. CURTIN,

601 and 603 Market Street,

Corner of Second.

s10-1m

PIANOS.

$360—$360

EMERSON

PIANOS!

GUARANTEED FIRST-CLASS.

HIGHEST STYLE OF FINISH—BACK AND Front alike. The only FIRST-CLASS PIANO in the country. Sold at a low price.

KOHLER, CHASE & CO.

Agents,

NOS. 626 AND 628 CLAY STREET,

s23-1m SAN FRANCISCO.

C. R. HALL'S

PIANOFORTES,

MANUFACTORY,

NO. 12 TYLER STREET,

SAN FRANCISCO.

PIANOS TUNED AND REPAIRED IN THE best possible manner; and every piece warranted. ☞ Call and examine for yourself. no2-3m

THE MONITOR:

A WEEKLY JOURNAL, DEVOTED TO

Irish and Catholic Literature AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY

LYONS & BARRY

DENIS LYONS. JOHN V. BARRY.

DENIS LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.

OFFICE—626 CLAY STREET, BETWEEN Montgomery and Kearny sts. (Rooms 2, 7 and 8, up-stairs.)

☞ All communications, whether relating to the business or editorial department, should be addressed to "LYONS & BARRY."

ONLY IRISH and CATHOLIC JOURNAL IN CALIFORNIA.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):

Served by Carriers, per week.....10c
Sent to subscribers, per Year.....$4 00
Six months.....2 00

ADVERTISING RATES:

1 square, 1 time.....$1 00 | 1 square, 3 months.....$10 00
" 1 month.....3 00 | " 6 months.....17 00
" 2 months.....5 00 | " 9 months.....23 00
" 3 months.....7 00 | " 1 Year.....30 00

☞ The above rates will be strictly adhered to. ☜

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

RAMBLINGS THROUGH WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

[FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.]

Port Madison—Milling Towns—Port Townsend—The Straits of Fuca—The Early Navigators—Those Waters—Victoria—Sketch of its Business and its Inhabitants—Etc.

The first point of interest north of Seattle is Jefferson and Madison Points, two promontories which guard the circular harbor that envelops Port Madison—a hamlet sacred to the manufacture of lumber and Mesmos, and a spot o'er which the lumbering genius of Washington Territory seems peculiar to the rulers of the Pandavic nations. The town contains a population of three hundred, and all the masculine portion is employed in the saw and planing mills. The mill prepares about 25,000 feet of lumber per year, and the entire product is shipped to San Francisco, except, perhaps, an occasional cargo to China and the Sandwich Islands.

Port Ludlow, a hamlet of about sixty houses, which are so deeply embowered in foliaceous trees as to be invisible until you approach within a few hundred yards of them. They are all of the simple cottage order and rather pretty in appearance, owing to the want of a little paint. Several sea-going ships are always at anchor in the commodious basin in front of the town, and give it an air of importance.

Milling Towns

Are the only congregation of house met with from this point to the Straits of Fuca, and they are all of such a general character as that a description of one will suffice for all, except in topography. They have the honor of being blessed with a church, or at least a hall for religious services, upon the Sabbath day. Occasionally. A schoolman, a hotel, as near as possible to the Arrival Americans cannot be found in these towns, however, the spiritual influences are secured, so the laborers are saved the expense of spending it. The mill owns the town site, and no person is permitted on their domain without having secured their sanction. They also own the stores, hotels and boarding-houses; so we have the control of the trade, as well as their employés, but it only serves to keep their employés in debt to the company, and so make money on every side. The companies are generally established in San Francisco, and transact their business there. being represented here by an agent only. Many of them own from fifty thousand to one hundred and fifty thousand acres of timber land, and so they are veritable lords of a manor. The mills are capable of cutting one hundred thousand feet of lumber per day; and preparations from forty thousand to one hundred thousand feet of lumber per day; so readers can form an idea of the quantity exported in a year. There are fourteen such establishments on the Sound, and many of them run night and day. Besides these there are forty-five other mills in the Territory of lesser capacity; but the former prepare the principal, if not all the lumber exported. Now the most casual reader would conclude that the country must be stripped of its timber by this time, but so long, cause to exist. Despite the fact that there are 10,000 square miles of forest land in Washington Territory and contiguous to Puget Sound, and that 50,000 feet of lumber can be procured from an acre of land, the supply would be correct were it not for the fact that young timber springs up in every clearing, especially its own. Where the soil is being specially in use. Where prairies formerly existed is now half wooded, and this fact leads many to infer that the supply of timber is inexhaustible. But the supply of a cattle-drover was aroused, of the milling towns on the Sound, the largest are Port Blakely, Port Madison, Port Gamble, Port Ludlow, and Utsalady, an adjunct of and Seabeck on Hood's Canal, an adjunct of the Seabeck. They are situated in sheltered coves, and have deep water in the harbors sufficient to accommodate the largest vessels. It is surprises the stranger, it being extraordinarily out of proportion to the population of the place of their own. I visited each of them, but this general conclusion will serve to detail information of their character. To the north of these, and situated at the terminus of Puget Sound, is

Port Townsend,

A city of some seven hundred inhabitants, and one of notoriety in the past, owing to the character of its "old settlers"—fellows as low, depraved and desperate as could be found in the universe, and an disgusting in manners as to put to shame the savages with whom they naturally consorted. Rosa Browne has immortalized her sisters both famous and infamous, but she never wrote their epitaph as they now lie deep in the bosom of the earth which they drew around their pocket flasks in your head. They are generally law-abiding, peaceable and quiet citizens, and are better at boring holes in your pocket than in your head. A hole in your pocket is easily repaired, but would be pleased to dine, and whether you a hole in your head is not. Rosa Browne's would have claret or white wine at every dinner. This was forgone with the dinners of grilled bones, devilled kidneys, oysters, stews, etc., and everything else of course, wines, welsh rare bits, and everything served on American soil, and where least expected. The bonanzy had a good name, and I found their cuisine deserved it. A and I found their cuisine deserved it. A party of Americans, with whom I dined, partook everything, and consumed the Britishers could beat one side in "grub." In others could beat one side in "grub." In looking around the city by gas-light I thought it was one of the dullest places imaginable. Everything seemed hushed, no noise, no persons on the streets, no rattle of carriages—it seemed as if the place had gone into mourning. We had, of course, to visit all places of interest, so we looked into the billiard rooms—which were scarce—but they were also devoid of bustle. A natural order, a colonial dark and a gentle Yankee swore they would not live in such a place under circumstances.

The Storm

Open at 9 A. M., the merchants enter an hour later, and close at 5 P. M. This is certainly taking life easy; but I fear it is compulsory, for the "root of all evil" is exceedingly scarce. There are half a dozen fine stores on the principal business street, and they monopolize all the business. Along the wharves the shops have an air of decay that is most disagreeable. The only articles that may be termed cheap are the English goods, such as tweeds, silks and kindred articles, and they can be purchased for half the price charged on the American side.

Living is rather high, as the flour, bacon, mutton, beef and other edibles are imported from Oregon and Washington Territory; hot house-rent is to low that a good residence can be procured for the trouble of taking care of it. The city has accommodations for housing ten thousand people, while the population is only about one-fifth that number. The struggle for the almighty dollar seems to be unknown, judging from the amount of amusement indulged in. Every day almost you hear of picnics, dances, hairs and cricket matches and they are all numerously attended. The effect of travel upon the English mind may be inferred from the fact that the stores closed for one day in order to give all an opportunity of attending a Rose given by the Sisters of Charity. What they expect from hanging them to almost ideal-ising them!

Around the people, as a whole, devoid of prejudice, perhaps more so than on this side of the Straits. Jew and Gentile, Catholic and Protestant, Pagan and Christian, seem to live together in peace and harmony. There is no bigotry, no intolerance here. In politics they are violent and rabid to the extreme, and they would find a match in the Celestials. The schools are of a high order, and the children natives of Terre are quite numerous and occupy several prominent positions, such as magistrates, government, judges, inspectors, and all seem to be of the highly loyal order; at least I was not aware that such sympathetic and obsequious to one accustomed to the Britishers and freedom of thought and action. They would make themselves felt more were they not of such an insignificant character as to be considered beneath notice. Individualities the little mind, being more instilled, like all things, into the smallest receptacle, and to distinguish and expand, that to other minds would be necessary the city is difficult to match, and were it any way possible, no pleasanter summer resort can be found on the coast. There are some excellent drives and rides; fine opportunities for boating and yachting; good shooting and hunting; the climate cannot be surpassed in purity. In fact, all the elements necessary to constitute a spot necessary to banish dull care.

MOSQUITOES.

Consecration of Two Catholic Bishops in England.

The consecration of the Right Rev. Dr. Vaughan, Bishop of Salford, and of the Right Rev. Dr. Monsignor Weathers, coadjutor Bishop of Westminster, took place on November 26th. The vacancy which Dr. Vaughan has been called upon to fill arose from the death of the late Dr. Turner, the first Bishop of Salford. The consecration took place in the Metropolitan Church of Westminster, the ecclesiastical province of which the new bishop is the principal occupant. The Archbishop of Westminster, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Archbishop of Dublin, the Archbishop of Armagh, the Archbishop of Tuam, and the Archbishop of Cashel, and the Archbishop of Newcastle (Dr. Chadwick), the Bishop of Plymouth (Dr. Vaughan), the Bishop of Birmingham (Dr. Ullathorne), and the Bishop of Menevia and Newport (Dr. Browne).

At the conclusion of the ceremony of consecration the sermon was preached by the Bishop of Birmingham (Dr. Ullathorne), who took for his text Acts xx. 28, "Take heed to yourselves, and to the whole flock, wherein the Holy Ghost has placed you Bishops to rule the Church of God, which he has purchased with his blood."

After the sermon the Archbishop received from each of the newly consecrated Bishops their offerings, consisting of two lighted torches, two loaves of bread, and two barrels of wine. The enthronization followed, and then the Te Deum was sung, while the new bishops proceeded round the church distributing their blessings.

The ceremony of consecration was followed by a dinner party at the Salford Town-hall, at which many of the clergy were present. The corporation, the mayors, town clerks, and some dozen members of the civil councils. Archbishop Manning presided, and proposed the toast to the health of Pope Pius IX., and to Queen Victoria. He observed that the duty of loyalty was part of the religion of Catholics, and there was nowhere greater loyalty to the throne than among those to the person of the Sovereign as distinguished from the

THE health of the Queen was received with great enthusiasm.

Subsequently, in proposing the health of the Mayors of Salford and Manchester, the latter of whom was present, he said he was glad to see a friend always ready to maintain the dignity of this country and the independence of social and political order.

Mitchell Henry, M. P., in responding to the toast of the House of Commons, alluded to the anomaly, which he hoped the present ministry was gradually doing away with, of Irish Catholic members not being allowed a seat in the House. The English Catholic members were extremely rare—in fact, only two—and contrasting the manly vigor and Scottish and continental countries, with the intelligence of those parts with that which now seemed him at home. In this part of the country men were progressive, and he believed it would gradually become the dominant part of England.

State Election Returns.

The Sacramento Union thus summarizes the election returns of the State, from information received at the office of the Secretary of State. Nine counties are yet to be heard from:

The highest Grant Elector received 87,624 votes; the highest Grey Elector, 77,894; and the highest O'Connor Elector, 681. The highest vote for Grant is 48,020; for Greeley, 37,078; and for O'Connor 679. Total, 87,778. This vote will probably be increased to about 96,000 when complete returns are received. In 1871 the vote for Governor was 131,850. The remaining counties will probably add 1,000 to the second Congressional Districts are complete. The First gives Grant 1,005 majority, and the Second gives Grant over Piper, and the Third Dispatches over Goggins. The Third District gives Luttrell 778 majority over Coghlan, and the Fourth gives Houghton 1,295 majority over Kewen. These majorities will probably about the same ratio as that of the Presidential Election.

A Fearful Disaster in Sicily.

Dispatches from London announce that a disaster of remarkable violence had disturbed one-third of the town of Palermo, Sicily, left more than a thousand families homeless, killed thirty-two persons, and seriously hurt a number more. Palermo is situated on the bay of Sicily, opposite to Naples, and contains a population of 200,000 persons. The houses are lofty, and contained a population of 200,000 persons. The houses are lofty, and contained the usually large number of persons. The houses are lofty, and contained the usually large number of persons. The houses are lofty, and contained the usually large number of ### Industrial Condition of the Slope.

The Alvarado Beet Sugar Mill has been running now a little more than two months on the best crop of 1872, and will probably be busy for four or five months more, working up fifty tons of beets per day. The Alvarado crop of 1870 yielded 800,000 pounds of sugar; that of 1871, 750,000 pounds; and that of 1872 will be between 1,600,000 and 1,750,000 pounds. The average per centage of sugar obtained from the beets was under eight in 1870, about eight last year, and is eight and a quarter now.

A company has been organized to cut a tunnel to drain Eagle Lake, which lies about one hundred miles east of Shasta, and covers an area of about twenty-five square miles, with a considerable body of swamp land about its edges.

Riverside, in San Bernardino county, produced twenty pounds of opium this year, the largest aquount grown in any one year in the State. Complaint is made that not more than $2 50 per pound can be obtained for it here, while Smyrna opium, not better in quality, sells for $7 50. Sons of the Italian consul here, planted in Sonoma seven years ago, have commenced to bear. The lans (eulalium arundinium) of the Polynesian Islands has been grown several years near Oakland, but we have not heard that any of the tubers fit for cooking have been obtained. It would do better in the valleys south of Santa Barbara, and in worthy of attention there, as it is very prolific, and not unpalatable. The Ventura Signal says that A. W. Lester, of Colonia, made some watermelon syrup this year as an experiment, and will next season make a large quantity of it.

The completion of the Utah Southern railroad from Salt Lake City to Lehi, 40 miles distant, and the construction of several branch roads (with an aggregate length of thirty miles) leading to the mining districts, indicates a commendable spirit of enterprise in Utah, and will have a marked influence in stimulating agricultural and mining industry in that territory.

At the Presidential election Santa Barbara county voted on a proposition to give $200,000 to the construction of a road from the coast to the county seat and parallel to the coast range, and rejected it. Santa Cruz county voted to give a subsidy to a railroad from Pajaro, near Watsonville, by way of the county seat, to deep water on the shore of the Santa Cruz. That part of the road between Pajaro and Santa Cruz, twenty miles, will probably be made soon; the other portion would be more costly and less profitable, and its construction may be delayed until Santa Cruz provides for a road across the territory to the city. In Los Angeles county the vote was reported, 1,811 for and 67 against a subsidy of $377,000 to the San Diego and Los Angeles Railroad, and reported that no petitions were known in addition to $150,000 of stock now held by the county in the Wilmington Railroad in the Temple Railroad Company of California for building fifty miles of road, half of it northward from the county seat and the other half eastward. Rumor said that if the vote were favorable, the Southern Pacific would pay the Wilmington people $100,000 for their stocks or bonds, and Tejon, built in May and June last, is credited in the railroad publications, not as the San Joaquin Valley Railroad Company which built the road from Lathrop to Goshen, but to the Southern Pacific of California, which leased it for twenty miles or the year ending June 30, 1873, leased or bought it for the year. The lease runs now to Hollister. It has then saved its franchise from forfeiture.

The Legislature of Oregon at its late session passed an Act granting a large grant to the city of Lind to aid the construction of the Portland, Dalles and Salt Lake Railroad. This land is valued at $2,000,000, and much of not all of it is now granted by congress to the State for railroad purposes. The road is to run from Portland to the North-ern Pacific Railroad, on which has purchased the Columbia river, which is navigable for steamers. The Dalles and Portland, Oregon, of his troops, not a great army of the Danes. They joined in battle, the Danes with the cry of their heathen gods, McLaghlin and his men with the cry of

CHURCH,

And before the evening sun set, six thousand Danes were stretched dead upon the green hillsides of that valley of Wicklow. Thirty did this glorious king meet a Danish warrior in single combat, and after striking him dead with his battle-axe, he tore the golden collar from his neck and hung it around his own as a trophy of Celtic victory over the Scandinavians. And yet, brave and wise and holy as he was, there was another man in Ireland brave and wise and holier than Malachi the Second; and that was the illustrious Brian, of the house of Kincora by the Shannon, in Munster. This was new the exile that were on the land; he saw the Danes on every side-ravaging the coasts; he saw the people divided among themselves-and he saw at the head of the invaders a man whose bravery he acknowledged, whose wisdom and goodness he was the first to acknowledge; but he was not loyal to the conquerors. He asked the rebel government in his own strong hands; he gathered his people around him; he rallied the gallant old race of the O'Briens; he called from the banks of the Shannon, from the valley of Connaught and on his left hand and of Leinster before him, and with three Provinces around him he attended the Danes on God Friday where the two armies were drawn up face to face. Brian was mounted on a white steed, and his dress was a suit of mail, over which he wore a sword in the other; the man he saw whose head eighty winters had passed, rode before his Irish troops, and there was no fear in his war-horse. "Behold this sign, oh Irishmen! Remember that this is the day on which our God died for you and for me, that he might strike a blow!" And under his hand the Irish struck such a blow that the Danes' army was shattered like glass. Never England was never able to do-what glorious France was unable to do-Ireland had Danes from her bosom, right into the sea, even at St. Patrick shook off the venomous serpent from his hand in the island of Melita.

Ah! how sad was the evening of that day, for on an not over the Western coast of Ireland; the nation was rejoicing; the soldiers, resting from their swords and spears, were telling each other of the events of the day. But there were three dead corpses on a hill of Clontarf, and with those three the hopes of Ireland perished. Brian was dead-a corpse there-lebed. Brian was dead-a corpse there-lebed. The old man had retired into his own tent in the evening, and he was absorbed in prayer before the image of Christ when a fugitive ordered to pass that way. Dunlah fugitive ordered to pass that way. He poured in, and seeing the Irish King, he rushed him through the heart with his spear. Upon the field lay his brave son, Prince Murrough, and his grandson, Turlough, who was also a Prince. Three gallant relations of the one royal house of Ireland perished in the general rout and confusion that reigned in the land; until another man arose, not only in bravery, in wisdom, in truth, to unite all Ireland.

Turlough O'Connor, Prince of Connaught.

Brave in the field was Turlough; wise in Monks; and he encouraged all the arts and sciences. He surrounded himself with the ablest men in the ruling star of the Western Ocean, and that was Turlough O'Connor, the brave, as I said, in the field, wise in the council, holy before the throne of God-assumed the sovereignty of the western part of Ireland. He ascended his away all over the land of Erin, that only deserved to be the character of the true Catholic and Gael than a nation can be acknowledged in her brave King, Turlough O'Connor-that he was as holy as he was brave; and they all submitted to him. He lived until the year 1156-thirteen years before the Norman and Saxon invasion of Ireland. Towers, churches of his life, erected with the labor and sacrifice of his mendicant friars, and he endowed the royal convent of Clonmacnoise for the Cistercian Monastery of Mellifont, and Canons Regular of St. Augustine; and he restored the ancient glory of them. Ireland's King reigned; and the sanctity of his character was returning upon Ireland. The days of Columba and Columbanus-the days of Ketran and the saints were returning to teach upon the land. Malachi, a saint of God, and Friends of strength; Laurence O'Toole, a saint of God, was bishop of Dublin (although Saint Colman was sitting on another episcopal throne in Dublin) and Ireland had the honor and glory of three living saints ruling her Church at the same time. The clergy and bishops, in their counsel at Tailti, had drawn wise laws for the regulation of ecclesiastical affairs. The kings and rulers of the land were most anxious to be known to the world and to their subjects the example of the holiness of their early days. The Danes had passed away, and here was Ireland blooming for Ireland; and the people looked, as it a matter of course, to the figure of their monarch, as he returned from their visit into the quarters, and there lived and died in the odor of sanctity. He brought with him, so he came into the house he had endowed, a holy death. History tells us that he brought with him forty thousand ounces of gold; history tells us that he adorned the altars, and built up the glorious shrine; and when he saw peace and calm around him, he gathered around that eternity which was before him. Irish hero, an Irish Prince, an Irish monarch, and a prince of his Irish people, he died, leaving to his people as an inheritance that was the legacy of Ireland's forefathers. Remember, O Irishmen! that if any man had ever the right to call one of you that, in order to be a true Irishman, you must death or descendant of Ireland's priesthood-I am here to tell you that I am speaking of the last monarch of Ireland; and he came in the name of the Irish Kings; and the burden of his message was: "Give me a sword that I may draw it in defence of Ireland's independence, and scourge her invaders forever from her soil!"

Accordingly, a short time after Dublin was the Cathedral of St. Laurence O'Toole, with Roderic O'Conor, the King, advanced upon Dublin, and according to authentic records, with from forty to sixty thousand Irishmen with them. They invested the city. The son of O'Donnell and O'Neill, of Ulster, shut the invaders out from the sea on that side; the Irish of Meath and Leinster, by the nationality, and the of his troops, met a great army of the Danes. They joined in battle, the Danes with the cry of their heathen gods, Mc-Laghlin and his men with the cry

"FOR GOD, HIS CHRIST AND HIS HOLY CHURCH."

And before the evening sun set, six thousand Danes were stretched dead upon the green hillsides of that valley of Wicklow. Thirties did this glorious king meet a Danish warrior in single combat, and after striking him dead twice in hand-to-hand, he tore the golden collar from his neck and hung it around his own as a trophy of Celtic victory over the Scandinavians. And yet, brave and wise and holy as he was, there was one sooner man in Ireland brave and wise and holier than Malachi the Second; and that was the illustrious Brian, of the house of Kincora by the Shannon, in Munster. This man saw the evils that were on the land; he saw the Danes on every side around the sea-coast; he saw the people divided—the very chieftains divided among themselves—and he saw at the head of the nation a man whose bravery he acknowledged, whose wisdom and goodness he was the first to acknowledge; but he was not equal to the occasion. He united the reins of government in his own strong hands. He gathered his forces around him; he rallied the grand old race of the O'Briens; he advanced from the banks of the Shannon to be received the laity of Connaught on his left hand and of Leinster before him, and why they should not have followed him, and with their banners around him he attacked the Danes on Good Friday morning, and before sunset on the same blessed day drawn sword in the other, the man ever whose head slightly wintered, but whose noble heart like a lion's, and cried out from his war-horse, "Behold this sign, oh Irishmen! Remember that this is the sign on which your God died for your; and for that God of his a blow!" And under his hand he struck such a blow that on the next day at Clontarf they achieved what England was never able to do—what giant Rome was unable to do—Ireland shook the Danes from her bosom, right into the sea, year of our Lord, 1014. Not speedily there arose from the same bosom, and from the line of Turlough, the

YOUTH AND MANHOOD, MONARCH O'DON-

Young, splendid in figure, a Prince, manly in heart, in bravery and in strength, he grasped the sceptre of Brian, and he reigned over Ireland the empire of a monarch. He was scarcely invested in his royal dignity when a great calamity fell upon Ireland, that boons ever her and blighted her like the dark shadow of a black cloud to this day. All Ireland acknowledged Roderic as "Ard-righ," or "High King." The glories of Tara had passed away; Tara was in ruins then as it is to-day; but there upon the plains of Boyle in Roscommon rose the high towers and lofty palaces of Ireland's King; and there Roderic held undisputed sway, and prayed sway over the whole of Ireland. The O'Briens, the McCarthy Mor, the O'Sullivans of the South, the powerful septs of the great O'Donnells and O'Neills of the North yielded their tribute and homage to Brian the O'Toole was still the chief of the Wicklow glens and Kildare plains of Leinster; the O'Morroughs of Meath and Malin acknowledged their King; while all the septs across Erin in his own Province of Connaught gloried in the name of their great and brave, valiant and puissant King, Roderic O'Connor, the King of Ireland. His name was known in the halls of the Plantagenets, in England; his name was known in the halls of the Princes and Kings of France and of Germany; his name resounded in the Vatican as the independent of Ireland, and one who emulated the virtues as well as rivaled the bravery of his great ancestor, Turlough the Second. Now, my friends, whilst St. Laurence O'Toole was on his Archiepiscopal throne of Dublin—whilst peace reigned over the country, whilst Ireland was healing the deep wounds which the Danes had left upon her a single form—a man came to Ireland to reform the Church and State, and bring the barbarous Irish into a state of civilisation; and that man was Henry the Second, the Plantagenet King of England. Let us call this something strange, opposing and investing the Bishops. In those days the Church was very rich; and whenever a Bishop died the good king Henry took the tax or twelve thousand pounds—that is to say, fifty or sixty or seventy thousand dollars—and the Bishop's successor received the fealty of Connaught on his left hand and of Leinster before him, and why should not Ireland, royal Ireland, be attacked the Danes on Good Friday before the Province around him and he struck the same sword in the other, the man ever whose head slightly wintered, but whose noble heart like a lion's, brought and cried out from his war-horse, "Behold this sign, oh Irishmen! Remember that this is the sign on which your God died for your; and for that God of his a blow!" And under his hand he struck such a blow that on the next day at Clontarf they achieved what England was never able to do—what giant Rome was unable to do—Ireland shook the Danes from her bosom, right into the sea, year of our Lord, 1014. Not speedily there arose from the same bosom, and from the line of Turlough, the

YOUTH AND MANHOOD, MONARCH O'DON-

Young, splendid in figure, a Prince, manly in heart, in bravery and in strength, he grasped the sceptre of Brian, and he reigned over Ireland the empire of a monarch. He was scarcely invested in his royal dignity when a great calamity fell upon Ireland, that boons ever her and blighted her like the dark shadow of a black cloud to this day. All Ireland acknowledged Roderic as "Ard-righ," or "High King." The glories of Tara had passed away; Tara was in ruins then as it is to-day; but there upon the plains of Boyle in Roscommon rose the high towers and lofty palaces of Ireland's King; and there Roderic held undisputed sway, and prayed sway over the whole of Ireland. The O'Briens, the McCarthy Mor, the O'Sullivans of the South, the powerful septs of the great O'Donnells and O'Neills of the North yielded their tribute and homage to Brian the O'Toole was still the chief of the Wicklow glens and Kildare plains of Leinster; the O'Morroughs of Meath and Malin acknowledged their King; while all the septs across Erin in his own Province of Connaught gloried in the name of their great and brave, valiant and puissant King, Roderic O'Connor, the King of Ireland. His name was known in the halls of the Plantagenets, in England; his name was known in the halls of the Princes and Kings of France and of Germany; his name resounded in the Vatican as the independent of Ireland, and one who emulated the virtues as well as rivaled the bravery of his great ancestor, Turlough the Second. Now, my friends, whilst St. Laurence O'Toole was on his Archiepiscopal throne of Dublin—whilst peace reigned over the country, whilst Ireland was healing the deep wounds which the Danes had left upon her a single form—a man came to Ireland to reform the Church and State, and bring the barbarous Irish into a state of civilisation; and that man was Henry the Second, the Plantagenet King of England. Let us call this something strange, opposing and investing the Bishops. In those days the Church was very rich; and whenever a Bishop died the good king Henry took the tax or twelve thousand pounds—that is to say, fifty or sixty or seventy thousand dollars—and the Bishop's successor received the fealty of Connaught on his left hand and of Leinster before him, and why should not Ireland, royal Ireland, be attacked in the midst of them. Ireland's King resided at Athlone by the shannon; and she was returning upon Ireland. The days of Columba and Columbanus—the days of the Danes—and the days of all wars coming back upon the land. Malachi, a saint of Old, was Province of Armagh; Laurence O'Toole, a saint of God, was bishop of Glendalough; Saint Celsus was sitting on another episcopal throne in Ireland; and Ireland had the honor and glory of three living saints ruling her Church at the same time. The clergy and bishops, in their council at Kells, laid down wise laws for the regulation of ecclesiastical affairs. The kings and chieftains of the land were most anxious to rise to the world and to their subjects the example of the holiness of the saints of those days. The Danes had passed away, and new hopes were blooming for Ireland; and in the year 1166, on a bright day, in June, upon the figure of their monarch, as he retired from their view into the shrine, and there lived and died in the odor of sanctity. He brought with him, as he came into the house he had endowed, royal gifts. The story tells us that he brought with him forty thousand ounces of gold; history tells us that he adorned the shrine, and built up the glorious shrine; and when he was passed and calm around his head, he quietly went into that eternity which was before him, and, as was befitting an Irish hero, an Irish monarch, and a prince of an Irish people, he died, leaving to his people as an inheritance the legacy of a memory that was followed by them at the end of a week. But speedily there arose from the same house, and from the line of Turlough, the

YOUTH AND MANHOOD, MONARCH O'DON-

Young, splendid in figure, a Prince, manly in heart, in bravery and in strength, he grasped the sceptre of Brian, and he reigned over Ireland the empire of a monarch. He was scarcely invested in his royal dignity when a great calamity fell upon Ireland, that boons ever her and blighted her like the dark shadow of a black cloud to this day. All Ireland acknowledged Roderic as "Ard-righ," or "High King." The glories of Tara had passed away; Tara was in ruins then as it is to-day; but there upon the plains of Boyle in Roscommon rose the high towers and lofty palaces of Ireland's King; and there Roderic held undisputed sway, and prayed sway over the whole of Ireland. The O'Briens, the McCarthy Mor, the O'Sullivans of the South, the powerful septs of the great O'Donnells and O'Neills of the North yielded their tribute and homage to Brian the O'Toole was still the chief of the Wicklow glens and Kildare plains of Leinster; the O'Morroughs of Meath and Malin acknowledged their King; while all the septs across Erin in his own Province of Connaught gloried in the name of their great and brave, valiant and puissant King, Roderic O'Connor, the King of Ireland. His name was known in the halls of the Plantagenets, in England; his name was known in the halls of the Princes and Kings of France and of Germany; his name resounded in the Vatican as the independent of Ireland, and one who emulated the virtues as well as rivaled the bravery of his great ancestor, Turlough the Second. Now, my friends, whilst St. Laurence O'Toole was on his Archiepiscopal throne of Dublin—whilst peace reigned over the country, whilst Ireland was healing the deep wounds which the Danes had left upon her a single form—a man came to Ireland to reform the Church and State, and bring the barbarous Irish into a state of civilisation; and that man was Henry the Second, the Plantagenet King of England. Let us call this something strange, opposing and investing the Bishops. In those days the Church was very rich; and whenever a Bishop died the good king Henry took the tax or twelve thousand pounds—that is to say, fifty or sixty or seventy thousand dollars—and the Bishop's successor received the fealty of Connaught on his left hand and of Leinster before him, and why should not Ireland, royal Ireland, be attacked the Danes on Good Friday before the Province around him and he struck the same sword in the other, the man ever whose head slightly wintered, but whose noble heart like a lion's, brought and cried out from his war-horse, "Behold this sign, oh Irishmen! Remember that this is the sign on which your God died for your; and for that God of his a blow!" And under his hand he struck such a blow that on the next day at Clontarf they achieved what England was never able to do—what giant Rome was unable to do—Ireland shook the Danes from her bosom, right into the sea, year of our Lord, 1014. Not speedily there arose from the same bosom

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOV. 25.
November
24—Sunday—Twenty-seventh and last Sunday after Pentecost. St. John of the Cross, Confessor, St. Chrysogonus, Martyr.
25—Monday—St. Catherine, Virgin and Martyr.
26—Tuesday—Vigil of the Blessed Sacrament.
27—Wednesday—Vigil of St. Andrew, Apostle.
28—Thursday—Feast of the Blessed Sacrament.
29—Friday—Vigil of St. Saturnine, Martyr.
30—Saturday—St. Andrew, Apostle.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....NOVEMBER 23, 1872.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"J. C." Table Rock, Sierra County.—The late Thos. D'Arcy McGee came to Boston in June, 1842, and got D'Arcy Mc Gee's name in a peculiar edition. He is familiar on the "Flint" as associate editor. He never acted as agent for that journal. He either stowed away or left Ireland, and came a second time to America in October, 1846.

"A SUBSCRIBER," Vallejo.—No. The Pope could not have been better watched in favor to take part in the debating truth. Protestants, however, if we do not act debating truth. Protestants, however, if we do not act sensible, were invited to be present—not to take part in the debate.

"PATRICK'S STAND."—We have in type, but crowded out by a press of matter of more timely interest, a charming poem by Marcella A. Fitzgerald, entitled "Patrick's Story." It will, of course, appear next week.

THE HARBOR COMMISSIONERS.

The inquiry into the management of the Harbor Commissioners' Department is proceeding satisfactorily. The frauds which have been perpetrated are being unearthed, and the Commissioners are exhibiting every desire to find out the real state of affairs. They, at least, prove that sorntily and publicity have no terrors for them, inasmuch as they are sure to result not alone in demonstrating their complete innocence of corruption in any peculations that may have been carried on, but even free them from the lesser, though extremely annoying, charge of neglect of duty.

So far as the investigation has progressed up to the present, the defalcations discovered, though undoubtedly numerous, have not been serious enough to excite astonishment or alarm. Moreover, there appears to be a substantial reason for believing that it has not been the citizens so much as the owners of vessels that have suffered from dishonesty in certain quarters. Robbing would be easier, for instance, than for a wharfinger to send correct returns to the Commissioners' office, and yet make exorbitant charges to the consignees; and this would be a much safer game, too, than attempting to filch from the authorized dues. As the burden of proof is quite as criminal to plunder the shipowners as to rob the State; but for the former iniquity the Commissioners could not upon reasonable grounds be held responsible, as they could not very well prevent it.

Some time ago, our readers will remember, there was an outcry raised against the high rates of wharfage, dock dues, pilotage, etc., which, it was asserted, were driving commerce away from the city. The defense raised was that the charges were not, all things duly considered, by any means exorbitant for a port like San Francisco. Now one can understand how there may have been truth on both sides of these representations—how the vessels may have been charged too much, and how the Commissioners may have acted only what was fair. That there has been collusion between wharfingers and captains, scarcely admits the possibility of a doubt. We have received information respecting one case in which a sailing-master endeavored to induce a wharfinger (Howard street wharf) to commit fraud, and failing only because the latter happened to be strictly honest man. The captain was handed the bill against his ship, and, on perceiving the amount, asked the wharfinger to make it to a higher figure, alleging that he wanted money. The answer given was that that would be robbing, and that he should look out for some one else to do his thieving for him. Who can tell in how many instances the trick thus disgustingly succeeded with less conscientious officials?

Although it is probable that most of the frauds were committed somewhat after this fashion, it is unquestionable that the State has robbed to some extent also. But this could be done despite all the vigilance of the Commissioners, without laying them open to the charge of neglect of duty. They could not act as detectives or special policemen on the wharves, and they were compelled to depend upon the trustworthiness of their subordinates. The regulations for the transaction of business were as complete and stringent as there was any necessity for them to be; and if they were properly carried out, no defalcation would have taken place—at least none in which the State would be the sufferer. The general rules lay down that each wharfinger "must make up his report of the business of the wharf during the preceding day, ready for delivery to the general wharfinger before nine o'clock A. M., which report shall contain a correct account of the arrival and departure of every vessel at or from his wharf—her class, name, tonnage, cargo, consignee, rate of dockage etc., also tolls collected." It was the duty of the general wharfinger to take these reports up and transmit them regularly to the Commissioner's office. He was not merely to carry them to Montgomery street, for a messenger-boy at twenty-five dollars a month could be had to do that; but in his supervisory capacity to see beforehand that they were correct. If this scrutiny over the wharfingers had been properly kept up, such gross frauds as marking a vessel departed before her time could hardly pass unnoticed. But the Commissioners were certainly not to blame for accepting as reliable reports that handed in, when there was nothing perceptible that could arouse their suspicion.

There is not a department in the public service, there is not a mercantile house in existence, which could not be robbed for years in such a manner. Unless some degree of confidence is reposed in employees, the transaction of business becomes impossible; and when that degree of confidence is misplaced or abused, peculation will follow as a matter of course. Human ingenuity cannot devise any means whereby thieving can be prevented where men are disposed to steal; and all trade is and must be carried on by taking chances for honesty in the men who have the handling of money.

HE WILL NOT BE BRIBED.

The Ministers of his most gracious majesty King VICTOR EMMANUEL are in a sad quandary what to do with his Holiness Pope PIUS IX. They made war upon him with an army whose drummers were almost as numerous as the entire Pontifical force; they seized his dominions and confiscated as much of the ecclesiastical property as they wanted and turned it to rightful owners adrift, to make a living as best they could. All this creditable deal has been was carried out in order that the grand idea of "Italian unity" might be realized. But to show the world that they were not quite destitute of conscience—to prove how generous they could be when they liked—they declared they would pay the Pope a handsome salary, just as if he were a government official. His Holiness was to lose nothing by the "annexation" of his territories, but was merely to be spared the trouble of looking after them! Strange to say, however, the Sovereign Pontiff has altogether failed to appreciate this magnificent generosity and this tender thoughtfulness! He refuses to accept the yearly allowance, and still claims to be the rightful ruler of the States of the Church. VICTOR EMMANUEL'S Ministers are exceedingly anxious that the salary should be accepted, because it would imply some kind of recognition of the new state of affairs. Quite recently they sent an envoy to Cardinal ANTONELLI, informing him that the salary for '71 and '72 was lying in the bank, and requesting him to make use of it. The Cardinal replied very emphatically that the Pope never, under any circumstances, would accept one cent from VICTOR EMMANUEL'S ministers. Foiled in this attempt, they made another. The Major Domo was approached and begged to draw checks against the ob-

"Loveliest Village of the Plain"

So Goldsmith styled his imaginary Auburn; but our Auburn is not on a plain, but far up in the foothills of the Sierras. It is very pleasantly located, nevertheless, and has its sheltered cot and busy mill, the never-failing brook, and a "decent church" to boot, but it is not for lack of gallant swains too anxious to win such glances. If, moreover, the country-seat of Placer! comprises a population of probably 1,500; is one of the most prosperous towns of its size in the State, having received a fresh impetus within the past year by the development of several rich quartz mines, which, as our readers well know, give an air of stability to a town that placer mines rarely or never do. The principal of these mines are the Grosse, containing 1,120 feet; the Bellvue, 1,500; the Patterson, 3,000; the Salsig, 1,000; the Dillon, 1,000; the Eclipse, 2,000; and the St. Patrick, 600 feet. This latter company also own six other adjacent mines. Situated as it is in theheartthe of the Sierras, it possesses advantages of scenery and climate to which but few valley towns can lay claim. The hills in the vicinity are covered with a thick growth of timber; the mountain springs send down a never-failing supply of clear, fresh water, more exhilirating than champagne; the air that comes rustling through the tree-planted streets is soft and balmy; while away in the distance are the towering summits of the grand Sierras, rising one above the other, far as the eye can reach, crowned with spotless snow.

Three newspapers are printed in the place—the Herald, the Mors and Striped and the Argus. Of course the population and business are entirely too small to support so much literary talent; but then it post so much literary talent; but then it post so much literary talent; but then it would be a grievous injustice to any of the papers named professe somewhat different political views, the political stomach must be peculiarly constructed that cannot find food to digest in one or the other of them. Scarcely a hundred years to the exhaustion of those a time demanded it foundation of a stronger. In order to this Free land had to be acquired, and Irelandthe was conquered. was that time Englewere holding in a English mind hand been to do all thegood they could to these Celtic barbarians. They, however, would have not been slaves under, but alwaysisel beenthent; they were sometimes severely punished for their crimes, but they were always good; and the dignity of England hasand been upheld in the eyes of the world for hundreds of years by never nodersteods of their own interests known what wasday; and the Almighty God blessed them allways with an extraordinary share of cuin the to preserve themselves but to spread themselves, as well as a Catholic Christianage, who was particularly fond of the seat, in order, we presume, to indicate to those differing from us the cosmopolitan character of the Church, and the one its portals are entered, distinctions—Chinese and Caucasian, Negro and Indian, rich and poor, noble and plebeian, cast off their prejudices with their hats, and knelt side by side to offer prayer tother common Father. St. Boniface pioneers church choir were in attendance, and rendered Zaleg's Mass and Domnitz's Exaltpance Angelorum in fine stile. Mrs. Herbert presided at the organ while Mr. John Learggan's full, clear baritone voice commingled with Mr. Jopn Pritz's rich tone. The pastor, Fatherfaily, sang the Mass in his voice was clear, and ringing; the distinction of this old-fashioned Father P. Sensian, pastor of Amanta, preached a most excellent sermon from the eighth chapter of Genesis, commencing with the fifteenth verse. Our idea will not permit us to give anything in full synopsis of the reverend gentleman's discourse, and a brief report old not do it justice; for it was a most masterly argument of the Divine Sacrifice of the Mass, and seemingly brought conviction to many of the no-Catholics in the congregation, for whom it was chiefly intended—for Catholics, of course, have no doubts on the subject.

The Alleged Apparition in Virginia City.

A great deal of excitement prevails in certain circles with respect an apparition which, it is said, made its appearance in and conversed with, a your girl residing in Virginia City. It is Jéarsd that the spirit, which was visible two one but the girl, was that of her deceased father, and that it spoke so and only so be distinctly heard by several persons among whom were two Catholic clergmen. Questions were propounded and answers given—some not by any means reconcilable with theology, others more fruitionwhich any moderday school scholar mightwell give otherwise to. The character ofthe young girl is said to be in all respects far from reproach, and the persons with whom she is residing are highly respectable. We have no information to give beyond the contained in the papers published in the belitty, and as that may or may not be reliab, we prefer holding it until inquiries have been made by the proper authorities into as circumstances, and a decision, which attention shall be bound to respect, is arrived at.

The Catholic Church

Is a neat brick edifice, about 85 by 64 feet, situated on Church street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, in this city. On the third Sunday of each month, to a congregation of about two hundred persons. Prior to last Sunday, the church had been closed for several weeks, in order to permit the plastering and painting of the interior and the cementing of the floor. The cost ab-ut $1,200, which was promptly subscribed by the people of the parish, the non-Catholics responding in a spirit of liberality and Christian charity pleasing to witness. On the occasion of the reopening of the church last Sunday, it was crowded in every part, many having come fifteen miles. Among those present were several not of the Catholic communion, as well as a Catholic Shiaman, who was passed by and to a front seat, in order, we presume, to indicate to those differing from us the cosmopolitan character of the Church, and the one its portals are entered, distinctions—Chinese and Caucasian, Negro and Indian, rich and poor, noble and plebeian, cast off their prejudices with their hats, and knelt side by side to offer prayer tother common Father. St. Boniface pioneers church choir were in attendance, and rendered Zaleg's Mass and Domnitz's Exaltpance Angelorum in fine stile. Mrs. Herbert presided at the organ while Mr. John Learggan's full, clear baritone voice commingled with Mr. Jopn Pritz's rich tone. The pastor, Fatherfaily, sang the Mass in his voice was clear, and ringing; the distinction of this old-fashioned Father P. Sensian, pastor of Amanta, preached a most excellent sermon from the eighth chapter of Genesis, commencing with the fifteenth verse. Our idea will not permit us to give anything in full synopsis of the reverend gentleman's discourse, and a brief report old not do it justice; for it was a most masterly argument of the Divine Sacrifice of the Mass, and seemingly brought conviction to many of the no-Catholics in the congregation, for whom it was chiefly intended—for Catholics, of course, have no doubts on the subject.

ENGLAND AND THE IRISH.

Father Tom Burke's First Reply to Mr. Froude.

Father Tom Burke last evening delivered the first of his series of lectures in reply to Mr. Froude. The Academy of Music was filled, but not crowded. Father Burke was received with applause. He said:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN! It is a strange fact that the old battle that has been raging for seven hundred years should continue so far away from the old land. The question on which I am come to speak to you this evening is one that has been disputed at many a council board—one that has been disputed in many a Parliament; one that has been disputed on many a well-fought field, and is not yet decided—the question between England and Ireland. Among the sailors to America who came over this year there was one gentleman, distinguished in Europe for his style of writing and for his historical knowledge—the author of several works which have created a profound sensation; at least for their originality. Mr. Froude has frankly stated that he come over to this country to deal with England and the Irish question, viewing it from an English standpoint; that, like a true man, he came to make the best use that he could for his country; that he came to state that case to be, American people and the American jury, and demand a verdict from them, the most extraordinary that ever yet was dumped out of any box—a verdict of acquittal for the Irish landlord—a verdict that would justify the Irish landlord in the manner in which he has treated his tenantry. It seems, according to this learned gentleman, that we Irish have been very much paralyzed by the defeat, England lost her best ally. The House of Stuart, on the other day, they said, was completely ignored, and was not a power of the world without as much as mention. In the name of that, England that was once so powerful. Her resources of coal and iron are failing, her people are disunited, and the prestige of every age is decay." Thus did some persons argue that England was no use for an American alliance, for they said, "What would be the use of that, when that the old and tottering empire would wish to lean upon the young, mighty, vigorous young arm of America?" I have heard other say that the gentleman came over to the country for the purpose of securing hospitality in this country such who, under the cloak of religious bigotry and sectarian bitterness is doing everything in a close before the increasing light of civilization, to destroy it. Now, I would fain prolong the darkness by an hour, if by any whatsoever help Mr. Froude could lend them. But I protest to you, gentlemen-to-night, that I have heard at no time any thing so terrible as that which I greatly fears we must needs ourselves

SEEKS TO SOLVE HIS DIFFICULTY.

And to lead us out of the mysteries that surround us. Now, I am not going to say that many persons have not come to this

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

YOU CAN WORK BEFORE NOV. 25.

Sunday.....Twenty-seventh and last Sunday after Pentecost. St. Peter of the Rock, Confessor. St. Chrysogonus, Martyr.
Monday.....St. Catharine, Virgin and Martyr.
Tuesday.....St. Gregory Thaumaturgus, Bishop and Confessor. St. Peter of Alexandria, Bishop and Martyr.
Wednesday.....Of the Feria.
Thursday.....Vigil of the Blessed Sacrament.
Friday.....Vigil of St. Andrew. St. Saturninus, Martyr.
Saturday.....St. Andrew, Apostle.

THE MONITOR:

THE ONLY

Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....NOVEMBER 23, 1872.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

J. C.," Table Mont, Sierra County.—The late Thos. D'Arcy McGee came to Boston in June, 1851, and got a position on the "Pilot" as associate editor. He never acted in quest for that journal. He subsequently removed to Ireland, and came a second time to America in October, 1856.

"A Reader," Vallejo.—No. The Pope could not act thus; where he believed in error he would be bound to teach. Protestants, however, if we do not by deluding truth. Protestants, however, if we do not publish, were invited to be present—not to take part in the deliberations.

"A Plain Reader."—We have in type, but crowded out by a press of matter of more pressing importance, a charming poem by Marcella A. Fitzgerald, entitled "Public Story." It will, of course, appear next week.

THE HARBOR COMMISSIONERS.

The inquiry into the management of the Harbor Commissioners' Department is proceeding satisfactorily. The frauds which have been perpetrated—a being unearthed, and the Commissioners are exhibiting every desire to find out the real state of affairs. They, at least, prove that scrutiny and publicity have no terrors for them, in search as they are sure to result not alone in demonstrating their complete innocence of complicity in any peculations that may have been carried on, but even free them from the inner, though extremely annoying, charge of neglect of duty.

So far as the investigation has progressed up to the present, the defalcations discovered, though undoubtedly numerous, have not been certain enough to excite astonishment or alarm. Moreover, there appears to be substantial reason for believing that it has not been the Commissioners so much as the cargoes of vessels that have suffered the wrongs of which complaint has been made in certain quarters. Nothing would be easier, for instance, than for a wharfinger to send correct returns to the Commissioners' office, and yet make extraordinary charges to the consignees; and this would be a much safer game, too, than attempting to filch from the ostensible owner. As the burden of the payments would ultimately fall upon the consignees, nothing thousands of miles ship-owners, residing thousands of miles away, a little complaisance on the part of the consignees and a trifle over wealthy billed now on the part of the master would effect the whole thing very simply. Of course it is quite as criminal to plunder the ship owners as to rob the State; but for the former iniquity the Commissioners could not upon reasonable grounds be held responsible, as they could not very well prevent it.

Some time ago, our readers will remember, there was an outcry raised against the high rates of wharfage, dock dues, plumage, etc., which, it was asserted, were driving commerce away from the city. The defense refused was that the charges were not, all things duly considered, by any means exorbitant for a port like San Francisco. Now one can understand how there may have been truth on both sides of these representations—how the vessels may have been charged too much, and how the Commissioners may have asked only what was reasonable. There has been collusion between wharfingers and captains scarcely admits the possibility of a doubt. We have received information respecting one case in which a sailing-master endeavored to induce a wharfinger (Howard street wharf) to commit fraud, and failing only because the latter happened to be a strictly honest man. The captain was handed the bill against his ship, and, on the amount, asked the wharfinger to raise it to a higher figure, alleging that he wanted money. The answer given was that that would be robbing, and that he should look out for some one else to do his shoving for him. We could refer to not many instances the trick thus delivered successfully with less conscientious officials.

Although it is probable that most of the frauds were committed somewhat after this fashion, it is unquestionable that the State was robbed to some extent also. But this could be done despite all the vigilance of the Commissioners, without laying them open to the charge of neglect of duty. They could not act as detectives or special policemen on the wharves, and they were compelled to depend upon the representations of their subordinates. The regulations for the transaction of business were as complete and stringent as there was any necessity for them to be; and if they were properly carried out, no defalcation would have taken place—at least none in which the State would be the sufferer. The general rules may be down that each wharfinger must make up his report of the business of the wharf during the preceding day, ready for delivery in the general wharfinger before nine o'clock A. M., which report shall contain a correct account of the arrival and departure of every vessel at or from his wharf—her class, name, tonnage, cargo, consignee, master, and also tolls collected." It was the duty of the general wharfinger to take these reports up and transmit them regularly to the Commissioners' office. He was not merely to carry them to Montgomery street, for a newspaper boy at twenty-five dollars a month could be had to do that; but his supervisory capacity was to see beforehand that they were correct. If this scrutiny over the wharfingers had been properly kept up, such gross frauds as marking a vessel departed before her time could hardly pass unnoticed. But the Commissioners were certainly not to blame for accepting as reliable reports then handed in, when there was nothing perceptible that could arouse their suspicion.

There is not a department in the public service, there is not a mercantile house in existence, which could not be robbed for years in such a manner. Unless some degree of confidence is reposed in employees the transaction of business becomes impossible; and when that degree of confidence is misplaced or abused, peculation will follow as a matter of course. Human ingenuity cannot devise any means whereby thieving can be prevented where men are disposed to steal; and all trade is and must be carried on by taking chances for honesty in the men who have the handling of money.

HE WILL NOT BE BRIBED.

The Ministers of his most gracious majesty King Victor Emanuel are in a sad quandary what to do with his Holiness Pope Pius IX. They made war upon him with an army whose drummers were almost as numerous as the entire Pontifical force; they seized his dominions and deprived him of his temporal sovereignty; they confiscated as much of the ecclesiastical property as they wanted and turned its rightful owners adrift, to make a living as best they could. All this creditable business was carried out in order that the grand idea of "Italian unity" might be realized. But to show the world that they were not quite destitute of conscience—to prove how generous they could be when they liked—they declared they would pay the Pope a handsome salary, just as if he were a government official. His Holiness was to lose nothing by the "annexation" of his territories, but was merely to be spared the troubles of looking after them! Strange to say, however, the Sovereign Pontiff has altogether failed to appreciate this magnificent generosity and this tender thoughtfulness! He refuses to accept the yearly allowance, and still claims to be the rightful ruler of the States of the Church. Victor Emanuel's Ministers are accordingly anxious that the salary should be accepted because it would imply some kind of recognition of the new state of affairs. Quite recently they sent an envoy to Cardinal Antonelli, informing him that the salary for '71 and '72 was lying in the bank, and requesting him to make one of it. The Cardinal replied very emphatically that the Pope never, under any circumstances, would accept one cent from Victor Emanuel's advisers. Foiled in this attempt, they made another. The Major Domo was approached and begged to draw checks for the unclaimed allowance for the expenses of the Pontifical household; but this faithful servant of his master. So the Pope could not be bribed, directly or indirectly, into holding communication with or accepting any favors from the usurping authorities. He is quite contented to depend upon the loving generosity of his own devoted children of faithful Catholics. The Italian officials may now apply the Pope's "salary" to the lessening of the enormous deficit in their finances and stave off confusion and rupture and republic on for a little while longer.

Collection for the Seminarians.

In another part of our paper will be found a circular, issued by his Grace the Archbishop, to the pastors of the diocese, relative to the annual collection for the support of the ecclesiastical students who are in various institutions preparing for the priesthood. In a country like this—where towns and cities are springing up almost every year, and where populous communities make their appearance, as if by magic, in places which a short time before looked uninhabitable deserts—it is, of course, of primary necessity that steps be taken to secure proper religious accomodation for the people. The procuring of priests is the principal thing to be looked to, for where clergymen are, churches will follow speedily enough. Without the administration of the priesthood, Catholicity cannot be preserved in the face of the great activity shown by the other Christian communions and of the godless tendency of the public school system. It is, therefore, the sacred duty of all Catholics to contribute liberally for the education and maintenance of the young Levites who are destined to labor among them. The Archbishop's circular, though brief, puts the case forcibly, and go clearly as not to be misunderstood. He says, accordingly, that when the collection is made in the various churches, the amount contributed will be found fully sufficient to meet all requirements.

"A Geographical Impossibility."

A stupid Yankee—not American—professor, named Hitchcock, said, at the banquet recently given to Mr. James A. Froude, that the independence of Ireland was a "geographical impossibility!" This is a fact—a geographical phrase certainly—one is a fact—a mathematical phrase certainly—one is fit for a learned professor to use; but we really cannot fathom the meaning of it. It strikes us, though, that we have heard it before, and that it was employed by Mr. Hitchcock. An Austrian diplomat said, once upon a time, that there was no such nation as Italy, because the word was a mere "geographical expression." There was an answer which is quite in this instance which is altogether wanting in the professor's imitation. Possibly the man meant to say, in a roundabout way, that Ireland was too near England to be suffered to become an independent nation. France is nearer to England, Spain is nearer to France, Portugal is nearer to Spain, Austria is nearer to Prussia, and so on. The boundaries between the most powerful nations are often marked by petty streams, and in many cases even by imaginary lines. Thirty-five or forty miles of ocean is quite enough to separate England and Ireland.

"Loveliest Village of the Plain"

So Goldsmith styled his imaginary Auburn; but our Auburn is not on a plain, but far up in the foothills of the Sierras. It is very pleasantly located, nevertheless, and has its shadowed nook and leafy mill, the never-failing brook, and a "decent church" that truly "tops the neighboring hill;" and if the bashful maidens do not cast sidelong looks of love, it is not for lack of gallant swains too anxious to win such glances. It is, moreover, the country-seat of Placer; contains a population of probably 1,500; is one of the most prosperous towns of its size in the State, having received a fresh impetus within the past year by the development of several rich quartz mines, which, as our readers well know, give an air of stability to a town that placer mines rarely or never do. The principal of these mines are the Greene, containing 1,120 feet; the Belvins, 1,500; the Patterson, 3,000; the Salsig, 1,500; the Dillon, 1,000; the Eclipse, 2,000; and the St. Patrick, 600 feet. This latter company also own an older adjacent mines. Situated as it is in the foothills of the Sierras, it possesses advantages of scenery and climate to which but few valley towns can lay claim. The hills in the immediate vicinity are covered with a thick growth of timber; the mountain springs send down a never-failing supply of clear, fresh water, more exhilirating than champagne; the air is constantly circulating through it, and the temperature is soft and balmy; while away in the distance are the towering summits of the grand Sierras, rising one above the other, far as the eye can reach, crowned with spotless snow.

Three newspapers are printed in the place—the Herald, the Stars and Stripes and the Argus. Of course the population and business are entirely too small to support so many journals; but then it shows enterprise, and as each of the papers named professes somewhat different political views, the political stomach must be peculiarly constructed that cannot find food to agree with it. The town supports three hotels and several saloons, besides a fair allowance of idlers. There are two churches, a Catholic and a Methodist, as well as places for entertainment. Each denomination is in excellent humor with its fellow, and bothers itself very little about its neighbor's theology, perfectly satisfied if the said neighbor deports himself as an upright citizen and gentleman. They appear to be of Moore's opinion when he wrote—

"Shall I not be brave soldier, who fights by my side
In the cause of mankind, if our creeds agree?
Shall I give up the friend I have valued and tried,
Should he prove an infidel, sneer with me?
Forgive him the sneering gin of my mind?
No, we'll smile when we see a more orthodox friend."

The Catholic Church

is a neat brick edifice, 40x80, by 24 feet. The frame was erected several years ago by Father J. A. Gallagher, but its completion is due to Father Kelly, the present pastor. Here the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass is offered up on the third Sunday of each month, to a congregation of about two hundred persons. Prior to last Sunday, the church had been closed for several weeks, in order to permit the plastering and painting of the interior and the cementing of the exterior. This work cost about $1,500, which was promptly subscribed by the people of the parish, the Rev. Catholic responding in a spirit of liberality and christian charity praiseworthy as witness. On the occasion of the reopening of the church last Sunday, it was crowded in every part some having come fifteen miles. Among those present were several ex-Mayors of the Catholic community, as well as a Catholic Chinaman, who was purposely placed in a front seat, in order, we presume, to indulge in those differing from us the cosmopolitan character of the Church, and this one its portals are entered, distinctions none—Chinese and Caucasian, Negro and Indian, rich and poor, noble and plebian, cast off their prejudices with their hats, and kneel as one man before the altar to offer prayer their common Father. St. Rose's (Sorrowful) church choir were in attendance, and rendered Zeitog's Mass and Donizetti's Exaltemus Angelorum in the choicest style. Haber presided at the organ, while Mr. John Lonergan's full, clear al mellow tenor commingled with Mr. Jospb Pris's rich bass. The pastor, Father Kelly, sang the Mass in fine style of it also, and his sermon was a masterpiece. Taking as a text Father P. Scanlan (pastor of Sacramento) preached a most excellent sermon from the eighth chapter of Genesis, commencing with the fifteenth verse. Space will not permit us to give anything in a full synopsis of the reverend gentleman's discourse, and a brief report sold not do it justice; for it was a most masterly arrangement of the Divine Scriptures to the Catholic standpoint; that, like a true star, became to make the best cave that he could for blasphemy; that he came to the conclusion that Catholicity was as to a grand jury, and to demand a verdict from the world, and he rendered that decision. The remainder of any people—namely, a declaration that England was right in the manner in which she had conducted matters and for seven hundred years. It seems, according to the learned gentleman, that the Irish were the most badly treated (that he confesses); but he points a plea that we only got what we deserved. It is true, he says, that we have governed them badly; the reason is, because it we

IMPOSSIBLE TO GOVERN THEM RIGHTLY.

It is true that we have robbed them; the reason is because it was a pity to leave them their own, the under such but one of us. It is true that we have persecuted them; the reason is, persecution was the fashion of the time and the order of the day. Of these pleas that is not a criminal in prison to-day in the United States that should not successfully plead in his favor, according to the learned gentleman, being more disgusting circumstances. The idea about leaving Ireland has been a wrong, it seems. Seven hundred years in the enlargement of the Union demanded the foundation of a colossal British empire. In order to do this Ireland had to be conquered, and Ireland was conquered. That time the people were ruling idea in by English mind had been to do all things they could to do for their own good, or the American mind is enlightened to understand that the people are the best judges of their own good; now the American mind is enlightened to understand that the people are the best judges of their own interests, and that they are to be fully trusted. The King's Attorney-General wants to clear the sympathy of the American people for their Irish fellow-citizens. And I would respectfully submit that the best way to effect this is to send a learned man with a plausible story to these people, and to use a peculiar power of viewing facts in the light in which he wished himself to view them, and to give them a history of the past and a peculiar power of so misling up those facts that many simple-minded people will believe that there is no pain there before them, and whose mission it was

TO ALIENATE THE MINDS OF AMERICA

From their loyalty to the throne by showing what an impracticable, obstinate, accursed race we are. Others again vermited into the learned gentleman

SIR HUGH AT THE BOYNE.

"This silken scarf I'll give my lord, ere goes he to the field!
I'll pray God put Queen above in the his strength and shield!"

In battle he's a wasting fire upon the system wind!
In council of our Irish there he never had a wiser mind!

O brave sir Hugh, thy royal blood is loyal as the same
Of Sarsfield had, although thy cause are lost in after laws.

We be the Baron of the Pale, with fazon honors eight,
Was knighted on stomach a following on thee, my Irish knight."

The scarf she on his shoulder hung—he vowed to her with pride
"My lady's gift I'll carry where the boldest flowers be blow!"

He kissed her hand, she kissed a sigh, he passed the field, through wood a wing—
His white plume at the gate—the other horse ring!
We drink the pledge, and, turning east, we ride along the ocean's shore—
One seen in dresses our standards wave and sword and cannon roar!
The red pest strike, and darkness seen the twilight's only hour,
And all beneath the stars we ride to where our camp-fires lower.

The sun it is high on the horizon—the day has come Shall your spade the ancient chain, or swa more be
What boast it William is renowned to fields of foreign fame—
What though those veteran troops we bee are famous none and far!
What though along the night they stretch, in endless silence where!—
The greater glory shall be ours—if not, then glorious defeat!

Whether for this ancient land, oh, who would
The purest blood you may let—in conquer or in die."

The "generals" by rolling lead in trumpet and on drum,
Of green, in splands in the North the scarlet coloring come;
Lord Mountjoy's Solsbergy's Danish horse are cross-ing on our left!
O'Neill's battalions have grandly charged—the Danish horse are left!
And now, in the closing mass, the victors fiercely press
Over stench and horsemen overthrown, back to the Yew thousand foot, with Wanhart's horse, have left Neale's dragoons upon them charge, resistless to the last.

Along the river to the north the cannons thunder; loud
Their roar, and bombs shooting through the ever-rising cloud
Show from the stand in Soltzes' Dutch Guards join their Scots in front,
And now the Irish rebels there, the traitors to the soil,
Must feel Saxon and Englishman's leather on their backs.
And see our Irish rebels there, the traitors to the soil,
Must feel Saxon and Englishman's leather on their backs.
And now, at last, feel fire from their fire—now
Charge down the river—
Charge homeward like a thunderbolt launched by the hands of God!

North reaches the ford, and thunder tramp—the death-like charge is urged,
Men, and they be through!—the Dutch are swept to the river's bed,
The Englishmen, the rebels down, amid Callenore is dead,
And Scandebarger, Englishman and Irish traitor fled,
And through, gone to unity now the Huguenots is fight!
Hurrah! Tyrconnell's Home Guards pass like the whirlwind's flight!
Their cannon they leave or piled around, that charge's
Now, God be thanked, you've done a deed that wipes away the past.

The King had watched the battle from the church-yard on the hebich!
"Oh, Hugh, is dearest lord, and your horse—he's thrust
Upon on the right, and a steinall is of serve
Quoris Marial. Of these, twenty have been executed and thirty-seven have had their sentences commuted. Three have been charged with murder, seven with robbery with violence, and the remainder with minor charges. The number in prison, who are still awaiting execution, is said that M. Thiers has persuaded the German Government to rescind its decision not to ever the passports of the Alsatians who had "opted" for France. They will now be able to visit their native country; but their stay will be subject to certain restrictions.

The death of Mrs. King, Mother Superior of the Hill Street Dominican Convent, has caused much regret in Galway. The funeral procession. The scene at her interment, at which the Bishop officiated, was most affecting. The long and still dying vent to unconfined sorrow.

A letter from Jerusalem says that laborers while digging a well in the grounds of the distinguished French lady (the Princess de la Tour d'Auvergne), have just discovered un the Mount of Olives, on the right side of the Pater, a splendid specimen of ancient mosaic in four colors—white, red, black and yellow. It is sixteen feet long, but as yet only six feet of its width have been uncovered. It is believed this relic belonged to some sumptuous Roman habitation.

Bad news for champagne drinkers comes from France. The vintage this autumn is said to be little more than one-third that of an average year, and unfortunately follows two years by no means remarkable for the abundance of their yield. Very little wine remains in stock, as the sales during the last two years have been unusually heavy, especially of the first brands.

The sons of Captain Deasch, the petitioner in the Galway Election Petition, are estimated at about £12,000. Of this sum between £4,000 and £5,000 is the property of the minors. Deducting the average reduction made by taxation, the sum amongst them expected to stand at as nearly as possible at £10,000. The costs of Captain Nolan's suit will probably be about £6,000. By the decision of Mr. Justice Keogh, all the costs have to be defrayed by the respondent.

A great meeting of Democrats has been held at Milan, and letters from Rome state that from one end of the provinces to the other the workingmen's societies are pre and stirring with the object of adopting extreme measures. Numerous petitions are being established in every town and the approaching triumph of the Communes is predicted by the Red party according to some of the advanced prints M. Garibaldi has promised to visit Italy and even Rome itself.

Numerous pilgrimages for the intention of the Holy Father have taken place recently in Poland. At Czenstochau one of the largest gatherings of pilgrims ever seen assembled on the 8th September, the numbers present being estimated at 150,000. An express train from Warsaw carried 2,200 persons; over 1,700 pilgrims on foot arrived from that city and its surrounding districts; every procession, banner and cross, and pennon, came from Prussia; and forty processions, which had included at least 10,000 pilgrims, from Galicia. Not less than one hundred priests arrived with the pilgrims.

The will of Charles Comte de Montalembert, of Paris, Pair of France, and one of the Forty of the French Academy, was opened on the 24th ult. in London, in respect of a sum of stock belonging to the deceased in the English funds. The testators commence his will by declaring that he wishes to live and die in the profession of the Catholic, Roman and Apostolic faith, and in the communion of Holy Mother Church, which he has always striven to serve and to honor. The will contains various bequests in favor of servants, charities and friends, including among the latter His Grace the Bishop of Orleans, Monsigneur Dupanloup; the legacy of certain manuscripts and the "schapiel" formerly belonging to Father Lacordaire, given by one of the codicils to M. Charles Lenoux (le religion Barefooted Carmelite Friar Father Hyacinthe), is revoked by a later one.

An old and esteemed Liverpool lady, Miss Isabella Mosher, who was well known for unostentatious charity, has just died in her eightieth year; and by her death a large number of interesting and valuable miniatures will be added to the town museum. These miniatures were formerly the property of the ex-Emperor of the French—then plain Louis Napoleon—having been bought from him by the brother of Miss Mosher when he was in pecuniary difficulties, before his accession to power. The miniatures represent different members of his family, including the parents of Napoleon I, and his celebrated marshals; and, after the Emperor's declaration, he endeavored, but in vain, to induce Mr. Mather to part with them. The deceased lady was one of the last representatives of an old Puritan family, who were probably among the original members of the first Dissenting chapel in Lancashire.

FOREIGN NEWS ITEMS.

Count Brassier de St. Simon, the German Minister at the Italian Court, died at Rome recently.

Professor Munier, rector of the Academy of Geneva, has just died after an illness of several weeks.

It is rumored that the Prince of Wales and Lord Strathmairn are to be made Field Marshals.

The river Trent has overflowed its banks, inundating houses and land in low-lying districts near Nottingham.

Heavy rains have caused serious floods in the South of France, which have been attended with great damage.

The Grand Canal of Venice has passed an enactment making instruction compulsory for children from the age of 8 to 13.

The sudden death is announced of Dr. Frank Robinson, of Dublin, a musician of very distinguished abilities and a universal favorite in his native city.

A petition has been presented to the Spanish Cortes, requesting the Government to commence negotiations with Great Britain respecting the cession of Gibraltar to Spain.

It is feared that there will be great suffering among the poor of Kerry duringthe ensuing winter and spring, in consequence of an almost inevitable scarcity of food.

The Jesuits' College at Strasburg has fallen into the hands of a Jew, and is now devoted to a public house, a skittle-alley, and Masonic lodge and a place of Lutheran worship.

As Arthur Andrews, a railway stoker, was sailing his engine while in motion near Kilbarry Station, Cork, recently, he fell from the front footboard and was killed by the train passing over him.

From a cousne taken in Paris it appears that there are in that city 1,732,329 Catholics, 34,621 Jews, 21,285 Calvinists, 14,040 Lutherans, 9,472 Methodist and Quakers, and 1,500 belonging to no religious sect.

The Ministerial Council of civil marriages in Prussia has been decided upon, but the Government will not insist upon it for some time, for fear of alienating the Protestant as well as the Catholic clergy.

The Queen is at Rome, where he is visited by the members of Christian religion, and has been invited to the Cavour Club—composed of Piedmontese which it cannot be denied he is well entitled to.

A new Anglican bishopric is to erected for Australia, the seat of which will be at Ballarat. By consent, the nomination of the first bishop will rest with the Archbishop of Canterbury.

A great pilgrimage took place on Sunday, October 20th, to Notre Dame d'Hanswyck, at Malines. The archbishop of Malines said in his sermon that Bismarck would break himself against the rock of the Church.

In consequence of the Dublin gas company giving notice of their intention to raise the price of gas, the city authorities instead to apply to Parliament for a bill to enable the Town Council to buy out the gas company, so as to furnish gas at a lower figure.

It is stated that seventy-two Communists in all have been condemned to death by the Versailles Court-martial. Of these, twenty have been executed and thirty-seven have had their sentences commuted. Three have been charged with murder, seven with robbery with violence, and the remainder with minor charges. The number in prison, who are still awaiting execution.

It is said that M. Thiers has persuaded the German Government to rescind its decision not to ever the passports of the Alsatians who had "opted" for France. They will now be able to visit their native country; but their stay will be subject to certain restrictions.

The death of Mrs. King, Mother Superior of the Hill Street Dominican Convent, has caused much regret in Galway. The funeral procession. The scene at her interment, at which the Bishop officiated, was most affecting. The long and still dying vent to unconfined sorrow.

A letter from Jerusalem says that laborers while digging a well in the grounds of the distinguished French lady (the Princess de la Tour d'Auvergne), have just discovered un the Mount of Olives, on the right side of the Pater, a splendid specimen of ancient mosaic in four colors—white, red, black and yellow. It is sixteen feet long, but as yet only six feet of its width have been uncovered. It is believed this relic belonged to some sumptuous Roman habitation.

Bad news for champagne drinkers comes from France. The vintage this autumn is said to be little more than one-third that of an average year, and unfortunately follows two years by no means remarkable for the abundance of their yield. Very little wine remains in stock, as the sales during the last two years have been unusually heavy, especially of the first brands.

The sons of Captain Deasch, the petitioner in the Galway Election Petition, are estimated at about £12,000. Of this sum between £4,000 and £5,000 is the property of the minors. Deducting the average reduction made by taxation, the sum amongst them expected to stand at as nearly as possible at £10,000. The costs of Captain Nolan's suit will probably be about £6,000. By the decision of Mr. Justice Keogh, all the costs have to be defrayed by the respondent.

A great meeting of Democrats has been held at Milan, and letters from Rome state that from one end of the provinces to the other the workingmen's societies are pre and stirring with the object of adopting extreme measures. Numerous petitions are being established in every town and the approaching triumph of the Communes is predicted by the Red party according to some of the advanced prints M. Garibaldi has promised to visit Italy and even Rome itself.

Numerous pilgrimages for the intention of the Holy Father have taken place recently in Poland. At Czenstochau one of the largest gatherings of pilgrims ever seen assembled on the 8th September, the numbers present being estimated at 150,000. An express train from Warsaw carried 2,200 persons; over 1,700 pilgrims on foot arrived from that city and its surrounding districts; every procession, banner and cross, and pennon, came from Prussia; and forty processions, which had included at least 10,000 pilgrims, from Galicia. Not less than one hundred priests arrived with the pilgrims.

The will of Charles Comte de Montalembert, of Paris, Pair of France, and one of the Forty of the French Academy, was opened on the 24th ult. in London, in respect of a sum of stock belonging to the deceased in the English funds. The testators commence his will by declaring that he wishes to live and die in the profession of the Catholic, Roman and Apostolic faith, and in the communion of Holy Mother Church, which he has always striven to serve and to honor. The will contains various bequests in favor of servants, charities and friends, including among the latter His Grace the Bishop of Orleans, Monsigneur Dupanloup; the legacy of certain manuscripts and the "schapiel" formerly belonging to Father Lacordaire, given by one of the codicils to M. Charles Lenoux (le religion Barefooted Carmelita Friar Father Hyacinthe), is revoked by a later one.

An old and esteemed Liverpool lady, Miss Isabella Mosher, who was well known for unostentatious charity, has just died in

BANKING HOUSES.

HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY

Office—Northeast corner of Montgomery and Market streets.

OFFICERS:

President ..... M. D. SWEENY.
Vice-President ..... C. D. O'SULLIVAN

TRUSTEES:

M. D. SWEENY, C. O'SULLIVAN, JOHN SULLIVAN, E. T. MARIS, M. J. O'CONNOR, P. McGLYNN, GUSTAVE TOUCHARD, JOS. A. DONAHUE, PETER DONAHUE.

Treasurer ..... EDWARD MARTIN
Attorney ..... RICHARD TOBIN

Remittances from the country may be sent through Wells, Fargo & Co's Express office, or any reliable banking house; but the Society will not be responsible for their safe delivery. The signature of the depositor should accompany his first deposit. A proper pass book will be delivered in the agent by or from the deposit is made.

Deposits received from $1 upwards.

Office Hours—From 8 a. m. to 3 p. m.

JOS. A. DONOHOE, Cashier ..... EUGENE KELLY
San Francisco ..... New York.

DONOHOE, KELLY & Co
SAN FRANCISCO.
EUGENE KELLY & Co.
NEW YORK
BANKERS
EXCHANGE ON
NEW YORK, LONDON, AND
BANK OF IRELAND ..... DUBLIN.
Payable at all the Branches,
AND IN EVERY COUNTY TOWN IN IRELAND

SAN FRANCISCO
Savings Union,
532 California Street, corner of Webb.

Deposits ..... $4,561,946 52
Guarantee Capital and Reserve Fund ..... 310,000 00

TRUSTEES:

WM. ALVORD ..... JAMES de FREMERY
Vice-President ..... ALBERT MILLER
WM. H. OLIVER ..... Directors ..... C. ADOLPHE LOW
WASHINGTON BARTLETT. CHARLES PACE.
ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, Jr.
Cashier and Secretary ..... LOVELL WHITE
Surveyor ..... JOHN ARCHBALD
Attorney ..... HENRY C. CAMPBELL

RECEIVES DEPOSITS AND LOANS MONEY on real estate security.

Deposits (additions) may be sent by Wells, Fargo & Co., or by checks of reliable parties payable in San Francisco, but the responsibility of the Union ceases only with the actual receipt of the money.

The signature of the depositor should accompany the first deposit.

All charges made for pass book or entrance fee.

Office hours—9 a. m. to 3 p. m. Open Saturday evenings from 6½ to 8½.

HOTELS.

Removal.

THE SECOND STREET HOUSE
Has Removed to 510 Second street,
Northeast corner of Minna. Furnished rooms to let, with or without board, on the most reasonable terms.
M. O'NEIL, Proprietor.

CENTRAL HOTEL,
816 AND 818 SANSOME STREET,
Between Broadway and Pacific ..... San Francisco
PATRICK CONNOR ..... Proprietor.
PROFESSOR M. FARRELL, late proprietor of the Metropolitan Hotel, where he will be happy to receive his old friends and the public generally. Thankful for past favors, he respectfully solicits a continuance of their favors in the future.
There is a large and well-lighted sample room. Meals and refreshments can be had at all hours.
The Central House Coach will be at each car depot and steamboat landing, to convey passengers to the House free of charge.
Parties looking for their friends in the States, or who expect to visit the Eastern States, will be duly attended to there on their arrival, and forward them to their friends with the same care.
The strictest attention will be paid to the comfort of the guests of this House.
MICHAEL FARRELL, Proprietor.

RAILROAD HOUSE,
Corner of Sansome and Pacific streets, San Francisco.
IS NOW OPENED BY
P. CASSERLY,
Cash of the Tremont House, where he will be happy to receive his friends and the public in general.
The House is furnished throughout in the best manner, with Hermetic Baths and every other modern improvement. The rooms are large and airy, and can be had either single or in suits for families.
The best attention will be paid to the comfort and convenience of boarders.
Board and Lodging per week ..... $5 to $7
There is a first-proof safe in the House, where money and valuables may be kept at the risk of the proprietor.
Car Free Coach to the House.
P. CASSERLY, Proprietor.

FRANKLIN HOTEL,
614 AND 616 PACIFIC STREET,
Between Sansome and Montgomery ..... San Francisco.
HUGH CUNRAN ..... Proprietor.
Board, per week ..... $4 00
Board and Lodging, single rooms ..... $6 00
Single Meals, 25 cents. Lodging, 10 cents.
Family accommodations on reasonable terms.
Passengers and baggage conveyed to the House free; also from the House to the cars and steamboats.
A City Directory, and all the city papers always.

WESTERN HOUSE.
GENERAL STAGE OFFICE,
Marysville, California.
GEORGE WAPPER ..... PROPRIETOR
au11

Thirty-Two large Double-Column Papers every Month for One Dollar a Year.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER,
AN ILLUSTRATED
CATHOLIC MONTHLY MAGAZINE
FOR CHOICE READING
AND
Good Pictures.
Read with interest by all, and with special delight and profit by the younger members of the family.
The Crusader is now in its fourth year.
The Reviewers say it is the best of its kind.
Sample Copies free to all who ask for them.
Back Numbers always on hand.
Handsome Premiums are given to those who get up Clubs.
Terms: Fifty Cents per annum in advance.
Send Postage Stamp or Postal Currency, by mail, addressed to the Editor,
REV. WILLIAM BYRNE, Boston, Mass.

WINNER'S NEW SCHOOLS
FOR THE
DIANO-FORTE, CABINET ORGAN, GUITAR, Violin, Flute, Accordeon, German Accordeon, Clarionet, Fife, Fingerpipe, reeding but 15 cents each, are just what are needed for cheap and extensive instruction books.
Charming Song, THE GAYEN JAR. Thomas. 40c
The above books and piece sent, post-paid, on receipt of retail price.
OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
C. H. DITSON & CO., New York.

EDUCATIONAL.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Conducted by the Christian Brothers.
Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.
The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible.
While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, our own language receives particular attention. The daily exercises of the Business Course, Composition and Rhetoric are perfectly discussed and corrected by the class-room.
TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.
(Payable half-yearly in advance).
Board, Tuition and Washing ..... $300 00
Entrance Fee ..... 10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines ..... 6 00
Vocation at College ..... 50 00
Day Students ..... 50 00
Modern languages, Music and drawing form extra charges.
Studies will be resumed on the 5th of August.
REV. B. JUSTIN, President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME.
SAN JOSÉ, CALIFORNIA.
YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.
THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORATED according to the laws of the State and now powered to confer academical honors, will commence the Twenty-second Annual Session on MONDAY, August 16, 1872. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.
TERMS:
Entrance, to be paid but once ..... $15 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter ..... 62 50
Washing and Mending, per quarter ..... 12 50
Physicians' fees (unless it may be preferred to pay the bill in case of need) per quarter ..... 2 50
Piano, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges. Bills will be rendered at the end of each quarter.
Pupils entering after the commencement of a session will be charged from the time of their admission.
No deduction, however, will be made for pupils withdrawn before the expiration of the term.
Parents may rest satisfied that strict attention will be paid to the health, morals and manners of the young ladies who may be confided to the care of the Sisters.
Application for admission of the young ladies who wish to be instructed in the Sciences, Languages, &c., should be addressed to the Superioress.
LADY SUPERIOR.

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLE
Rohersville, Sumboldt County,
CONDUCTED BY THE PRIESTS OF THE CONGREGATION OF HOLY CROSS.
THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN A most delightful and healthy locality, in the midst of a fine agricultural district, and in the immediate vicinity of the flourishing town of Rohersville. It is accessible from the chief towns in the county by daily stages, and from other parts of the State by the various steamers, via San Francisco and Humboldt Bay. The buildings are large, airy and commodious, furnished throughout with modern conveniences, and the grounds attached are extensive and well adapted for exercise and recreation.
TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.
(Payable half-yearly in advance.)
For board, lodging, tuition, washing and mending, per annum ..... $200
For half boarders ..... 100
Entrance fee, to be paid but once ..... 10
French ..... 10
No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.
TERMS FOR DAY SCHOLARS:
Primary, per month ..... $2 00
Elementary and Senior, per month ..... 3 00
Tuition on piano, " ..... 7 00
French, " ..... 2 00
No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.
For Prospectus and further particulars apply to SISTER CARMEN ARMELLINA, Superior.
au24

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL,
SAN RAFAEL, MARIN COUNTY.
THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN SANTA Barbara, a short distance from the town, and in the most healthy part of the county. The grounds are extensive, and the building is large and commodious.
The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.
TERMS
(Invariably half-yearly in advance):
Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, use of library ..... $100 00
Piano, and use of instrument, per month ..... $4 00
Drawing ..... 4 00
No extra charge for Plain Sewing. Fancy Needlework ..... 5 00
The scholastic year of ten months and a half commences on the first Monday in August.
For further particulars apply to
SISTERS OF CHARITY,
St. Vincent's School, San Rafael, Cal.
1870

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL,
PETALUMA.
Day and Boarding School, Conducted by the Sisters of Charity.
TERMS for Boarders, including tuition in the various branches of English education, plain and fancy needlework, use of bed, bedding, per month ..... $15 00
EXTRA CHARGES.
Use of Piano, per month ..... $ 5 00
Use of Harp, per month ..... 10 00
Only a limited number of Boarders can be received. The next session will commence on the 1st of August. Payments invariably in advance.

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,
SANTA BARBARA, CALIFORNIA.
THE SIXTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUTION, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, will commence on the 22nd MONDAY of August.
The object of this institution is to give a solid and practical education to youth, and to prepare pupils, either at the lucrative profession of trade, or at once to enter the higher walks of life.
TERMS.
Entrance Fee (to be paid at once, ..... $10 00
Tuition, per session ..... 100 00
Music, French and instruction in the violin, flute, guitar, and other instruments ..... 100 00
Money will not be advanced by the College; for the purchase of necessary articles, no inconsiderable sum must be provided.
For further particulars apply to
REV. J. J. CRUSE, O. S. F.
1870

ST. VINCENT'S OLLEGE
LOS ANGELES, C.
DEGREES CONFERRED
IN
Rev. JAMES MARCH ..... C. M.
PRESIDENT.
$5 to $20 per day! Agents wanted! All classes of working people, of either sex, young or old, make money fast, at work for us during their spare moments, or all the time. Particulars free. Address G. STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine.

EDUCATIONAL.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACA
BENICIA, CAL.
Conducted by the Sisters of St. J
THIS INSTITUTION AFFORDS EVERY facility for the acquisition of a thorough education. The Academic year has formally commenced, but pupils are received at any time, and charged from the date of entrance.
The course of instruction embraces the French, Spanish and Latin languages, Music, Drawing, Painting, Elocution, Ancient and Modern Geography, Use of the Globes, History, Rhetoric, Chemistry, Astronomy, Arithmetic, Natural Philosophy, Mental Arithmetic, Algebra, Geometry, Vocal Music, Instrumental Music, Piano, Guitar and Organ; Writing, Drawing, Painting in Water Colors and in Oil; Tapestry, Ornamental Needlework, etc., etc.
TERMS:
Board and tuition (payable half-yearly in advance) ..... $150 00
Washing ..... 12 00
Physician's fee ..... 5 00
EXTRAS:
Piano and use of instrument (payable half-yearly in advance) ..... $20 00
Organ ..... 20 00
Guitar ..... 10 00
Vocal music in class ..... 5 00
Private lessons ..... 10 00
Drawing and Painting in Water Colors ..... 10 00
Painting in Oils ..... 10 00
Board during vacation ..... 30 00
School books at current rates.
Pupils will be required to be provided with four dresses besides the uniform dress, a sufficient number of handkerchiefs, napkins, towels, a gold thimble, and all articles of clothing, including shoes, necessary for the comfort of the pupil. Each article must be distinctly marked with the name of the pupil.
No deduction will be made for pupils withdrawn before the expiration of the term, except in cases of protracted illness.
Parents may rest assured that every attention will be paid to the health, morals and manners of the pupils confided to the care of the Sisters.
For further particulars address the Superioress.
REV. FATHER ANTHONY,
Very Rev. P. HENNESSY, V. G.
N. B.—One of the Rev. Fathers of the College is in attendance every day of the week at the office of the Very Rev. Vicar General, on Bush street, to meet persons who wish to make arrangements for their sons to enter the College.

DAY SCHOOLS
FOR Boys and Gir
THE SISTERS OF MERCY HAVE JUST opened a commodious School-house on Fifth street, near Howard, where instruction will be given in the various branches of an English education, including the French language. The terms are moderate, and will be placed in charge of competent teachers. Both Schools will be opened on the 15th inst.
SISTER MARY S. RUSSELL,
Superior of Sisters of Mercy.
San Francisco, May 27, 1871.

GROCERIES, WINES AND LIQU
EBERHART & LACHMAN,
MANUFACTURERS OF
CALIFORNIA SPARKLING WI
SWEET AND DRY CHAMPAGNE
Sparkling Hermann and Cherry.
Hocks and Clarets, Wines (all kinds of Sparkling Catawba, Wines (all kinds of Sparkling Rock, Mount Vineyard, Sta and Brandies are made according to the Principal Depot, corner of First and Br streets, San Francisco.

WILLIAM B. DOLAN,
165 Third Street ..... San Fran
Importer and Dealer (Wholesale and Retail) i
French Wines and Brandies
AND
Irish Whiskey
Imported direct from Ireland.

HE HAS ALSO ON HAND A LARGE A sortment of California Wines and Brandies, which he will dispose of, in bulk or in case, at the lowest rates.
Orders left at the store, 165 Third street, will be promptly attended to, and delivered free of charge in any part of the city.

THOS. P. WALL ..... THOS. C. OUTCH
WALL & DUVANY,
Liquors, Wines and Cigars
No. 310 Front street ..... San Fran
Between Sansome and Battery streets.
We bottle our Private Stock of Wines and Liquors, supplied at as reasonable prices as can be had at any other house.

JOHN FLANAGAN & CO.,
Importers and Jobbers of
Fine Brandies, Wines, Liquors, etc
San Francisco.
Fine proof Spirits, 101 Front street, bet. Clay & Washington
Foreign Liquors in bond, ..... Pale Brandies, Holland Gin
Port, Claret, etc., sold in quantities to suit the purchaser.
Also, dealers in native Californian Wines and Brandies.
au6-17

M. B. KELLY. JOHN KELLY
Kelly & Egan,
IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN
FINE WINES AND LIQUORS
No. 604 Battery street,
Near Jackson ..... San Francis

D. Commins & Co.
(Successors to P. Riley & Co.)
WHOLESALE LIQUOR MERCHANTS
No. 506 Front Street, San Francisco.

THOMAS J. POWER, 102 SECOND STREET
Marysville. Only the very best brands Wines, Liquors and Cigars on sale. A free Lunch every day.

Dr. Odenheimer, the Protestant Episcopal

Bishop of New Jersey, in replying to an invitation from the Newark Board of Trade, and writing of the early history of different religions in Newark, did himself honor by speaking, in the following terms, of Bishop Bayley, the Catholic:

"As the early representatives of the religious bodies appeared to have lived among us in harmony, while maintaining intact their respective theological views, so it seems to me the city of churches (and there are about double of them) is at this day blessed with a fine spirit of Christian charity, leading to all the pleasing offices of private and social fellowship among the many authority and sincerest clergymen and there are about eighty-seven in number, who represent every denomination of Christians and preach with sincerity their respective convictions of truth. This is one thing that will be felt by not only Newark, but by the State at large, as one of the most illustrious of these divines, the Roman Catholic Bishop of Newark, is compelled to leave, and, at the summons of his ecclesiastical superiors, to ascend the archiepiscopal throne of Baltimore. The honor is well deserved, for he has firmly and at all times supported the faith and Church of his choice; but his absence will be like withdrawal of so many warm moral power from the community in which he has been the dignified promoter of temperance, order and good-will among all classes, as well as among his own people. I have gone up and down the State of New Jersey, from Sussex to Cape May, during thirteen years, and I have heard of his presence and his power in all parts of the diocese, but I have never heard of a word or act of bitterness. This influence has tended to promote good-will and charity. I speak impartially, for I have never met Bishop Bayley."—Freeman's Journal.

Dr. Pirsyson, a well-known United Presbyterian minister in Edinburgh, was found dead in his bed recently, at Cambuslows, where he had addressed a meeting the previous evening. The deceased was very highly respected, and only a few days ago his congregation presented him with £3,000.

A number of Irish gentlemen have visited French, German and Saxonian peat works, and they will, no doubt, from satisfactory experience, do something really valuable towards supplying the people of Ireland with a cheaper, and, in some respects, a better commody than the present high-priced coals.

TAX COLLECTOR'S NOTICES.

TAXES—1872-'3-TAXES

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT A CERtified copy of the Assessment Book of the Taxable Property of the City and County of San Francisco—REAL ESTATE and PERSONAL PROPERTY—for the Fiscal Year 1872-73, has this day been received; that the State, City and County Taxes for said Fiscal Year are now due and payable at the office of the undersigned (Room No. 1, City Hall), and that the law in regard to their collection will be strictly enforced.

Taxes will become DELINQUENT on the first MONDAY in January, 1873, after which a penalty thereto, five per cent. will be added to the amount thereof.

Tax Collector of the City and County of San Francisco.
oct-td

TO TAX-PAYERS.

TAXES DUE OCTOBER 28, 1872.

DELINQUENT JANUARY 6, 1873.

THE USUAL DELAY, CONFUSION AND AN noyance attending the payment of taxes are much increased this year, as both PERSONAL and REAL PROPERTY has to be paid upon at the same time. This being the case, the undersigned would most respectfully suggest that Taxpayers furnish their office with a schedule of their property on or early day. Where there have been no changes the last 'bills of any previous year are the most convenient and correct memoranda. oct6 A. AUSTIN, Tax Collector.

Taxes! Taxes!

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF THOSE who cannot leave their occupations during the day, the Tax Collector's Office will be open for business

Every Saturday Evening in November,
FROM 7 TO 9 O'CLOCK.
nl A. AUSTIN, Tax Collector.

CARPETS.

CASH CARPET STORE,
715 MARKET STREET,
IS NOW OPEN, WITH A
GRAND DISPLAY
OF
NEW AND ELEGANT GOODS!
Purchased expressly for the
CASH CARPET STORE.
Goods will be offered for about
Half the Price Asked Elsewhere.
TERMS—CASH ON DELIVERY.
au16

HAIR

The Cheapest Place in the City
TO BUY
Human and Imitation Hair Goods,
Cheap and Fine JEWELRY,
And FANCY GOODS,
AT THE
NEW YORK STORE,
No. 110 Second Street.

Human Hair switches, finest quality ..... $3 to $15
Human Hair frontpieces, long stem ..... $3 50 to $7 50
Human Hair Bath Curls, per set ..... $3 to $5
Human Hair, Crimped Curls ..... $1 25, worth $2 50
Silk Mohair Switches, finest ..... 25 cents
Silk Mohair Switches, crimped ..... 25 cents
Linen Thread Switches ..... 10 cents
Linen Thread Chignons ..... 50 cents
Linen Thread Braids ..... 50 and 75 cents
Half Wigs, best made ..... $3 75, worth 10 dols.
Silk Mohair Curls, full size at 75 cents, five and each, sizes, which is included at least 10,000 pilgrims, from Galicia. Not less than one hundred priests arrived with the pilgrims.
Silk Mohair Curls, full size at 75 cents, five and each, sizes, which is included at least 10,000 pilgrims, from Galicia. Not less than one hundred priests arrived with the pilgrims.
Finest Rose Paper, white or rose tint, per box, 25 cts.
Ready to Curls' Cutters ..... Just opened for 25 cents
Hooks and Eyes Imitation Jewelry—largest stock in the city.
Ribbons, Hosiery, Zephyr Wool, etc.

To the Trade.
We offer our goods at wholesale at the lowest prices. Wholesale agency for Miss Mahair Curls. Over one hundred dozen assorted return on hand. Goods sent C. O. D.

A. B. SAMPSON & CO.,
No. 110 SECOND STREET,
Between Minna and Mission ..... San Francisco.
au2-3m

SCHOOLDAY MAGAZINE

To the Boys and Girls of America.
Send your name and address at once, and you will receive a specimen copy FREE of the most interesting Juvenile Magazine published. Only $1 50 per year. Every subscriber will receive a present. Every boy and girl should have it. Send a postal card to-day. Address
SCHOOLDAY MAGAZINE,
No. 9 Warren St., Philadelphia.
au16-4t

FURNITURE, BEDDING, ETC.

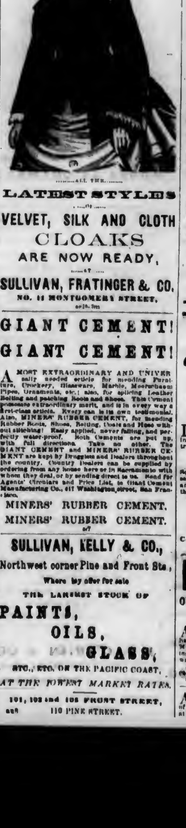
GOODWIN & CO.,
IMPORTERS, MANUFACTURERS & DEALERS
IN
RICH AND COMMON
FURNITURE, BEDDING, ETC.,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,
No. 312 Pine Street, Above Sansome.
Prices Extremely Low.
Goods Custom Made.
Are decidedly opposed to State Prison Monopoly and in favor of FREE LABOR.

ALSO AGENTS FOR THE CELEBRATED P. C. LIGHTE & CO. PIANOS.
o19

JACOB SCHREIBER,
MANUFACTURER AND DEALER IN
BEDDING AND FURNITURE,
No. 643 THIRD STREET, (NEWS HOUSE),
Directly opposite Washington Market, San Francisco.
Goods sold at wholesale and retail at reasonable prices. Mattresses made to order. Old Mattresses renovated and made over equal to New. Bedding and Repairing Furniture.

HENRY FRANK,
Wholesale and Retail Manufacturer and Dealer in
BEDDING AND FURNITURE,

CONSTANTLY ON HAND
Spring, Hair, Wool, Moss and Pulu
MATTRESSES,
617 COMMERCIAL STREET,
Below Front ..... SAN FRANCISCO
Of The Cheapest Place in the City. au8



LATEST STYLES
OF VELVET, SILK AND CLOTH
CLOAKS ARE NOW READY,
AT
SULLIVAN, FRATINGER & CO.
No. 11 MONTGOMERY STREET.
au26-1m

GIANT CEMENT!
GIANT CEMENT!
A MOST EXTRAORDINARY AND UNIVERsal self-sticking article for Repairing Glass, Crockery, Ornaments, Marble, Meerschaum Pipes, Ornaments, etc., etc., for spinning, Leather Belting and patching Boots and Shoes. This Cement will stick anything together that will stick, and is the very way it. Directions simple. Every one has use for a bottle. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers throughout the country. Country Dealers can be supplied on consigning from any house here or in Sacramento with the Agents' Circulars and Price List, to GIANT CEMENT MANUFACTURING CO., 611 Washington, corner, San Francisco.

MINERS' RUBBER CEMENT.
MINERS' RUBBER CEMENT.
For
SULLIVAN, KELLY & CO.,
Northwest corner Pine and Front Sts.,
Where by offer for sale
THE LARGEST STOCK OF PAINTS,
OILS,
GLASS,
ETC., ETC. OF THE PACIFIC COAST.
AT THE LOWEST MARKET RATES.
101, 103 and 105 FRONT STREET,
and 110 PINE STREET.

SEWING MACHINES.

THE FLORENCE

Will see everything needed in a family, from the heaviest to the lightest fabric.
IT DOES DOES WORK MORE KINDS OF WORK,
AND BETTER WORK,
Than any other machine.
If there is a Florence Sewing Machine within one thousand miles of San Francisco not working well and giving entire satisfaction, if I am informed of it, it will be attended to without expense of any kind to the owner.
SAMUEL HILL, Agent,
16 New Montgomery Street,
Grand Hotel Building, San Francisco.
Send for Circulars and samples of the work. Active Agents wanted in every place.

SEWING MACHINES.
WILLIAM B. HIGGINS,
NO. 523 THIRD STREET, (NEWS HOUSE),
Bet. Howard & Folsom, San Francisco.
WHO HAS HAD THE ADVANTAGE OF SEVeral years' experience as a Mechanic in the Sewing Machine Business, in the United States, and in the city, having just into business for himself, guarantees entire satisfaction to all who may favor him with their patronage. Repairing and Cleaning Sewing Machines on the most reasonable terms. And short notice.
Sewing Machines adjusted.
Owners of traveling machines
Machines always on hand for sale for rent by the month. Give him a call.
o20 1y

EVERYBODY
WHICH IS THE BEST MACHINE?
THE "LIGHT RUNNING
"DOMESTIC"

Industrial Condition of the Slope.

In the important matter of drying fruit California has gained little light and made little progress this season, notwithstanding the fact that hundreds if not thousands of tons of a excellent fruit have been allowed to go to waste. The scarcity and high prices of white labor, the prejudice against Chinamen, the ignorance about the best processes and the poor quality of some of the California dried fruit heretofore sent to the market, have stood in the way. A few men produce excellent dried plums, prunes, figs and grapes, and obtain fine prices by selling to friends and acquaintances without going into the general market; but among fruit growers generally there is much diversity of opinion and practice in the processes. At a late meeting of the Sacramento Farmers' Club, Jr. R. Johnson said:

"I do not recommend sun drying upon sandbeds, but I recommend the erection of drying houses, heated by pipes from an ordinary furnace or stove constructed for the purpose, or otherwise by kilns with a staircase constructed, say twelve by twenty, and the furnace draft underneath. This kind of kiln can be constructed with brick or stone, and is well adapted for the quick drying of all kinds of fruits. Such kilns are used for drying fruits in Pennsylvania and Ohio. The advantages of kiln drying are apparent from the fact that the acid of the fruit is retained and the saccharine properties of the fruit undergo no change of solution, only the vegetable and water substance is evaporated, leaving the fruit with all the acids and sweet flavor belonging to the juices of their several kinds. Such drying kilns can be constructed to last any length of time by being covered from the weather, and would be more convenient and economical than drying fruits in the open air out their dried fruit. I have had considerable experience in drying fruits for the past fifteen years, and find that to make a good quality of dried apples they must be sun or sliced when in a ripening state, but not fully ripe. The same will apply to the peach, plum and pear, also the smaller fruits. When dried sufficiently for keeping they should be immediately and completely packed in boxes of suitable size, especially in California, in order that the fruit will not undergo the changes in our climate from moist to dry which tends to mold and change the flavor.

In drying figs, I believe the out-door sun-dried drying-kiln would be the best. The Smyrna and Sicily figs are dried upon a smooth, clean surface of hard clay, also under glass, in houses constructed for the purpose. So are the beautiful layers of white Malaga and their Portugal varieties. There is no country upon the face of the globe that produces better qualities or varieties of fruits for drying than California; and this business can be made a gross sources of wealth and one of the leading economies of the farmer."

Our information from the quartz mines of California is scanty. Some which have been before paid large dividends, including the Gamaliel, Eureka and Grover, Hayden and Oaks and Reese, have lately paid little, if any profit. Others, including the Keystone of Amador, incorporated in this city, and the Sierra Buttes, owned by an English company, refuse to furnish comparisons with reports for publication. It is expected that the Amador will soon be in condition to produce as much as ever, the Keystone having produced $40,000 a month with 40 stamps being now complete, will, it is supposed turn out about $60,000 per month hereafter. The Gwin mine in Calaveras county, produced $20,000 per month with sixteen stamps, and will have a new mill within a couple of months, and will then produce from three to four $40,000 a month. Rumor says it has been sold to an English company for $1,500,000. The Kennedy mine yields $15,000 per month. The Mariposa litigation is not yet settled, and the mines are not doing anything of note. The North Star, of Grass Valley, yields about, $10,000 gross per month. Several of the quartz mines in Plumas are doing well, according to rumor, but we have nothing definite from them. The yield of the San Diego quartz mines was about $500,000 last year, and the yield is steadily increasing, with good prospects for the future. The Mariposa Gazette of the 16th inst says:

"John R. Hite, the proprietor of the mine at Hite's Cove which bears his name, is in town this week, and reports the grand crushing news of the completion of the tunnel which he has been running, night and day, for almost five and a half years. It is about 1,400 feet in length, and through a very hard species of rock. The tunnel is about seven feet in height by five in width, and taps the vein at a depth of 900 feet. They struck the vein two days ago, and find it rich in gold, or perhaps richer, than it was near the surface. They have not yet gone through to entire thickness, but the indications are favorable for an immense body of the precious ore.

Rich silver ores have recently been discovered at several points east of the coast mountains in the vicinity of Bodie, and their quantitative yield this year will be below the average. In Alabama no large body of silver has been found this year. Some good deposits of cinnabar have lately been found near Visalia and in Pope Valley.—Bulletin, November 18.

Old Spanish Gun.

The advance in the price of copper has called out many hidden stores of the metal, and steamships from foreign ports bring large quantities of it to New York for sale. Forty-seven huge bronze cannon most recently arrived in New York from Mexico and were placed in bond at the Empire stores in Brooklyn. An analysis of the metal at the United States Assay Office shows that it is composed of ninety-five per cent. copper and five per cent. of tin, both metals being of the best and purest quality. The guns are very perfect in design and finish. From muzzle to muzzle the measure about fifteen feet. The bore is six inches in diameter and smooth. The swell of the muzzle is richly ornamented with interlaced leaves, as if garlanded. The chase bears a ribbon scroll, with an inscription in high relief, at the rim about a quarter of a yard of leaves. The trunnions have been knocked from them, and from the base of the octagon is an elaborate coat of arms, supposed to be that of Philip V. of Spain. The line ring is gone and from the half obliterated inscription it is learned that the guns were made at Seville in 1746. The cannon is pear-shaped and terminated with leaves. The measurement across the muzzle is about twelve inches, and across the base of the breech about eighteen inches. The weights range from 5,000 to 7,000 pounds each. The guns came from Vera Cruz, where, with many others of the same description, they had been unnecessarily condemned. E. A. & G. R. Moseley, of West Troy, N. Y., have just received fifty guns of the same description, also stranded in, which they will manufacture into bells.—Troy Daily Times, October 31.

TELEGRAPHIC JOTTINGS.

John Bright will resume his seat in Parliament during the coming session.

By the breaking of a platform on the third floor of the new Herald building on Monday, five workmen were precipitated to the basement, and three of them, it is feared, were fatally injured.

It is probable that in consequence of the small majority in the French National Assembly on the 19th, in the election of a vice of republic, Grave demanded by Thiers, he will ask for another vote.

Signor Zolla, Minister of Finance, having addressed an official communication to the Pope guaranteeing the payment to his Holiness of the annuity voted to him by the Italian Parliament, Cardinal Antonelli sent a reply to the Minister informing him that the Pope declines to receive the annuity.

The St. Louis Democrat of the 16th states editorially, and it says it is natural, that there will be but two changes in the Cabinet after the 4th of next March. There will be a redirection of Secretaries Fish and Boutwell. The former, it is expected, will be offered the mission to England; and the latter will secure a seat in the United States Senate.

Warrants have been issued in Rochester for the arrest of three Inspectors of Election, who received the ballots of Messrs. S. Anthony and Fenack. The examination of Mrs. Anthony is postponed until the 28th. She says she is pressed to have her case brought properly before the Courts.

In all the cathedrals of France on the 17th inst. special prayers were offered for the National Assembly, and the blessing of God invoked upon its proceedings. The various Governments; officials elected the services, and detachments of troops as guards of honor. The congregations at all the churches were large.

A London dispatch of the 21st says: "A morning dispatch received here from New York announcing that a report was current there of the suppression of Thiers' entire cabinet in the Government of France. This report is false. Up to this hour there has been no change in the personnel of the cabinet of Thiers."

Mr. Bailey, one of the speakers at a Fenian Amnesty demonstration in Hyde Park, London, on Monday evening, was arrested for delivering the speech before the prosecution of public parks. His counsel argued that the Act under which the meeting was held Parliament has not sanctioned them, and an appeal was taken to the Queen's Bench.

The New York Tribune of the 20th says of Mr. Greeley that he has been much depressed by his wife's death from nervous prostration, resulting from overwork. The physicians have ordered him perfect rest through want of rest and sleep during the last two years. He will go to Pleasantville to the enjoyment of strength of constitution has enabled him to give attention to his recent political duties, but may be safely trusted to restore him speedily to his usual vigorous health.

Many of the London police having entered into a combination for the formation of rigsy workers for insubordination, some two hundred more were suspended on the 18th. The insubordination is spreading, and it is feared further suspensions will be necessary. There is much excitement consequent on the lagrarded condition of the streets. The Herald was without police at eleven o'clock on the morning of the 19th.

The several parties into which the French Assembly is divided held meetings in Paris on Sunday night to sum up the events of the past week, and decide their future policy. The Monarchists confirm that they have not changed their views, and will never be honorable retreat by giving their support to the Constitutional Government. All the Conservative organs have been united in favor of a motion to be introduced this week by Deputy Chesnelong demanding Gambetta's speech at Tours.

The most startling statement yet made of the quantity of wool destroyed by the Boston fire, gives a total loss of 15,000,000 pounds, distributed as follows: Domestic fleeces, 4,250,000 pounds; California and Oregon, 2,500,000 lbs.; Texas, 1,500,000 lbs.; Australian, 1,250,000; Australian, 1,500,000; Cape, 750,000; Buenos Ayres, 500,000; Montevideo, 500,000; Canada, 500,000. The statement is direct from the individual losers. The amount now in Boston, exclusive of that city, is estimated at 20,000,000 lbs. Loss on 16th, is 14,750,000 pounds; in Philadelphia, 20,000; and in New York, 230,000 lbs.

A London letter of November 2d says the romance—Turner's one of the most cautious and circumspect of men—has come to a sudden end. He married on Saturday last, and the fashionable universal thrill was struck. The monstrous article in the Times on the Canadian Pacific Railway, kindly used by the British Government during the whole course of the American negotiations, and then (extremely natural) sacrificed; and that as there is no hope of their ever having justice done to a measure of the kind, they had better cut the connection at once and set up for themselves. It is understood that the Canadians must of necessity be anxious to do. All the provinces are unanimous in favor of it. The action has provoked a storm of protest and remonstrance from Ottawa, and it remains to be seen whether the Canadians can do anything which is only a matter of opinion and taste. The Times' threat has not yet been carried into effect, and it is doubtful, although it would get it for the asking, whether it is true that the Dominion will not be thrown off by England.

PACIFIC COAST ITEMS.

McFadden (Democrat), Delegate from Washington Territory, has received nearly 900 majority.

The A. H. of Sacramento will hold their second annual ball at Turner Hall in this city on Thanksgiving Eve (November 28th). A fine time may be expected.

The Board of Supervisors of Monterey county have appointed Mr. Ellis, of that county, a notary public for the County.

In all the cathedrals of France on the 17th inst. special prayers were offered for the National Assembly, and the blessing of God invoked upon its proceedings. The various Governments; officials elected the services, and detachments of troops as guards of honor. The congregations at all the churches were large.

Charles Mortimer, confined in the Sacramento County Jail, for contempt of court, has made another attempt to commit suicide but Friday morning, and was found by the jailer with a piece of glass from an ink bottle.

It is stated that work will be immediately commenced on the narrow gauge railroad, starting from Oakland, with especial reference to the direction of Hunter's Bay, a cargo of coal having arrived for the mine of its owners.

Work is being pushed forward on the narrow-gauge railroad in Oakland on the San Pablo road. The grading is nearly completed, and rock is being hauled for the railway.

BRIEF CITY ITEMS.

District Attorney Murphy has appointed Thos. H. Ryan, attorney, to sue delinquent bonds. Hon. Thos. H. Ryan will enter upon the discharge of his duties at once.

The wheelbarrow heroes who, a week ago, made a collecting tour, sent $30 71 to the Sisters of Charity, being the amount of the collection in the department.

The opening of Montgomery avenue will embrace the Metropolitan and Magnetic Opera House, and the work will be completed in the month of a new theater on a grand scale, on the circus lot on Montgomery street.

The buckskin glove manufactory of G. A. Cook & Co. turned out about $2,000 worth of gloves and gauntlets per month. The five persons employed by the firm are all Mexicans in their employ—the most of them being women.

On Thursday of last week Judge Sanely rendered the report of the Commissioners of sixty-two Commissioners. Persons who are allowed damages for property goods in consequence of the laying out of streets, and those who reserve bonds will have notice of meeting hereafter.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Saturday evening last Charles Rice, a sturdy young man, twenty years old, and son of Charles Rice, owner of what is known as Rice's toll road and bridge, between Alameda and Oakland, was killed by accident by which he lost his life. He was driving the stage (mail and passenger) from Oakland to Alameda, and was accompanied by Annie Hawkins, a young lad, the only passenger, and when descending the steep grade to the bridge across the North Fork, a carpet sack fell out of the front "boot" and striking one of the horses, caused him to lunge forward, which also started the other horses. The girl became frightened, and the boy, losing control of the team, caught her in his arms and sprang from the stage, but instead striking a rock in the fall and fractured his skull, from which he died in a short time. The girl was but little injured. The parents of the boy are among the oldest, most worthy and well known people of the county, and we deeply sympathize with them in their sore affliction.—Vacer Herald.

HARD TIMES IVAN.—From to-day until New Year's you can get the best bargains ever offered in this city in Dress Goods, Shawls, Cloaks, Suits, Gents' Furnishing and Woolen Goods. Purchase at C. B. Hall Bro's Square Store, next door to Post Office. Their extensive improvements in their store, is to have their room, and will sell their goods at any price. They are now opening beautiful holiday presents, and their big new hall-room store is full of new things.

HENRY SCHUTZ of Hahn's Vapoonia Station Hair Restorer is invited before leaving for the interior, to call in custom charity and save further trouble.

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

California.

AMADOR COUNTY.

The Dispatch of the 16th contains the following information: A heavy blast was put in the Seaton mine on Thursday of last week, which threw out a large quantity of unusually rich rock, and disclosed the fact that the ledge contained much more of the same kind.

The proprietors of the Potosi mine have determined to resume operations in their shaft as soon as the miners and hoisting works, now in the course of construction, are ready.

The Phœnix, or Hooper, mine is located a few rods south of Plymouth, and is said to be one of the best mines in the county. Upon this mine is being erected a splendid 40-stamp mill, which will be in running order in the course of a few weeks.

EL DORADO COUNTY.

The Republican, published at Placerville, under date of November 14th, says: Sheppard & Witten have discovered a rich quartz lead in the Second Ward of this city. It is north of Spring street, about half way between the County Hospital and Coloma street. As it has not been sufficiently developed to ascertain the extent, but the richness is beyond question. Look takes out three feet below the surface will pay $40 to $50 per ton.

SISKIYOU COUNTY.

The Yreka Journal of the 14th, says Mr. Learned, who has made extensive preparations for a good season this fall, at the mouth of Salmon river, just below Scott's, at $2,000 last week, and if the rainy season will delay its setting in a few weeks he expects to get even on the expense he has been under, and make something besides.

SONOMA COUNTY.

The Sonoma Democrat of the 16th has the following: A controlling interest in the Sparrow quicksilver mine, which is situated in a tributary of Sulphur Creek, has been sold to parties in San Francisco for $30,000, it was principally owned by the Bank of Upper and Lower Lake in Lake county.

Arizona.

The Arizona Miner of the 5d instant contains the following items:

PIMA COUNTY.

The population of our new mining district on both sides of the southern boundary line is said to be between 1,500 and 2,000, chiefly Mexicans, we presume; and not less than forty arastras are being run by horse and mule power, grinding out the silver. As was to be expected, trouble has grown up between the two classes—Mexicans and Americans—and blood may be shed. But there, as elsewhere, our countrymen will undoubtedly use their natural and acquired ability in such away as will soon make them masters of the situation.

MOHAVE COUNTY.

The miners of Mohave, true to their California and Nevada schooling, are sinking deep shafts on their mines and getting them in a excellent condition for both working and selling purposes. The Navajoes are correcting former errors, and will soon have things in good running order.

YAVAPAI COUNTY.

The arastras at Weaver are still running and making money for their owners.

Messrs. Dyer and Wickenburg district, have their force at work, sinking the well and removing the mill.

Mr. Stanton is engaged in the saw mill which will enable them to work their claim cheaply and systematically.

PECKS AT LAST.—A remedy that not only relieves, but cures Piles, Kidney and Liver Complaint, and as well as the numerous maladies which receive and follow in their train. Such a remedy is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, for Consumption, Bronchitis, Throat, Lungs, etc. The remedy we allude to is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Prepared by R. V. Pierce & Sons, Buffalo.

IF YOU FEEL DULL, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or biliousness. Use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, and permanently set Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Sold by druggists.

AS A WARM FOR THE CHILDREN, Dorsetts Kalydor is unsurpassed. It is distinguished for its healing and soothing properties, and is highly esteemed by all nursemaids. Ladies will find it invaluable to allay sunburn, freckles, redness and roughness of the skin during heated terms, and allaying the irritations caused by the bites of mosquitoes and other annoying insects.

☞ Newspapers clubbing THE MONITOR on Saturday evening or Sunday morning, can obtain the paper at regular office rates at the store of J. N CROWNSEL, 120 Second street.

Wholesale Market Report.

MONITOR OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, Nov. 21, 1872.

FLOUR—The local demand is light, and the average sales for export only a limited inquiry has existed. Occasional sales of 1,000 to 2,000 sacks over last report. We quote local brands: Extra at $5 50 @ 5 75; family, $5 25 @ 5 50; superfine at $4 75@5; Interior and Oregon brands—Extra at $4 75@5; family, $4 50@4 75.

WHEAT—The market has remained quiet, at unchanged rates, during the week; the receipts, however, have been very fair. We quote shipping at $1 60 for dark coast; bright do, $1 55@1 57½; choice shipping, delivered milling, $1 60 @ 1 65; milling, $1 50@1 55; interrupted holiday at 85 cts@1 10 for average lots; choice, $1 60@1 65; shipping, $1 50@1 55.

BARLEY—The market has been active, at advancing rates, during the week. We quote feed at $1 10@1 20; brewing, $1 30@1 40; choice, $1 50.

OATS—The demand has been fair, at unchanged rates, during the week. We quote choice feed at $1 40@1 45; fair to good, $1 30@1 40.

CORN—The market has been fair during the past week, with a good demand. Quotable at the close at $1 30@1 35 for ordinary to choice white.

BRAN—Quotable at $7 50@8 00 per ton for carge lots.

HAY—The market has ruled steady, and the following are the current rates: Wheat, $15 @ 18; wheat and Oat, $14 @ 16; Oat, $13 @ 15.

POTATOES—We quote the range at $1 50@2 50; Chenangos, $2 @ 2 50; Burbanks, $2 @ 2 50.

ONIONS—Quotable at $1 25 @ 1 50 bx.

BRAN—Quotable at $20 @ 21 per ton, in mill.

MIDDLINGS—We quote feed at $24 @ 26 per ton in mill.

RYE—Quotable at $1 25 @ 1 30 bx.

BEANS—The market is quiet at $2@2 25 @ 2 50 for Pinks; $2 @ 2 25 for Bayos; $2 @ 2 50 for Whites; $2 @ 2 50 for Carpet, 4@5; and Mexican, $2 @ 2 50.

POTATOES—We quote California dry 1@1½c, and salted at 3@3½.

TALLOW—Quotable at 7@8 ℔.

WOOL—There has been considerable animation in the market during the past week, and a fair trade reported, owing to the favorable advices received from the Eastern markets. The market is firm at the following quotations: Fall burry, 16@18c; good to choice, 19@21c; fine burry, 21@23c; good to choice, 23@25c; fine, 25@27c; choice, 28@30c.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California, from roll, quotable for ordinary, 25 cts. @ 30; fresh, 31 @ 32½; Eastern fresh, 40 cts. @ 45; dairy in kegs, 25@30c; roll, 30@35c.

CHEESE—California, 12@13c; Eastern, 16@18c.

EGGS—California, 40@45c; Eastern, 40@45c.

DRIED FRUITS.

APPLES—Quotable at 10@12½ ℔ lb; Oregon, 10@ 12½ ℔ lb.

PEACHES—Quotable at 12½@15 ℔ lb; Oregon, none in the market; Blackberries, 20 cts. @ 25; Raspberries, 18@20c; do in cans, 30@35c.

PRUNES—Quotable at 10@12½ ℔ lb; Oregon, none in the market; Blackberries, 20 cts. @ 25; Raspberries, 18@20c; do in cans, 30@35c.

PEARS—Quotable at 10@12½ ℔ lb; Oregon, none in the market; Blackberries, 20 cts. @ 25; Raspberries, 18@20c; do in cans, 30@35c.

FRESH MEATS.

Beef—For first quality, 7@8c ℔ lb; for second quality, 6@7c ℔ lb.

Veal—Quotable at 8@9c ℔ lb.

Mutton—Quotable at 8@9c ℔ lb.

Lamb—Spring, 8@9c ℔ lb.

Pork—Dressed, grain-fed, 8@9c ℔ lb; grain-fed, 7@8c ℔ lb.

POULTRY AND GAME.

Poultry—Geese, large, at $7 @8 ℔ pair; Spring Chickens, $4 @ 5; Hens, $5 @ 6; Roosters, $5 @ 6.

Game—Quail, $1 @ 1 25 ℔ doz; Rabbits, $1 @ 1 25 ℔ doz; Hare, $1 @ 1 25 ℔ doz; Venison, 10@12½c ℔ lb.

Turkeys—Live, 18@20c ℔ lb; dressed, 18@20c ℔ lb.

Ducks—Wild, $1 @ 1 50 ℔ doz.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

PLEASE NOTE THE NUMBER

OF

THE NEW

DRY GOODS

EMPORIUM,

No. 114 FOURTH STREET,

NEAR HOWARD,

WHERE YOU WILL SEE

The Best Selected and the Cheapest

STOCK OF DRY GOODS

IN THE CITY!

DRY GOODS, ETC.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.,

HAVE JUST RECEIVED

From New York,

LARGE AND WELL ASSORTED

ADDITIONS TO THEIR COMPLETE STOCK

OF

DRY GOODS

COMPRISING

SILKS AND DRESS GOODS

OF THE LATEST STYLES,

Suitable for Fall and Winter Wear.

Plain and Embroidered Linen Sets, Collars, Sleeves and Cuffs.

Initial Handkerchiefs, Lace Collars, Sleeves, Sets and Handkerchiefs.

Ladies', Misses and Gents' Hosiery and Gloves.

Lace Veils, Fichus and Mantles.

Ladies' and Misses' Merino Undergarments.

Embroidered Flannel.

Linen and Linen Goods; Napkins and Table Cloths; all the brands in Cotton; Towels and Towelling.

Shawls, Flannels, Blankets and Quilts.

Lace Curtains, and Curtain Lace by the yard.

Piano and Table Covers.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Three Cases more Kentia Suiting, at 75 cents; worth $1 25.

Three cases more Satteens, at 62 cents; worth $1 25.

Four cases White Marseilles Quilts, at $1; worth $1 50.

☞ All our Goods are new and of good quality, at prices within the reach of all classes of customers.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.

NO. 7

Montgomery St.

BROWN & BARRY,

144 FOURTH STREET.

IMMENSE STOCK

OF

DRY GOODS!

NORTON & GAVAN,

154 THIRD STREET,

HAVING PURCHASED FOR CASH AN ENTIRE Bankrupt Stock of

DRY GOODS,

WILL OPEN DURING THE

MONTH OF NOVEMBER

The greatest inducements ever offered to cash purchasers in this city. The stock comprises

Black, Gros Grain and Gros de Rhein SILKS;

Irish, French and Japanese POPLINS;

Empress Cloths and ALPACAS;

Plain, Striped and Fancy DRESS GOODS;

Mourning DRESS GOODS;

Bonnet and Cashmere SHAWLS;

Scotch Plaid and Striped SHAWLS;

Blankets, Flannels and Sheetings;

Bed-Spreads, Marseilles and Honeycomb Quilts.

And a waltonerized stock of Gloves, Hosiery and Underwear.

Fancy Goods.

All of which will be sold at LESS than ORIGINAL COST.

☞ Ladies wanting bargains in Dry Goods are requested to examine our stock and compare prices with other stores.

SAMPLES GIVEN OF ALL GOODS.

☞ STRICTLY ONE PRICE. ☜

NORTON & GAVAN,

154 THIRD STREET,

Near Howard.

TOBIN,

DAVISSON

& CO.

HAVE A FULL STOCK OF THE FOLLOWING Goods, which they offer at reduced prices, currently:

GENT'S FURNISHING GOODS,

HOSIERY, SCARFS,

LINEN BOSOMS, NECK TIES,

SHIRTS AND DRAWERS, SUSPENDERS.

Woolen Goods,

ALL KINDS.

HAMBURG EDGINGS,

NEW PATTERNS,

Linen Goods,

BLACK ALPACAS

Of the celebrated DOUBLE-FACED BUFFALO Brand. Sole Agents for Chesney Brothers Gros Grain Silks.

TOBIN, DAVISSON & CO.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

GREAT ARRIVAL

OF

FALL AND WINTER

DRY GOODS

KENNEDY, O'NEILL & BRO.

116 and 118 Third Street,

HAVE RECEIVED FIFTY CASES OF SEASONABLE AND FASHIONABLE DRY GOODS, Eastern and European markets, for cash, large discounts will enable them to offer the same at prices

LOWER THAN ANY OTHER HOUSE IN SAN FRANCISCO,

Comprising a full line of

BLACK SILKS, from the best makers.

Plain, Checked and Striped SILKS in great variety.

IRISH POPLINS, from Tim Bradley's & O'Neill's & Co., Dublin, in all the new shades.

Thirty cases assorted DRESS GOODS.

Satin De Chenes, Drap d'Ete, Soups, Cloths, Tamise Cloths, Plaids, etc.

A splendid assortment of Ladies' and English, French and German HOSIERY.

A full line of HOUSEKEEPING GOODS, at sale prices.

☞ Ladies will please examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

KENNEDY, O'NEILL & BRO.

116 and 118 Third Street,

SAN FRANCISCO.

N. B.—A full line of Josvin and Alexandre KID GLOVES, at $1 50 per pair.

MOURNING GOODS.

Black Drap d'Ete, Plain Alpacas, Chilli Merinos, Mourning Cloth, Bombazines, Bombazettes.

☞ A very nice Black Alpaca for 50 cents per yard.

On account of the reduction in Wool, we have reduced all our Woolen Goods fully 25 per cent, and are now prepared to offer all makes of

Blankets, Flannels and Cassimeres

At greatly reduced prices. Also, Marseilles Spreads; Table Linens, Napkins, Sheetings, Cotton Flannels, and all makes of Muslins at reduced prices. A fine line of Ladies' Cotton and Merino Underwear at low prices.

Men's Jean and Merino Underwear, very cheap.

Boys' Merino Underwear very cheap.

Misses' Merino Underwear very cheap.

Ladies' Misses' and Children's Hosiery, very cheap.

Ladies' Cloaks from $6 each upward.

A great lot of Ladies' Gloves, very cheap.

Jouvin's colored and black Kid Gloves, $1 50 a pair.

J. J. O'BRIEN & CO.,

606 Market Street,

One door from Montgomery.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

GRAND DRY GOODS

STORE

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I WOULD RESPECTFULLY INFORM the public that I have now completed

THE LARGEST AND BEST ASSORTED

STOCK

OF

DRY GOODS

I have ever had the pleasure of offering to the public heretofore. I rely on the very superior assortment of Goods to insure a continuance of the favors with which I have already received. In order to

CLEAR OUT

The above Stock this season, I will offer it for sale decidedly in favor of the buyer.

C. CURTIS

601 and 603 Market Street,

Corner of Jones.

PIANOS.

From $360—$360

EMERSON

PIANOS

GUARANTEED FIRST-CLASS

HIGHEST STYLE OF FINISH—FACTORY front sold. The only FIRST-CLASS Piano in the country. Sold at a low price.

KOHLER, CHASE & CO.

NOS. 628 AND 630 CLAY STREET,

SAN FRANCISCO.

C. R. HALL

PIANOFORTES

MANUFACTORY,

NO. 12 TYLER STREET,

SAN FRANCISCO.

PIANOS TUNED AND REPAIRED by the best practical manner; and every piano warranted.

☞ Call and examine for yourself.

THE MONITOR:

A WEEKLY JOURNAL, DEVOTED TO

Irish and Catholic Literature

AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY

LYONS & BARRY

JOHN T. BARRY.

JAMES LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.

OFFICE—322 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts. (Rooms 5, 7 and 9, up stairs.)

All communications, whether relating to the business or editorial departments, should be addressed to "THE MONITOR."

THE ONLY IRISH and CATHOLIC JOURNAL IN CALIFORNIA.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):

Served by Carriers, per week.....10c
Mailed to subscribers, per year.....$4 00
Six months.....2 25

ADVERTISING RATES:

1 square, 1 time.....$1 50 | 1 square, 6 months.....$10 00
1 " 1 month.....3 00 | 1 " 3 months.....15 00
1 " 2 months.....5 00 | 1 " 9 months.....22 50
1 " 3 months.....7 00 | 1 " 1 year.....30 00

All the above rates will be strictly adhered to.

☞ Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

WENDELL PHILLIPS ON FROUDE

SPLENDID LECTURE.

The American Verdict Given.

"THE SAXON RACE INFAMOUS."

On Tuesday evening, December 3d, Wendell Phillips lectured on "Inference from Froude" to a full house in Dodsworth Hall, Boston. On the stage were William Lloyd Garrison and other distinguished gentlemen. The audience was one of the most cultured that has assembled in the Boston forum course this season. Mr. Phillips, as being introduced, said:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: I am to offer you one or two suggestions touching Mr. Froude's account of the relations of Great Britain and Ireland. He said he came here to argue his case before the American people as a jury, and in my narrow way I wish to ask an hour you lend me to-night in rendering a verdict. It was a great privilege to hear the English scholar's view of the critical relations between England and Ireland. It was a theme deeply interesting to every student of English literature and politics, and the interest was deepened from the gratified wish, with general purposes, he gave the receipts of those entries to the sufferers by our great conflagration. I am gratified, also, at the chance which he chose for his address to the American people—the Lyceum. It was a marked recognition of this new form for the public discussion of great national questions. It was a compliment, well directed, to the impartiality and intelligence of the audiences which make up the great American lyceum. Of course, being Froude, two brilliant and picturesque in narrative, graphic, humorous, and if he did not bring as many new facts, at least in the mass in which he told old ones he re-told the most, the conquer of mind with that England looks at the question today, and that of Ireland is a great revelation. Sara Tooke said once, when Gibbon wrote his autobiography, that a man who had written his personal confessions in his youth rather than write his own life; that he would have left another to do it. Froude has let the trusted the unconscious betrayal of what he would have been but too willing to do. So I think is the verdict of the impartial, in the whole inspiration of those two brothers, Froude and Carlyle, and that is the soul of the English literature of the day. Froude's reflecting is dispassion, listless complaints, and genuine contemplation, that 'their name is legion.' Everywhere the sick and feeble seem to have realized the importance of 'holding fast that which is good,' and avoiding what is spurious and dangerous. The nauseous 'Bitters,' under various names, which nauseate and poison the counter to 'Hostetter's Stomach Bitters,' should be avoided. For their own sakes, for the sick and the public at large. Hostetter's Bitters are procurable in bottles only, and never sold in bulk.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

PLEASE NOTE THE NUMBER

OF

THE NEW

DRY GOODS

EMPORIUM,

No. 114 FOURTH STREET,

NEAR HOWARD,

WHERE YOU WILL SEE

The Best Selected and the Cheapest

STOCK OF DRY GOODS

IN THE CITY!

DRY GOODS, ETC.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.,

HAVE JUST RECEIVED

From New York,

LARGE AND WELL ASSORTED

ADDITIONS TO THEIR COMPLETE STOCK

OF

DRY GOODS

COMPRISING

SILKS AND DRESS GOODS

OF THE LATEST STYLES,

Suitable for Fall and Winter Wear.

Plain and Embroidered Linen Sets, Collars, Sleeves and Cuffs.

Initial Handkerchiefs, Lace Collars, Sleeves, Sets and Handkerchiefs.

Ladies', Misses and Gents' Hosiery and Gloves.

Lace Veils, Fichus and Mantles.

Ladies' and Misses' Merino Undergarments.

Embroidered Flannel.

Linen and Linen Goods; Napkins and Table Cloths; all the brands in Cotton; Towels and Towelling.

Shawls, Flannels, Blankets and Quilts.

Lace Curtains, and Curtain Lace by the yard.

Piano and Table Covers.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Three Cases more Kentia Suiting, at 75 cents; worth $1 25.

Three cases more Satteens, at 62 cents; worth $1 25.

Four cases White Marseilles Quilts, at $1; worth $1 50.

☞ All our Goods are new and of good quality, at prices within the reach of all classes of customers.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.

NO. 7

Montgomery St.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

GRAND DRY GOODS

STORE

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I WOULD RESPECTFULLY INFORM the public that I have now completed

THE LARGEST AND BEST ASSORTED

STOCK

OF

DRY GOODS

I have ever had the pleasure of offering to the public heretofore. I rely on the very superior assortment of Goods to insure a continuance of the favors with which I have already received. In order to

CLEAR OUT

The above Stock this season, I will offer it for sale decidedly in favor of the buyer.

C. CURTIS

601 and 603 Market Street,

Corner of Jones.

VOL. XVI. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., SATURDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1872. NO. 6.

A. WALDTEUFEL,

307 MUSIC HALL,

FIRST STREET.....SAN JOSE,

Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

CATHOLIC BOOKS,

PICTURES AND ORNAMENTS,

Miscellaneous Books and Stationery.

AGENT FOR

STEINWAY & SONS' PIANOS;

CHICKERING & SONS' PIANOS;

HAYNES BROS. PIANOS;

BURDETT CELEBY ORGANS;

MASON & HAMLIN'S ORGANS.

Always on hand a large assortment of the above named celebrated Instruments.

☞ Liberal discount to the Rev. Clergy and Catholic Schools. Orders promptly attended to. my28-1y

IRELAND.

The Candidates for Mayor—Desertions from the Army—Exercises—The Parks Regulations—The Bowler Brothers Failure—The Galway Prosecutions Etc.

[Special Correspondence of THE MONITOR.]

CORK, NOVEMBER 11, 1872.

THE CANDIDATES FOR MAYOR.

Since I dispatched my last letter a change has taken place in the political situation here. The Conservatives have put forward a candidate avowedly with the object of showing the people of England that Mr. Shaw's success does not represent the unanimous opinion of the important city of Cork on the question of Home Rule. The gentleman, a local merchant and a Quaker—John Pim—states in his address that he cannot adopt the Home Rule programme, as he regards it as an attempt to separate two nations that are bound together by every tie of interest. He also opposes denominational education; but has a fair record of, and will work to obtain a subsidy for our hardy fishermen, in the same manner as it is conceded to those of Scotland.

Mr. Shaw's colleague, Mr. Matthew, the second Liberal candidate, Mr. Mathew, retired. In his valedictory address he pretty plainly intimated his opinion that the principles put forward by Mr. Sexagrue were intended as a bribe to the Priests of the rest of England, and that they had for their object the separation of the two countries. He frankly admitted that he had met no opposition on the part of the Priests, but he believed that the name of his uncle would be a sufficient passport to the confidence of every Cork man. He had not from the beginning the slightest wish to see himself at the head the support of a large number of prominent citizens, remarkable more for their fidelity to the Government of which Mr. Gladstone is the chief, than for their supremacy of Irish nationality. It is now believed that these men will to a considerable extent stay away from the poll. Mr. Rosayne is now master of the situation. Conservatives and Irishmen, who took part in the late disturbances, and old women contrive to put an army of 200,000 into the field to fight a battle that is trying to crush them. God crush the nation that ever dared to lift a hand against it! But that is the Illest thing in the world, of course. One never has any reason to be ungrateful for favors received. Mr. Chisholm Anstey, however was such a nation on the face of the earth. Well, all I can say is, that if 900,000 people, men and old women contrive to put an army of 200,000 into the field to fight a battle that is trying to crush them. God crush the nation that ever dared to lift a hand against it! But that is the Illest thing in the world, of course. One never has any reason to be ungrateful for favors received. Mr. Chisholm Anstey, however was such a nation on the face of the earth. Well, all I can say is, that if 900,000 people, men and old women contrive to put an army of 200,000 into the field to fight a battle that is trying to crush them,

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

IRELAND.

Outrage Manufacture.

The Mayo Examiner, in its issue of November 8th, rebukes in the following rather too mild fashion the practice indulged by one or two Dublin newspaper, inventing accounts of outrages to the provinces: "Dublin daily papers have very little time to do their work, and less than in almost any branch of life's business to make inquiry as to the correct of news that flows unceasingly upon them by telegraph and other sources. We are aware that the greatest annoyance is felt when mistakes or exaggerations occur in the news from their correspondents. We regret to notice that the word 'outrage' is very freely indulged in; and there can be no doubt that any overstating of the incidents and accidents of life under this head does great injury to the province. We, this very week, prevented an accident, arising, unfortunately, out of drink, being erroneously chronicled a murder. In a county like Mayo, comprising some twenty market towns of all sizes, and with a population of nigh a quarter million, composed as ours is, life cannot be carried on exactly as it might be in a paradise of civilization and prosperity. We, with great respect, draw the attention of our city contemporaries to the 'outrage' article which we see very much in the market for some time past, in the hope that a check may be put on exaggerated rumors and reports when manufactured or shaped into items of news."

Father O'Keeffe and the National Board.

In a trial between the National Board and a Callan schoolmistress, in Dublin, on the 19th November, Father O'Keeffe was examined. In cross-examination by Mr. Richie, who appeared for the Board, witness said: I read a letter of the 30th of April) pretending to resume me from the management of the schools; but I thought very little about it whether that allegation be right or wrong. Has the suspension referred to been removed or declared invalid? There has been no suspension. It is a libel that has not been suspended. (Murmurs of "Oh! oh!") Judge O'Brien said it was most unseemly for any one to interrupt the evidence by an exclamation. Father O'Keefe —I have never been tried, and could not be condemned without a trial. I have never been charged with any guilty. I proclaim it in this Court, and I won't allow you to put any such questions to me. I claim the protection of the Court. Judge O'Brien—You need do nothing of the kind. The question is a very simple one, and you have answered it. No protection is required. Mr. Farrell—It is not the question that could be complained of, but the manner in which the Court, which I think fairly entitle me to claim the protection of the Court. Judge O'Brien—I rebuked the interruption unasked. Mr. Richie—Is it not alleged by the Bishop that you are suspended? Father O'Keeffe—What do I care for the wicked allegations of any one?

Treatment of the Fenian Prisoners.

We have received from Mr. Nolan, Secretary of the Amnesty Association, a statement signed by "A Fellow Prisoner of Reddin." The writer says he can corroborate several of Reddin's statements as to his treatment in Portland and Millbank prisons. He also says that while his own feet were frost-bitten, he was ordered to work as a navvy in the docks of Chatham, and ordered with such language as "You Irish scoundrel," "You Irish dishonest murderer," etc. One of the doctors ordered him into the infirmary, but when the other heard that he was a political prisoner he said to him: "Oh, you are going on like Reddin; you are one of the Manchester murderers; you should send him out to work." At Millbank, he says, while ordinary prisoners could sleep in the cells with the gas turned out, the political prisoners had to endure the full blaze of gas all night while ordinary prisoners who were in the infirmary are allowed the use of books, they were refused to Reddin and himself. He adds that he was a witness of the incident of Reddin falling under the barrow of bricks. He challenges the Government to grant an impartial public inquiry, and to allow him and other prisoners to give evidence as to their treatment. Freeman, November 18.

The Irish Historian Reuke.

In the year 1632, in an humble dwelling within the inclosure of the Monastery of Donegal, of which there is nothing now left but the ruins, four Franciscan Brothers sat themselves down to weave out the thread of Irish history, from the mass of tangled fact and legend, tradition, legend and song presented. The work of Ireland's early scholars had been lost by subsequent disorders, and hundreds of years of persecution had driven the opportunities for learning away; but Michael, Conroy, Ferguson O'Cleary and Ferfassa O'Maelmonery, with indomitable preseverence and immense research, succeeded in compiling a series of annals which form the basis of Irish history. But it is only now, when the four masters have slept for nearly two hundred years in nameless and unknown graves, that an appreciative and grateful antiquarian, Sir William Wilde proposes the erection of a memorial monolithic cross on the site of their labors. It is gratifying to note that there is already a long list of well-known names to support him with subscriptions.

Restitution Asked.

Mr. Butt has written a letter to the Marquis of Hartington, calling his attention to the statement made by him in the House of Commons that a sum of £30,000, the balance of a sum originally raised for charitable purposes in Ireland, would be placed at the disposal of the Lord Lieutenant for the promotion of the Irish fisheries; and asking when the persons interested in the fisheries may expect that arrangements will be made to carry the promise given by his lordship into practical effect. The Chief Secretary has replied that he is in communication with the Treasury on the subject, and "that he shall lose no time in bringing the intentions of the Government to the persons interested as soon as he is in a position to do so." This letter was written on the 15th of October, and apparently the Marquis has not yet found himself "in a position" to do anything for the fishermen. Mr. Butt's letter points out that a sum so of exceptional richness has been lost to the fishermen through the non-issuance of the Treasury in part with the fund. —Examiner, November 19.

The Land Act.

The Gladstone Land Act may give all necessary security to the tenant farmers of Ireland, but somehow the tenant farmers of Ireland cannot see the matter in that light at all. In Kildare, for instance, the state of affairs is such that a "Tenant's Defence Society" is felt to be an absolute necessity, and, accordingly, it was resolved at a recent meeting at the Athy Farmers' Club to establish such a body. Similarly, in Kilkenny, the tenantry appear to hold the great "hanging Sessions" in very slight estimation, and have been seriously advised by the Kilkenny Journal to follow the example of their brethren of Kildare, and unite in defense of their rights. These factsare pretty commentary, surely, on the "healing measure."—Nation, November 16.

The Railways.

"Her Majesty's Government have undertaken to examine into the question of the purchase of the Irish railways, with the view of making, if possible, some proposal to the Parliament of a general satisfactory nature. They are, however, unable to give any pledge as to the result of their deliberations." Such is the answer vouchsafed by Mr. Gladstone to the latest memorial from Ireland for the purchase by the State of the Irish railways. It is substantially the same as every previous answer from the same quarter on the same question. The whole subject is still "under consideration." We have strong belief that it will remain in that condition until Ireland has secured Home Rule.—Nation, Nov. 16.

Fracas in the Hunting Field.

The hunting fracas in the county Wexford came before the magistrates in Dublin on the 18th November, and the prisoner, Mr. Sweetman, was returned for trial, bail being refused. It appeared that Sweetman, whom Captain Quinn swore he never saw before, hustled his horse, and, upon being remonstrated with, still continued so to do, upon which the complainant, seeing him raise his whip, struck him. Sweetman then fired twice at complainant, and afterwards pursued him two or three miles, and fired two more shots. The evidence is corroborated by Captain Quinn's brother, who swore that Sweetman also presented a pistol to him, close to him that he could not down the barrel.

The Bishop of Waterford.

The Catholic Bishop of Waterford, the Most Rev. Dr. O'Brien, having determined to retire into private life, a meeting of the clergy of his diocese was held on Wednesday to nominate a successor. The Bishop himself presided, and the Archbishop of Cashel was also present. After divine service, the votes were taken, with the result of placing the Rev. Dr. Fitzgerald, Catholic Rector of Lismore, at the head of the list, the Very Rev. Dr. Power, Clonmel, second, and the Most Rev. Dr. Murray, Bishop of Maitland, third.—Advertiser, November 23.

ENGLAND.

Drunken English.

The school Anglo-Saxon is still clamoring for open houses and flowing taps. The Licensing Act is his greatest grievance, and the early-closing rule is resented by him as the most intolerable form of tyranny. Day by day we hear of meetings and indignant Court, which I think fairly entitle me to claim the protection of the Court. Judge O'Brien—I rebuked the interruption unasked. Mr. Richie—Is it not alleged by the Bishop that you are suspended? Father O'Keeffe—What do I care for the wicked allegations of any one?

Treatment of the Fenian Prisoners.

We have received from Mr. Nolan, Secretary of the Amnesty Association, a statement signed by "A Fellow Prisoner of Reddin." The writer says he can corroborate several of Reddin's statements as to his treatment in Portland and Millbank prisons. He also says that while his own feet were frost-bitten, he was ordered to work as a navvy in the docks of Chatham, and ordered with such language as "You Irish scoundrel," "You Irish dishonest murderer," etc. One of the doctors ordered him into the infirmary, but when the other heard that he was a political prisoner he said to him: "Oh, you are going on like Reddin; you are one of the Manchester murderers; you should send him out to work." At Millbank, he says, while ordinary prisoners could sleep in the cells with the gas turned out, the political prisoners had to endure the full blaze of gas all night while ordinary prisoners who were in the infirmary are allowed the use of books, they were refused to Reddin and himself. He adds that he was a witness of the incident of Reddin falling under the barrow of bricks. He challenges the Government to grant an impartial public inquiry, and to allow him and other prisoners to give evidence as to their treatment. Freeman, November 18.

The Irish Historian Reuke.

In the year 1632, in an humble dwelling within the inclosure of the Monastery of Donegal, of which there is nothing now left but the ruins, four Franciscan Brothers sat themselves down to weave out the thread of Irish history, from the mass of tangled fact and legend, tradition, legend and song presented. The work of Ireland's early scholars had been lost by subsequent disorders, and hundreds of years of persecution had driven the opportunities for learning away; but Michael, Conroy, Ferguson O'Cleary and Ferfassa O'Maelmonery, with indomitable preseverence and immense research, succeeded in compiling a series of annals which form the basis of Irish history. But it is only now, when the four masters have slept for nearly two hundred years in nameless and unknown graves, that an appreciative and grateful antiquarian, Sir William Wilde proposes the erection of a memorial monolithic cross on the site of their labors. It is gratifying to note that there is already a long list of well-known names to support him with subscriptions.

Restitution Asked.

Mr. Butt has written a letter to the Marquis of Hartington, calling his attention to the statement made by him in the House of Commons that a sum of £30,000, the balance of a sum originally raised for charitable purposes in Ireland, would be placed at the disposal of the Lord Lieutenant for the promotion of the Irish fisheries; and asking when the persons interested in the fisheries may expect that arrangements will be made to carry the promise given by his lordship into practical effect. The Chief Secretary has replied that he is in communication with the Treasury on the subject, and "that he shall lose no time in bringing the intentions of the Government to the persons interested as soon as he is in a position to do so." The letter was written on the 15th of October, and apparently the Marquis has not yet found himself "in a position" to do anything for the fishermen. Mr. Butt's letter points out that a sum so of exceptional richness has been lost to the fishermen through the non-issuance of the Treasury in part with the fund. —Examiner, November 19.

The Land Act.

The Gladstone Land Act may give all necessary security to the tenant farmers of Ireland, but somehow the tenant farmers of Ireland cannot see the matter in that light at all. In Kildare, for instance, the state of affairs is such that a "Tenant's Defence Society" is felt to be an absolute necessity, and, accordingly, it was resolved at a recent meeting at the Athy Farmers' Club to establish such a body. Similarly, in Kilkenny, the tenantry appear to hold the great "hanging Sessions" in very slight estimation, and have been seriously advised by the Kilkenny Journal to follow the example of their brethren of Kildare, and unite in defense of their rights. These facts are pretty commentary, surely, on the "healing measure."—Nation, November 16.

The Railways.

"Her Majesty's Government have undertaken to examine into the question of the purchase of the Irish railways, with the view of making, if possible, some proposal to the Parliament of a general satisfactory nature. They are, however, unable to give any pledge as to the result of their deliberations." Such is the answer vouchsafed by Mr. Gladstone to the latest memorial from Ireland for the purchase by the State of the Irish railways. It is substantially the same as every previous answer from the same quarter on the same question. The whole subject is still "under consideration." We have strong belief that it will remain in that condition until Ireland has secured Home Rule.—Nation, Nov. 16.

Fracas in the Hunting Field.

The hunting fracas in the county Wexford came before the magistrates in Dublin on the 18th November, and the prisoner, Mr. Sweetman, was returned for trial, bail being refused. It appeared that Sweetman, whom Captain Quinn swore he never saw before, hustled his horse, and, upon being remonstrated with, still continued so to do, upon which the complainant, seeing him raise his whip, struck him. Sweetman then fired twice at complainant, and afterwards pursued him two or three miles, and fired two more shots. The evidence is corroborated by Captain Quinn's brother, who swore that Sweetman also presented a pistol to him, close to him that he could not down the barrel.

The Bishop of Waterford.

The Catholic Bishop of Waterford, the Most Rev. Dr. O'Brien, having determined to retire into private life, a meeting of the clergy of his diocese was held on Wednesday to nominate a successor. The Bishop himself presided, and the Archbishop of Cashel was also present. After divine service, the votes were taken, with the result of placing the Rev. Dr. Fitzgerald, Catholic Rector of Lismore, at the head of the list, the Very Rev. Dr. Power, Clonmel, second, and the Most Rev. Dr. Murray, Bishop of Maitland, third.—Advertiser, November 23.

ENGLAND.

Drunken English.

The school Anglo-Saxon is still clamoring for open houses and flowing taps. The Licensing Act is his greatest grievance, and the early-closing rule is resented by him as the most intolerable form of tyranny. Day by day we hear of meetings and indignant semi-drunken demonstrations arising out of the dissatisfaction of the British Sniper. O'Brien—I rebuked the interruption unasked. Mr. Richie—Is it not alleged by the Bishop that you are suspended? Father O'Keeffe—What do I care for the wicked allegations of any one?

Treatment of the Fenian Prisoners.

We have received from Mr. Nolan, Secretary of the Amnesty Association, a statement signed by "A Fellow Prisoner of Reddin." The writer says he can corroborate several of Reddin's statements as to his treatment in Portland and Millbank prisons. He also says that while his own feet were frost-bitten, he was ordered to work as a navvy in the docks of Chatham, and ordered with such language as "You Irish scoundrel," "You Irish dishonest murderer," etc. One of the doctors ordered him into the infirmary, but when the other heard that he was a political prisoner he said to him: "Oh, you are going on like Reddin; you are one of the Manchester murderers; you should send him out to work." At Millbank, he says, while ordinary prisoners could sleep in the cells with the gas turned out, the political prisoners had to endure the full blaze of gas all night while ordinary prisoners who were in the infirmary are allowed the use of books, they were refused to Reddin and himself. He adds that he was a witness of the incident of Reddin falling under the barrow of bricks. He challenges the Government to grant an impartial public inquiry, and to allow him and other prisoners to give evidence as to their treatment. Freeman, November 18.

The Irish Historian Reuke.

In the year 1632, in an humble dwelling within the inclosure of the Monastery of Donegal, of which there is nothing now left but the ruins, four Franciscan Brothers sat themselves down to weave out the thread of Irish history, from the mass of tangled fact and legend, tradition, legend and song presented. The work of Ireland's early scholars had been lost by subsequent disorders, and hundreds of years of persecution had driven the opportunities for learning away; but Michael, Conroy, Ferguson O'Cleary and Ferfassa O'Maelmonery, with indomitable preseverence and immense research, succeeded in compiling a series of annals which form the basis of Irish history. But it is only now, when the four masters have slept for nearly two hundred years in nameless and unknown graves, that an appreciative and grateful antiquarian, Sir William Wilde proposes the erection of a memorial monolithic cross on the site of their labors. It is gratifying to note that there is already a long list of well-known names to support him with subscriptions.

Restitution Asked.

Mr. Butt has written a letter to the Marquis of Hartington, calling his attention to the statement made by him in the House of Commons that a sum of £30,000, the balance of a sum originally raised for charitable purposes in Ireland, would be placed at the disposal of the Lord Lieutenant for the promotion of the Irish fisheries; and asking when the persons interested in the fisheries may expect that arrangements will be made to carry the promise given by his lordship into practical effect. The Chief Secretary has replied that he is in communication with the Treasury on the subject, and "that he shall lose no time in bringing the intentions of the Government to the persons interested as soon as he is in a position to do so." The letter was written on the 15th of October, and apparently the Marquis has not yet found himself "in a position" to do anything for the fishermen. Mr. Butt's letter points out that a sum so of exceptional richness has been lost to the fishermen through the non-issuance of the Treasury in part with the fund. —Examiner, November 19.

The Land Act.

The Gladstone Land Act may give all necessary security to the tenant farmers of Ireland, but somehow the tenant farmers of Ireland cannot see the matter in that light at all. In Kildare, for instance, the state of affairs is such that a "Tenant's Defence Society" is felt to be an absolute necessity, and, accordingly, it was resolved at a recent meeting at the Athy Farmers' Club to establish such a body. Similarly, in Kilkenny, the tenantry appear to hold the great "hanging Sessions" in very slight estimation, and have been seriously advised by the Kilkenny Journal to follow the example of their brethren of Kildare, and unite in defense of their rights. These facts are pretty commentary, surely, on the "healing measure."—Nation, November 16.

The Railways.

"Her Majesty's Government have undertaken to examine into the question of the purchase of the Irish railways, with the view of making, if possible, some proposal to the Parliament of a general satisfactory nature. They are, however, unable to give any pledge as to the result of their deliberations." Such is the answer vouchsafed by Mr. Gladstone to the latest memorial from Ireland for the purchase by the State of the Irish railways. It is substantially the same as every previous answer from the same quarter on the same question. The whole subject is still "under consideration." We have strong belief that it will remain in that condition until Ireland has secured Home Rule.—Nation, Nov. 16.

Fracas in the Hunting Field.

The hunting fracas in the county Wexford came before the magistrates in Dublin on the 18th November, and the prisoner, Mr. Sweetman, was returned for trial, bail being refused. It appeared that Sweetman, whom Captain Quinn swore he never saw before, hustled his horse, and, upon being remonstrated with, still continued so to do, upon which the complainant, seeing him raise his whip, struck him. Sweetman then fired twice at complainant, and afterwards pursued him two or three miles, and fired two more shots. The evidence is corroborated by Captain Quinn's brother, who swore that Sweetman also presented a pistol to him, close to him that he could not down the barrel.

The Bishop of Waterford.

The Catholic Bishop of Waterford, the Most Rev. Dr. O'Brien, having determined to retire into private life, a meeting of the clergy of his diocese was held on Wednesday to nominate a successor. The Bishop himself presided, and the Archbishop of Cashel was also present. After divine service, the votes were taken, with the result of placing the Rev. Dr. Fitzgerald, Catholic Rector of Lismore, at the head of the list, the Very Rev. Dr. Power, Clonmel, second, and the Most Rev. Dr. Murray, Bishop of Maitland, third.—Advertiser, November 23.

GERMANY.

Liberty as Understood in Prussia.

A few days ago a young Jesuit Father, who had just been ordained priest, came to stay with his parents near Munster, in Westphalia, having obtained permission from his religious superiors to say his first Mass in the parish church of his old home, the ceremony to take place on the Sunday following his arrival, a messenger came from the Landrath to inform the young priest, who proved to contain a peremptory order to the effect that the young man must disperse within twenty-four hours, before the "Anmasst" (the evil and political superior of the district), or be liable to be dealt with by the same authority, whether he was a Jesuit, or in what relation he stood to the Society. The Father immediately went to the "Anmasst" and declared that he was a Jesuit, adding that he only proposed to remain a few days in his home for the benefit of his health, as he had done several times before since he had entered the Order. Upon which he was told that he must on no account say Mass, and at the same time orders were sent to the parish priest of the locality to the effect that such a proceeding was not to be permitted. The authorities asserted the Father that these measures were not taken by them on their own responsibility, but that strict orders had been sent to all mayors of towns and other officials of the army any Jesuit under strict surveillance, and not to allow them to say Mass, to exercise any ecclesiastical function whatever." The Westphalian Mercur tells this tale, adding that if a Father in question is well known to the editor of that paper. We hear a great deal from a certain portion of the English press about the solidity of the new German Empire; such proceedings as the above hardly bear out these statements. A really strong empire does not feel conscious of its internal and external strength—would hardly need to resort to such infinitely petty precautions against a body of peaceful priests. It forcibly reminds us of certain worthy illogical non-Catholics, who say with a face of terror, "Pope Heaven's sake don't pray for our conversion."—Tablet, November 16.

The Jesuits.

Dr. Alban Stolz, the eminent Professor in the University of Freiburg, makes the following points, which our friends of the "religious" press do not often dwell on: "The Jesuits are, individually, regular living, and at the same time energetic men, of whom not one is guilty of the slightest breach of good living, but for the honor of God and the salvation of His creatures. Through the average, their antipodes are the Free Masons. While the Jesuit wears the dress of his Order wherever he goes, and has frequently to put up with mockery and reproach, the Freemason abides in concealment under the cover of night into his lodge as into a house of ill-fame. The Jesuits are bound to the strictest obedience, while the Freemason is fond of feasting and lying in bed; while the Jesuit rises very early and has frequently very short commons. The Freemasons aspire to domination and State power, and before our eyes attempt it. It is said that in North America it is almost impossible to become President if you are not a Freemason. Who is to blame for this state of hold? Their very statutes forbid them to accept high honors. We find a few Jesuits among the Popes, and hardly any among the Bishops—a few heathen missionaries excepted—but their every statute obliges to resign after the lapse of a few years. The Jesuits are sent to Africa or Asia or China, and cheerfully take upon himself privations, troubles and dangers which a civilized man flies. Freemason visits his club or visits the theatre, and has a pleasant bachelor's life. Jesuits before the fire resisting irreligious books and newspapers. Yes, these Freemasons are a fine body of men organized from the earnest, disinterested and hard-working Catholic, than a piece of cheese soaked in water can have comparisons with a steel-blade."

Hail to the Chief!

The leader of the "Old Catholics" of Austria, Aloys Anton, has resigned his parochial charge at Lundenburg in Moravia, and will shortly come into the Catholic Church. Herr Anton is a married man, and has a family. He is a native of Austrian Silesia, and was born in 1815. He was ordained priest in 1838, and has since been parish priest of Lundenburg. He is a man of considerable learning, and has written a hymn to the Virgin which is in use in Austria. He has paid you her debt another time heewa."—London Universe, November 9.

SWEDEN.

Catholicism in Sweden.

In the early part of the sixteenth century the Catholic faith was suppressed in Sweden, Norway and Denmark by the strong hand of the tyrant Christian II., who was the uncle of the present Kings of Sweden and Norway. Only a remnant remained of adherents to the ancient religion. Their number rapidly diminished in Sweden, and at present there is no Catholic Church there. As a rule, the inhabitants of these countries have retained strong religious prejudices against Catholics, more especially as the Protestant clergy instil a spirit of infinity and indifference in their teaching. They have preserved, with more or less fidelity, those portions of Christian belief which were retained by the Church when separated themselves from the true Church. A movement in the direction of that Church has been gradually arising during the last thirty or forty years amid those nations, and there is fast being formed a party favorable to the Catholic Church. In the Assembly there are now six distinct groups. First, the Extreme Left, or Republican union; second, the Republican Left, or moderate Republican union; third, the Centre, or still more moderate Republican union; fourth, the Centre Right, who prefer Orleanist rule; fifth, the Right, or strong monarchy, preferring Henry the Fifth; sixth, the Extreme Right, which believes in the Extreme Legitimist notions—the white flag, the Pope, and no dynasty not legitimate since 1789—and is sent to Algeria on officer who made a speech which had a Bonapartist tendency. These seems much too nervous on the subject, but he may have private information to the effect that there is a party in favor of the Imperial dynasty. It is reported that a large number of the inhabitants of Alsace and Lorraine are going to the United States and Canada.—London Universe.

GERMANY.

Liberty as Understood in Prussia.

A few days ago a young Jesuit Father, who had just been ordained priest, came to stay with his parents near Munster, in Westphalia, having obtained permission from his religious superiors to say his first Mass in the parish church of his old home, the ceremony to take place on the Sunday following his arrival, a messenger came from the Landrath to inform the young priest, who proved to contain a peremptory order to the effect that the young man must disperse within twenty-four hours, before the "Anmasst" (the evil and political superior of the district), or be liable to be dealt with by the same authority, whether he was a Jesuit, or in what relation he stood to the Society. The Father immediately went to the "Anmasst" and declared that he was a Jesuit, adding that he only proposed to remain a few days in his home for the benefit of his health, as he had done several times before since he had entered the Order. Upon which he was told that he must on no account say Mass, and at the same time orders were sent to the parish priest of the locality to the effect that such a proceeding was not to be permitted. The authorities assured the Father that these measures were not taken by them on their own responsibility, but that strict orders had been sent to all mayors of towns and other officials of the army any Jesuit under strict surveillance, and not to allow them to say Mass, to exercise any ecclesiastical function whatever." The Westphalian Mercur tells this tale, adding that if a Father in question is well known to the editor of that paper. We hear a great deal from a certain portion of the English press about the solidity of the new German Empire; such proceedings as the above hardly bear out these statements. A really strong empire does not feel conscious of its internal and external strength—would hardly need to resort to such infinitely petty precautions against a body of peaceful priests. It forcibly reminds us of certain worthy illogical non-Catholics, who say with a face of terror, "Pope Heaven's sake don't pray for our conversion."—Tablet, November 16.

The Jesuits.

Dr. Alban Stolz, the eminent Professor in the University of Freiburg, makes the following points, which our friends of the "religious" press do not often dwell on: "The Jesuits are, individually, regular living, and at the same time energetic men, of whom not one is guilty of the slightest breach of good living, but for the honor of God and the salvation of His creatures. Through the average, their antipodes are the Free Masons. While the Jesuit wears the dress of his Order wherever he goes, and has frequently to put up with mockery and reproach, the Freemason abides in concealment under the cover of night into his lodge as into a house of ill-fame. The Jesuits are bound to the strictest obedience, while the Freemason is fond of feasting and lying in bed; while the Jesuit rises very early and has frequently very short commons. The Freemasons aspire to domination and State power, and before our eyes attempt it. It is said that in North America it is almost impossible to become President if you are not a Freemason. Who is to blame for this state of hold? Their very statutes forbid them to accept high honors. We find a few Jesuits among the Popes, and hardly any among the Bishops—a few heathen missionaries excepted—but their every statute obliges to resign after the lapse of a few years. The Jesuits are sent to Africa or Asia or China, and cheerfully take upon himself privations, troubles and dangers which a civilized man flies. Freemason visits his club or visits the theatre, and has a pleasant bachelor's life. Jesuits before the fire resisting irreligious books and newspapers. Yes, these Freemasons are a fine body of men organized from the earnest, disinterested and hard-working Catholic, than a piece of cheese soaked in water can have comparisons with a steel-blade."

Hail to the Chief!

The leader of the "Old Catholics" of Austria, Aloys Anton, has resigned his parochial charge at Lundenburg in Moravia, and will shortly come into the Catholic Church. Herr Anton is a married man, and has a family. He is a native of Austrian Silesia, and was born in 1815. He was ordained priest in 1838, and has since been parish priest of Lundenburg. He is a man of considerable learning, and has written a hymn to the Virgin which is in use in Austria. He has paid you her debt another time heewa."—London Universe, November 9.

SWEDEN.

Catholicism in Sweden.

In the early part of the sixteenth century the Catholic faith was suppressed in Sweden, Norway and Denmark by the strong hand of the tyrant Christian II., who was the uncle of the present Kings of Sweden and Norway. Only a remnant remained of adherents to the ancient religion. Their number rapidly diminished in Sweden, and at present there is no Catholic Church there. As a rule, the inhabitants of these countries have retained strong religious prejudices against Catholics, more especially as the Protestant clergy instil a spirit of infinity and indifference in their teaching. They have preserved, with more or less fidelity, those portions of Christian belief which were retained by the Church when separated themselves from the true Church. A movement in the direction of that Church has been gradually arising during the last thirty or forty years amid those nations, and there is fast being formed a party favorable to the Catholic Church. In the Assembly there are now six distinct groups. First, the Extreme Left, or Republican union; second, the Republican Left, or moderate Republican union; third, the Centre, or still more moderate Republican union; fourth, the Centre Right, who prefer Orleanist rule; fifth, the Right, or strong monarchy, preferring Henry the Fifth; sixth, the Extreme Right, which believes in the Extreme Legitimist notions—the white flag, the Pope, and no dynasty not legitimate since 1789—and is sent to Algeria on officer who made a speech which had a Bonapartist tendency. These seems much too nervous on the subject, but he may have private information to the effect that there is a party in favor of the Imperial dynasty. It is reported that a large number of the inhabitants of Alsace and Lorraine are going to the United States and Canada.—London Universe.

ITALY.

Affairs in Rome.

On All Saints' Day the Holy Father, accompanied by his noble Court, proceeded in full pace across the Piazza of St. Peter's. There the Sovereign Pontiff celebrated Mass, assisted by Mgr. de Merode and Mgr. Martinelli. Several personages of distinction were present, and the Count and Countess De Bourgoing, were present at the celebration. A great number of persons approached the Table of the Lord, and had the happiness of receiving the Holy Communion from the Pope's own hand. An enormous crowd of persons were in the Journal of Florence that the Holy Father said Mass during the Mass in a voice loud enough to be heard by all present, and that, after his own celebration, he heard Mass, assisting from the throne. Mgr. Persichelli, one of his Holiness's Chamberlains, was sent to Ancona on purpose to show how unfounded is the statement made in a late number of the French Soleil about the Pope's health. Again in the Journal de Rome, which says: "The Holy Father daily receives a large number of persons, and all that 'system of lies' about his health is simply impudent. Only a certain number of persons can be admitted to the Vatican, and they are obliged to undergo a long examination in order to obtain admission. Every day a single thunderbolt—a bolt which made all the Sovereigns of repugnant Europe blush with shame."

Touching more closely still on the incidents and politics of the day, Mgr. Spinosi says that a little public may who very well for groups of people no bigger than families," but that to attempt to apply a Republican form to a nation is like "trying to square the circle," for that Francs was "geographically impossible."—Westminster Gazette, November 16.

Party Divisions in the French Assembly.

So much is said of parties in France that now, as the Assembly is in session, it may be interesting to know the exact division of the political forces. In the Assembly there are now six distinct groups. First, the Extreme Left, or Republican union; second, the Republican Left, or moderate Republican union; third, the Centre, or still more moderate Republican union; fourth, the Centre Right, who prefer Orleanist rule; fifth, the Right, or strong monarchy, preferring Henry the Fifth; sixth, the Extreme Right, which believes in the Extreme Legitimist notions—the white flag, the Pope, and no dynasty not legitimate since 1789—and is sent to Algeria on officer who made a speech which had a Bonapartist tendency. These seems much too nervous on the subject, but he may have private information to the effect that there is a party in favor of the Imperial dynasty. It is reported that a large number of the inhabitants of Alsace and Lorraine are going to the United States and Canada.—London Universe.

GERMANY.

Liberty as Understood in Prussia.

A few days ago a young Jesuit Father, who had just been ordained priest, came to stay with his parents near Munster, in Westphalia, having obtained permission from his religious superiors to say his first Mass in the parish church of his old home, the ceremony to take place on the Sunday following his arrival, a messenger came from the Landrath to inform the young priest, who proved to contain a peremptory order to the effect that the young man must disperse within twenty-four hours, before the "Anmasst" (the evil and political superior of the district), or be liable to be dealt with by the same authority, whether he was a Jesuit, or in what relation he stood to the Society. The Father immediately went to the "Anmasst" and declared that he was a Jesuit, adding that he only proposed to remain a few days in his home for the benefit of his health, as he had done several times before since he had entered the Order. Upon which he was told that he must on no account say Mass, and at the same time orders were sent to the parish priest of the locality to the effect that such a proceeding was not to be permitted. The authorities assured the Father that these measures were not taken by them on their own responsibility, but that strict orders had been sent to all mayors of towns and other officials of the army any Jesuit under strict surveillance, and not to allow them to say Mass, to exercise any ecclesiastical function whatever." The Westphalian Mercur tells this tale, adding that if a Father in question is well known to the editor of that paper. We hear a great deal from a certain portion of the English press about the solidity of the new German Empire; such proceedings as the above hardly bear out these statements. A really strong empire does not feel conscious of its internal and external strength—would hardly need to resort to such infinitely petty precautions against a body of peaceful priests. It forcibly reminds us of certain worthy illogical non-Catholics, who say with a face of terror, "Pope Heaven's sake don't pray for our conversion."—Tablet, November 16.

The Jesuits.

Dr. Alban Stolz, the eminent Professor in the University of Freiburg, makes the following points, which our friends of the "religious" press do not often dwell on: "The Jesuits are, individually, regular living, and at the same time energetic men, of whom not one is guilty of the slightest breach of good living, but for the honor of God and the salvation of His creatures. Through the average, their antipodes are the Free Masons. While the Jesuit wears the dress of his Order wherever he goes, and has frequently to put up with mockery and reproach, the Freemason abides in concealment under the cover of night into his lodge as into a house of ill-fame. The Jesuits are bound to the strictest obedience, while the Freemason is fond of feasting and lying in bed; while the Jesuit rises very early and has frequently very short commons. The Freemasons aspire to domination and State power, and before our eyes attempt it. It is said that in North America it is almost impossible to become President if you are not a Freemason. Who is to blame for this state of hold? Their very statutes forbid them to accept high honors. We find a few Jesuits among the Popes, and hardly any among the Bishops—a few heathen missionaries excepted—but their every statute obliges to resign after the lapse of a few years. The Jesuits are sent to Africa or Asia or China, and cheerfully take upon himself privations, troubles and dangers which a civilized man flies. Freemason visits his club or visits the theatre, and has a pleasant bachelor's life. Jesuits before the fire resisting irreligious books and newspapers. Yes, these Freemasons are a fine body of men organized from the earnest, disinterested and hard-working Catholic, than a piece of cheese soaked in water can have comparisons with a steel-blade."

Hail to the Chief!

The leader of the "Old Catholics" of Austria, Aloys Anton, has resigned his parochial charge at Lundenburg in Moravia, and will shortly come into the Catholic Church. Herr Anton is a married man, and has a family. He is a native of Austrian Silesia, and was born in 1815. He was ordained priest in 1838, and has since been parish priest of Lundenburg. He is a man of considerable learning, and has written a hymn to the Virgin which is in use in Austria. He has paid you her debt another time heewa."—London Universe, November 9.

Marriage of Lojson and Rochefort.

M. Henri Rochefort, whose civil marriage with the walls of his prison took place on Friday, seems to have desired to obtain Rochefort to ascertain how far the Bishop of Versailles sent a priest whether he had the necessary faith of for the reception of a Sacrament. Léon Vesillot, in an article in l'Univers, says of his own knowledge that M. Rochefort replied to the questions of this priest that he was a Catholic; that, though engaged in a certain line of politics, he never doubted or intended to deny any of the dogmas of the Church. The Bishop, on this, did all that was required to do in the religious marriage; and in the presence of the priest and witnesses, M. Rochefort repeated what he had already said on the subject of his religious convictions, and, kneeling down by the side of his bride, made his confession in preparation for receiving the Sacrament of Marriage. He could have fortold," continues Veuillot, "five years ago, Father (Lojson) was occupying the pulpit of Notre Dame of Paris, and M. Rochefort was editing the Lanterne at that the serious and religious nature of the latter would come as a antidote to the sacrilegious and cynical farce of the preacher; that the latter would be married by the Curé of the Carmelite at the Registrar's office, and that the former would go and to raise himself with her, by proceeding from true goodness of heart to the true God. Then he will be more in the pulpit, the other a sinfulled and as Henri Rochefort returns to the Church, he will find that the religious steps into his hired carriage with a bouquet of flowers, and that a single step has brought him from the depths of infidelity to the heights of faith."

Froude's Ignorance.

Mr. Froude, in one place, says that Burke "possesse a odd little piece of knowledge set in a framework—since I am not aware that any considerable statements are found wholly on the side of the Church

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING DEC. 28.

December
22—Sunday—Fourth Sunday in Advent.
23—Monday—Of the Feria.
24—Tuesday—Vigil of Christmas. Fast.
25—Wednesday—Nativity of our Lord. Christmas Day.
26—Thursday—St. Stephen, first Martyr.
27—Friday—St. John, Apostle and Evangelist.
28—Saturday—The Holy Innocents.

THE MONITOR:

THE ONLY

Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....DECEMBER 21, 1872.

CHRISTMAS.

Once more it becomes our pleasing duty to send holiday greeting to all the friends of THE MONITOR. Christmas is all but upon us, and ere another issue of our paper is sent forth from the press it will have gone into the irrevocable past. And thus will this blessed season of the year come and go until Time itself shall cease to be, and this world shall undergo its final doom.

Christmas, as everybody knows, is held sacred to the sweetest emotions that can abide in the human heart. It is sacred to the love of God which contemplates the Redeemer under the form of a tender babe; it is sacred to that love of our neighbor which sees a brother in every suffering fellow Christian. It is right and just, therefore, that all, without distinction, should prepare to fulfill the duties which are, as it were, dictated by the very spirit of this holy time. To pay tribute of homage to the Almighty God by worthily approaching the Sacraments, to show our sympathy with humanity by contributing, as liberally as our means will allow, to the sustenance of the poor and the comfort of the afflicted—these are the ways in which Christmas is best observed and most honored.

Thanks to the indefatigable zeal of the Most Reverend Archbishop and his devoted clergy, San Francisco is abundantly supplied with temples for the worship of the Lord, and with charitable institutions designed to alleviate almost every kind of affliction that can bring pain and sorrow to humanity. Consequently, so far as these things are concerned, there is no excuse for any one—for him whom God has blessed with a liberal supply of this world's goods; or for him who has to struggle hard with the trials and difficulties incidental to this life—failing to discharge his befitting portion of each of these duties. So we trust that our countrymen, whose happy lot it has been to cast their fortunes in this favored land, will remain true to the traditions and customs of their race, celebrating Christmas as the festival of the Infant Redeemer with hymns of praise and thanksgiving with prayer and with alms, and with tribute for their fellow-men all over the habitable globe.

WRETCHED PEDDLING.

It is with much regret that we find ourselves compelled to notice a gross breach of good taste and a very watched piece of peddling perpetrated last Sunday, during the laying of the foundation-stone of the College of the Sacred Heart, by the agents of a "Catholic Publication Company," which has recently come into existence in this city. While thousands were assembled at the corner of Larkin and Eddy streets to witness the beautiful and instructive ceremonies proper to the occasion, some persons, acting on behalf of this "Company," affixed a placard to a post fastening all that encersed thief a two-bit "edition" of Father BURKE's lectures in reply to Mr. FROUDE could be there had for sale. We know little and care a great deal less about this "Publishing Company;" but if its financiers are in such a condition as to necessitate a resort to piracy and peddling for the purpose of making a draw or two, we think the interests of religion, decency and honesty would be well served by its extinction. Some time ago Father BURKE, fearing that unprincipled persons would attempt to defraud him of the profits legitimately derivable from his magnificent defense of Ireland and the Irish against the aspersions of the English historian, published the unsexed card:

Father BURKE begs to inform the public that he intends to publish his lectures in answer to Mr FROUDE in book-form (copyrighted from his manuscript), and at such a price as will enable the poorest of all who may wish to acquire it. Father BURKE publishes this book on his own account, reserving the entire profits of its publication; and therefore he hopes that no publisher will deprive him of his profit in the book by publishing it in advance. The only authentic edition will be that published by F. M. HASSETT, of New York.

That vaunting, according to our opinion ought to have been sufficient to prevent any honestly disposed man, or association of men, from publishing the lectures in any other way than in the columns of a newspaper. Yet here we have this "Catholic Publishing Company of San Francisco" endeavoring, to the utmost of its—thank Heaven, very small—ability to forestall Father BURKE by means of a twenty-five cent edition of his discourses, and hawking it about on a Sunday among people assembled to witness a religious ceremony! The act of piracy is so atrociously dishonest that it must disgust every right-minded man, and especially every right-minded Catholic, who does not wish to see Father BURKE, after all he has done for faith and country, meanly cheated out of what rightfully belongs to him. And as for the peddling part of the business, we know that it has caused much indignation among the clergy and the intelligent Catholics who went to Larkin street to be present at the laying the foundation stone of a great educational institution, and not to be annoyed by solicitations to purchase the "splendid lectures of Father BURKE for the small sum of two bits!" But this conduct is only of a piece with the "smartness" which prompts the selling of newspapers at church-doors, in the hope of gathering a few dollars by deluding the people with the idea that "religion" is about equally served by buying the ——— and hearing Mass! We do not wish to be uncharitable, but we cannot help remarking that this curious way of "pushing business," this dexterous shuffle between God and Mammon is most likely to recommend itself to men whose attachment to a faith is measured by the pecuniary advantages it may bring them. It is, at any rate, satisfactory to know that Father BURKE cannot have lost much. The "two-bit edition" was not a success, and we much fear it will not enhance the market value of the stock of our "Catholic Publishing Company."

COLLEGE OF THE SACRED HEART.

The imposing ceremony which was witnessed last Sunday by the thousands assembled at the corner of Eddy and Larkin streets ought well teach a useful lesson to the assailants of the Catholic Church. It was calculated to rebuke them for a slander which they are extremely fond of propagating, in season and out of season. We can scarcely take up a book written by a Protestant, in which the "errors of Rome" are at all alluded to, without finding it repeatedly asserted that Catholicity favors ignorance and is hostile to education. Not a preacher enters a pulpit to hurl his fanatical diatribes against the Holy See, who does not make it a special charge that the Papacy has invariably been the foe of learning and scientific investigation. These allegations are not only unfounded but so diametrically opposed to facts recorded in history, that a Catholic can hardly read or hear them with patience. And, truly, the dealer of men who deliberately blind themselves to truth, and repeat calumnies that have been refuted a thousand times, for the temporary gratification of making a point against an adversary, is apt to kindle anger in the minds of the most peaceful controversialists. The Catholic Church, as a body, and the Popes, as individuals, have done incomparably more for the promotion of learning and the advancement of science than any body or any persons that the world has ever yet seen. Here in our midst, in the city of San Francisco and in the State of California, the most striking proofs of the spirit which universally actuates true Catholics force themselves upon the notice of even a casual visitor. Though by no means the most wealthy section of the community, our co-religionists have done infinitely more for education, have spent far more money upon schools and colleges, than the members of any other creed whatever.

And, returning to the ceremony of last Sunday, for what were the thousands of young and old assembled at the place we mentioned? To witness the laying of the foundation-stone of a new college, to hear his Grace the Archbishop invoke his solemn blessing upon the institution: to listen to the words of a zealous and eloquent priest describing the benefits to be derived in the future from that new institution. The College of the Sacred Heart is but another of the many efforts made to provide a sound Catholic education for the youths of this city. Its erection has only been rendered possible by the more than generous subscriptions given by the wealthy men of the community. We merely discharge a debt of gratitude in acknowledging the fact that among the contributors very many liberal and high-minded Protestants are to be numbered. These latter gentlemen, though differing in religious conviction from the founders of the institution, could appreciate rightly their labors in behalf of the children who, when grown to manhood's estate, will play a prominent part in directing the destinies of this great and prosperous country. It is, we understand, intended that the college shall be, in the fullest sense of the word, free to all comers. Of course its maintenance will involve considerable expense: but there is no fear that the burden will not be cheerfully borne by those who have already made great sacrifices for its establishment.

It will be under the care of the Christian Brothers, a religious association especially devoted to the care and instruction of the young. The success which has attended the labors of this admirable fraternity in Ireland, England, France, Germany and in the United States wherever they are established, has been so marked that they are now recognized as the most teaching body in the world. Their system, which largely consists in appealing to the good sense and spirit of emulation that characterizes boys far more than is generally supposed, has attained results not equaled by any other method. We need only mention St. Mary's College to bring an excellent illustration of the Christian Brothers' high rank as educators before the minds of the people of California. Its pupils have turned out better scholars, better men and better Christians than the boys of any college under non-Catholic government. We are confident that the same remark will yet apply to the alumni of the Sacred Heart College.

Christmas Day.

ST. MARY'S CATHEDRAL.—Masses will be celebrated at 5 A. M. Christmas morning, and every half hour thereafter until half-past 10, when Pontifical High Mass (Mozart's Twelfth) will be celebrated, after which Papal benedictions will be given by the Most Rev. Archbishop.

ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH.—The hours at which Mass will be celebrated in this church will be announced on Sunday, 22d instant.

ST. PETER CHURCH, VALLEJO STREET, First Mass at 5 o'clock for general Communion; immediately after a Mass of thanksgiving, and then the usual Masses at 8 and 9; and at 10:30 a Solemn High Mass with full choir. In compliance with an order of the Most Rev. Archbishop last Christmas, there will be no midnight Mass this year in any of the churches in this archdiocese.

ENGLISH HUMANITARIANISM.

If there be any one thing upon which, more than another, the English people pride themselves it is, unquestionably, their humanity. Their preachers and their statesmen are incessantly talking about the duty of alleviating misfortune and sympathizing with suffering. Nothing touches the great British heart like a bit of pathos either in prose or poetry; nothing stirs the great British soul like the complaints of affliction. All this would make one imagine they were a nation of humanitarians, were it not for the well-known fact that an amount of barbarism shocking to contemplate exists among them, and is constantly showing itself to the scandal of the rest of the world. Indeed, all this "talk" about kindliness, philanthropy, etc., is confined to a certain number among the educated classes, and even they reserve it for foreign subjects. Those nice English people could sympathize warmly with the Italians who rose to arms against their legitimate sovereigns; but they hail only frenzied denunciations for the Sepoys who strove to throw off the galling yoke of Britain. They could weep over the execution of the revolutionists who blew up the Servician barracks in Rome and buried nearly a hundred slumbering soldiers into eternity; but they could only express their joy at the unthinking men who, in blowing down the wall of Clerkenwell prison in order to release incarcerated comrades, unintentionally killed a few persons. They could pathetically affect a horror at the alleged sufferings of rebels and brigands in the Neapolitan prisons, while they kept concealed the tortures which were being inflicted upon political prisoners. They exulted like demons when the Indian mutineers were in hundreds blown from the cannon's mouth on the arid plains of Hindostan, and yet they could shed and moan over the French execution of murderers and incendiaries at Sartory. Only a few days ago the Times sent a Commission to Paris for the purpose of making inquiries into the complaints of the Communists imprisoned at Oleron, taking no heed whatever of the dreadful disclosures made by poor DANIEL HANLON, who has been maimed and crippled for life by the tortures inflicted upon him by his English jailers. The Commissioners, who, be it remembered, went over to France with a decided animus against the Government and in favor of the communists imprisoned at Oleron, taking no heed whatever of the dreadful disclosures made by poor DANIEL HANLON, who has been maimed and crippled for life by the tortures inflicted upon him by his English jailers. The Commissioners, who, be it remembered, went over to France with a decided animus against the Government and in favor of the communists imprisoned at Oleron, were obliged to confess that the complaints were almost entirely without foundation, and that the prisoners were as well treated as they could be under the circumstances. To corroborate this judgment, the statistics furnished by the Inspector-General of English Prisons show that the mortality in the British places of detention is comparatively higher than at Oleron, or any other place in France where criminals are kept. But this mortality is even more than this—they show that every year a large number of English and Irish men and women are actually tortured to death, or driven to commit suicide, in the British prisons, while they are subjected to brutalities, more than to mere prison discipline, which, in many fields from civil life, would be punished with the utmost severity of the law. Of this dangerous state of affairs we have had ample evidence in the case of Mrs. MAYBRICK, who has been sentenced to death for the murder of her husband, on evidence which would not have sufficed to hang a dog in any other country. Then there is

FROUD.

I.

O Prophet-Apostle of Slander,
Philosopher, clear-eyed and wise,
Whose curtain of coldness is slander
Through acres of pitiless lies!
Again to the front you rush forward,
But not as historians of old;
With pockets of books, white-held onward,
Your fingers all crooked to hold.
Go down with the filmiest of the fossilets—
Ice, pantheism, soulless and bare—
Whose impotent fightings would wither
The laurels that forth crowned our race.

II.

Oh! manhood, you tell us, is shattered—
If manhood as now was once;
The dew of our spirit are scattered—
You've killed all it by suspicion and power;
And, friend, it from sorrow and trial,
Is better than blindness and pride;
It never brushed upon denial
It never was Europe's contempt.
It drinketh of earth when your history
Remained mangers under the sky,
And flashed their Star before with others,
And slew for the sake of the cry.

III.

Our mighty transgression was vast soon—
That Jew-God is Christ and is dead!
You say, with a sneer of derision,
To bow to the God that he hated
Never season for England, wherever
The Romish Church's hand
Shall come to destroy or "deliver,"
And weep in a storm on her coasts!
Your diction shall thus be remembered—
Was precedent ever so fit!
And the of the seas, fallen! fallen!
Will shame it her good to submit.

IV.

No history sees! through the area
Which primitively dawned round us, we,
The pious of yore had escape
Were ceaselessly laboring on:
They gained the background of story
While others from the dawn of the Goal—
The spiritual, if vision and memory,
Of holy and proud leanhold.
But you! You are shrouded in legend
Frame by from the barbarous night;
Which, though it has scattered and poored thro' it
Her saving invisible light.

V.

Arabic thee! One sickness is gender
The falsehoods that flow from that brain,
But falsehoods self-freely! What wonder
Thy tongue should rehearse them again!
The work before which thou'rt not waver:
Your power, in thy method, is great;
Of unbelief's venomous slaver,
Of pantheism's poison, the seat.
Peace, doctor! Ink-wave in thy letters,
Let Him in thee be answered,
Thy error was shot at her heart,
And he [illegible] in thine envy!
—Dublin Nation. J. F. O'D.

Father De Smet's Indian Sketches.

Two Leagends of the Primitive People
The Legend of Wabaonsa.—The Spirit Bird.—The Rainbow and the Deluge.

The name Delawares, by which the Indians of this nation are known, was given them by the whites. It is derived from Lord Delaware, one of the early English colonial Governors in America. Among themselves these people are called "Lenni-Lennapi," or the Primitive Nation. They are considered ancienly in a great country west of the Mississippi. With the "Five Nations," so renowned in the Indian history of this continent, they seized and occupied a large territory southeast of their ancient domain. In the course of this long migration, the Delawares divided into three great tribes, called the "Turtle Tribe," the "Turkey Tribe," and the "Wolf Tribe." In the time of William Penn they occupied the whole of Pennsylvania, and extended from the Delaware to the Hudson. At the white population began to increase, strengthen and extend over those vast territories, the Indians, like all the other tribes, found it necessary to plunge deeper into the forests and plains, and to yield to their conquerors or usurpers. While a great part of the nation established themselves on the Ohio, on the margin of Lake Michigan, others regained the shores and the forests of the Mississippi, whence, according to their traditions, their ancestors had set forth. When colonies of Europeans came to take possession of that large and handsome river, which the celebrated Jesuit Marquette first discovered, and gave the now consoling and sublime name of the "Immaculate Conception," they repulsed once more the Indians, and Government granted these Indians a little territory southwest of Fort Leavenworth, on the Missouri. In 1854 the Delawares ceded this foothold to the United States.

THE LEGEND—WABAONSA.

Two centuries have passed away since the fame of Wabaonsa was sounded along the shores of Lake Superior. He was a Delaware chief of an ancient line, who had preserved the chieftainship in their family from the remotest times, and he cherished a lofty pride of ancestry. To the reputation which he had added the advantages of a tall and commanding person; and the dazzling qualities of great bodily strength, personal and mental activity. His heavy bow was renowned for its dimensions throughout the surrounding tribes, and he was known to have shot one of his flat headed arrows through the body of a deer. His cousing was as much sought as his prowess was feared; so that he came, in time, to be equally feared as a hunter, a warrior, and a medicine or sage. But he had now passed the meridian of his days, and the latter "Ah-kee-mo" (even who had been long above the earth," was familiarly applied to him. Such was Wabaonsa, to whom the united vote of the nation awarded the first place in their esteem, and the highest seat in authority. But pride was his ruling passion. Wabaonsa had an only daughter, who had now lived to witness the bordering of the down for the eighteenth spring. Her father was not more celebrated for his deed of strength than she for her gentle virtues and all the accomplishments of an Indian maid.

Her hand was sought by a youth of humble parentage, who had no other merits to recommend him but such as might arise from a tall and graceful person; a nobly step, and an eye beaming with the fire of youth and an ardent imagination. These were sufficient to attract the favorable notice of the daughter, but were by no means satisfactory to the father, who looked for a son more suitable to his rank and the high pretensions of his family.

"Listen to me, youngman," replied Wabaonsa to the trembling hunter, after had sought his interview; "read to attentively to what you hear. You ask me to bestow upon you my daughter, the idol of my heart, and my choicest gift from the Master of life. Others beforehand of me this boon, who were as young, as active and as ardent as yourself. Some of these persons have had visited Wabaonsa's lodge for months. Young man, have you considered well what is it that you would choose for a father-in-law? Have you reflected on the deeds which have raised me to authority and made my name known to the enemies of my nation? Where is the chief who is not proud to be considered the friend of Wabaonsa? Where is the warrior who will not be glad to be numbered among his brothers? Where is the sage who will not be too say the equal in bravery of Wabaonsa? Have you not heard that my fathers came from the far land decked with plumes, masks of feathers, and clothed in [illegible] armor? And of what, young man, have you to boast, that you should claim as alliance with my warlike line? Have you ever shot your enemies on the battle-field? Have you ever brought to the camp a trophy of victory? Have you over proved your fortitude by suffering protracted pain, enduring continued hunger, or sustained great fatigue? Is your name known beyond the humble limits of your native village? Go then, young man, and earn a name for yourself. It is sons as alliance with the wigwam of Wabaonsa. Think not my ancient blood shall mingle with the humble stock of the Awasisi (a kind of fish), fit totem (family distinction) for fishermen."

The humble and intimidated youth departed; but his resolved to do a deed that should render him worthy of the daughter of Wabaonsa, or die in the attempt. He called together several of his young companions and equals in years, and imparted to them his design of conducting an expedition against the enemy, and requested their assistance. Several embraced the proposal immediately; others were soon persuaded into it, and before the sun had set he saw himself at the head of a

FORMIDABLE PARTY OF YOUNG WARRIORS,

All eager, like him to distinguish themselves in battle. Each warrior, according to the custom of the day, was armed with a bow and a quiver of arrows, tipped with flint or jasper. He carried a wauk-kee-mon, or knapsack, upon his back, provided with a small quantity of parched and pounded corn, mixed with pemmican or pounded dry meat. He was furnished with a pig-gamaugun, or war-club, of hard wood, fastened to a girth of deer-skin, and a kind of stone knife. In addition to this, he carried the ancient sheesheegun, or Indian dance, consisting of a gourd, filled with six feet in length, with a spear of flint firmly tied on the upper end of hard wood, bound down with deer sinews. Thus equipped, and each warrior painted in a manner to suit his own fancy, and ornamented with appropriate feathers, they repaired to the spot appointed for the war dance.

A level, grassy plain extended for nearly a mile from the lodge of Wabaonsh toward the point of the lake where the encampment. Lodges of bark were promiscuously interspersed with the trees of the forest and there a cluster of trees, or a solitary pine, which had escaped the fury of the tempests for unaccounted years. A belt of forest ran and skirted the lake shore in front, and a tall forest of oaks, pines and popular formed the background. In the center of this green stood a large shattered pine, with a clear space around, reserved as the scene of the war-dance, time out of mind. Here the young warriors met, with their tall and graceful leader, distinguished by the badges of the white eagle which adorned his head. A bright fire of pine wood blazed upon the green. He led his men twice or thrice in a circle around this fire, with a measured step and a solemn chant, then, suddenly halting, the war-whoop was raised, and the dance immediately began. An old man, sitting at the head of the ring, beat time upon the drum, while several of the warriors shook their shee-sheegunes, and over and anon made

THE WOODS RESOUND WITH THEIR YELLS.

Thus they continued the dance for two days and nights, with short intermissions; when dropping off, one by one, from the fire, each sought his own way to the place appointed for the rendezvous, on the confines of the enemy's country. Their leader was not among the last to depart. Before shopkeepers began to be afraid to sell him more powder."

Again, sir, having purchased this property with a Parliamentary title, the English Parliament has practically declared that I must pay seven years' purchase in addition to the price I paid by auction, to tenants who certainly never thought they had any claim against me. But, worst of all, I find I am deprived of the ordinary right of contract respecting any portion of my estate less in value than £400 per annum. As my farms are all of less annual value this, the only plan open to me to reacquire the rights of Englishmen is to pay my tenants seven years' purchase in addition to the price I paid by auction, to tenants who certainly never thought they had any claim against me. But, worst of all, I find I am deprived of the ordinary right of contract respecting any portion of my estate less in value than £400 per annum. As my farms are all of less annual value this, the only plan open to me to reacquire the rights of Englishmen is to pay my tenants seven years' purchase and to consolidate my farms into farms at not less than £100 a year rent. If I were to do so I should, no doubt, be shot, and the English Government is wholly powerless either to protect me or to punish my murderers. In fact, the existing Government neither does nor can protect either persons or property in Ireland; yet, knowing the people, and the only enemy I have is the so-called Government of the land, I will not go into the question whether—the Treaty of Union having been set aside on a fundamental point—the Government is or is not now a Government de jure but I must certainly say that, in my opinion, the existing Government is not a Government de facto. The farce of prosecuting the Bishop and clergy of Galway may be gone through; but we all know over there that is a silly and stupid and expensive farce ending in nothing, performed to blind the eyes of ignorant John Bulls who, like yourselves, believe that in Ireland life, rights, privileges and power of the inhabitants of Ireland are as one with the people of Great Britain."—I am, sir, your obedient servant, JAMES HAIG.

HYTHE, Kent, Oct. 28.

The Economiste d'Italia says there are in the Italian Kingdom 50,000 acres of turf applicable for fuel, which, when dried, yield 25 per cent. at 25 to 30 per cent cheaper than coal at the present prices.

TAX COLLETUOR'S NOTICES.

TAXES-1872-'3-TAXES

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT A CERtified copy of the Assessment Roll for the Taxable Property of the City and County of San Francisco—REAL ESTATE, IMPROVEMENTS AND PERSONALTY—for the Fiscal Year 1872-73, has this day been received: that the State, City and County Taxes for said Fiscal Year are now due and payable at the office of the undersigned (Room No. 1, City Hall), and that the law in regard to their collection will be strictly enforced.

Taxes will become DELINQUENT on the first MONDAY in January, 1873, and thereafter 15 per cent. will be added to the amount thereof. Bra per cent. will be added to the amount thereof.

A. AUSTIN,
Tax Collector of the City and County of San Francisco.

TO TAX-PAYERS.

TAXES DUE OCTOBER 28, 1872.

DELINQUENT JANUARY 6, 1873.

THE [illegible] DAY. COMPLAINS [illegible] that [illegible] year a large [illegible] by [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

TELEGRAPHIC JOTTINGS.

Tweed's trial has been set for the first Monday in January.

There are two thousand destitute Italian emigrants in New York.

The Old South Church in Boston is to be transformed into a Postoffice.

Three Carlists bands were defeated and dispersed by the Government troops on the 14th.

Commodore Vanderbilt declines that he has abandoned the New York underground railway project.

Arnold, the diamond "sailor," pleads indigent virtue, and threatens his accusers with prosecution.

Congressman Banks has introduced a bill to increase the President's salary to $50,000 per annum. It will undoubtedly pass."

Very Rev. Thomas Mulvey, Vicar-General of the Diocese of Virginia, died in Petersburg, aged 86, on the 15th December.

The late S. N. Pike, it is reported, left property valued at $3,000,000 in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and in the states of Utah.

Thurlow Weed has a long communication in the New York "Herald" showing the impracticability of carrying out the so-called civil service reform.

Vice-President Colfax will assume editorial control of the New York "Tribune" next Monday. He will conduct it in the interests of the Administration.

General Von Roon will act as Provisional President of the Prussian Council of Ministers, the Emperor having granted Prince Bismarck's request to be relieved.

It is now true, as has been reported, that the Pope will leave Rome if the bill for the suppression of certain religious corporations now before Parliament pass.

The Goat Island bill will be allowed to go to the Senate, under the Anthony rule. Bill Carr and other railroad lobbyists are there, ready for duty. They are all relieved in their fright.

Supervising Surgeon Woodward reports as the sick in the marine hospitals of the Merchant Marine Hospital, on account of the recession and the expiration of advertising, 1,000 patients in the Hospital at Sage Island, costing $10,000.

President Grant favors the admission of Colorado Territory as a State, and the restoration of the Territory of Arizona, to be reorganized from which she was originally formed—Idaho, Montana, Utah and Colorado.

Robert and Stephen A. Douglas, sons of the deceased "Little Giant" have presented a claim to Congress for $150,000, damages alleged to have been sustained by the destruction of property owned by them in Mississippi in 1864.

The Washington Administration! journal has an editorial on annexation of San Domingo, in which it says the annexation of San Domingo is only a question of time—it had become a military, political and commercial necessity.

The Berlin Disciplinary Court, on the 14th, decided that it was legally incompetent to try the case of Bishop Ledochowski, and that the matter be arranged for inviting the chapman to convey the orders of the Government of Posen.

A Paris telegram of December 17th says: Charles Dickens' name ranks next to that of the hundred thousand, while Dorcet, a doubtful Republican, and Bancel, a Socialist, are only entitled to be mentioned. Thiers has said he intended to keep his Ministers in office.

The Hon. William Robertson Smith, who was elected Deputy Speaker of the House who acted as the unsuccessful candidate for the Speakership, has resigned his seat in Parliament. Admirers believe that his party supremacy is only temporarily clouded and that, like the phoenix, he will leave and arise in a brighter and more lasting form.

A dispatch from Nantes reports that the river Loire has overflowed, and that the adjacent country is flooded. Many persons have been drowned and 50,000 persons have been rendered homeless. Many cattle have been drowned. The damage to property is enormous, and all business has been suspended. The railways between Nantes and Orleans are destroyed, and the communication between the two cities is interrupted.

The Indian Committee of the Chamber of Deputies, who have under consideration the Religious Freedom Bill, have decided to report favorably upon the measure. It is understood that the majority of the Committee, favoring the entire abolishment of the Indian Bureau, will report against the bill in the interests of the nation. The announcement of this action is received by the Liberal Republican with unbounded approval.

Our Farming Interests.

Wheat has advanced in this city to $1 90 per good, and $2 for choice. This will be cheering news to those farmers who have held on to their grain. The farmers generally are seriously delayed in their work of plowing and seeding by the recent rains. Much wheat has been sown and still in this city, but in most of the Sacramento plain the amount did not exceed one-half, and south of the latitude of Gilroy scarcely one-tenth or one-fifth of the usual amount. Much wheat has been sown on dry ground, but some of it has not yet had moisture enough to make it germinate, and that which has sprouted grain is in danger of drying out.

The time is not far distant when the fields will have assumed a green tint and that will have an abundant supply of water, even in years of drought. The rapid progress of the reclamation of the tule islands, near the junction of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers, is one of the hopeful features of our agriculture. Grand Island, containing 17,773 acres, has this year been entirely inclosed with the best kind of embankment in the State. The lowest part of it is eighteen feet above the level of the high flood of 1862. The cost has been $6 50 per acre. Arrangements have been made to settle a colony of Germans on it and put eight thousand acres. The upper half of Cache Island has been inclosed with a good levee. All the sloughs leading into Staten Island have been drained; four miles of levees have been completed with a machine, and the remainder will be finished next year. The southern end of Andrus Island, containing one thousand acres, has been inclosed, and twelve miles of levee have been made this year, under the charge of Captain W. C. Walker, who has had the superintendence or much of the reclamation work there also. About four miles of the levee in this district were finished last year, and 40 men and a small tug are now to be employed this winter, if the rains should hold off a few weeks longer. A section of Andrus Island has been set apart for colonizing Kaskiuchans. The levee in the middle district on Andrus Island, broken last winter, has been repaired, and the flat on the upper end of the island has been drained.

The construction of irrigation canals does not go quite so rapidly as that of tule dykes. The Bear and Spreckel Company's canal in the Fresno dam said canal, on which work began a month ago.

The harbor is progressing rapidly. Two acres of piles have been driven across the river, and all the necessary framing completed. The steam pile-driver is now driving a double row of sheet-piles, fixed together by cross pieces, which will make a comparatively water-tight dam, and is expected to make the Sacramento River a fine stream during the summer months. The sand is to be twenty feet wide at the bottom, and about sixty feet wide on the top. The work on this department has commenced, and will be pushed through rapidly. Of the entire plan of the dam, a portion of the work is covered by the referee of one hundred and fifty brows to each fifty-seven scrapers, three eight-mule plows, and twelve carts. Good shelter has been put up, and all preparations made to push the work through to completion, for irrigating purposes, by about March or April. The canal descends from the Fresno near the Lone Cottonwood. The water has already raised in the dam about two feet. It is the intention of the owner, Mr. Friedlander, we are informed, to turn the head waters of the Merced and other North Fork of the San Joaquin into the Fresno this spring. If this be done the Fresno will supply ample water for all irrigating purposes."

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

The Redemptorist Fathers at Bornhadten, on the Rhine, have received notice to quit.

A new German Catholic daily paper entitled "Amerika" has been started very successfully in St. Louis, Mo.

In 1827, a small room held all the Catholics of Louisville, Ky.; now, fourteen churches are not sufficient for their needs. The corner-stone of a new church was laid on November 5th.

The celebrated Cathedral at Strasburg is to be repaired. The work has already begun and it will require two years, and $200,000 in gold, to make it look as regard as new.

The Archbishop of Oregon, in his recent visit to Jacksonville, Oregon, after a thirteen days stay, expressed his great satisfaction with the condition of Catholicity in that region.

Rev. Dr. McGlynn, of New York, lectured in Buffalo on the 15th of December, for the benefit of the Conference of St. Vincent de Paul a society of Catholic young men. His subject was "the Christian Priesthood."

The diocese of Philadelphia contains upwards of 125 Catholic churches and chapels, 110 priests, (the episcopal, 2 ecclesiastical seminaries, 11 convents, 30 academies, 31 parochial schools, 1 widows' asylum, 2 hospitals and 4 homes for the aged poor.

The new Cathedral, New York, was thrown open to the people on Thanksgiving day, November 30th, and was filled with a constant stream of visitors during the morning and the grand perfection of its proportions are singularly impressive, and were admired by all. A band of music stationed in the center gave additional pleasure to the visitors.

The St. Louis Catholic Messenger reports that the remains and effects of Father Hoecken, missionary, Father De Smet, in this country, have been brought to that city. No funeral services have been performed. Father De Smet is in the 74th year of his age, and "the builder of the Forest" will lose the dearest father and truest friend that Providence has ever sent him.

On Tuesday, November 19th, the Feast of St. Elizabeth, twelve young ladies received the habit of the Third Order of St. Francis from the hands of the Right Rev. Bishop Wood, of Philadelphia, authorized to confer this extraordinary favor. The names of the ladies are as follows: Miss Mary Schold, of Philadelphia, who took the name of Mary Joseph; Miss Mary Stirck, of Baltimore, in religion Sister Mary Ottilia; Miss Barbara Myer, of Philadelphia, in religion Sister Mary Osmondi; Miss Veronica Limberger, of Philadelphia, in religion Sister Mary Angela; Miss Sophia Hoffman, of Lancaster (in religion Sister Mary de Sales; Miss Anna Hoffman, of Lancaster, in religion Sister Mary Hayden; Miss Mary Hoffman, of Lancaster, in religion Sister Mary Genevieve; Miss Mary Bond, of Philadelphia, in religion Sister Mary Pacifica; Miss Anna Seitz, of Philadelphia in religion Sister Mary Ann; Miss Mary Ann Fiss, of Baltimore (in religion Sister Mary Assumpta); Miss Louisa Hoffman, of Lancaster, in religion Sister Mary Thomas; Miss Rosanna Emmal, of Baltimore (in religion Sister Mary Ethelgard.

The Great Pictorial Annual.

Noetzlein's Christmas Gift Enterprise, for distribution gratis, throughout the United States, and all civilized countries of the Western Hemisphere, is now published and ready for delivery, in the English German, French, Norwegian, Welsh, Swedish, Holland, Bohemian and Spanish languages, and all who wish to understand the true philosophy of health, should send for a copy. The publication contains 100 pages. In addition to an admirable medical treatise on the preservation and restoration of health, the laws of climatology, meteorology, and the mechanic, the chemical, the farmer, the artisan, the professional man and the educationist have been made for each particular and used uniquely as per mail subscribe for a correct and comprehensive National Calendar. The nature, uses and extraordinary medical effects of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the staple tonic and alterative of more than half a century's standing, are fully set forth in its pages, which are also interspersed with portraits of distinguished men, and with valuable information for farm, horticultural and household. All interesting and important events, political, social and scientific, among the Americans are noticed in the issue of the year, this will be one of the most useful, and that has for the last half century been published. Hostetter & Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa., on receipt of a two-cent stamp, will send a copy by mail to any person who cannot procure one in his neighborhood. The Bitters are a real ivory purifier, a safe blood maker, and are extensively used throughout the entire civilized world.

THE HUMAN HAIR.—Many persons abuse this delicate and beautiful ornament by burning it with abominable washes and disguising it with grease, which has no affinity for the skin, and is not absorbed. Bentley's Cocoaine, a compound of cocoanut oil, etc., is particularly as a dressing for the hair—is really scentless, and is perfectly adapted to the hair and complexion, preventing it falling off and promoting its healthy growth.

☞ Newsdealers who may want copies of THE MONITOR on Saturday evening and Sunday morning can obtain them at office rates, at the store of the late PETER N. RYAN, No. 46 Fourth street.

Important to Subscribers.

Those of our readers who have subscribed for the "Catholic World," "Godey's Lady's Book," and other magazines in connection with THE MONITOR, will please bear in mind that their year expires with the December numbers of those publications, and should they not receive their subscriptions before the middle of December, the magazines will be discontinued. We are compelled to adopt this course in order to protect ourselves. The periodicals have actually been furnished by us at less than cost price, in order to encourage subscribers; and in every case we have had to remit the money with the order, while in several cases we have been compelled to wait for months for the money thus advanced, and in a few instances subscribers have forgotten to pay at all. From henceforth, however, we shall fill no order unless it is accompanied by the money, and the periodicals will be discontinued to present subscribers unless renewed by the middle of December, if further. Following will be the rates for the coming year:

THE MONITOR and "Catholic World"..... per yr.
" " "Godey's Lady's Book"..... " "
(or with the elegant chromo of "Our Darling.") 6 00
THE MONITOR and Demorest's Fashion Magazine 4 00
(with the handsome chromo of "Niagara Falls" and "Lake George," or "Our Pets.")
THE MONITOR and "Appleton's Journal"..... 6 00
THE MONITOR and Peterson's Magazine..... 5 00

The chromos above mentioned are the best of their kind, and the cheapest of them retail for $4, while some of them are worth $10.

THE MONITOR singly will remain, as heretofore, at $4 a year.

A SPLENDID CHANCE!

We will send THE MONITOR and DEMOREST'S MONTHLY, (which is the best magazine) who pays as $5 in advance; or to any person who sends us $6 50 we shall send, in addition, a pair of elegant Companion Chromos "Niagara Falls" and "Lake of Yosemite," the retail price of which is $10—or a choice of either of the following beautiful and attractive Chromos:—Isn't she Pretty."—Pet's Music Lesson," or "At Munchief," the retail price of either of which is $5. These are beautiful Chromos, splendid parlor ornaments, and valuable works of art. They are highly finished, mounted and varnished, and worth nearly the subscription price of the magazine. Every one is invariably accompany the order, also an attention will be paid to it. Demorest's Monthly is conducted as a family magazine. Its choice literature, its superior music, its large amount of valuable information and artistic illustrations, place it in a position to its well-earned title, "the model magazine of America."

Don't hawk, hawk, spit, spit, blow, blow, and disgust everybody with your catarrh and its offensive odor, when Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will speedily destroy all odor and arrest the discharge.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.,

HAVE JUST RECEIVED

From New York

LARGE AND WELL ASSORTED

ADDITIONS TO THEIR COMPLETE STOCK

—OF—

DRY GOODS

—COMPRISING—

SILKS AND DRESS GOODS

OF THE LATEST STYLES,

Suitable for Fall and Winter Wear.

Plain and Embroidered Linen Sets, Collars, Sleeves and Cuffs.

Initial Handkerchiefs, Lace Collars, Sleeves, Setts and Handkerchiefs.

Ladies', Misses and Gents' Hosiery and Gloves.

Lace Veils, Fichus and Mantles.

Ladies' and Misses' Merino Undergarments.

Embroidered Flannel.

Linen and Linen Goods; Napkins and Table Cloths; all the brands in Cotton; Towels and Toweling.

Shawls, Flannels, Blankets and Quilts.

Lace Curtains, and Curtain Lace by the yard.

Piano and Table Covers.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Three Cases more English Serge, at 75 cents; worth $1 25.

Three cases more Satinets, at 50 cents; worth $1 25.

Four cases White Marseilles Quilts, at $1; worth $1 50.

☞ All our Goods are new and of good quality, at prices within the reach of all classes of customers.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.

NO. 7

Montgomery St.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

DRY GOODS!

DRY GOODS!

FOR THE HOLIDAYS!

LANDERS, BYRNE & CO.,

NO. 4 THIRD STREET,

ARE NOW OPENING A SPLENDID STOCK OF DRY GOODS, suitable for

HOLIDAY PRESENTS,

—CONSISTING OF—

BLACK SILKS from the best manufactories.

COLORED SILKS in all shades.

IRISH POPLINS, direct from Pim Bros., Dublin. In our

DRESS GOODS DEPARTMENT

Will be found a splendid line of colors in

EMPRESS CLOTH,

DIAGONAL AND SERGE POPLIN.

CASHMERE and CACHOUTA CLOTH.

VENICE CORD SILKSTEEN, in all shades.

FEMOSA CLOTH, etc., etc.

Scotch and Poplin Plaids.

IN MOURNING GOODS

Our stock is the most complete in the city, comprising:

BLACK POPLINS, DRAP DE ÉTÉ,

PARRAMATTAS and HENRIETTA CLOTH.

CASHMERE and CACHOUTA CLOTH.

TANNOE, FOULARD, CRETONNES,

BIARRETZ, EMPRESS & PARISIAN CLOTH.

A complete assortment of

HOSIERY,

GLOVES,

HANDKERCHIEFS,

EMBROIDERIES,

LACES, and

SMALL WARE.

HOUSEKEEPING GOODS

Being a specialty with us, our patrons can always depend on finding this department well worthy of attention.

LANDERS, BYRNE & CO.,

No. 4 Third Street.

GREAT PREPARATIONS

FOR A BIG

FALL TRADE!

J. J. O'BRIEN & CO.,

606 MARKET STREET,

HAVE JUST RECEIVED FORTY CASES OF Foreign Goods, especially adapted for the present season, and consisting of the newest styles and best makes of

Shawls,

Silks,

Poplins,

Waterproofs,

Blankets,

Flannels,

ROBES DE CHAMBERE.

KEANE, O'CONNOR & C

107, 109 and 111 Kearny

DRY GOODS, ETC.

SPECIAL

KEANE,

O'CONNOR

&

We are Daily Opening Fresh Arri

—OF—

FRENCH AND ENGLISH

Fancy Dress Fabrics,

Drap D'Ete, Satinets, Me

Cashmere d'Ecosse, Cretonnes, Sa

Double Merinos, Empress Cloths,

Broche Epingle, Etc.,

IN ALL THE

Newest Shades of the Season

BLACK DRESS FABRICS

Of the best textures and colors, in

THE NEW AND SUPERIOR SERGE

"BLOOMING BLACK

ONE CASE

DAMAGED

DRESS GOODS,

AT 12½ CENTS PER YARD

SPECIAL ATTENTION

IS CALLED TO OUR

SHAWL DEPARTMENT

In which will be found the largest and best assorted stock in the city.

Broche and Cashmere Long and Square Shawls

NORWICH AND OTTOMAN

REVERSIBLES.

Long and Square Scotch Tartan Plaids

IN ALL THE CLANS

JOUVIN'S GENUINE

KID GLOVES

$1 50 PER PAIR.

THE MONITOR:

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO Irish and Catholic Literature AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY LYONS & BARRY

DENIS LYONS, JOHN T. BARRY. BUSINESS MANAGER.

OFFICE—632 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts. (Rooms 6, 7 and 8, up-stairs.) All communications, whether relating to the business or editorial departments, should be addressed to "LYONS & BARRY."

ONLY IRISH and CATHOLIC JOURNAL IN CALIFORNIA.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):

Served by Carriers, per week..... 10c
Sent by mail, per month..... 40
Sent by mail, per year..... 4 00
Single copies..... 10
Single copies, per year..... 2 25

ADVERTISING RATES:

1 square, 1 time..... $1 50 | 1 square, 6 months..... $12 50
" 1 month..... 4 00 | " 9 months..... 17 00
" 2 months..... 7 00 | " 6 months..... 12 00
" 3 months..... 9 00 | " 1 year..... 24 00

The above rates will be strictly adhered to. No

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

IRELAND AND THE ENGLISH

Father Tom Burke's Second Reply to Mr. Froude.

The Academy of Music was well filled last evening on the occasion of Father Burke's second lecture, "Ireland under the Tudors." Most of the audience evidently belonged to the race whose rights and wrongs were the subject of the eloquent orator's discourse. Father Burke was received with applause. He said:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: We now come to consider the second lecture of the eminent Englishman who has chosen us for his theme. It covers one of the most interesting and terrible passages in our history, and of those in three lectures we have among us

IRISH INTELLIGENCE.

Still Prospering.

Our news columns contain fresh evidence of the spread of the Home Rule movement in England. We allude to the report of the inaugural public meeting of the Birmingham Branch Association, held on Tuesday evening. The report read by Mr. Heinrick was an encouraging document, while the inaugural address of the President, Rev. J. Sherlock, shows that the national cause is to the hands of able, intelligent and fearless men in the great capital of the Black Country. It is a further source of gratification that one of the principal speakers at the meeting was an influential Englishman, Alderman Bunbury.) Here we may notice that another Englishman, a member of the local Town Council, presided at the last meeting of the Nottingham branch, and is likely to contest with a good chance of success the representation of the borough at the next election; and that Sergeant Shee, M. P., in Bailey, and Henry James, M. P., in Taunton, are being made aware by the Irish and the Catholics in those towns that their anti-Irish conduct in Parliament and elsewhere will not be easily overlooked. The latter gentleman, who is the Keogh debate, acted as the great Keogh-and-Pronchie advocate, made a sort of apology to the Irish portion of his constituency at the beginning of this week; but don thinks he will be required do something more before he is absolved of the now historical manifestation of his gross anti-Irish and anti-Catholic bigotry and intolerance.—Nation, November 2.

Death of Lady Booker (Miss O'Neill).

A special telegram announces that Lady Booker, relic of Sir William Wiseo Booker, died at her residence, Castlehyde, near Mallow, yesterday morning. The deceased lady, who had attained her 81st year, at one time occupied a very prominent position in the theatrical profession. The great dramatic genius and brilliant triumphs of Miss O'Neill are matters of history. On the stage she had no rival—indeed, she elevated the profession and gave it a dignity and respectability to which famous characters of "Mrs. Haller," "Mrs. Beverley," and "Belvidera," contemporary critics represent her as having been unapproachable in her realization of those high personations. In early life the "Great Miss O'Neill," as her ladyship was designated, caused a sensation in several cities by reason of her genius, which was unquestionable, and her determination of character, which is represented as astounding, considering she abled her successfully to surmount all the difficulties and obstructions which beset her path. At first sight, perhaps, we believe was made in a rather humble manner, and in company with humble associates, in a small provincial town; but on her debut in London, in 1816, she at once occupied, if not the first, at least a most distinguished position, and after a brief time was unanimously hailed as the greatest living tragedienne. The deceased lady, who was a native of Ireland, was in private life as remarkable for true benevolence and practical piety as soon as she was, during her professional career, for the splendor of her histrionic abilities.—Freeman, October 28.

Trinity College, Dublin.

The Times says were it possible to nationalise Trinity College by a sudden transformation of its constitution, its moral atmosphere and social life could hardly cease for generations to be distinctively Protestant; for Mr. Fawcett's bill. It is allowed that Roman Catholics would only obtain their share of endowments and governing power by a very gradual process, and it must be confessed that a gradual process may in such cases be preferable to a sudden revolution. The Protestantism is not called upon at one stroke to put Catholic students in all the exact position which they might now have occupied had there been no penal laws and no Protestant ascendency. On the other hand, it may fairly be expected, in dealing with a question so long postponed, to extinguish at once the very semblance of a Catholic grievance, and to lay down a broad and sound basis for the Irish University. Whether this is to be done by evolving a national university, or by adapting to it Trinity College, or by erecting de novo a national university, of which Trinity College shall be the leading constituent body, or by some other more complete method, it cannot be by a measure which leaves Trinity College in no reasonable or defensible relation to any university, either present or future.

The Rising of the North.

We have lately had several striking proofs of a coming revival of the national spirit in Ulster; but perhaps the meeting held in Ulster Hall, Belfast, on Tuesday night, under the auspices of the local Home Rule Association, is the most remarkable and encouraging manifestation of patriotic feeling yet afforded in that part of the country. The magnificent hall was crowded to overflowing with an audience that was as respectable, intelligent and determined as it was earnest and enthusiast in the cause of Home Rule. The chair was occupied by Mr. Biggar, and among the others on the platform were nearly all the Catholic clergy of Belfast and neighborhood, the Rev. Isaac Nelson (Presbyterian minister), Captain Macartney, P. J. Smyth, and Mr. Ferguson, President of the Glasgow Branch. Assembled as we will be observed from these names that the meeting was, for Ulster, a most gratifying features, thoroughly representative—that is, persons of all classes and of all creeds united in demanding the restoration of the national rights of their common country. That this should have happened in Belfast must surely be a matter of sincere gratification to all true Irish patriots.—Nation, November 2.

Landlord Despotism.

How comparatively little the Land Act can do in assisting the tenant-farmers of Ireland against the arbitrary and capricious exercise of landlord power, was strikingly shown by a case which has just occupied the attention of the Chairman of the East Riding of Cork, Major Gillman, who owns some property in the vicinity of Queenstown, sought to eject some of his tenants. There was no fault whatever to be found with them as tenants. They paid their rents punctually and farmed skillfully, and when served with an ejectment process offered to pay two shillings an acre more for their land than their landlord's own witnesses swore it was worth. But Major Gillman wanted to get rid of them, and the eviction, and of course all the Chairman could do was to give them their claims for improvements. In the present state of competition for land, those thriving tenants will almost certainly have to leave the country, and carry away with them their savings and their productive power—two things of which Ireland is in most urgent need.—Nation, November 2.

Unpopular Justice.

Counts of justice have much sympathy with romantic tenderness in Ireland. Here is Mr. Hollestone Spanner, of whom the public have heard, visiting with heavy punishment a man who, according to the code of all the sensational novels, should be lifted as a hero. At the Nenagh Quarter Sessions, on Saturday, a man named Michael Flannery was sentenced to undergo a week's punishment with hard labor. The prisoner, who heard the sentence with the greatest composure, turned quietly from the dock, in custody of the jailers, when the prosecutor suddenly discovered that the wrong man had been convicted. It was Flannery sits who had committed the assault—it was Flannery pere who stood in the dock. The father had persevered on the son to save him from punishment. The Chairman, on taking a more genuine view of this display of paternal affection, changed the sentence to imprisonment for a whole year. Subsequently the term was reduced to three months, a punishment which most people will consider not too lenient under the circumstances. It is only within the covers of books like the "Tale of the Two Cities," that sanction may be found for the choice was offered to the immense multitude to liberate the Son of God or a notorious murderer and thief, and the unanimous shouts of that people were to save the malefactor and crucify the Man-God. Will any dare to say that this rox populi was the voice of God? Let us keep more closely to our text, and see how the voice of the people, the chosen nation of God, the Jews—proved by their own words to be such from time to time, during the three years of his ministration, worked among them. The evangelists read in the day's Gospel, when the ruler asked our Saviour to restore his dead daughter to life, and when the Lord came into the house, and bidding the multitude to give place, said that the girl was not dead but sleeping, they laughed him to scorn." And so it has been from then to this—in the whole of the Church history—and so it is now in all the revolutions passing before us—the rox populi is selected in opposition to, or as the rox Dei, and laughs to scorn the wonderful manifestations of the power and workings of God, which are laid to the nations.

Passing over many familiar examples of this, and how the rox populi is antagonistic to truth, to stubborn fact, and to Divine revelation, let them take the wonderful history of the restoration of the Jews to the humble village of Lourdes. There hundreds and thousands of Catholics are gathered by friends from all parts of christendom at the shrine raised through belief in the supernatural manifestations and appearances of Our Lady to a poor simple girl—albeit not till after the severest scrutiny and most searching statements on oath by the bishops and priests of the Church of the veracity of the girl's statements—corroborated and strengthened as they have been by the miraculous results almost daily witnessed at that shrine since the Church fathers. What say the scribblers of the press—these leaders of public opinion—these representatives of the rox populi, and this legion of followers—the mere echoes of their conceptions? Why, they brand these supernatural manifestations as an "impudent imposture;" and the miraculous cures, attested over and over by some scrutinising tests, as a "lie." They act with these holy clodge of modern days as did the Jews at the time of the miracles of our Saviour, which were performed before their eyes—they laugh them to scorn. The very reviewed preacher cautioned his hearers not to heed this rox populi and its false and hostile cry, but with humble, reliable and earnest faith to listen to the voice of God and his teachings. —Catholic Times, November 2.

The French Academicians have awarded the biennial prize of 4800 to M. Guizot.

LETTER FROM ROME.

Rome, October 22, 1872.

It appears certain that the project of suppression of the religious houses will be coupled with one suppressing all the pious guilds and confraternities throughout Italy, and, it is needless to add, confiscating their oratories, funds and landed property, the proceeds of which, the apostles of progress assure us through their organs, will be accurately devoted to the cause of education and public charity. The English translation of which high sounding promise is, that the guild of carpenters, under the patronage of St. Joseph, or of blacksmiths, under that of St. Eligio, will see the property which the piety and charity of foregone ages, as well as their own subscriptions, have accumulated, as a trust in their hands for the sick, the orphans and the widows of their craft, seized on by the Godless State, and given to Jew and infidel schoolmasters and mistresses, who will teach their children atheism and immorality, and to the families of those who have rendered some nameless service to the revolution, these being the sole "charities" the state cares for.

The Republican soirée's have just held a great meeting in Naples, in which it was greatly deliberated to destroy Rome, in order to prevent its ever again becoming the center of Catholic life. No better testimony to the destinies could be given than the words of the orators, "If we dare not hope to destroy all vestige of its pagan and imperial grandeur, it is the duty of ages," said one of these civilized orators, "Rome has always represented Cæsarism or Theocracy. Let us, therefore, destroy all the monuments which recall its shameful vice of despotism. Let us destroy the digni. taries of the Catholic Church have ever, and ever will secure a meeting place by themselves and for its enemies of liberty and popular progress. Let us get rid of them all; and let the Palatine hill which the legend is bound up with its history. Every schoolboy knows how the Emperor Nero to escape the cruel death to which he had condemned himself, by the hand of his freedman to help him in stabbing himself with his own dagger, after politely requesting his poniards man to show how it was done. A ton of our clergy will move them to denounce the state of anarchy which permits such sentiments a public expression; but the idea of a desecration of the Forum, the palace of the Cæsars, and the ancient home of Nero, may stir the archæological world into something like indignation. A sacrilege deserving the sack of Rome like a fair, the trampling of the body of our Lord under foot, is tolerable; but lay a finger on the monuments of the past, and the entire pavement representing Venus and Dana, and the world may, perhaps, be moved to protest.

The Roman garrison is being constantly exercised in military manœuvres on a large scale. The second "sham-fight" in the last eight days took place to-day—Sunday—under the direction of General Cossea, an ex-staff-hadjutant of Marsala. One of the staff at the last fight observed to a friend: "The best thing Italy can learn is to fight, for her future looks very black and stormy." A new land of two hundred and fifty acres has just been proposed for the completion of the armament.

A French gentleman being last Sunday on the Pincio heard two Italian officers who were leaning over the balustrade in front of the Pincio, talking of future possibilities. Suddenly one of them, who had evidently distinguished himself by taking down part of the wall, exclaimed:

Captain—"What a splendid point this would make for bombarding the cupola of St. Peter!"

Lieutenant—"Yes; if those accursed French and their red trousers only leave us time to do more than save our own skins."

Captain—"Bah! There will always be time enough for me to get my battery up here, and blow the Vatican into the air."

Lieutenant—"A good idea, Captain. We can't do less than leave a monument of our passage through Rome."

And this, or something much resembling it, is the common conversation which may be heard in every Republican club—in every military lounge.

An anecdote of the Revolution will not be out of place here, as it shows the length to which the present aggressors of Rome were prepared to go under the triumvirate which preceded that of Mazzini, Saffi, and Avezzani. When General Oudinot's army of rescue lay before the walls of Rome, and when Rome was defended, not by the Romans, but by a horde of pirates and brigands under the command of Garibaldi, the Council of State sitting in the Quirinal received on two occasions which it was hoped might arrest the progress of the French army and save the city. It was gravely determined—to fill St. Peter with faggots and straw, pour saltpetre on the mass and set fire to it. The two orders were actually placed, and all preparations made for its execution. The second measure, still more atrocious, was to remove all the ruins in Rome, drain them together in one immense line and so place them against the walls at the points against which the cannonade was directed.

M. M. Joseph, the engineer of the Suez canal, was at that time Consul of France in Rome. On hearing of this diabolical project, he went to all the other representatives of foreign powers as if within the city, and drew up a solemn declaration to the effect that their respective Governments, in which it was undertaken, if the plan were carried out, to arrest and execute by summary process, the authors and participators of this infernal scheme, in whatever country they might be found and at whatever date. The Triumvirate thought better of the matter and abandoned the idea. History repeats itself, with this difference, that the men of the Revolution of to-day are more vicious, more ferocious, and more cowardly than those of 1849. They have fallen lower, morally and socially, and the same profound inertia of all foreign Governments has greatly increased the danger of the situation. If such a crisis occurred once more, should we find a second Lesseps; and if one should arise, should he receive the same hearty support of his Government? These are questions every Catholic, of whatever State, has a right to demand a satisfactory answer to from his rulers.

The hatred to France at present only shows itself in insult. A few nights since the church of St. Louis des Français was the scene of a disgusting and sacrilegious outrage. The civilized and polished Italians were in the night and wrote "Death to France! Death to Austria!" in large letters formed of lamp-settle materials. M. des Narres de Kerdrel, who has just formed of the tenant to the nation of which he is Consul, went at once to the Questure, and obliged the Questor to send a guard of men to clean the church door and steps painfully as a reparation, and as the Questor dared not refuse, it was done in the presence of a large crowd.

A friend of ours passing through the Ripetta the same day saw a dirty girl of fourteen, writing with a piece of charcoal on the wall, "Death to the Pope and all Kings!" So much for public morality under the new régime. She was a pupil of one of the new municipal schools, and received pay from the Republican Club for each inscription.

Brigandage has reached such a pass that there is no longer any safety for people outside their own gates, and not always there. The great brigand, Mastrel, has had an interview with the families of his prisoners, Myers, Marcus, and has received from them a first instalment of 10,000 francs. He gave them a splendid dinner in the Albergo Nazzano, and requested them to bring the rest of the ransom, securing them of the kind treatment of their relatives; and all this within thirty miles of Naples, and under the reign of regeneration and Liberal institutions. According to Mr. Odo Russell, it was owing to the Pope and the King of Naples that people were carried off for ransom, while her Majesty's Consul in Rome, Mr. Severn, attributed it to the Pontifical Zouaves. Will either of these intelligent diplomatists explain how it is that now that the Pope is a prisoner in the Vatican, and the King of Naples the quietest of residents in Vienna or Munich, and the Pontifical Zouaves dispersed over the surface of the Catholic world, persons are carried off, not monthly but daily, in Italy, and the country gentlemen find it impossible to hunt, shoot or visit their farms, not only in the Sicilies, but in the Romagnas and Marches, without being abducted or murdered? Count Lamberville, the head of one of the noblest and most powerful families in the Romagnas, has just published a most interesting and touching account of his hard, and as he is by no means a veterical," he would have greater weight.—Catholic Times.

St. Maria dei Popolo.

We have not yet heard whether the beautiful church of St. Maria dei Popolo—St. Mary of the People"—in Rome, has been invaded by the sacrilegious thieves who are profaning the Eternal City by their unhallowed presence. Here are some of the most precious and sacred objects—the tarturous conduct of the Japanese Government known far and wide. Silence under such circumstances amounts to connivance. We are speaking of Christians collectively as to the contempt and increased sufferings of our Japanese fellow-Christians. We consider it a duty, therefore, to keep the subject before our readers, and to call the attention of the public opinion of the country on behalf of the victims of the most inhuman cruelty, torture and death at the hands of the Japanese Government, for no other crime than that of professing the Christian faith. The fact cannot be denied. It is now in the House of Commons, where Mr. Adams, our diplomatic representative, and Vicomte de Toressse, the Chargé d'Affaires of the French Minister, have given information that the movements of national life are too large to be controlled and directed by the most powerful literary efforts. A writer in the Pall Mall Gazette has become thus excited at the way in which the Times throws cold water upon the utopian project, and insists that the calm and dull disbelievers of the centre of England and Ireland must necessarily have a good effect. We learn from the Times that the Foreign Secretary when Mr. Froude has gone over specially to confute its "Dionysius Rossa. —York Examiner.

Home Rulers in England.

In addition to the three great annuity meetings at Manchester, Middlesboro', and Sunderland, another demonstration with the same object was held on Sunday in Leamington. In each of these unfortunates had no priest, since the suppression of the Jesuits, who could or would say Mass for them and for them. Consequently they had to go without Mass in times past: but the persons who are possessed of that fancy know nothing at all of the Irish people and of the ineradicable love of country which burns in their hearts. There is only one way to make a settlement of the Irish question, and render Ireland no longer "hostile and dangerous to England," and that is to concede to her the national rights which, from the day on which they were wrested from her, up to the present time, she has never ceased to demand. Let that course only be adopted, and Ireland and England will be better friends than they were in the reign of George the Second" or at any other period of the troubled and gloomy history of their political connection.—Dublin Nation.

The Home Rule Movement in London.

Speech of Thos. Mooney on the Subject.

A very large and enthusiastic meeting of Home Rulers was held in London on the night of October 27th, when Mr. Reardon stated that he had been attacked, and charged with strike towards the movement, by some writers in the Irish press. He declined his opinions at great length, and stated that while he was willing to subject his proceedings to the Convention and to abide by its decision, he still urged that Ireland ought not to be content with anything less than the repeal of the Union, pure and simple; and that no denial from England an inhumanity, with compound interest, for all the millions England had swindled Ireland out of since the Union of 1800. He could tell them of the discontent among the soldiers and officers in the English army; and, in addition, they saw Home Rule with an army within thirty-five miles of the English possessions in India; and if England did not grant to Ireland her demands, Ireland's opportunity was not far distant. The sentiment was loudly cheered.

MR. MOONEY'S REMARKS.

Mr. Thomas Mooney, on being called on by the Chairman, said: Englishmen frequently answer our demand for home legislation by the remark that the Imperial Parliament can do as well for Ireland as it does for London; or Liverpool, or Wales, or Scotland. My answer shall not be delivered to, but dry figures. I will present you the national legislation for one year of the Irish Parliament, the second year after Grattan obtained its independence.

In the 16th April, 1782, the Irish Parliament voted its independence. George the Third agreed to that independence, and declared that it was the desire of his heart future time be questioned or questionable. On the 27th October, 1783, it was ordered in the House of Lords, on motion of the Marquis of Buckingham, that a committee be appointed to inquire into the trade between Great Britain and Ireland, and what may be necessary for the improvement thereof; and a committee was appointed accordingly.

Before that committee were laid the petitions of various enterprising men, who proposed to carry into effect the various manufactures of Ireland. Petitions came from Belfast, from Dublin, from the north, and from the east. We shall see that the Irish Parliament did not turn a deaf ear to their propositions—did not tell them, as we told our fishermen the other day, by our Colonial Secretary, that "it is not lawful to lend the money on the security of their prizes or their fishermen." I take from my "History of Ireland" a page or two of the statistical records of that old Parliament. Here for the first grants—absolute gifts—of the Irish Parliament, in the second year of independence:

| | |
|---|---|
| For cotton and flax exported | £7,191 17 |
| For corn and flour brought coastwise in Irish bottoms, carriage free | 11,837 15 |
| For corn and flour brought coastwise in foreign bottoms | 11,248 06 |
| On fishing vessels | 2,000 00 |
| On the linen manufactory | 7,000 00 |
| For the Dublin Society for improving rural economy | 500 00 |
| Kildare, to promote the culture and manufacture of hemp | 1,000 00 |
| To the Dublin Society for improvements in the manufacture of linen | 6,997 04 |
| To the Dublin Society, for a reduction of the Rotunda | 2,000 00 |
| To the Linen Board, for the same purpose | 2,000 00 |
| To rebuild the same | 2,000 00 |
| For the purchase of circular road around Dublin, to complete the same | 2,000 00 |
| For the purchase of Ballybough bridge, and a new thoroughfare | 1,000 00 |
| For the purchase of a suitable form or house for the Speaker of the House of Commons | 1,000 00 |
| For the purchase of Speaker's house, in Stephen's green | 3,167 00 |
| For the purchase of Speaker's house, in Parliament street | 2,111 13 |
| For the purchase of St. Patrick's Hospital, to be vested in the Governors | 3,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Cork harbour, for its improvement | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of the port of Dublin, for its improvement | 2,000 00 |
| To Trustees of the port of Drogheda, for its improvement | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Newry navigation | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Wexford harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Waterford harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Sligo harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Galway harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Limerick harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Kinsale harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Youghal harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Dundalk harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Coleraine harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Londonderry harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Carrickfergus harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Donaghadee harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Ballyshannon harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Dungarvan harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Ballyna harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Arklow harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Wicklow harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Howth harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Dunleary harbour | 2,000 00 |
| To the Trustees of Ballyshannon

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK ENDING DEC. 7.
December
1—Sunday—First Sunday in Advent.
2—Monday—St. Bibiana, Virgin and Martyr.
3—Tuesday—St. Francis Xavier, Confessor.
4—Wednesday—St. Peter Chrysologus, Bishop, Confessor and Doctor of the Church. St. Barbara, Virgin and Martyr.
5—Thursday—Of the Feria. St. Sabbas, Abbot.
6—Friday—St. Nicholas of Myra, Bishop and Confessor.
7—Saturday—St. Ambrose, Bishop, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....NOVEMBER 30, 1872.

GERMAN SECULAR POLICY.

The Bulletin of last Friday evening, November 22d, contained an article entitled "German Secular Policy," which we should not like to have pass unnoticed. Besides exhibiting some of the most singular logic that it has ever been our fortune to meet with, it was full of inexcusable misrepresentations affecting the difficulty at present existing between the Prussian Government and the Catholic Church. Appearing in a contemporary which, as a general rule, is fairly conducted and tries to avoid doing injustice to any Christian community, these matters are more noticeable than they would be if they were published in other papers that we could name.

But, before proceeding any further, we wish to protest against a breach of good taste which our contemporary might easily have avoided, and which could bring it no advantage whatever. The Bulletin speaks of "Romish" influence. It might as well have said "Catholic" influence. The latter adjective would hardly require more type, or ink, or space, or take longer to pronounce, and it would be far more acceptable to the persons to whom it had reference. Courtesy demands that no man or association of men be designated by an appellation which they themselves repudiate and consider insulting. Our contemporary would act wisely if it left "nicknames" and opprobious epithets to purely sectarian organs.

But we must return to the article on German Secular Policy. It has reference to the law, recently submitted to the German Diet, declaring the pronouncement of sentence of excommunication by a Catholic bishop or priest to be a penal offence. The Bulletin wishes to excuse this despotic enactment, and make it appear a measure necessary for the maintenance of good order and public security. In endeavoring to fulfill its desire, it is compelled first to misrepresent the Catholic side of the controversy, and finally to beg the question in a rather ludicrous manner. It admits that "at first sight" the passage of such a decree looks like unjust interference in the internal discipline of a religious body—a thing that would not be tolerated for a moment in this country. General GRANT and his Cabinet officials would get themselves into a rather serious difficulty if they ventured to forbid the authorities of the Baptist, Methodist, Congregational or Episcopalian communions from defining who are or are not, who shall be and who shall not be, belonging to their Churches. Clearly, it is no more permissible for the German Emperor to act in this way toward Catholics than it would for the American President to so behave towards Protestants. Therefore, it follows as a logical consequence that Kaiser WILHELM must be held guilty of tyranny and intolerance.

The Bulletin urges that excommunication is often used as a political weapon to punish mere difference of opinion. There is no proof vouchsafed by our contemporary for the correctness of this sweeping assertion, which is one out of many equally reckless, brought against the Catholic Church by its enemies. But suppose it was correct in every particular—supposing that the Sovereign Pontiff had come to the resolution that none but those holding certain political theories should be considered within the pale of the Church—would that make Bismarck's new law any more excusable? Certainly not. If the politics required of Catholics were inimical to the German Empire, the Chancellor would be justified in endeavoring to destroy the Church altogether, for he would be acting logically and in self-defense; but to insist, and to declare by law, that a man should be held to be a Catholic no matter what politics he adopted, would be either despotism or puerilianity.

Then, again, we are told that excommunication is, in Europe, resorted to as a punishment for mere difference of opinion. Of course it is not only in Europe that all over the world, and it will continue so until the end of time. The Catholic Church is a voluntary association of individuals agreeing to believe and practise a certain code of faith and morals as defined by a recognized authority. When a man ceases to believe in any article of faith, or refuses his assent to any definition in morals, then he ipso facto ceases to be a Catholic, and all the powers of Bismarck or Emperor Wilhelm cannot keep him one. There are Churches in which a "difference of opinion" is regarded as a matter of little or no consequence, and as long as a man conducts himself with tolerable decency, he will be considered an excellent member while he lives; but the Catholic Church is not one of those convenient machines. She will permit no "mere difference of opinion" about the Trinity, the divinity or humanity of the Redeemer, the Real Presence in the Eucharist, the Sacrifice of the Mass, or any one of a hundred different matters pertaining to faith. There is no compulsion on a man to believe, but if he does not believe, it is foolishness for Him to call himself a Catholic.

An excommunication is nothing more or less than an authoritative announcement to the faithful that a certain individual is no longer to be accounted a member of the Church. The terms in which this announcement is made will vary according to the circumstances of the case; or, perhaps, according to the good or bad taste of the ecclesiastic pronouncing it; but in substance and effect it is always the same. It is absurd for any one not a Catholic to call excommunication "a punishment." Such punishment is the infliction of some physical or moral injury, and an excommunication inflicts nothing, but makes public what a man has inflicted upon himself of his own free-will, by his own deliberate act. The Bulletin avers that in a "superstitious community" an excommunication may blast a man's worldly prospects, and argues that persons should therefore be protected against it as against any other damage. Expulsion from any Christian communion, whether its members are "superstitious" or not, will no doubt injure, and may even ruin, the worldly prospects of one who has suffered it. People will naturally have as little as possible to do with him who has abandoned their faith and ignored the teachings of their spiritual guides. And they will avoid him more or less rigidly according to the energy they attach to the offense for which he has been expelled. But this is a penalty which cannot be nullified by any secular power in the land. The law may declare the excommunicated still a member of the fold, but the heads of the Church and those who obey them will, notwithstanding, treat him as heretofore.

In fact, to any person who impartially examines the recent action of the German Government towards the Catholic bishops, it will become apparent that only a desire to grasp unlimited power, an energy to control religious as well as civil life, could have inspired its policy. The excommunication law was not introduced for the suppression of the imaginary "political conspiracy thunderbolts," as the Bulletin grandiloquently calls them, but for the express purpose of restricting the freedom of the Catholic Church and making it subservient to the State. This extraordinary enactment lays down, in effect and substantially, that it is Bismarck or his Imperial master, not the Pope or his bishops or the priests, who shall have the power of defining what the agree of unbelief or amount of disregard of authority shall put a man outside the pale of the Church. If this be not a most unjust and despotic aggression on the rights of conscience and religious freedom, we cannot image what constitutes such a thing.

THE DIAMOND-FIELD SWINDLE.

Our readers will, no doubt, readily recall to mind the fact that several months ago great excitement was created in this city by the announcement that a locality had been discovered where diamonds, rubies, sapphires and other precious stones were to be had in any amount and almost for the mere trouble of prying them up. Of course, every one was anxious to learn where the new Golconda was situated; but the lucky discoverer kept silent and could only be induced to speak by money in such quantities as could be furnished by capitalists. It was finally ascertained that the favored locality was in Arizona, on the line of the Southern Pacific Railroad, and not far from the Colorado River. Specimens of the gems were produced, and employed in exciting the great masses owned by our capitalists.

In brief, every intelligent person has come to the conclusion that the recent millions were one of the most gigantic, decisive and successful swindles recorded in the annals of this or any other age. The capitalists would like to interview the great discoverer in reference to the matter, but, somehow or another, his local habitation is at present unknown to them. They are to use every effort to punish the perpetrators of the fraud, but it is questionable whether they will be able to fix the guilt, or, as well as on the pastor, Rev. Father Largan, who was unceasing in his attentions. The proceeds will, we believe, be appropriated to the building of a new church, the present mortuary chapel being entirely too small.

Rev. Father Gibney, pastor of St. Peter's church in this city, will deliver a lecture on Sunday, next, in Platt's Hall, at the mission of San José, in aid of the church in that quiet old town. Father Gibney is a gifted pulpit orator, so those who go to hear him can rest assured of a rich literary treat.

Hereafter there will be Vespers at 3:30 every Sunday afternoon in St. Patrick's chapel on Eighth street, San José. Rev. Father Joseph A. Gallagher is the pastor, and Rev. Father Serda is assistant.

The grand concert to be given by the ladies of St. Joseph Parish will come off on the 10th of December, at the San José Opera House. The programme is not yet completed.

Important to Subscribers.

Those of our readers who have subscribed for the "Catholic World," Sidney Lady's beautiful and able magazine in connection with THE MONITOR, will please bear in mind that their year expires with the December number, and that unless renewed at once they will not receive their subscriptions before the middle of December, those magazines will be discontinued. Mr. DONAHOE has insured his valuable property at its original cost or anything near it; but, whether he had or not, and even supposing that the insurance companies meet his claims in full, his loss must still be very great, and every one who is a man of less pluck and fortitude. Yet, Mr. DONAHOE is in no ways depressed. The last number of his paper comes to us, as usual, replete with good things, and even though, temporarily of course, reduced to half its former size. The next issue will be of the old dimensions. Mr. DONAHOE has the warmest sympathy, not alone of his Boston fellow-citizens; but his fellow-countrymen throughout the union, in whose cause he has so long and so faithfully labored. We will indulge in no trite imagery, but simply express our hope that Mr. DONAHOE may live to more than make good his losses, and that the Boston Pilot may long continue a power in the land as the fearless champion of Faith and Free dom.

CATHOLIC HOLIDAY PRESENTS.—A fine stock of Holiday Books, Prayer Books Albums, Portfolios, Gold and Silver Beads and Medals, and all other Catholic articles, just received by M. C. DONOHOE, 304 Kearny street, corner of Sacramento.

HONORS TO THE MEMORY OF MR. MAGUIRE.

The great popular demonstrations which marked the obsequies of Mr. MAGUIRE in Dublin, where he breathed his last, and in his native city, Cork, whither his remains were conveyed for interment, reflect much credit on the Irish people. Such manifestations of respect prove that Ireland yet knows how to honor her patriotic children and how to pay a fitting tribute to departed worth. In the immense procession that followed Mr. MAGUIRE'S body to the Kingsbridge Terminus, all classes of society, religious and political, were represented. The men who looked upon the deceased during his lifetime as a sectarian agitator, as well as those who regarded him as too favorable to the British Government, for once united to express their deep regret for his death, and their profound respect for the integrity and singleness of purpose which had characterized his whole career. All religious differences, all political diversities were forgotten, and only the fact that a great, good and gifted Irishman had passed away, was remembered.

His funeral in Cork was, perhaps, the most imposing demonstration ever witnessed in that city. Deputations from every important town in county Cork and the neighboring county Imokilly came to take part in the procession; all the trades mustered in their full strength; a large body of the county assembled, and the streets and approaches of a hundred thousand persons were present at the funeral. Nor was this significant display of respect, the only tribute paid to the memory of Mr. MAGUIRE. It reflects a family not very well known to fame though few public men in Ireland had had better opportunity for accumulating if not wealth at least a handsome competence—and to them the subject of the people at once turned. At the time of Mr. MAGUIRE'S decease a national testimonial was being collected for him throughout Ireland, and, indeed, all over the world wherever Irish people were settled in any number, and the amount of subscriptions received was tolerably large. It was resolved to continue the collection and turn the funds into a memorial to Mr. MAGUIRE, and we are glad to learn that the Irish people have not forgotten their intentions in this respect. Following will be the rates for the year:

| | |
|---|---|
| THE MONITOR and "Catholic World"..... | $7 50 |
| " " and "Lady's Book"..... | 5 00 |
| " " with the elegant steel engraving of "Mary Darling" | 5 00 |
| " " and the Illustrated Family Magazine | 5 00 |
| " " with the handsome chromos of "Niagara Falls" and "Yosemite;" "Ida; Pike Pretty," "A Mischief" or "Pet's Mode" (each)..... | 4 50 |
| THE MONITOR and Harper's Magazine..... | 4 00 |

The chromos above mentioned are the best of their kind, and the cheapest of them retail for $5, while some of them are worth $10.

THE MONITOR alone will remain, as heretofore, at $4 a year.

MANY of the leading Republican papers express fear that George C. Gorham will succeed Chesnutty in the U. S. Senate, should the Republicans carry the Legislature next year, and are urging the claims of Gov. Booth as the most likely man to beat him. If the Republicans win, George will be the man; so if those papers are really opposed to him, the surest way of defeating him is to throw their influence for the Democracy.

The Ignatian Literary Society.

The third annual literary entertainment of this Society took place at the College hall on Wednesday evening of this week. On this, as on former occasions, the hall was filled with a highly respectable audience, chiefly friends of the members. About eight o'clock the exercises commenced with a selection from an Italian opera, by Miss Josephine Maroney; after which, Mr. J. F. Sullivan, the chairman, in well-chosen words welcomed the audience, briefly alluded to the history of the Society, and gave an outline of the evening's entertainment. Mr. Thomas H. Griffin, recited in a commendable manner the familiar poem of "Hohenlinden," and was succeeded by Mr. and Miss Golden, who sang a duet, "The End of Earth," was the title of an original poem by Mr. Charles Skidmore. Mr. Skidmore "had a dream which was not all a dream," and while under the influence of the said dream he travels through Illimitable space, visits the abodes of the damned, and finally got a glimpse of heaven, the glories and joys of which so overpower him, that before he enters its sacred portals he stands to contemplate the grandeur without. But before his contemplations are over he wakes up, to find it all the airy shadow of a vision. The poem possesses well expressed thoughts, but, like most dreams, it is rather chaotic. His description of the "other world," however, was far more in accordance with the conceived notions of the undiscovered country, than the meagre description given by Mcbonough's Virginia ghost, and it was unquestionably more intelligent. Mrs. Gleason followed with an operatic Italian air, to which she did ample justice. In this connection, we respectfully ask, why is it that most of our singers and getters-up of entertainments of the character of which we are speaking, so much affect foreign airs—the words of which in many instances themselves and their audiences are totally ignorant—while there are so many charming American and Scotch airs set to music in a language which they and their auditors understand, and understanding can appreciate.

The main feature of the evening was the debate on the question, "That our country owes more to her warriors than to her statesmen." Mr. Robert Tobin opened in the affirmative. This young gentleman possesses the requisite powers of oratory in quite evident that he made an impression on the audience. He had certainly the weaker side of the question, but like a good tactician he made the best of it, which is the natural as well as the best course to pursue. If the Republicans win, George will be the man; so if those papers are really opposed to him, the surest way of defeating him is to throw their influence for the Democracy.

TELEGRAPHIC JOTTINGS.

The Marquis of Londonderry is dead.

Mr. Morrison has been elected United States senator for Indiana.

The increase of bullion in the Bank of England last week was £1,000,000.

The bill legalizing marriage to a deceased wife's sister passed the Legislature of Victoria.

Stanley, the discoverer of Livingstone, has arrived in New York, and is being feted.

Lewis (Conservative), is returned to Parliament from Londonderry.

Horace Greeley is lying dangerously ill, and fears are entertained that he will die.

President Grant has pardoned two of his friends who were convicted of swindling the Government.

Beer are said to be dying in Wisconsin from the lager epidemic that has prevailed for several weeks past in the Atlantic States.

In the French Assembly Deputy Ingrat introduced a bill for revocation to the decree of banishment against the Bonaparte family.

The payment of the third milliard of the war indemnity is completed. France will now consider herself entirely free after December 31.

A Washington special says the British forces have been withdrawn from San Juan, in accordance with the Berlin decision.

A case filled with Grand Lambs, destined for Rome, was seized by the police at Antwerp, Belgium, last Tuesday.

A bill for the suppression of religious corporations has been introduced in the Italian Chamber of Deputies.

Dr. May, the American who shot and killed a lawyer named Starr some time ago, in London, has been tried and acquitted.

A band of insurgents, numbering two hundred, attacks a police station a mile of Malaga, Spain. Another band of one hundred has destroyed the telegraph lines between Seville and Malaga.

King Amadeus of Spain is very sick, and the physicians attending him declare that he will die. He could truly say from experience, "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown."

Seven companies of the Fourth U. S. Infantry, recently stationed in North Carolina, have passed through Chicago for San Francisco.

General Meibowitz is appointed Major-General, in place of General Meade, and ordered to the command of the Division of the Atlantic, with headquarters at Governor's Island, New York.

The Emperor Wilhelm is determined to carry out his intention of increasing the membership of the Upper House to 400, by creating new peers, should the Chamber reject the bill.

The Olympia some time ago was placed in opposition, and has reduced the rate of passage in the rates of passage and freight to Kansas. The first cabin passage remains at $75 as before, and second at $45. Steep traveling.

Thursday being the annual Thanksgiving, business men generally gave their employés a half holiday, in order to properly offer up thanks—for the turkey.

The lessees of Platt's Hall refused to permit Laura D. Fair to lecture there on Sunday next, in any manner than having sought to poison Judge Lake, and to shoot Crittenden, who appears on the evening.

A telegram dated "City of Mexico, 18th," states that Congress had assembled and proclaimed Lerdo de Tejada constitutional President of the Republic. For once the "Sister Republic" has done something creditable to herself.

The Fenian leader in the North of England, Mr. Corrigan, has been arrested on a charge of stealing a number of gallons of whisky.

Stanley, the discoverer of Livingstone, has arrived in New York, and is being feted.

Lewis (Conservative), is returned to Parliament from Londonderry.

Horace Greeley is lying dangerously ill, and fears are entertained that he will die.

President Grant has pardoned two of his friends who were convicted of swindling the Government.

Beer are said to be dying in Wisconsin from the lager epidemic that has prevailed for several weeks past in the Atlantic States.

In the French Assembly Deputy Ingrat introduced a bill for revocation to the decree of banishment against the Bonaparte family.

The payment of the third milliard of the war indemnity is completed. France will now consider herself entirely free after December 31.

A Washington special says the British forces have been withdrawn from San Juan, in accordance with the Berlin decision.

A case filled with Grand Lambs, destined for Rome, was seized by the police at Antwerp, Belgium, last Tuesday.

A bill for the suppression of religious corporations has been introduced in the Italian Chamber of Deputies.

Dr. May, the American who shot and killed a lawyer named Starr some time ago, in London, has been tried and acquitted.

A band of insurgents, numbering two hundred, attacks a police station a mile of Malaga, Spain. Another band of one hundred has destroyed the telegraph lines between Seville and Malaga.

King Amadeus of Spain is very sick, and the physicians attending him declare that he will die. He could truly say from experience, "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown."

Seven companies of the Fourth U. S. Infantry, recently stationed in North Carolina, have passed through Chicago for San Francisco.

General Meibowitz is appointed Major-General, in place of General Meade, and ordered to the command of the Division of the Atlantic, with headquarters at Governor's Island, New York.

The Emperor Wilhelm is determined to carry out his intention of increasing the membership of the Upper House to 400, by creating new peers, should the Chamber reject the bill.

The Olympia some time ago was placed in opposition, and has reduced the rate of passage in the rates of passage and freight to Kansas. The first cabin passage remains at $75 as before, and second at $45. Steep traveling.

Thursday being the annual Thanksgiving, business men generally gave their employés a half holiday, in order to properly offer up thanks—for the turkey.

The lessees of Platt's Hall refused to permit Laura D. Fair to lecture there on Sunday next, in any manner than having sought to poison Judge Lake, and to shoot Crittenden, who appears on the evening.

A telegram dated "City of Mexico, 18th," states that Congress had assembled and proclaimed Lerdo de Tejada constitutional President of the Republic. For once the "Sister Republic" has done something creditable to herself.

The Fenian leader in the North of England, Mr. Corrigan, has been arrested on a charge of stealing a number of gallons of whisky.

DEATH OF JOHN FRANCIS MAGUIRE.

A Splendid Demonstration.

More than kingly honors, with all the grand show of grief a great community could bestow, and with all the pomp and deep, thrilling sympathy that can purchase, the mortal remains of Francis Maguire were laid in their last resting place yesterday. Cork seemed to put itself to the task of adorning and ceremony with the worth and fame of its population. The clash of swords was hushed; in the presence of the bearers of rank and class went down the moment there was Utopian and a spectacle rare in Irish annals, revealed to the world—Catholic and Protestant, Liberal and Conservative, rich and rebel, man of rank, men of wealth and men of labor, all smiling tears of discord in a splendid tribute to him who was gone. In truth, it was a noble funeral for a noble citizen—why one was at the funeral, and could combine elements so varied as entire community might be said followed him to his grave. There and wealthy, among whom the stainless purity of his mediocrities; the men of the Young Ireland and the Drapers' Association, patron and host advocate to be the tie to bind in his sharing. He could truly say from experience, "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown."

Seven companies of the Fourth U. S. Infantry, recently stationed in North Carolina, have passed through Chicago for San Francisco.

General Meibowitz is appointed Major-General, in place of General Meade, and ordered to the command of the Division of the Atlantic, with headquarters at Governor's Island, New York.

The Emperor Wilhelm is determined to carry out his intention of increasing the membership of the Upper House to 400, by creating new peers, should the Chamber reject the bill.

The Olympia some time ago was placed in opposition, and has reduced the rate of passage in the rates of passage and freight to Kansas. The first cabin passage remains at $75 as before, and second at $45. Steep traveling.

Thursday being the annual Thanksgiving, business men generally gave their employés a half holiday, in order to properly offer up thanks—for the turkey.

The lessees of Platt's Hall refused to permit Laura D. Fair to lecture there on Sunday next, in any manner than having sought to poison Judge Lake, and to shoot Crittenden, who appears on the evening.

A telegram dated "City of Mexico, 18th," states that Congress had assembled and proclaimed Lerdo de Tejada constitutional President of the Republic. For once the "Sister Republic" has done something creditable to herself.

The Fenian leader in the North of England, Mr. Corrigan, has been arrested on a charge of stealing a number of gallons of whisky.

Industrial Condition of the Slope.

The business of canning and curing salmon is steadily increasing in importance on our coast, but it is yet in its infancy. All that is necessary to insure success is a visit from the Golden Gate northward to Sitka, abound with them; but in most of the rivers no fish are caught save for immediate consumption. The Columbia is the favorite resort to the rivers of Washington Territory, between Shoal water Bay and Cape Flattery, but the Columbia River is the best known of the Oregon rivers, and it has also the most extensive fisheries. About 350,000 salmon, weighing from 15 to 30 pounds apiece, are annually canned and half salted. The canned salmon is sold for more than twice as much as the salted, and the canning process should be adopted in preference at all the large fisheries. Salting will fit places where the supply of fish is small and irregular. Eel liver has, we believe, taken the lead in the market by long odds, and is now quoted at the mouth of the Klamath, new neglected, will in a few years become valuable.

All the ice that is required for the canneries can be had from Puget Sound, where it is to be found in the form of immense bergs, and is to be had for the cutting and towing. The ice is cut in blocks, and is packed in sawdust, and will keep for months. The average yield is fifteen tons of green, and three of roasted root to the acre. The San Francisco Bulletin says:

"It is estimated that the cost of the chicory imported into the United States is over two millions of dollars per annum, all of which could be supplied by California, as there are large quantities of wild chicory all along the rivers and creeks of this State, sufficient at least to raise all the home consumption. The fact that the import duty is five per cent. on the imported article, which enables us to compete with the cheaper foreign labor, is a proof that the duty is entirely useless, as there is no competition in this country. The Independent says:

"The manufacturers express the opinion that the growth and development of this industry would be of great benefit to the farmers in this State, from the fact that the action of the last Congress in reducing the duty on the imported article from Europe, not only brings the California producer into direct competition with the foreign laborer, but actually places the Pacific Coast venture at a positive disadvantage. Chicory raised in New York for $12 per ton freight, whereas the freight on the California article brings it down in the city, is about one-third more than it is from Germany. It is contended, therefore, that the production and manufacture of chicory in California, under existing circumstances, will be limited to the supply of the home demand."

The crop of the Sacramento Beet Sugar Company for 1872 is estimated at 7,000 tons of beets, and 560 tons or 1,120,000 pounds of sugar, almost as much as that of the Alvarado Company. Last year the Sacramento factory turned out 100,000 pounds, and the Alvarado Company 750,000 pounds, making 850,000 pounds for the State in 1871; and in 1870 the entire production was 500,000 pounds. Neither factory has yet reached its utmost capacity, but a yield of 2,000,000 pounds is not unsatisfactory for the third year of the best sugar business in the New World.

The Union says more men are wanted now than ever before at Grass Valley, and though higher wages are offered, the demand for good miners, able to use the single-hand drill and dynamite, has exceeded the supply for months. The Transcript speaks thus of a quartz mine lately found about a mile and a half from Nevada:

"In February last Mr. Schuyler purchased the ranch on which the ledge was found, of Mr. Prescott. After the purchase, he concluded to set out grape vines for a large vineyard. He and his sons, John and Louis, commenced digging holes for the vines, and while digging one to the depth of two and a half feet, they struck a piece of white quartz literally filled with gold. They continued sinking, and found a goodsized ledge, from which they pounded out $160 in gold. Work was continued for several days, and Schuyler's sons took out from $50 to $220 specimens at a time. They then proceeded to take out a crushing, picking out the rock which showed free gold, and sent fifteen tons of rock which yielded no gold to Stiles' mill, and it netted them $1,400. The last crushing, a few days ago, netted about $30 per ton, and the subscribers say they will pay $50 per ton. The indications are that it is the most important and richest discovery ever made in the township, and at least $2,000 worth of specimens have been pounded up."—Alta, Nov. 25.

Our Wine Merchants.

THE FIRM OF F. & P. J. CASSIN.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE CITY AND BOARDS OF '73.

It is ever a pleasant duty for the Californian to record the triumphs of those far-seeing and energetic spirits who, in the State in the early days of '49, laid foundations for business enterprises from which they amassed fortunes and gained position and influence in the community. Among the number of struggle. Obstacles of a grave character, incident to a newly-settled country, had to be overcome, and a spirit of pluck and perseverance, indomitable spirit and energy had to be displayed. Among those who thus displayed the requisites for the reconciliation can be ranked with importers and wholesale dealers in wines and liquors on Sansome and Battery, all over the Pacific Coast as merchants standing in the front ranks of the commercial community. Their business career is a guide to remember the plain sign which, in 1851, was conspicuous on the doorway of the same building on the corner of Pine and Montgomery streets. It was that of "F. Cassin & Co." a business which from its extent was characteristic of the structures of those times. The tide of immigration was strongly setting in from the towns and villages sprung up, the mining population increased, and the commercial community, also increased through these agencies new business ties were formed, and the house of F. Cassin & Co. became known throughout the country as one doing a large and constantly opened. A business more solidly established than that of the present firm of F. & P. J. Cassin could not be found. Its foundations were laid upon the reputation of its founder, and it has been built up and fostered by the energy, enterprise and ability of the gentlemen who now constitute the commercial community.—Bulletin.

THE FIRM OF F. & P. J. CASSIN,

CARD PRESENTATION.—In the window of Tucker & Co.'s jewelry store, corner of Montgomery and Sutter streets, is a handsome case which is attracting a good deal of attention and admiration. The wood is from the inland immense and beautiful proportions; the head is massive and exquisitely-chased gold, with rich and appropriate designs, and the whole presentation is executed in Tucker & Co.'s estimable. The case bears the following inscription: "Presented by Patrick Dwyer, from his brother in San Francisco." The giver of this gift is a native of Ballyhaise, county Cavan, Ireland, and is now in the employ of Dunphy & Dwyer, Market street, corner of Third. The recipient is the possession of the gentleman for whom it was intended.

READ THIS ITEM.—From Indep. until New Year's Day, the best bargains in the market in dress goods, in French cloths, crockery, glass, cutlery, silver goods and jewelry, at 25 per cent. less than at any other street, near Sutter. They are going to make extensive improvements in their store, and want room, and until their goods at any price. They are the largest importers of fancy goods and their big new basement store is full of nice things.

MONTGOMERY BLOCK.—The Montgomery Guard will give their fourteenth annual military and civic ball and supper at the new building on Montgomery block, on the evening of December 3d. The Montgomerites, always give their friends a right royal time, and the present occasion promises to be conducted in excellent style. We wish them a most successful night. Among the managers we notice with

MR. PETER KELLY, of Sullivan City, has lately contracted to set apart as a present for Mrs. Winslow, a lot of land in the same city, on which she will erect a large and commodious hotel, to be called the Winslow House. Mr. Kelly is a gentleman of wealth and influence, and his generosity will be appreciated by the lady for whom it is intended.

ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS REWARD is offered by the proprietor of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for a medicine that will equal it in the cure of all severe cases of "liver complaint" and all diseases arising from impurity of the blood, as eruptions, pimples, blotches, boils, etc.

ORNAMENTAL AND NEW TOWN GIFTS of every variety and price can be had at Shreve & Co.'s, Market's Bazar, southeast corner of Montgomery and Post streets.

☞ Newsdealers who may want copies of THE MONITOR on Saturday evening and Sunday morning can obtain them, at office rates, at the store of the late PETER N. RYAN, No. 16 Fourth street.

MR. FR. MCDEVITT is duly empowered to receive subscriptions for THE MONITOR at PROVO, Pike and Rockin, Placer county, and receipt for the same.

M. J. GLOVIN & BRO., Main street, near Mount Hall, Stockton, are the exclusive agents for THE MONITOR in Stockton.

The Warning has been Heeded.

Since the exposure of the strenuous modes by certain unprincipled hotel dealers in parts of the country seeking to, made from cheap and impure materials to the injury of the great national home, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, public opinion has set strongly against these empirics and their preparations. Their popularity is greater, and more widespread than ever, and is yet in its infancy as it now stills down. Persons who prefer with their own health by using unknown preparations, with no guarantee to sustain them, when so reliable a specific, proven by twenty years' experience, is ready at hand to be restored to health and vigor. Many have done so in the past, and many have done so in the present, but it is hoped that the truth plainly spoken has arrested the evil. In the years of the demand for the healing properties and restorative medicine of America was never so great as it has been this season. From the fever and ague districts of the West, Southwest, and South, it is literally appalling, and it may be said of the advices from all parts of the country of the cures it is effecting in dyspepsia, bilious complaints, and chronic constipation, that "truth hadn't half been told." Everywhere the popularity of the Bitters is unbounded, and the fact that it is "good," and "does all that is claimed for it," is the universal verdict.

(Written for The Monitor.)

PABLO'S STORY.

I mounted my steed while the hill-tops shone
With the tilted lances of early dawn,
And rode away ere the wakening breeze
Had shaken the dew-drops from tree or lawn.
How calm and still! in his victorious rest
The wide, wild vale lit its beauty lay,
Under cloudless skies where the pale, cold stare
Were veiling their light in the morn's first ray.
Wondrously beautiful all earth seemed,
With newer light to my gazing eyes!
Fairer the sovran shade my heart had dreamed
In dream of love 'neath the tranquil skies.
The dropping boughs of the sycamore,
Flung their fragrance around as I rode beneath;
And the brook smiled back at its flowery gemmed shore.

And sang forever! as I passed to death.
"O dawn! O wave!" moaned a startled doe;
"Comes back with the day my love to me?"
Her red palate answered a lark, which soared
And filled the air with a bolt of glee.
Then trembled and tighter the golden hand
Shone on the lifted forehead of noon,
And the last faint shadows fled out of the land,
Their night fast dimpling the waving corn;
Then the mighty sun from the east wheeled up
His shining car, and with glory spanned
The broad heights that in splendor frowned
Upon the valley that lay outstretched and,
The song of the lark, and the answering doe,
Blended above in the three as I passed alone.
In a narrow gorge of the mountains deep,
At the base of their sun-parts of frozen snow,
Hence all round me—the silence of awe,
The loneliness felt at the hours of dew;
Only the stream, like a baccanal, brawled
A spiteful jest, rolling on and on,
And that was the pace of our tryst, he said.
He would meet me here ere the morning chime
Would waken the Mission to life and toil—
And I knew by the sun it was near its time.

We had parted in anger, Anselmo and I—
Had forgot all except our old friendship away!
But a woman's smile and a woman's sigh
Have wrought such mischief before to-day.
It rocks not now how hearse to pass—
Whether I lied with the truth or false;
We parted to meet at the morning's light
Where, for a time, I should plead his cause.
He was coming at last; on the summit knoll
Where the Mission bell hung higher and nigher.
Then I left my steed to cover my self
While my rival came from the valley's desire
To pass in the morning bright to his shrine—
Watch him die unnatives within the veil,
And invite him there, by the beads of prey,
In triumph ride to my lonely.

We stood there one moment, face to face,
With envy's fury in every thought;
To bridge the chasm that lay between
Our hearts, that once beat as one and fraught.
Only with love and confidence!—
In deadly strife, with blow upon blow,
Till the fatal hour should be ended.
Dying the grave with his gory flow,
Then my rival, fainting, pressed on him hard—
Forced him down to the ground and held his there;
And in Lenape, so similar that I know,
Whoo, endion and clear as the morning air,
Borne to the winge of the southern breeze,
Came the "Augeon Deantah" silvery tone;
And the pitiful sun's voice broke up the trees,
And filled with its echoes the gorge below,
Till I forgot—yes, I fancy my good angel beat
And touched my heart with his fingers then,
And I loosed my hold on the man—to lay
Beside my rival! dead! in that lonely glen.
You may smile, and say 'twas the work of years
That loosed me to pause and the cross to sign,
Dropping my sword, as to scorn borne
I answered a prayer to the Mald divine—
He felt my grasp on his throat relax,
And struggled up to his feet again;
Then once, twice, thrice through my side I felt
His keen sword pass with a surging pain.
It pinned me down to the trampled earth;
I strove in vain to try feet to rise,
Till a mist of blood fell over the most,
Shutting out from my straining eyes—
Vanished the hills with their rock-bound breasts,
And the valley with its orchestra of May:
And my mind grew struggling through shadow dense,
Like a man who in night in the woods astray.
At once to a dream I could hear the best
Of his hoofs' knells as he galloped away;
And under the languor that weighted me down
I strove, but I strove in vain to pray.
Through the heavy cloud on my brain that lay
The words seemed floating beyond my reach;
Like the pearly mists which the waves in play
Cleave and take from the ocean's beach.
Lost was the present, its pace and fear,
Like wrecking breakers, and very cool!
But, oh! how vividly bright and clear
Came back the days of my youngest past.

When I waked from that trance, after weary days,
There were friendly faces about my bed—
Fellow-soldiers with playing eyes,
And a woman's pitiful face near my head.
Anselmo, but haggard and wan and worn;
His proud form bent in by years of care—
Laughter and light from his dark eyes flown,
And silver streaks in his coarse hair.
He watched me for days with a tender care,
And when convalescence came to me he told the tale
Of all that happened that fatal morn
When he left me to die in the mountain vale.

He told of the horse of his promised bride,
With its flashing mane and its steadfast limbs;
But what, think you, was the tale he heard
As he door, of a fleet, false, beautiful maid?
She had fled in the night from her father's home
With Don Braulio, whom I once vowed lay
Only waiting its master's word
To learn the barter of Monterey.
None knew of her flight till the morning chime,
When her mother, visiting her early rest,
Entered her chamber to find unscented
The bed on the pillow by her disrobed.
Then the jewel-box and the satchel of gold
Of the maid and lover of one accord missed;
And the Wonderful notes that were meant to clothe
Her graceful limbs in their silken sheen,
She had flown in the night with the wanton bold—
A fever whose lift on the wave was spent;
He recounted as sought all that man could dare—
Honor's love and duty as d sweet consent.
They had fled from the place on the fleetest steeds
That fed in her father's fields to pride,
And night by night as he tracked the late,
Mad crossed the Salinas valley wide;
Then, learning their course by their sail that way
They were sailing vessel at anchor rode
In the harbor of Monterey far off,
But hopeless Anselmo refused to go—
She had broken her pact and trick'd him so.

And his proud heart reviled 'neathe cruel blow.

For her fair, false sake he had cast aside
The tender friendship of boyish years,
Lured on by the light of her wondrous eyes,
He knew not his control cruel! no fate
He had vow my heart by her woman's wile,
Which she broke with a careless hand.
Her sacred kiss, me to her dancing set,
Ah! man to be love is at best unwise—
Unwise to be human! brave and strong
That fills his heart with unholy fire;
Pain to be loathed by her fancied wrong.
His head grown red with the blood-stain dire.
Unwise is we when we view victims both—
Victims of love and of jealous hate;
Pain to be loathed by her fancied wrong,
But the wisdom of lovers was never great.
And still as he pondered upon the wrong
His wrath was smitten by keen remorse,
And ending his confession, he told me last,
He had done here moment he could undone,
He'd ride to the Mission and bring me back.

Where I lay with the fever in my veins,
With the touch still changing to heartless brawl,
And the mocking smoking the face that fined me.

He finished his story, then kneeling, said:
"I thank my God that you have not died;
But could I ask, can you shoot on my head,
At the foot of the Tyrants of the Crucified?
Can you pardon me for the life I've led,
And forget the past for the future, as in days of old—
Try to see other, the friend of your youth,
Till we enter into the buried past,
We pointed our trust from far into future's days—
A pledge we kept, though our footsteps pressed
On the thorns that rose, partially in our way.
And my lips were sealed while Anselmo lived;
But he's gone, in keeping of many a day,
In the churchyard and where the roses spring,
Till the wild birds carol their chants in May.
Few were the years he honored here,
For hope and joy from his heart had flown!
But he never murmured nor cause again,
Or blamed fate in aloud by sudden moan.

And she who wrecked by her witching smile
Two strong hearts in their early morning glow?
I never looked on her handsome face
More; but Rachel, ever so fair and,
But rumor whispered that Lima was
The last sad home of her ill-starred life—
Widowed and poor, for forsaken fell
In a drunken brawl by a drunard's knife,
And I? Well, well, we may sum and say
The best is past, but is over—
I trod her year, by the merest chance,
Through the streets of Lima, on that morning's dance,
And swift as the rush of the wounding stream
Under rock and over the fallen tree,
A flood of memories so fierce and strong
The barriers of time were all swept away.
There was the very spot where we stood,
On our restless wrists, on that fated hour;
And there in the dust with a start I saw
The very weapon that I had borne—
The very weapon, but oh! how changed!
Clasped in I, with the hand of fate!
There with the rust of the passing time
Was the same old weight of the widows' tears
Down it lay in the trampled dew,
Hideous, and horrible, and base,
I picked it up and, with a shriek, threw
Through my aged hands, which grew much wont,
Then the weapon, took to it more
Softness and rusted yon never would drown
The sea none sliced in a mirror like blade,
When filled with in its raising beam.
But it was fashioned when it was drawn
In a bloody feast on a Christian man—
In brave Atahuc raven, without honor shielded—
So of old the inscription ran.

MARCELIA A. FITZGERALD.
MOSSY WOODLAND, November, 1872.

Ex-Pere Hyacinthe.

(From the La Salle Journal.)

The following is from the pen of the editor of the Paris Univers, Louis Veuillot, the staunchest lay defender of Catholicity in all France. Some may regard him as too pitiless in his lashing of the unfortunate man who has placed himself between or rather infamous—by the last act, the consummation of his schism. Yet we do not. Where it only for the stain he has cast upon the fair name of the clergy of France, we think all Veuillot says of him justly deserved. The wrecched ex-monk, instead of hiding his head in shame after binding himself by those sacral ties to the spirit of darkness, has come boldly forth and endeavored to justify himself. He has dishonored his priesthood, he had made infidelity jubilant; and this foul monster, patrolling with its bony-finger in the ranks of the great and good who has once been his confreres, reclaims with satagie grin that many would gladly follow his example. Every driveling flowsman who can throw filth upon the character of those faithful pastors is welcomed by the infidel press—that propaganda of falsehood. And all this, from the last fatal step of this miserable! But God will protect his own. Let us pray Him for the one who has caused such evil, but whom we can believe, though black his crime. Let us pray strongly, earnestly for the misguided of the introduction of sin into the world.

"He had asked for and taken upon himself the dreadful engagement of leading men to vanquish sin, and to rise above the inclinations of death. But when he broke the compact he has made with God—when he betrays the Church which consecrated his lips to impart instruction to men, and when he betrays ourselves by offering to us the spectacle of his apostasy, is it not the frightful blight of treason, and at the same time, God be thanked, the laughable baight of folly, to invite us to his degraded nuptials, and to give Israelites an example to that faithful clergy whom he defames and to that faithful people he insults? It is made by machinery bitterly different from the sentiments of evils made by hand.

"Impose, traitor; begone fool, who supposes us ignorant to such a degree as to hope that your sophisms may not appear to us as puerile as we hold and believe them to be interested. The credulous in favor of which may be numerous and powerful, no doubt; but they are egotistical and will bring nothing to your sacrilegious undertakings its song of misery like that of the poor little wretch (pauvre petit diable) who, before you, was heard offering the sacrament cheap in an obscure and miserable corner of the faubourg.

"Of priests of your kind, the example suffices. Their crime may be approved, their sacramenta are valid, and you might dare to dispense at a low price baptism, matrimony, penance, the eucharist, even (ordersi) all, for your price none, you might confront the terrifying spectacle of the last agony—of a terrified soul that vanquish us, we know that it is still but sin, and that you are abominable tricksters.

"Go, then, impenitent; you will, still may misfortune overwhelm you, is the last wish we can form for you! May it fall heavily upon you in this world that it may not pursue you beyond it; and may the permanent severity of the chastisement serve at least as a warning to the rest of mankind, if it does not convert you! Did we hate you as much as we pity you, we would, wish you the avenging property which would leave you unfulfilled but you are under the hand of God. May bitter waters be given to your thirst, and the bread of derision to your hunger! May the hydras and monsters whom you will cast into existence repay you in advance the avenging bitterness and vexation in which you deliver them, and which will force them to curse you! May you everywhere meet the rod which will at last cause you to detest your crime and constrain you to lift up your hands to that Mercy which you think to discourage!"

TAX COLLECTOR'S NOTICES.

TAXES—1872-'3—TAXES

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT A CERtified copy of the Assessment Book of the Taxable Property of the City and County of San Francisco—REAL ESTATE and PERSONAL PROPERTY—for the Fiscal Year 1872-73, has this day been received; that the state, City and County Taxes for said Fiscal Year are now due and payable at the office of the undersigned: Room No. 1, City Hall, and that the laws in regard to their collection will be strictly enforced.

Taxes will become DELINQUENT on the first MONDAY in January, 1873, and unless paid prior thereto, firs per cent. will be added to the amount thereof.

A. AUSTIN,
Tax Collector of the City and County of San Francisco. n5-td

TO TAX-PAYERS.

TAXES DUE OCTOBER 28, 1872.

DELINQUENT JANUARY 6, 1873.

THE USUAL DELAY, CONFUSION AND AN noyance experienced by Taxpayers will be very much lessened this year, as both PERSONAL and REAL Property has to be paid prior to the same time. This being the case the undersigned would most respectfully suggest that Taxpayers furnish this office with a schedule of their property at an early day. Where there have been no changes the tax bills of any previous year are the most convenient and correct memoranda.

o19 A. AUSTIN, Tax Collector.

Taxes! Taxes! Taxes!

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF THOSE who cannot leave their occupations during the day, the Tax Collector's Office will be open for business

Every Saturday Evening in November,
FROM 7 TO 9 O'CLOCK.

o2 A. AUSTIN, Tax Collector.

CARPETS.

NOTICE.

CASH CARPET STORE,

715 MARKET STREET,

IS NOW OPEN, WITH A

GRAND DISPLAY

—OF—

NEW AND ELEGANT GOODS!

Purchased expressly for the

CASH CARPET STORE.

Goods will be offered for about

Half the Price Asked Elsewhere.

TERMS—CASH ON DELIVERY.

o16 tf

HAIR.

The Cheapest Place in the City

—TO BUY—

Human and Imitation Hair Goods,

Cheap and Fine JEWELRY,

And FANCY GOODS,

—IN AT THE—

NEW YORK STORE,

No. 110 Second Street.

BANKING HOUSES.

HIBERNIA SAVINGS

—AND—

LOAN SOCIETY

Office—Northeast corner of Montgomery and Market Streets.

OFFICERS:

President.....M. D. SWEENY.
Vice-President.....C. D. O'SULLIVAN.

TRUSTEES:

M. D. SWEENY, C. D. O'SULLIVAN, JOHN SULLIVAN, R. Z. JOHN.
M. J. DONOHOE, P. MARTIN, HUGH J. TOUCHARD JOHN A. McGLYNN, PETER DONAHUE.

Treasurer.....EDWARD MARTIN
Attorney.....RICHARD PERRY

Remittances from the country may be sent through Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Express office, or any reliable banking house, but the safety will not be responsible for their safe delivery. The signature of the depositor book will be required to the agent by whom the deposit is made.

Deposits received from $1 upwards.

OFFICE HOURS—From 9 A. M. to 3 P. M.

JOS. A. DONAHOE, Pres. Franchises. | EUGENE KELLY New York.

DONOHOE, KELLY & Co

SAN FRANCISCO.

EUGENE KELLY & Co.

NEW YORK

BANKERS.

EXCHANGE ON

NEW YORK, LONDON, AND
BANK OF IRELAND.....DUBLIN.

Payable at all the Branches,

AND IN EVERY COUNTY TOWN IN IRELAND

SAN FRANCISCO Savings Union.

526 California Street, corner of Webb.

Deposits.....$4,881,566 04
Paid-in Capital and Reserve Fund.....$10,000 00

President.....JAMES de FREMERY
Vice-President.....ALBERT MILLER

Directors:

DENIS J. OLIVER, CHARLES BAUM, WARREN D. HASTLETT, ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, CHARLES PACK, ADOLPHE LOW GEO. C. POTTER, LOWELL WHITE, JOHN ARCHBALD, HENRY C. CAMPBELL.

Cashier and Secretary.....
Surveyor.....JOHN ARCHBALD
Attorney.....HENRY C. CAMPBELL.

RECEIVES DEPOSITS AND LOANS MONEY on real estate security.

Country remittances may be sent by Wells, Fargo & Co., or by checks or drafts payable in San Francisco, but the responsibility of the United Societies only with the actual receipt of the funds.

The signature of the depositor should accompany the first deposit.

No charge is made for pass book or entrance fee.

Business hours—9 A. M. to 3 P. M. Open Saturday evenings from 6½ to 8½.

no3

HOTELS.

Removal.

THE SECOND STREET HOUSE

Has Removed to 115 Second street,

Northeast corner of Minna. Furnished Rooms to let with or without board, on the most reasonable terms. Meals and transient.

M. O'NEIL,
Proprietor.

n5

CENTRAL HOTEL,

615 AND 616 SANSOME STREET,

Between Broadway and Pacific.....San Francisco

THIS NEW, LARGE AND COMMODIOUS Hotel has been thoroughly renovated by the well known proprietor, M. FARRELL, late proprietor of the Brooklyn House, and he will be happy to receive his numerous friends and the public generally at the above named premises, for which he solicits a continuance of their favors patronage.

There is a fire-proof safe in the House, where money and valuables can be kept at the risk of the proprietor.

The Central House Coach will be at each car depot and steamboat landing, to convey passengers to the house free of charge.

Free of board to all the Clergy.

Parties sending for their friends to the States, to who expect any, will please notify MICHAEL FARRELL, and he will attend to the same, and forward them to their friends with due care, and the same moderate charges.

The strictest attention will be paid to the comfort of the guests of the House.

n24-tf MICHAEL FARRELL, Proprietor.

RAILROAD HOUSE,

Corner of Sansome and Pacific streets, San Francisco,

IS NOW OPENED BY

P. CASSERLY,

(Late of the Tremont House, where he will be happy to receive his friends and the public in general.

The House is thoroughly fitted up in the latest plan, with Elevator, Baths and all other modern improvements. The Rooms are large and airy, and can be had either single or in suits for families.

The best attention will be paid to the comfort and convenience of Boarders.

Board and Lodging per week.....$7 50
Board and Lodging per week.....$1 00

There is a fire-proof safe in the House, where money and valuables can be kept at the risk of the proprietor.

Free Coach in the House.

P. CASSERLY, Proprietor.

n23

FRANKLIN HOTEL,

618 AND 616 PACIFIC STREET,

Between Sansome and Montgomery...San Francisco.

HUGH CURRAN.....Proprietor.

Board, per month.....$6 00
Board and Lodging single rooms.....1 00
Single Meals.....Dinner, 50 cents.

Family accommodations on reasonable rates.

Boarders taken by the week or month at the following rates: also from the House to the boats and cars.

A City livery, and all the city papers taken.

WESTERN HOUSE.

GENERAL STAGE OFFICE,
Marysville, California.

GEORGE WAFFEL.....PROPRIETOR
au11

Thirty-Two large Double-Column Papers every Month for One Dollar a Year.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER,

AN ILLUSTRATED

CATHOLIC MONTHLY MAGAZINE

—OF—

CHOICE READING

—AND—

Good Pictures.

Read with interest by all, and with special delight and profit by the younger members of the family. The Crusader is now in the fourth year.

The Reviewers say it is the best of its kind.

Sample Copies free to all who ask for them.

Back Numbers all on hand.

Premiums of Pictures are given to those who get up Clubs.

A Liberal Discount to Sunday Schools.

Send One Dollar (or a Postoffice subscription) by mail, addressed to the Editor,

REV. WILLIAM BYRNE, Boston, Mass.

WINNER'S NEW SCHOOLS

FOR THE

PIANO-FORTE, CABINET ORGAN, GUITAR, Clarinet, Violin, Fife, Accordeon, Harmonica (over) reed, Clarionet, Flute, Fingerpipe, reading but 24 cents each, are lost what are needed for cheap and attractive instruction books.

Charming Song, THE GATES AJAR. Thomas. 30 cts.

The above books and piece mail, post-paid, on receipt of retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
C. H. DITSON & CO., New York.

EDUCATIONAL.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers.

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible.

While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, our own language receives special attention. The daily exercises of the Students in Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly discussed and corrected in the class-room.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half yearly in advance).

Board, Tuition and Washing.....$100 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines.....
Vacation at College.....
Day Students.....
Use of Library.....
Graduation Fee.....
Drawing, Painting, Music and drawing form extra charges.

Studies will be resumed on the 5th of August, 1873.

REV. R. LUSTIN, President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME.

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPOrated according to the laws of the state and empowered to confer academic honors, is pleasantly situated in the most favored Animal Session on MONDAY, August 5th, 1872. Every facility for the acquisition of a thorough education.

TERMS PER MONTH.

Entrance, to be paid but once.....$15 00
Board and Tuition.....40 00
Washing and Mending.....4 00
Physicians' fees.....

Parents desiring it may be preferred to visit their children in case of sickness, per quarter 2 50

Piano, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges. Use of Piano in extra charge for the French, Spanish or German Language, and for Plain and Fancy Needle-work.

Payments are required to be made half a session in advance. Pupils will find it to their advantage to be present at the opening of the session.

au3-tf

CONVENT OF THE IMMACULATE HEART OF MARY

—FOR THE—

EDUCATION OF YOUNG LADIES

GILROY, SANTA CLARA CO.,

Conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.

TERMS PER QUARTER.

Board, tuition, washing and mending, per session.....$100 00
Entrance fee, to be paid but once.....10 00
Tuition on piano, per annum.....
Use of piano.....
Vocal music.....
Drawing and painting.....
Use of library.....
Graduation fee.....
Physician's fee.....
Vacation at College.....

DAY PUPILS.

Junior class.....
Senior class.....
Use of instrumental music, drawing and painting, each, will form extra charges. The scholastic year will commence on the first Monday in August and end the 20th of January.

For Prospectus and further particulars apply to

REV. FATHER ANTHONY,
Vicar Rev. P. HENNEBERY.

N. B.—One of the Rev. Fathers of the Society will be in attendance every day of the week, except Sunday, at the office of the Institution, No. 1 Montgomery street, to meet parents who may wish to confer with him in regard to the admission of pupils or their journey.

DAY SCHOOLS

—FOR—

Boys and Girls

THE SISTERS OF MERCY HAVE OPENED a Day School for Children, on Mission street, near Bryant, where little will be received from Kindergarten to the Grammar Grade.

A Boys' School is being prepared on Rincon Hill, and will be opened on the 15th of September.

Both Schools will be opened on the 15th of August.

SISTER MARY E. McGINN,
Superior of Sisters of Mercy.

San Francisco, May 27, 1871.

GROCERIES, WINES AND LIQ

EBERHART & LACHMA

MANUFACTURERS OF

CALIFORNIA SPARKLING

SWEET AND DRY CHAMP Sparkling Mountain and Claret Wines, Brandies, Cordials, Pure Spirits, Vinegar, Angelica, Mountain Wines, Sherry, Hock, Muscat, Vineyard, Sweet and Dry Catawba, Angelica, Brandies, &c. Orders by mail and Brandies are made exclusively from the Grapes. Principal depot, corner of Pine and Battery streets, San Francisco.

WILLIAM B. DOLAN

145 Third Street.....San Fra

Importer and Dealer in Wholesale and Retail

French Wines and Brand

—AND—

Irish Whisk

Imported direct from Ireland.

HE HAS ALSO ON HAND A LARGE assortment of California Wines of every description, which he will dispose of, in bond or free, on the most reasonable terms.

Orders from the trade solicited. All Table wines promptly attended to, and delivered free of cartage to any part of the city.

EXTRA CHARGES.

Casks with use of Pump, per month.....$ 50
Casks without use of Pump, per month.....2 00

Only a limited number of boarders can be accommodated, and those will find this one to be the last of August. Payments invariably in advance. jy31

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,

SANTA BARBARA.....CALIFORNIA

THE SIXTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUtion will open on the Fourth Monday in October of Friends, with connexions on the first Monday of August.

The object of the institution is to give a good English, Classical, Commercial and Philosophical Education, at the lowest possible rate, a want long felt in California—and thereby bring it within the means of the poor.

TERMS.

Entrance Fee (to be paid but once).....$15 00
Tuition, Board and Washing, per month.....
Tuition on piano per month.....
Use of piano.....
Physician's fee.....
Vacation at College.....
Graduation fee.....

Pupils to be provided with bedding, towels, &c., &c.

Payments must be made semi-annually in advance. Parents will pay for medical attendance, and supply any extra clothing.

Money will not be advanced for the College; for the purchase of necessary articles, a sufficient sum must be deposited.

For further particulars apply to

REV. J. J. O'KEEFE, O. S. F.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

REV. JAMES MACGILL, C. M.,
President.

DEGREES CONFERRED

jy26-tf

$5 to $20 per day! Agents wanted! All of either sex, young or old, make more money at work for us in their spare moments, or all the time, than at anything else. Particulars free. Address G. STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine. se14-1y

EDUCATIONAL.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACA

BENICIA, CAL.

Conducted by the Sisters of St.

THIS INSTITUTION AFFORDS EVERY facility for the acquisition of a solid and accomplished education. The attractive site, the numerous and airy rooms, and the general comforts of the establishment render it a favorite resort for those in search of health.

The course of instruction embraces the English, Spanish and Latin languages, Mythology, Arithmetic, Composition, Ancient and Modern History, Geography, Astronomy, Natural Philosophy, Book-keeping, Botany, Rhetoric, Chemistry, Logic, Intellectual and Moral Philosophy, Vocal Music, Instrumental Music, Drawing, Painting, Tatting and Fancy Work, for the Spanish language.

For Prospectus and further particulars apply to the Sisters of Charity, Santa Barbara, Cal.

SISTERS OF CHARITY,
Santa Barbara, Cal.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL,

PETALUMA.

Day and Boarding School, Conducted by the Sisters of Charity.

TERMS for Boarders, including tuition in the English branches of a good education, French, plain and ornamental Needle-Work, per annum.....$15 00

EXTRA CHARGES.

Music, with use of Piano, per month.....$ 00
Washing, if required, per month.....2 00

Only a limited number of boarders can be accommodated, and those will find this one to be the last of August. Payments invariably in advance. jy31

ST. JOSEPH'S COLL

Rohnerville, Humboldt Coun

CONDUCTED BY THE FRIERS OF THE ORDINATION OF THE MOST PRE

THE INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN A healthy and picturesque locality, on the Eel River, and near the town of Rohnerville, and is easily accessible by daily stages and from other parts of the State by the California and Oregon Railroad.

The course of studies is classical, commercial and ecclesiastical. The French language is taught for teaching the natural sciences.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half yearly in advance).

Board, bedding, tuition, washing and mending, including medicines.....$150 00
Entrance fee, to be paid but once.....10 00
Tuition on piano, per annum.....
Use of piano.....
Vacation at College.....

DAY PUPILS.

Junior class.....
Senior class.....
Use of instrumental music, drawing and painting, each, will form extra charges. The scholastic year will commence on the first Monday in August and end the 20th of January.

For Prospectus and further particulars apply to the undersigned, or to the Rev. Pastors of the Churches in San Francisco.

REV. FATHER ANTHONY,
Vicar Rev. P. HENNEBERY.

N. B.—One of the Rev. Fathers of the Society will be in attendance every day of the week, except Sunday, at the office of the Institution, No. 1 Montgomery street, to meet parents who may wish to confer with him in regard to the admission of pupils or their journey.

DAY SCHOOLS

—FOR—

Boys and Girls

THE SISTERS OF MERCY HAVE OPENED a Day School for Children, on Mission street, near Bryant, where little will be received from Kindergarten to the Grammar Grade.

A Boys' School is being prepared on Rincon Hill, and will be opened on the 15th of September.

Both Schools will be opened on the 15th of August.

SISTER MARY E. McGINN,
Superior of Sisters of Mercy.

San Francisco, May 27, 1871.

GROCERIES, WINES AND LIQ

EBERHART & LACHMA

MANUFACTURERS OF

CALIFORNIA SPARKLING

SWEET AND DRY CHAMP Sparkling Mountain and Claret Wines, Brandies, Cordials, Pure Spirits, Vinegar, Angelica, Mountain Wines, Sherry, Hock, Muscat, Vineyard, Sweet and Dry Catawba, Angelica, Brandies, &c. Orders by mail and Brandies are made exclusively from the Grapes. Principal depot, corner of Pine and Battery streets, San Francisco.

WILLIAM B. DOLAN

145 Third Street.....San Fra

Importer and Dealer in Wholesale and Retail

French Wines and Brand

—AND—

Irish Whisk

Imported direct from Ireland.

HE HAS ALSO ON HAND A LARGE assortment of California Wines of every description, which he will dispose of, in bond or free, on the most reasonable terms.

Orders from the trade solicited. All Table wines promptly attended to, and delivered free of cartage to any part of the city.

EXTRA CHARGES.

Casks with use of Pump, per month.....$ 50
Casks without use of Pump

FATHER BURKE'S LECTURE

Continued from First Page.

that they actually fled over to Ireland for protection. He gives even the names of some of them. He tells us that John Harvey, Abel Ellis, Joseph Edmunds and Henry Hall, natives of Cheshire, in England, came to Ireland to avoid persecution in England, and brought with them a Welsh Protestant minister named Thomas Jones. These four men were received so cordially, were welcomed so hospitably that they actually founded a highly respectable mercantile family in Dublin. But we have another magnificent proof that the Irish are not a persecuting race. When James II. assembled his Catholic Parliament in Ireland in 1689, after they had been for more than one hundred years under the lash of their Protestant fellow-citizens—after they had been robbed and plundered, imprisoned and put to death for their adherence to the Catholic faith—at last the wheel gave a turn, and in 1689 the Catholics were up and the Protestants were down. That Parliament assembled to the number of 228 members. The Celtic or Catholic element had a sweeping majority. What was the first law that they made? The very first law that that Catholic Parliament passed was as follows:

"We hereby declare that it is the law of this land of Ireland that neither now nor ever again shall any man be persecuted for his religion."

That was the retaliation that we took on them. Was it not magnificent? Was it not a grand, a magnificent specimen of that spirit of Christianity, that spirit of forgiveness and charity, which, it is said, is to be not in a man, all the dogmatic truths that were ever revealed won't save him.

ELIZABETH'S POLICY.

Now, coming to Good Queen Bess, as she is called. I must say that Mr. Froude spans very handsomely upon her, and I will, for her really is language as terrific in its severity as one could use, and as I said before, I have not the learning nor the eloquence of Mr. Froude. He says one little thing of Bess, however, that is worthy of remark:

"Elizabeth was reluctant to draw the sword, but when she did draw it she never sheathed it until the star of freedom was fixed upon her throne for life."

That is a very eloquent passage; but the truth of telegraphing truth, tell true stories that Elizabeth was reluctant to draw the sword? Answer it, ye Irish annals. Answer it, oh history of Ireland. Elizabeth came to reign in 1558. The following year, in 1559, there was a Parliament assembled by her order in Dublin. What do you think of the laws of that Parliament? It was not a Catholic Parliament nor an Irish Parliament. It consisted of seventy-six members. Generally speaking, Parliaments in Ireland used to have from two hundred and twenty to two hundred and thirty members. This Parliament of Elizabeth consisted of seventy-six picked men. The laws that that Parliament made were, first:

"Any clergyman not having the Book of Common Prayer (the Protestant prayer book), or using any other form, either in public or in private, the first time that he is discovered, shall be deprived of his benefice for one year, and suffer imprisonment in jail for six months. For the second offense he shall be put in jail at the Queen's pleasure."

To be let out whenever she thought proper. For the third offense he was to be put in close confinement for life. This is the lady that was unwilling to draw the sword, and this was the very year she was crowned Queen—in a very year. She scarcely waited a year.

TAUTE WAS THE SOBRIQUET.

Reluctant to draw the sword. So much for the priests; now for the laymen. If a layman was discovered using any other prayer book except Queen Elizabeth's prayer book, he was to be put in jail for one year; and if he was caught doing it the second time he was to be put in prison for the rest of his life. Every Sunday the people were obliged to go to the Protestant church, and if any one refused to go, for every time that he refused he was to be fined twelve pence. It would be about twelve shillings of our present money—and besides the fine he was to suffer imprisonment for a year. Is this "the star of freedom," says Mr. Froude, "was never to pale. The queen drew the sword in the name of the Lord Omnipotent." But, my friends, freedom meant whatever was in Elizabeth's mind. Freedom meant slavery tenfold increased, with the addition of religious persecution to the unfortunate Irish. If this be Mr. Froude's idea of the star of freedom, all I can say is the sooner our eyes are fall from the gaze of heaven and of the world's history the better.

CONDITION OF THE IRISH CHURCH.

In what state was the Irish Church? Upon that subject we have the authority of the Protestant bishops. There were, in 1834, two hundred and twenty parish churches in Meath, and after a few years there were not only one hundred and five of them left with the roofs on. "All over the kingdom," says Leland, "the people were left to perish in their religious worship, and under the pretense of obeying the orders of the State they would let the most valuable furniture of their churches, which was acually exposed to sale without decency or reserve." A number of lugubrious witnesses were let loose upon the Irish churches and upon the Irish people by Elizabeth, and they not only robbed them and plundered their churches, but they shed the blood of the bishops and priests and of the people of Ireland in torrents, as Mr. Froude himself acknowledges.

He tells us that after the rebellion of the Geraldines, and when the estates which the fair province of Munster was reduced to, that you might go through the length of the fairest point of Kerry until you came into the eastern plains of Tipperary, and you would not as much as hear the whistle of a plowboy or behold the face of a living man, for the pestilence and the famine were filled with the corpses of the people, and the country was reduced to a desolate wilderness. The pestilence and the famine went emphatically. Even he, case-hardened as he was—for he was a writer of plunderers and persecutors himself—acknowledged that the state of Munster was such that no man

COULD LOOK UPON IT WITH A DRY EYE.

Sir Henry Sidney, one of Elizabeth's deputies, speaks of the condition of the country as follows:

"Such horrible spectacles are to be beheld as the burning of villages, the ruin of towns—yea, the view of the bones and skulls of the dead, who partly by murder and partly by famine, have died in the fields. It is such that hardly any Christian can behold it without tears."

Her own Minister—I take his testimony of the state to which this terrible woman reduced unhappy Ireland. Stratford, another English authority, says: "I know it was bad, and very bad in Ireland; but that it was so terrible I did not believe."

In the midst of all this persecution what was still the reigning idea in the mind of the English Government? To root out and to extirpate the Irish from their own land, and added to which was now the element of religious discord and persecution. It is evident that this was all in the minds of the English people. Elizabeth, who, Mr. Froude says, never dispossessed an Irishman of an acre of land, during the terrible war which she waged in the latter days of her reign against O'Neill, threw out such hints as these: "The more slaughter there is the better it will be for my English subjects; the more land they will get." This is the reason why Mr. Froude tells us never confiscated and would never listen to the idea of confiscation or property. This woman, who, during the Geraldines were destroyed, took the whole of the vast estates of the Earl of Desmond and gave them to her English settlers. She confiscated millions of acres. And in the face of strict truths recorded and stamped by history, I cannot see how any man can come forward and say of this atrocious woman-she-whatever she did she intended it for the good of Ireland.

WHAT HAPPENED AFTER ELIZABETH'S DEATH.

In 1602 she died, after reigning 41 years, leaving Ireland in the hour of her death one vast slaughter-house. Munster was reduced to the state described by Spenser. Connaught was made a wilderness after the rebellion of the Clanricardes or the Burkes. And finally, in 1641 the Irish rose in rebellion. So they did. Now he makes one statement, and with the refutation of that statement I will close this lecture. Mr. Froude tells us that in the rising under Sir Phelim O'Neill, in 1642, there were 36,000 Protestants murdered by the Irish. This is a grave charge, and if it be true, all I can say is that I would not defend, and a fortiori, for I have not the learning nor the eloquence of Mr. Froude. He says one little thing of Bess, however, that is worthy of remark:

"Elizabeth was reluctant to draw the sword, but when she did draw it she never sheathed it until the star of freedom was fixed upon her throne for life."

It is true that Ireland rose under Sir Phelim O'Neill. At that time there was a Protestant parson in Ireland who called himself a minister of the Word of God. He gives his account of the whole transaction, and says that it was not Ireland, but the Irish, who were guilty of the extraordinarily flattering prospect.

The Ledger of the same date says: We visited the hydraulic claim on A. Yoell, located on the Mokelumne Hill road, near Table City, and found that gentleman busily engaged with two hydraulic pipes, carrying down one hundred inches of water, washing away a twenty to thirty-foot bank.

CALAVERAS.

The Calaveras Chronicle of the 23d is filled with long accounts of quartz mining in a summary. Rock of unprecedented richness was struck in the Wolverine mine at Railroad one day last week. At the depth of 230 feet the ledge has widened on to about four feet, and our informant states that not a piece of quartz can be found that does not show free gold.

Simpson and Hoffman have purchased a number of claims on Tunnel ridge, and will consolidate them into one mammoth hydraulic.

Another ledge has recently been discovered near the Hudson that prospects large. A shaft has already been sunk upon it to the depth of thirty feet.

The recently discovered pocket vein at Anderson Flat, alluded to a few weeks ago, still retains many visitors. The owner, Camille, was about to abandon the mine, the ore having petered, but finally concluded to sink a few feet deeper, hoping to see a change. Sinking one foot deeper, his hopes were suddenly realized, finding ore worth from $1 to $20 per pound. All who have been at the mine state that it is the richest ore ever seen in this county.

On the opposite side of the ridge from the San Bruno is the Good Hope, a mine that has been perseveringly and successfully worked for several years. A number of levels have been run on its ledge, at different depths, from all of which high grade ore was obtained.

A short distance from the Good Hope is the Smith & Lewis mine, a late discovery, but one that has paid handsomely from the outset. Two shafts have been sunk upon the ledge to the depth of 60 or 70 feet, the rock taken out paying all the way from $40 to $100 per ton. The lead is wide, well defined, and every pound of it will pay for hauling and crushing.

The shaft in the Grasshopper is 92 feet deep, and rock has been taken out of it that milled $150 per ton. The mine is furnished with steam hoisting works, but the volume of water recently encountered is so great that the machinery cannot keep it down, and work has had to be suspended for the present.

NEVADA.

The Nevada City Transcript of November 23d says: Recently great activity has been manifested in the sales of gravel mines on the ridge. It is probable that $200,000 worth of property of this description has been transferred within the last twenty days. The sales are all made in good faith, and the purchases by parties who propose to work the claims. This shows that the days are over for extensive gravel claims increasing among capitalists, and that there is a great deal of confidence in this class of mining. In Eureka, Bloomfield and Bridgeport townships are many expensive gravel claims fully developed, but in each of them the work ships are long ranges on the lines of the deposits, and are not opened, while there are others in which the tunnels have been run, but the claims cannot be worked to advantage until they have gone much deeper. Some of all the classes have been recently sold, and the desire to procure this ground by different parties has increased quite a considerable in the market.

A gentleman from Nye was at the Rising Star mine, Bloomfield township, a few days since informs us that they have struck a rich body of ore, yielding free gold and rich sulphurets. He informs us that they have enough rock on the dump to keep the mill at work over a year.

The Downs mine, near Sutter Creek, was sold a few days since to Morgan & Co., of the Oneida, for the neat sum of $400,000.

PLACER.

The Placer Herald of the 23d says: James Laird has taken into his claim a few San Francisans, who have placed a tenstamp mill on the ground. The prospects are promising, pounding gravel and cement out again and finding with good prospects of a dividend-paying mine from the start. The mine lies near Pino, in the vicinity of Perry's store, and is the first one found in the old channel, where so fine was kept.

The Oregon Mountaineer says: "On Sunday night the snow commenced falling, and with but few intermissions has continued to fall ever since. As far as the eye can see is one vast sheet of snow from base to summit of the mountains. The road to the Blue Mountains and Grand Ronde Valley it has been impossible to travel for the last week. The Indians of the Siletz reservation remain throughout the winter, it will be hard work for them to get out. They have plenty to surrender to be fed and clothed by the Government, and our friends who are there interested, we pray that Providence will let us a little, and give us considerable more sensitive between times."

BURNETT'S COCOAINE.—A single application renders the hair (no matter how stiff and dry) soft and glossy for several days. It is concealed, by all who have used it, to be the best and cheapest hair dressing in the world. Prepared by Joseph Burnett & Co., of Boston, and for sale by druggists generally at 75 cents per bottle.

Wholesale Market Report.

MONITOR OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, Nov. 29, 1872.

FLOUR—The local trade has been rather quiet, while for export only a limited inquiry has existed. Quotations show a decline since our last report. We quote local brands: Extra at $5 12½@$5 25; superfine at $4 75@$4 87½; Interior and foreign brands—Extra at $4 62½@$4 75; No. 1 at $4 25.

WHEAT—The market has been firm, but at all times dull. During the week the receipts have been very large. Quotations at $1 42½@$1 50 for shipping; $1 45@$1 50 for milling; $1 40@$1 42½ for poor. $1 45 for milling; $1 47½@$1 50 for good to choice. The local market is unchanged. On the 30th inst. and 2d prox. the usual semi-monthly sales of wheat will be held at the Merchants' Exchange. On the 30th inst. the usual call

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

IRELAND.

An Unchristian Christian.

The Irish Judge of Appeals in Chancery, Mr. Justice Christian, has again belied his name and acted to a manner which indicates little love for peace and good-will. The public has not had time to forget the violent tirade which he pronounced on the bench against the Land Act as being too favorable to the tenant. The latest escapade is, however, still more serious, consisting not of a speech, which might have been the result of sudden annoyance, but of a pamphlet containing a deliberate attack on the Irish Lord Chancellor and the officers of his Court. Even allowing, for argument's sake, that Lord O'Hagan's Court might have been better managed (reaps cling which we pronounce no opinion), the publication of an anonymous pamphlet by a judge was not the best mode of applying a remedy. Lord O'Hagan, the first Catholic who has been Chancellor for several centuries, has won golden opinions from all classes and creeds for his impartiality as a judge, and ruled by the House of Lords. The general impression is that Chief Justice Christian, who now at last avows the pamphlet, must resign. It is expected that he will be succeeded by the Master of the Rolls, whose place rumor already assigns to Mr. Attorney-General Pallas.—Universe, December 7.

Reddin's Treatment.

The statement made by Mr. Reddin, the recently discharged Fenian prisoner, and in which he charged the English prison authorities with cruelty, has just been corroborated by two witnesses. They state that they saw Reddin twice kicked by the warders in so brutal a manner that he bled from his wounds. The Catholic chaplain represented these facts to the Governor, but the latter contented himself with expressing disapprobation of the conduct of the warders, without taking any steps to punish them, absolving himself under the extraordinary plea that the warders were sure to be deep the charge, and that they would no doubt single Reddin out for worse punishment if their conduct was reported to the directors. It is a strange circumstance that while Reddin was subjected to all the tortures (already detailed) with the object of testing the correctness of his assertions that he was suffering from paralysis, a London pickpocket, who was confined in the same prison, and was suffering from the same malady, was, unchallenged, allowed to go to hospital—Cork Herald, December 4.

The Tenant Right Bill.

An important meeting of the Athy Tenants' Defense Association was held on Wednesday. A Captain Morgan, who presided, described an interview of the Duke of Leinster in seeking to induce his tenants to sign lease barring away their rights under the Land Act. He said that in England, where he came from, there was a general idea that the Irish were a disconnected nation. He asked if it were possible they would be contented when they saw such tyranny as this resorted to. Letters were read from Mr. Cogan, M. P., for Kildare, and from Baron de Roebeck, in which they disapproved of the hostility towards the Duke of Leinster. Much dissatisfaction was expressed by the meeting with these documents, and there was a general wish expressed that at the next election a tenant farmer should be returned for the county.

The Dublin Castle correspondent of the Times says that the next Fenian trial will be one of the most important that has occurred here. The chief witness for the Crown will be Corydon Power, who was a member of the Fenian Executive, and who has been in the pay of the Government for some time. Power is said to have made a full confession of his connection with the Fenian conspiracy, and to have implicated a number of persons who have hitherto escaped suspicion. Among those who will be arrested on his evidence are Mr. Daniel Reddin, the discharged political prisoner, now in St. Vincent's Hospital, Dublin, has addressed a letter to Mr. Smith, M.P., explaining why it is he is compelled to refuse admission' orders to Mr. Redden. The writer says that Mr. Redden's case is deplorable, and he cannot allow his mental powers to be overtaxed by prolonged interviews upon a subject which must cause a strain upon almost the only power left him —that of thinking as a reasonable being. Both Mr. Redden's lower limbs are paralyzed, as is also his left arm; and the doctor fears that his treatment at Millbank and Chatham has so weakened every function of his system that any mental excitement might reduce his mental to his present physical condition.—Universe, December 7.

Public Exhibitions.

The beautiful exhibition which for six months delighted all who have visited Dublin was closed with appropriate ceremony last Saturday. A fine ode by an Irish poet, Dr. Waller, was sung on the occasion. The exhibition was, we are glad to learn, a complete success, and has created general regret. The portrait gallery was especially interesting, containing as it did a large number of likenesses of men who devoted their talents, and some of them their lives, to Ireland. It was a strange sight to see among them a member of the royal family opening a gallery containing portraits of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, Tone, Emmet and others, who loved their native land "not wisely but too well."—Universe, December 7.

Orange Patriotism.

At a dinner given in his honor by the Orangemen of Dublin, Mr. Johnstone, M. P. for Belfast, stated that Orangeism is not declining. He mentioned that it was only that very day that the Orange organization gave its sanction to the establishment of a Provincial Grand Chapter for India. He remarked that it was needless to say that in their ranks they had no Fenian sympathy. He asserted that if it were necessary to maintain the principles of Orangeism, which had been achieved himself or his friends, he knew were ready, as were the men of old, to man the walls of Derry or take their stand on the banks of the Boyne. These observations were received with loud cheers.—Cork Herald, December 5.

Attempted Murder in Clare.

On Tuesday night, December 3d, a respectable farmer named Edward Fountain, resided about three miles from Crusheen, and ten from Ennis, was returning home from Clonroad fair, accompanied by his son, who, when entering the private landing to their own house, the father was fired at and slightly wounded in the arm. The assault is supposed to have been caused by a dispute about the right to portion of the common, and three brothers named McAllen have been arrested on suspicion. They are sons of a man who has been Fountain's principal opponent in a dispute which is still pending in one of the superior law courts.

Religious Ceremony in Dublin.

DUBLIN, December 4.—The Church of SS. Michael and John was solemnly reopened to-day. Cardinal Cullen presided at the ceremonial. The edifice has undergone thorough reinbelishment and decoration, and the interior now presents a most chaste and beautiful appearance. The ceremonies commenced with a grand Pontifical High Mass. The Lord Bishop of Maitland was the celebrant. At the conclusion of the High Mass his Eminence delivered an eloquent sermon suitable to the occasion.

Fatal Accident.

TRALEE, December 3.—A sad and fatal accident has just occurred here. The hoist of P. D. O'Sullivan was being elated, a rude scaffold of two planks joined, extended across the roof, and on this the contractor, Thad Driscoll, Tralee; James Pierce, Tralee, laborer; James O'Brien, Limerick, slater; and James Cusack, laborer, were at work. The rope broke, and the men were thrown to the ground. Driscoll was killed on the spot. Cusack is beyond recovery, and the other parties lie in a very precarious condition.

A Forlorn Hope.

The Telegraph is not without hope that Irishmen may yet be enticed to become quite as loyal citizens of the British empire as are the Scotch. Ireland's sons, it says, have shone in every department of human [illegible] exploration, skill and valor to extend and preserve its empire. But, as a whole, Ireland does not impart that happy vigor to the United Kingdom which is the lot of the Scotch. We must aim at, concludes the Telegraph, as the ideal of Irish patriotism, a willing union with a collective imperial life.

ENGLAND.

Love in Lancashire.

Mary Landers, the daughter of a working overseer in a Lancashire foundry, has been remanded by the magistrates on a charge of having attempted to commit suicide by drowning herself in a reservoir who wooed her as the Moor did Desdemona. She loved him for the dangers he had passed, but married him for a return kind sentiment from the Shakespearean motive or any other. He affected a tendresse, however, after just the lightness that not entailed by found two pounds fifteen shillings and a woman scorn'd. Mrs. Landers complained her pa'pa, who had made a figure in his younger days as an amateur bruiser, and whose fight Jackson had not yet forgot the meeting. The overseer took up the cause of his beloved child with enthusiasm. He went in for a week's private training, and then he went in for the pensioner. They met. Mr. Landers opened the interview with a set of mild arguments becoming a parent and a friend. The supernatural lobster smacks this saw'dy for timidity, and waxed stormy as Ancient Pistol. But when Mr. Landers promptly knocked him down he entirely changed his first impressions. The successor ended in the complete overthrow of the false one. Kitty, the fallen neighbor's head next day, and will probably not turn up until his eyes have, to use the metaphor of a language now just growing obsolete, "grown out of mourning." The father went home in triumph, and, though the reporter does not say it, very possibly embraced his daughter, exclaiming, "Thou art avenged." If he did it failed to satisfy Mary. She kind for the deserter, but pining wouldn't bring him. Then she tried drowning. The occurred the trouble one way or other, but unhappily the world is full of people who won't mind their own business and let other people alone. When the disconsolate creature threw herself into the side two men happened to be otter hunting on the river bank. The must needs interfere, dragged her out, and, as the law has enacted ont, and, one of the two being a magistrate of inexorable virtue, she was committed for trial, and now for the attempt to make away with the life which had grown intolerable. As we have said, she has been remanded. Now the name of the pensioner who has caused all this misery is Patrick Kelly. Is there any body qualities the audacionality of this hero? Ah, Paddy! Since you stole Owen Cleves, going to Jersey herself off the Lenadian steep, was blarneyed into a second marriage by Dunmachus the bibliseller, as Addison truly relates in the Spectator, your amorous countrymen have been ever most dangerous to the sex.—Freeman.

Crime in Ireland.

Were any district in Ireland found to be in the condition that a portion of the North of England is at the present moment, what a cry-out there would be among the entire class of English journalists! Nothing less than a suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act would, to their mind, be sufficient to deal with such a state of things and of course Irish ignorance and priestly rule would be made to bear the blame of the whole matter. Just imagine, dear reader! Eight men and women are in Durham jail awaiting the charges of wilful murder, and upon one of the latter—Mrs. Cotton—the whole Crown prosecuting force has committed a score of murders. There are murderous assaults, infanticides, attempts to shoot and stab, and poisonings in every direction. There is a double murder case at Pickering, the atrociously brutal character of which is almost incredible; and at Stalaes, at the other extreme of the same district, there is a mysterious disappearance which looks very much like the result of foul play. So numerous have the cases of crime become in the district in question that the newspapers published there have become almost chronicles of bloodshed. Some of the journals have had the boldness to ask what can be the cause of the epidemic of murder. The Dissenters say, with by far the most numerous body of religionists in that part of England. Others urge that the arguments too often applied to Irish crime, the wholesale murdering must be attributed to English ignorance and the Dissenting ministers' rule. But we do not believe this. The real cause of all such atrocities is the Sabbath-desecration which many people have commenced to call upon the Government to recognize, Godlessness and idleness are always certain to beget crime. — London Universe, December 7.

English Republicanism.

An extraordinary assemblage has just been held at Sheffield in order to establish a "National Republican Brotherhood." The proceedings were a mixture of sedition and folly. It is recorded that a tricolor flag has been adopted as a first step. We notice that the Hon. Auberon Herbert is in great favor with these people, although he is the brother of an earl. We think that this gentleman need not have refused to assist the anarchy movement; he certainly might have declined without writing a letter implying that the man in custody murdered Sergeant Brest, the entire affair being clearly free from any connection with murder. The Republican Brotherhood have publicly declared that Fenians and Home Rulers may join their ranks. With Fenians we have nothing to do; but we are for Home Rule we earnestly hope that the advocates of that measure will not allow themselves to be drawn into any movement which is opposed to religion or to the constitution. Home Rulers do not ask for the establishment of a republic in these countries, but for Ireland and (if she asks it) Scotland having the making of their own laws. As such an arrangement would promote interhas been national harmony, its advocacy ought to be looked upon as the truest loyalty.—Universe, December 7.

Messenger Caged and Canonized.

Monsignor Capel preached on Monday night, December 2d, at Clifton, on the duty of confession, said a body of churchmen known as High Church had determined to break through prejudice and not be bound by the mere assertions of people, and had turned their thoughts and their reading to the matter and they were compelled to vow that the confession of sin and the word of absolution was one of the conditions that were stated in the early ages of the Church ere they could be forgiven. They would assuredly not call their testimony in question when they knew that they were Englishmen who had been brought up in their universities with the traditions of three centuries cutting them off from the Catholic Church, and having studied the matter with earnestness of purpose, and with a desire to examine, they had been obliged to come to the decision and Roman Catholic Churches in asserting those two conditions of confession and absolution taken by them to the utmost satisfaction both of the population and of the Government inspectors of schools, and by those who had just been appointed Minister of Instruction, issued a decree ordering that no two many books by removing duplicates to St. Petersburg. It is not the first time the Jesuits have robbed us of our literary property. They had already ransacked the Russia thousands of volumes, and many old libraries, possessed of the most rare and valuable works, confiscated the rarest works of art in Pusary, Warsaw, Wilna and other places, seized private collections of antiquities, exported both Polish and Lithuanian archives of immense value to us, which now lie uselessly in the Capital of the Czars, and probably by means of the Government historian to alter and pervert in order to prove the right of the Czar to Poland. The library of Wilna possesses very valuable works of the most ancient writers, and the Jesuits collected and raised other antiquities. It appeared very strange to those who heard the Minister say that the Russian Government had no desire in the case the Government should be disposed to establish a University in Lithuania. It must here mention that for some time a report was circulating that the Government intended to establish a University in Wilna for the Russification of the Polish people. Perhaps this project is not yet finally given up. The result of the recent negotiations between Russia and the Holy See, it is said, have resulted in the creation of six bishops, four of them in partibus infidelium. The exiled Catholic bishops have been offered by the Russian Government partial liberty by providing they will sign a document resigning their sees and promising to reside in St. Petersburg, in the Ukraine, or in Russian soil. They have all refused. The present Archbishop of Wilna, Archbishop of Warsaw, the Bishop of Wilna, the Bishop of Plock, and the Bishop of Thomir.—Catholic Opinion.

The famous stone from the ruins of Glendalough, which the Rev. Father Dutton took away with him after his recent visit to Ireland, has been used as the corner stone of the new church of St. Joseph's, Newark, N. J.

THE MONITOR.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 4, 1873.

The Cross contains the following with reference to the attempt of Russia to destroy the native tongue of Poland, as a step towards the denationalization and religious perversion of the people: Tolstoy, the Minister of Public Worship, has lately issued an order that all the priests in Lithuania; his anxiety was simply limited to inquiry about the progress in the Russian language. According to the official report, he has been quite satisfied with the introduction of rural schools, in which, as it is reported, he found great improvement in that language. They cannot, however, deny that the children are perfectly unable to understand what the teachers say, stay willingly in the schools, and do not speak, or even answer to the questions put to them. After some time, however, they accustom themselves to the use of the Russian language, and in a few years gain a little knowledge of reading, nay, become capable of catalog a work, but because they fall the Sadolinae Government, Pius IX. long his kind from door to door! Thus writes Antonelli, and thus he has written for twelve years. This was his tone with Napoleon III. when at the height of his power. The Cardinal Secretary of the Holy Father deserves the thanks of the Christendom for the fearless manner in which he defends the Catholic dignity.—Universe, December 7.

Insulting the Pope.

At Milan, on November 17th, the Attorney-General of the Court of Appeal, Generate of the Gazzettino Rosa for an article on St. Peter's Pence, which contained, it was alleged, matter offensive to the Sovereign Pontiff. This is the first time that the law of the "Papal Guarantees" has been enforced. If it were put in force with firmness and sincerity all through Italy, one could almost say that nearly all the journals of the Government, no less than those of the Democratic party, would be sequestrated. I was told that the Italian Catholics believed in those two conditions, not because they could find evidence for them, but because the Church told them they were the conditions of the forgiveness of sin.

Stop the "Conversions."

The Guardians of the Poplar Union have at length appointed a chaplain to the workhouse for the very munificent salary of £50 a year, and have also "set apart a room, to be fitted up as a chapel for his ministrations." But, lest we should consider this in the light of an act of justice, we are told we were forced that "the Guardians determined to do this in order to decrease the number of Roman Catholic inmates, as they fancy many persons have professed, Romanism in order to be allowed to go and attend their chapel. But as there is now a chapel in the house, and a priest attached, this will no longer be necessary." We are at a loss to understand how the appointment of a chaplain can be supposed to decrease the list of Catholic inmates, even though it may possibly prevent the latter from being converted during their Guardians are entitled to no thanks; the ratepayers, though, might venture to think that they are entitled to some consideration. On their own showing, the

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JAN. 11.
January 5—Sunday—Octave of the Epiphany. St. Telesphorus, Pope and Martyr.
6—Monday—Epiphany of our Lord.
7—Tuesday—Of the Octave.
8—Wednesday—Of the Octave.
9—Thursday—Of the Octave.
10—Friday—Of the Octave.
11—Saturday—Of the Octave. St. Hyginus, Pope and Martyr.

THE MONITOR:
TRE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....JANUARY 4, 1873.

THAT PEDDLING BUSINESS.

That contemporary of ours which has kindly taken the Church under its special protection, has thought fit to attempt a reply to the article headed "Wretched Peddling," published by us last week. Although we have not the least desire to create a dispute, or engage in a controversy, we can hardly be expected to leave this "reply" pass without notice. The writer of it has introduced matter quite extraneous to the question at issue, and, in a measure, compels us to follow his example.

In the first place, he insinuates that we believe there is a rivalry between THE MONITOR and the Journal over which he presides. He may safely take our assurance that not alone do we refuse to entertain such an idea ourselves, but we make it a point to disencourage it in others, whenever we get a chance. Indeed, we would really feel intensely humiliated if we saw evidence that such an idea was to any extent prevalent. We do not want our contemporary as a rival or an antagonist, and would prefer looking for quite another class of journal to fill either capacity. We have our reasons for this, but we do not propose to trouble our readers with a recapitulation of them just a present.

We are complimented by being told that we are "an able exponent of Irish National opinion, and of the tenets of the Democratic party;" but then we are reminded that we have only occasionally a very good article on Church matters." We cheerfully plead guilty when charged with the high misdemeanor of espousing the cause of Irish nationality, or of advocating Democratic principles; and perhaps we might go so far as to admit that there is not much chance of our contemporary being accused of either offence; but we respectfully urge that we deal with Church matters more than occasionally,—whether ably or not, our modesty forbids us to say. This much, however, we will maintain, that every number of THE MONITOR contains a great deal more Catholic news, home and foreign, than is to be found in any one issue of our contemporary. Moreover, in the most important matters we are generally a week ahead, as any reader comparing the two papers can see for himself.

But to come to the immediate point—about "Wretched Peddling." Our contemporary defends the publishing of the pamphlet containing Father BURKE'S lectures, in the very face of an explicit prohibition by that Very Reverend gentleman, on the ludicrous ground that the edition was not a correct one! That circumstance, indeed, nobody will dispute; but that it was the best the "Catholic Publishing Company" could give, it is really requiring too much to ask us to believe that they would not have printed and sold a perfect edition if they could have done so. Equally absurd are the statements that the pamphlet was "nothing more than a newspaper containing the five lectures," and "an advertisement of the book to follow." Father BURKE, no doubt, ought be very thankful to the Journal for the great price they have taken to advertise his book.

Our contemporary ventures a retort. It says that Mr. P. M. HAVERTY requested the HAVERTY papers to abstain from reporting the lectures in full; that his demand was authorized by the reverend orator; that, nevertheless, almost verbatim reports were printed in New York and elsewhere; finally, that we copied one of these reports. The inference sought to be drawn is, of course, that we, too, have been guilty of disregarding Father BURKE'S wishes. Father BURKE declared he had no desire whatever to interfere with the liberty of the press, but he distinctly and emphatically forbade the issue of the lectures in any but newspaper form. The Reports reported were tolerably extensive, and, to a certain degree, correct—were we expected to garble or abbreviate them when transferring them to our columns? Supposing, however, that we did commit a wrong in printing the lectures, the "Company" which ostensibly runs our contemporary not only published them in the columns of their newspaper, but besides that printed, published and hawked about the thoroughfares a two-bit pamphlet containing them. If our conduct was an offence, what in the name of goodness must theirs be?

With regard to the charge of peddling two newspapers together at church doors—one sheet being, we suppose, expected to compensate for certain deficiencies in the other—our contemporary does not make a very candid defence. It falls back upon the "Trustees." We are told that it has never come to its knowledge of any one of the "Trustees" that their paper has been sold at church doors. This statement is, we are sorry to say, a downright quibble. We are not able to declare positively whether, since the creation of the "Company" with its "Trustees," its large "capital" and the big "dividends" that may possibly accrue sometime before the Greek calends, any members of our contemporary, were disposed of as described; but we can declare very positively that such was done repeatedly while one or more of the gentlemen now rejoicing in the high dignity and tremendous responsibility of trusteeship, had control of the Journal.

Our contemporary will, we fancy, regret having ventured upon any answer to the charges we made other than a confession of guilt, accompanied with a protestation of a desire to behave better in the future. It should have meekly and piously "owned up" and confessed it was rather unfortunate that the very first venture of the "Catholic Publishing Company" should have been in the piracy line. The piece of friendly admonition we wish to conclude with is an assurance that the "canal of a soapshyta, though praiseworthy, is often neither prudent nor advantageous, and that it is an extremely difficult thing to devote oneself to the guardianship of the Church and yet keep a sharp watch out for the chance of making a dime. The idea of doing these two things together is Yankee, but by no means Catholic.

THE OVERLAND MONTHLY.

The Overland Monthly is a magazine we should like to see prosper, as it is "native to the soil." Simply because it is a California publication and represents the literary culture of the Pacific Coast, we are willing to overlook a few blemishes in it and condone a few of its faults. But for some time past it has been so bad that it has called for an unpardonable weakness to show any consideration for it. If, in such an article as the present, we can judge, its great want seems to be a competent editor—a man with taste enough to distinguish between a good paper and a bad, and with sufficient acquaintance with modern literature to prevent plagiarisms from being palmed off upon him as original articles. The Monthly is now somewhat of a clique concern. A little knot of men—some of them of less than mediocre abilities—have it all to themselves, and they are slowly but surely killing it. They have fastened it like leeches and are sucking out its life-blood. They have influence enough, it would appear, with the proprietors to prevent any new comer from thrusting himself among them and contributing to the pages of the magazine. Either this is the case, or else the managers, aware that they are destitute of literary discernment, are afraid to accept articles from any but men known to themselves, or men whose papers have, at one time or another, been deemed worthy of insertion by an editor. As one proof of the mismanagement of the Monthly, and, in our opinion, a sufficient one, we shall merely state the fact, that the second paper in the last number, a story entitled "The Ghost of Rummelsburg," which appears as original, and is actually signed with the "author's" name, was published in the London Family Herald some sixteen or eighteen years ago. We cannot but admire the cool impudence of the "Bohemian" who could perpetrate such a scandalous cheat, and we cannot but regret the verdant innocence of the editor who could be deceived by it. We would recommend the proprietors of the Monthly to engage an editor, or to break through the mystic "ring" of contributors and endeavor to get at least a few fresh ones who have not yet been hackneyed into Bohemianism.

OUR STORIES.

To-day we commence the publication of "The Hibernian Nights' Entertainments," by SAMUEL FERGUSON, Esq., M. R. I. A. The stories therein contained are exceedingly dramatic and well told, and the author, although a Protestant, has taken care not to speak in any way disparagingly of the Catholic Church. Would, indeed, that his example were more generally followed by his co-religionists who figure in the world of literature. So much of THE MONITOR is devoted to the grave matters appertaining to discussion of the great political and religious questions of the day, that we feel we ought to set apart a few columns for gratifying the tastes of those who love lighter reading. We know very well that all of our readers do not want to study the progress of affairs in France, Spain, Italy or Germany, week after week. Nor are all utterly devoted to watching the fluctuations in the tide of politics at home. No small number look to THE MONITOR for matters wherewith to while away a leisure hour or two, in harmless recreation. We are determined to do everything that we can to meet their wishes, let the grumblers complain as loudly as they may. Our troubles are pressed, and, in fact we have rather too much of this light reading on hand.

We perceive by the last number of the Dublin Nation, that the author of "Nedlar, the Banker; or, the Lazys of this world," has recommenced his labors, which were some time ago interrupted by illness. Of course we, too, must resume publication of the story, for it wouldbe quite a error to cease it half way through. The tale is in every respect worthy of space in our columns. We shall, therefore, give each week a small installment of each story, and so continue until both are finished.

Publications Received.

We have received from Mr. M. Flood, 665 Market street, a copy of "Haverly's Irish-American Illustrated Almanac." It is a very gay-go pamphlet, containing about one hundred and twenty pages of letter-press, adorned with many well executed wood engravings. Among the latter we may enumerate views of Blarney Castle; St. Patrick's Cathedral and Christ Church, Dublin; Cromwell's Fort, Drogheda; Malahide Castle, Street in Galway, Tintern Abby, Devlinsh Ireland, Tower of Croom. The Gap of Dunloe, Carrick Castle, St. Canice, etc. The reading matter is excellent, all of it referring to Ireland, its history, traditions, and celebrated characters.

J. P., Marysville.—Patrick Henry, was born in Studley, Hanover county, Virginia, May 29, 1736.

CATHOLICITY IN AMERICA.

To the Editor of The Monitor—Sir: In a Thanksgiving Sermon delivered in this city, at the Congregational Church, by the Rev. Mr. Dwinell, pastor, and published in the Sacramento Union of the 21st inst, the preacher, in pointing out some of the "deep and subtle dangers" that threaten our Government, made the following allusion to the Roman Catholic Church:

"Yonder, also in Rome in America, the Mormon, seeking favor from Catholic politics, political power; seeking through American gold and the votes of Asiatic immigrants, and interesting herself in the land of the free for three emergencies."

In relation to the above charges, an "Inquirer" asks if the reverend gentleman to answer the following questions:

First—In what respect does the Roman Catholic Church resemble Mormonism, in seeking unhallowed ends and political power?

Second—In what point is the teaching of the Roman Catholic Church subversive of a Republican form of Government?

Third—When and where did this great Roman conspiracy, subversive of American principles, originate, and who was its originator?

Give authorities, and oblige.

After some days of study, the reverend gentleman published what he called a reply, in the Sacramento Union, which paper declared its columns closed to further discussions on the subject. As in his reply he did not at all make good the grave charges brought by him against the Roman Catholics of America, I shall hold him bound, as a Christian minister, either to establish or withdraw them. He charges Roman Catholics of America with seeking, for unhallowed ends, political power. How does he make good these sweeping accusations?

In his reply to "Inquirer," he says "Inquirer" cannot have been inquiring long, or with much success, if he is still ignorant that Romanists have been very active to secure political power in this country, and that where they have succeeded, as in some of the large cities, they have gone to New York on account of their religion." Does he hold that it is unlawful for Catholics, because they are Catholics, to seek political power? Or would he, in his charity, debar them, because of their religion, from those rights guaranteed by the Constitution to all American citizens, irrespective of creed or country? What then are the unlawful ends for which the Roman Catholics of America seek political power? The reverend gentleman answers by stating that for the last ten years the amount of money received by the Catholics of the State of New York for the support of their orphan asylums, and other eleemosynary institutions, was greatly in excess of that received by all other denominations put together. Without intending to question Mr. Dwinell's truthfulness, I hold myself free to doubt the accuracy of the above statements, as he has not given any authorities. Moreover, some American magazine—for example, Putnam's—greatly exaggerate the amount of money appropriated by the Legislature of the State of New York for Catholic institutions, as was clearly established before the State Conventions held in the years 1867 and 1868. (See Debates in the New York State Conventions, in 1867 and 1868.)

Suppose, however, that the above statement is true: it only proves that Catholics have more orphans and destitute in their institutions than all other denominations put together, as the State law provides, in its appropriation, that asylums should receive for their orphans and destitute a certain per capita. (See Acts of the New York State Legislature for 1867 and 1868.)

Does the reverend gentleman hold to solicit private donations and State aid to build, and maintain and support such asylums and other charitable institutions, is unlawful, unbelievers and subversive of American principles? If so, perish American principles, because principles that can thus be subverted deserve not the name. Or does he mean that orphans and destitute, because they chance to be Catholics, are to receive no charity, no care, no sympathy from a free and generous people? If so, his teachings are opposed to the spirit of our Constitution than are the teachings of that Church which he so unjustly assails. "Ill is he to commend another charge Roman Catholics with making "direct and open war" on American free schools. If by direct and open war he means an attempt to subvert education in America, I repudiate the charge as unjust and unfounded. If by direct and open war, he means an attempt to secure an equal division of the public school funds by just and lawful means, I agree with him, and fully subscribe to the same charge. In the New York Freeman's Journal, from which he quotes. With many eminent Protestant statesmen, such as Governor English Premier, Lord John Russell, Gladstone and others, Catholics maintain that education should be based and conducted on true religious principles. They consider that godless schools from the highest to the lowest, and practices of religion are altogether excluded, and look upon such as unlawfully remoulding the character of their children—of teaching them the principles of the Catholic faith and true morality. If, as Mr. Dwinell suggests, "the moral power of the educational system has been weakened, if secularity absorbs the energies of the masses, if materialism is creeping in," I ask, is there aught to what source must be attributed the spread of such evils but to that irreligious and secular system of education of which he is such a zealous defender? He states that the Catholic educational institutions of America are not sufficient to meet the wants of our people, and in support of such statement quotes from Mr. Brownson. But the sentence and bedouin-like proclivities of our contemporary, I have, as a mere outsider, nothing to do. Yet, as one of the more liberal in the wishes of Catholic institutions of America, irrespective of creed or country? What then are the unlawful ends for which the Roman Catholics of America seek political power? The reverend gentleman answers by stating that for the last ten years the amount of money received by the Catholics of the State of New York for the support of their orphan asylums, and other eleemosynary institutions, was greatly in excess of that received by all other denominations put together. Without intending to question Mr. Dwinell's truthfulness, I hold myself free to doubt the accuracy of the above statements, as he has not given any authorities. Moreover, some American magazine—for example, Putnam's—greatly exaggerate the amount of money appropriated by the Legislature of the State of New York for Catholic institutions, as was clearly established before the State Conventions held in the years 1867 and 1868. (See Debates in the New York State Conventions, in 1867 and 1868.)

Suppose, however, that the above statement is true: it only proves that Catholics have more orphans and destitute in their institutions than all other denominations put together, as the State law provides, in its appropriation, that asylums should receive for their orphans and destitute a certain per capita. (See Acts of the New York State Legislature for 1867 and 1868.)

Does the reverend gentleman hold to solicit private donations and State aid to build, and maintain and support such asylums and other charitable institutions, is unlawful, unbelievers and subversive of American principles? If so, perish American principles, because principles that can thus be subverted deserve not the name. Or does he mean that orphans and destitute, because they chance to be Catholics, are to receive no charity, no care, no sympathy from a free and generous people? If so, his teachings are opposed to the spirit of our Constitution than are the teachings of that Church which he so unjustly assails. "Ill is he to commend another charge Roman Catholics with making "direct and open war" on American free schools. If by direct and open war he means an attempt to subvert education in America, I repudiate the charge as unjust and unfounded. If by direct and open war, he means an attempt to secure an equal division of the public school funds by just and lawful means, I agree with him, and fully subscribe to the same charge. In the New York Freeman's Journal, from which he quotes. With many eminent Protestant statesmen, such as Governor English Premier, Lord John Russell, Gladstone and others, Catholics maintain that education should be based and conducted on true religious principles. They consider

MONUMENT TO THE "FOUR MASTERS."

The Completion of "The Annals of Ireland."

To the Editor of The Monitor.—Sir: It is said that a certain nation of old was Facarious morum—freely translated, "negligent of her own;" and it is reported that somewhat about two and a half centuries ago a celebrated English Attorney-General for Ireland adopted the phrase as applicable to the inhabitants of this country. That he was right then, it is true, and that his observations would have been just, thirty years ago, is equally true—when in the metropolis and its vicinity our only outdoor statues or monuments were those of four or five Kings, only one of whom had ever visited this country. There were also those to Nelson, and our countryman, Wellington; while within-doors, under the dome of the Royal Exchange, and at the Royal Dublin Society, and in the House of Lords' Chamber in the Bank of Ireland, we had more statues of obsolete Kings; but, in the former locality, there were also two great Irishmen, Grattan and Loone, as well as a former Under Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant, the inventor of the "Drummond Light." Even in the provinces, some good monuments have been erected to commemorate private worth or public service, especially those to Lord Clare, Sir Jonah Barrington, Sir Boyle Roche, Sir T. Molyneux, at Armagh; Lord Belfast, in his native town; Father Mathew, in Cork; O'Connell, at Limerick and Ennis; Spring Rice, and Fitzgibbon, likewise at Limerick; Colo, at Enniskillen; Walker, at Londonderry; O'Malley, at Castlebar; William the Third, at Boyle; and some others. There was erected in Dublin Gardens to O'Connell and Thomas Davis, both from the chisel of our lamented countryman, Hogan, within the last the latter of which he and I had to remove from a public institution—that would no longer suffer his genius—as exists, as it now does, a noble specimen of art, over his grave, in the cemetery of Mount Jerome. We have also erected a statue to Tom Moore (such as it is); and the lawyers and physicians have not been unmindful of their dutiful remembrance, and have erected memorials to O'Loghlan, Plunket, Crampton, Marsh and Corrigan, in their respective localities, and we shall soon have one to Stokes, and I hope, in time, one also to Graves. There was likewise erected, during his lifetime, and in a prominent position in the city, a statue to the late William Dargan, "by his friends and admirers." Later still we pass on to those of those truly distinguished Irishmen, Goldsmith and Burke—two of the noblest specimens of the genius of our present great sculptor, John Foley—and which require no word of comment. Our last public statue erected in the metropolis is the clever work of Mr. Farrel, to the memory of William Smith O'Brien. All the same time we have not been neglectful of others—not our countrymen; such as the Prince Consort, and two of our most worthy Viscroys, both good friends of Ireland, although viewing their duty from different points of observation, the late Duke of Bedford, in addition to John Mitchell Kemble in Mount Jerome; and the Cumberland Pillar, at Parsonstown. The people of Trim and Caledon likewise have their columns.

I hope to live to see, not only the monuments now in process of preparation to O'Connell, Henry Grattan, but also those of Swift, Usher, Moore, and others, attracting the public eye, and, as a means of education and instruction in all their times, labors, philanthropy and patriotism—just as the early Christian Fathers erected crosses, as story pictures on which taught the unlettered people of the day the rudiments of our Faith; and also (by tradition) reminded them of the noble and pious men by whom they were put up. The people of the Emerald Isle still so erect one to the chivalrous Sarsfield, standing by the Treaty Stone on Limerick bridge. A noble work, and very long ago, erected to the memory of Dr. Keating, the historian, and author to that of Dr. Lanigan. Yet I need scarce tell you that did not Evan Oliver Pole has not been forgotten in the Courts of Law, although I doubt whether the great Brehon's views of jurisprudence would quite coincide with those often promulgated beneath the bar-relief of his bust.

It is not necessary to prolong this portion of my appeal by more than reference to the beautiful piece of sculpture commemorative of Provost Baldwin, in the Hall of Trinity College; and to the bas-relief of Bishop Beddley, as well as the busts of learned Irishmen in the noble Library of our University, for to the various memorials in the Cathedrals of Christ's Church and St. Patrick's, in which latter stands those of Curran, Ball, Ogle, and the heroic Captain Boyd, and in the former those of Sweyd, Bishop Lisdaay and Bishop Synge. In Marlborough-street Cathedral we have that beautiful monument of the good Archbishop Murray, and also the bas-relief to the memory of another worthy Irishman, Peter Purcell.

Thus we may for the future claim exemption from the satire of the spherum sidereum (starlight too) for we have honored kings, rulers, warriors, sailors, statesmen, clerics, lawyers, doctors, poets, philosophers and musicians. Still, sir, I perceive a want in Irish nationality in this respect, and will continue to do so until I see something done to erect a monument to the Four Franciscans—the brothers Michael and Conary O'Clery, Peregrine O'Clery and Ferfasa O'Mulconry, who, in a cottage within the inclosure of the convent of Donegal, between the years of 1632 and 1636, with infinite labor, collected, collated, compiled and transcribed "The Annals of Ireland," from the records of the earliest time to the year 1614.

Ever since then, those "Annals," either in the original Mss., or through the translations of Dr. O'Connr, Owen Connellan and John Donovan, have been the basis of all Irish historic works—the Archæological and Celtic Societies' publications, the chief antiquarian works of the country—and all attempts at Irish histories, either popular or classic, from the handbooks and guide-books, depend on these "annals" for the bulk of their ancient material; and so with all private collections, manuscripts and antiquaries, home or foreign.

But what have we done for those "Four Masters," and their translators and associates? Nothing! The O'Connrs are in their tombs at Balinagar. Eugene O'Clery, who transcribed those Annals, rests in Glenserin, John O'Donovan, who translated, and, with the assistance of the Ordnance Survey, under Mr Thomas Larcom, associated those marvelous Mss. into a volume—is beautifully printed in ——, at the University Press, and splendidly published in two editions by Hodges and Smith—is also with his comrade and fellow-laborer in our chief metropolitan cemetery, Conellan (and Conray, his publisher), the editor of a portion of those Annals, are no more. The O'Clerys, children of Magh O'Gara and Coolavin, to whom the Annals were originally dedicated, has long been gathered to his forefathers, and his race is almost extinct. Of those to whom O'Donovan dedicated his edition of the perfect Annals in 1851, the worthy scion of a noble stock, the Marquis of Clidare, alone remains. Of the others appended in his Preface, Lord Donraven, the Rev. Dr. Todd, George Petrie and James Hardiman —who, if alive, would take part in this appeal—have all gone to their rest. But there are others referred to in O'Donovan's Preface—especially Larcom and O'Donel—who, I trust, will help on my endeavors to erect not only the Latin adage already referred to, but the rebuke conveyed in the following touching lines of J. F. O'Donnell, in his "Memories of the Irish Franciscans:"

> He cromlech, cairn or monument
> Commemorates the mighty Few
> They sleep unhoused—their great task,
> Imagined by inviting faith, is Vain!
> Not the brave hand they served is well
> Aids, "shall it be less for ever more?"
>
> A Celtic cross, around whose arms
> Shall creep in many a graceful twist,
> Christ's blessed vine and shadowed wall,
> Where beast the sun against the base
> Of gray and raised Interlace!

Now what should be done? Some years ago I spoke with the Rev. R. Mulreany, than C. C. and now P. P. of the parish of Donegal, respecting the propriety of inserting a small tablet, with the name of the "Four Masters," into the wall of the ruined convent in that locality, and simply specifying that in is visitally those celebrated Annals were compiled. Mr. Mulreany was shortly afterwards transferred to another parish, and the persons to whom I appealed here expressed their opinion, in the usual phraseology, so other detrimental to Irish interests, that "the time had not come;" or that "it might be thought premature;" "the feeling" I dare say was upon I would, like the poor cat in the adage."

Even if this appeal is unsupported, a few enthusiastic friends may be able to achieve the more humble work. But I would prefer that the State, City and County Taxes for said Fiscal Year are now due and payable at the office of the undersigned, (Room No. 1, City Hall, and that the laws in regard to their collection will be strictly enforced.

Taxes will become DELINQUENT on the first MONDAY in January, 1873, and unless paid prior thereto, 8 per cent. will be added to the amount thereof.

A. AUWIN,
Tax Collector of the City and County of San Francisco.

n3-1d

TO TAX-PAYERS.

TAXES DUE OCTOBER 28, 1872.

DELINQUENT JANUARY 6, 1873.

THE USUAL DELAY, CONFUSION AND AN noyance experienced by Taxpayers will be very much increased this year, as both PERSONAL and REAL Property has to be paid upon at the same time. This being the case the undersigned would most respectfully suggest that Taxpayers furnish this office with a schedule of their property at an early day. Where there have been no changes the tables of any previous year are the most convenient and correct memoranda.

A. AUSTIN, Tax Collector.

d28-1m

CARPETS.

NOTICE.

CASH CARPET STORE,

716 MARKET STREET,

IS NOW OPEN, WITH A

GRAND DISPLAY

—OF—

NEW AND ELEGANT GOODS!

Purchased expressly for the

CASH CARPET STORE.

Goods will be offered for about

Half the Price Asked Elsewhere.

TERMS—CASH ON DELIVERY.

o16-tf

SHAW'S PECTORAL SYRUP,

For the Cure and Relief of all

PULMONARY COMPLAINTS.

Ask your druggist for it. It will not fail to cure you.

s28

SMOKY CHIMNEYS.

Martha's Patent Chimney Tops,

OR VENTILATORS.

BY CALLING ON

W. O. BURTHA,

CORNER OF

Turk and Taylor Streets.

And have one of the PATENT CHIMNEY TOPS put on your house, and if you will find it impossible to have your chimney from your stove or grates. They are warranted, or no pay. They are A SURPRISER! Seven throughout the State.

n30

Plumbing, Gas Fitting and General Jobbing.

Strict attention paid to repairing Stoves, Grates, etc.

n27 Lucy Roch repaired and sold 1300 to 1854

OUR MOTTO

"Quick Sales and Small Profits."

WESTORE

—OF—

A. HUSING & CO.,

PURISSIMO, - - San Mateo County,

DEALERS IN

Groceries, Provisions, Dry Goods, Hosiery, Cutlery, Willow-ware, Tinware, Hardware, Patent Medicines, Wines, Liquors, Cigars, Tobacco, Clothing, Crockery, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, etc.

Teas and Salt Meats made Specialties.

Come and see us. We mean business.

A. HUSING & CO.

n19

Wanted.

A RESPECTABLE MIDDLE-AGED CATHOLIC housekeeper, to take charge of and educate a widower's children in music, etc. Address stating salary expected—which must be moderate—and giving references, "S." at this office.

d26-tf

EDUCATIONAL.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers.

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

These who complete the Classical Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, that of Accountis.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible.

While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, our own language receives special attention.—The daily exercises of the Students is in Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly discussed and corrected in the class-room.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half-yearly in advance).

Board, Tuition and Washing.....$250 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines.....8 00
Vacation at College.....40 00
Day Students.....50 00
Modern languages, Music and drawing form extra charges.
Studies will be resumed on the 15th of August.
REV. B. JUPITIN, President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORated according to the laws of the State and sanctioned by the Superior Authority of the Church, commenced the Twenty second Annual Session on MONDAY, August 5th, 1872. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once.....$10 00
Board and Tuition, per session of ten months.....150 00
Washing, per quarter.....12 50

Pupils entering after the commencement of a term are charged for only such portion of it as may remain. No deduction, however, will be made if the absence is during the usual vacations, or for sickness.

Parents may rest satisfied that every attention, consistent with the spirit of a firm but mild government, will be paid to the comfort of the young ladies placed at this Institution.

All correspondence of the young ladies will be subject to the inspection of the Superioress. Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the

LADY SUPERIOR.

oct8

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE,

Rohnerville, Humboldt County, Cala.

CONDUCTED BY THE FRIERS OF THE CONGREGATION OF THE MOST PRECIOUS BLOOD.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED ON A PLEASant and healthy portion of the Eel River Valley, and near the town of Rohnerville. It is accessible from the railroad depot by a regularly daily stages, and from other parts of the State by steamers landing at Eureka, Port Kenyon, Areata, etc. The course of studies is classical, scientific and commercial. Splendid grounds have been secured for teaching the natural sciences.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR:

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

For board, lodging, tuition, washing and mend.....$250 00
Entrance Fee, to be paid only once.....10 00
Graduation Fee.....20 00

DAY PUPILS.

Senior class.....$40 00
Junior class.....30 00

Vocal and instrumental music, drawing and modern languages, will form extra charges. The two sessions of the scholastic year commence respectively on the 1st of August and the 20th of January.

For further information address the Secretary,

REV. FATHER ANTHONY, or
Very Rev. P. HENNEBERY, Superior

N. B.—One of the Rev. Fathers of the College will be in attendance every day of the week preceding the 1st of August at 633 Market street, over the Metropolitan Hall, to meet parents who wish to send their children to the College. He will also accompany the pupils on their journey.

DAY SCHOOLS

Boys and Girls.

THE SISTERS OF MERCY HAVE JUST COMpleted a commodious School Building on First street, near Howard, where they will open their various branches of an English education.

A Boys' School is being prepared on Harrison Place and will be placed in charge of competent teachers.

Both Schools will be opened on the 15th inst., 1871.

SISTER MARY B. RUSSELL,
Superior of Sisters of Mercy.

San Francisco, May 27, 1871.

PIANOS.

C. R. HALL'S

PIANOFORTES.

MANUFACTORY,

NO. 12 TYLER STREET,

SAN FRANCISCO.

PIANOS TUNED AND REPAIRED IN THE best manner and at reasonable rates.

Call and examine for yourself.

s30-3m

SAN JOSE MARBLE WORKS.

E. POWER,

CENTER STREET.....North of Julian,

WEST SAN JOSE.

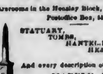
Warerooms in the Monday Block, Santa Clara Street.



STATUARY, TOMBS, MANTEL-PIECES, HEAD-STONES, FOUNTAINS

And every description of MARBLE WORK.

DESIGNING, MOULDING, Etc.

And every style Wood and Stone Carving.

s29

HO! FOR THE HOLIDAYS!

Christmas and New Year's Gifts.

Japanese Goods,
French Fancy Goods,
Musical Albums,
California Jewelry.

The largest assortment in the State, and at the most reasonable rates, at

ROBERT MAYERS BAZAAR,

S. E. cor. Montgomery and Pine Sts.,

n26 1m SAN FRANCISCO.

COLLINS' PARAGRAPH PATENT.

The New Testament of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, the Authorized Version, in paragraph form. Brevia text, 544 pages, large type, price $1 50. Text same edition for private use Protestants in America. The reader will find it not only a great pleasure, but much benefit, to be freed from the chapter and verse divisions, which often impede the sense and sometimes destroy the pleasing. Make small, neat and convenient for the pocket. Sent by mail, postpaid, upon receipt of price, by COLLINS & HANNAY, 370 Broadway, New York.

d14-1y

EDUCATIONAL.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,

BENICIA, CAL.

Conducted by the Sisters of St. Dominic.

THIS INSTITUTION AFFORDS EVERY FAcility for the acquisition of a refined and solid education. The Academy was founded in 1850, and now ranks among the most successful Educational Institutions in the State.

The course of instruction embraces the English, French, Spanish and Latin tongues; Rhetoric, Elocution, Composition, Natural and Modern History; Geography, Arithmetic, Algebra, Geometry, Book-keeping, Botany, Natural Philosophy; Chemistry, Astronomy, Astronomy and Use of Globes; Vocal Music, Instrumental Music, including the Piano, Guitar and Organ; Writing, Drawing, Painting in Water Colors and in Oil; Tapestry, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, etc., etc.

TERMS:

Board and tuition (payable half-yearly in advance).....$175 00
Washing.....45 00
Entrance fee.....10 00

EXTRAS:

Placed and use of instrument (payable half-yearly).....20 00
Organ.....30 00
Guitar.....30 00
Vocal music in class.....20 00
Drawing and Painting.....20 00
Drawing and Painting in Water Colors.....30 00
Use of Bed.....10 00
Board during Vacation.....20 00
School books at current rates.

Each young lady is required to be provided with—Four sheets, two mattress ticks, two pillow cases trimmed with crimson for Winter, and for Summer, a silk dress (colored); six changes of underclothing, two morning dresses, dressing-case, fine shoes, fine pillow slip, per blankets, a comfortable, two pillows, four towels, four colored bed spreads, two white bed spreads, two napkin-rings, two white table cloths, one dozen napkins, one silver table spoon; also, a supply of note-paper, envelopes and postage stamps.

The Academic Year consists of two equal terms, the first commencing August 19th, the second, Jan. 2nd.

Pupils of any religious denomination will be received, but for the sake of uniformity, all are required to be present at the regular religious services of the Institution.

Pupils entering after the commencement of a term are charged for only such portion of it as may remain. No deduction, however, will be made if the absence is during the usual vacations, or for sickness.

Parents may rest satisfied that every attention, consistent with the spirit of a firm but mild government, will be paid to the comfort of the young ladies placed at this Institution.

All correspondence of the young ladies will be subject to the inspection of the Superioress. Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the

LADY SUPERIOR.

oct8

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE,

Rohnerville, Humboldt County, Cala.

CONDUCTED BY THE FRIERS OF THE CONGREGATION OF THE MOST PRECIOUS BLOOD.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED ON A pleasant and healthy portion of the Eel River Valley, and near the town of Rohnerville. It is accessible from the railroad depot by a regularly daily stages, and from other parts of the State by steamers landing at Eureka, Port Kenyon, Areata, etc. The course of studies is classical, scientific and commercial. Splendid grounds have been secured for teaching the natural sciences.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR:

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

For board, lodging, tuition, washing and mend.....$250 00
Entrance Fee, to be paid only once.....10 00
Graduation Fee.....20 00

DAY PUPILS.

Senior class.....$40 00
Junior class.....30 00

Vocal and instrumental music, drawing and modern languages, will form extra charges. The two sessions of the scholastic year commence respectively on the 1st of August and the 20th of January.

For further information address the Secretary,

REV. FATHER ANTHONY, or
Very Rev. P. HENNEBERY, Superior

N. B.—One of the Rev. Fathers of the College will be in attendance every day of the week preceding the 1st of August at 633 Market street, over the Metropolitan Hall, to meet parents who wish to send their children to the College. He will also accompany the pupils on their journey.

HOTELS.

Removal.

THE SECOND STREET HOUSE

Has Removed to 115 Second street, Northeast corner of Minna. Furnished Rooms to let with or without board, on the most reasonable terms. Call and examine.

M. O'NEIL,
n2 Proprietor.

CENTRAL HOTEL,

615 AND 616 SANSOME STREET,

Between Broadway and Pacific.....San Francisco.

THIS NEW, LARGE AND COMMODIOUS Hotel has been thoroughly repaired and is well known proprietor, M. KELLY, late proprietor of the Brooklyn House, would respectfully invite his numerous friends and acquaintances to patronize him. Thankful for past favors, he solicits a continuance of their future patronage. There is a first-proof safe in the House, where money and valuables can be kept at the risk of the proprietor.

The Central House Coach will be at each car and steamboat landing, to convey passengers to the House free of charge.

Price of board and all the times.

Parties seeking for first class rooms in the House, will please call and see for themselves. Please send your address and I will attend to them, or they will be sent and forward them to their friends who are in the city, with pleasure.

The strictest attention will be paid to the comfort and convenience of guests.

MICHAEL FARRELL, Proprietor.

1056-f

RAILROAD HOUSE,

Corner of Sansome and Pacific streets, San Francisco,

IS NOW OPENED BY

P. CASSERLY,

(Late of the Tremont House) where he will be happy to see his friends and the public generally.

The House is thoroughly fitted up to the times, and the Bar will be supplied with the choicest brands of Liquors and Cigars, and no pains will be required to please all visitors.

The best accommodations will be afforded to the traveling public.

Board and Lodging per week.....$10
Board and Lodging per day.....2
There is a first-proof safe in the House, where money and valuables can be kept at the risk of the proprietor.

oct28 P. CASSERLY, Proprietor.

FRANKLIN HOTEL,

616 AND 618 PACIFIC STREET,

Between Sansome and Montgomery.....San Francisco.

HUGH CURRAN.....Proprietor.

Board, per week.....$5
Board, per month.....20
Single Meals, 25 cents. Lodging, 25 cents.

Family accommodations at reasonable rates.

Passengers and baggage conveyed to the Boat and Cars free of charge to the house and from the same.

A City Directory, and all the city papers kept.

WESTERN HOUSE.

GENERAL STAGE OFFICE,

Marysville, California.

GEORGE WAFFLE.....PROPRIETOR.

o6-3m

BOOTS AND SHOES.

M. GUERIN,

PRIZE BOOT MAKER,

207 and 209 Bush street,

Between Montgomery and Kearny.....San Francisco.

ALL THE LATEST STYLES ON

Boots and Shoes

—FOR—

Ladies, Misses, Children and Infants.

Also to order at the shortest notice.

Also, a full assortment of Herbert's Patent Boots.

T. J. BRODERICK,

(Late Broderick & Kent,)

IS RE-ESTABLISHED AT

NO. 24 THIRD STREET

West Side, two doors below Stevenson.

T. J. B. begs to acquaint his old friends and public that he keeps a large stock of

Parisian Boots and Shoes,

At lower rates than any other house in the city. Ladies' and Children's Boots and Shoes made to order, and perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch. A fit guaranteed.

Please call and judge for yourself, at oct15-tf No. 24 Third Street.

J. BOLLMAN. Treasurer

BOOT AND SHOE STORE

—OF—

SELLERS & KISH,

No. 19 Third Street, corner of Stevenson.

KEEP A CHOICE AND well selected assortment of Ladies', Gents' and Children's Boots and Shoes, which we offer at very low prices. Boots made to order; a fit guaranteed in every instance. Repairing done in the best manner and at reasonable rates.

The Viceroy of India has in person given order for the release of "Hour of the Watirie, who has been over 10 years ago murdered nearly of the soldiers at an outpost near Buono."

The marriage of Prince Leopold with Princess Helena is now definitely announced to take place for ceremony could they are of this.

A marriage is spoken of between the Princess Tyrra of Denmark with the Prince Royal of Hanover, son of the ex-King George. The bride is the sister of the present Queen of England and of the present Empress of Russia.

A telegram from Constantinople says: The Greek clergy and population of Roumania demanded the deposition of the Patriarch Cyrillus, who disapproves of the secession of the Bulgarian schism. The Greeks are afraid of disturbances, and have placed the Greek quarters in military charge.

Mr. Newdegate, M. P., recently addressed a public meeting at Aberdeen on the subject of monastic and conventual institutions in Great Britain. Resolutions approving of a Parliamentary conduct, and appointing a committee to cooperate with him, were unanimously passed.

The two thirty-five ton guns known as the "Cockrich Infants," have met with an accident. One was being craned up when tripped through the hawsers, and crashed through the vessel—knocking a hole in it bottom. The lighter—the Marlborough—sank with both guns on board, as they went under twenty-seven feet of water, but have since been recovered.

Ex-seventeenth annual sermon in aid of Bright's Orphanage was preached on Sunday last by Father Stagni, at the church of Francis Xavier, Dublin. In sixteen years one hundred male and female orphans have been supported or provided for. All the funds of the institution are applied to clothing and feeding the —almost—utterly destitute—children and, very little being spent in display.

A Gentleman Insult.

In the Ministry are bolivered to be busily engaged preparing a memorandum on Parliamentary action of the old standing Irish dimands, English and Irish journalists could not next session a further installment of Irish Land Legislation. The Ministry may employ their time just now in digesting out candidly and publicly what is the real grievances which still exist in Ireland. We have already given the Government credit for more than full credit for what they have done with regard to the undeniably unjust. Imposture—the Irish Church and the Land Question. We have told the Government on what points the people of United Kingdom accept their settlement of the education question. But there are other grievances which Ireland of smaller moment, but of unjust and tantalizing, to which the Imperial Parliament must sooner or later direct its attention. One cause of just discontent, which perhaps require more than legislative action than any other, and which is connected with the existing mode of appointing High Sheriffs and Magistrates.

The recent appointment of the High Sheriff of Cork, in the South of Ireland, is a very good case in point of what is to occur anywhere, and of what occurs in every district where sufficient of the good power of Protestant ascendency Papistry continues to exist to perpetrate its gross insults on the religion of Christ and to shock the people's sense of decency. Some time ago we adverted to the fact that a person, High Sheriff of Cork (although that he had placed upon the Bench of Justice as an active Catholic, and he was persecuted for it by an infuriated mayor and fined £5. Grave offense in the Catholic country, was it not? It is the duty of the High Sheriff to name three persons every year for the office of High Sheriff. The names of these three gentlemen are sent up to the Dublin Castle for approval. The first named his generally selected, and the whole three names are published. Well, Mr. Barke, the first named has, by birth, education, property, position, eminently qualified and fitted for the office. What has happened? Not one of these names has been insulted; they have not been even asked to be published; and an out-and-out Conservative has been set up instead. Question, Who is responsible for the act of this wanton insult upon the Catholic gentry of the county Cork? The Castle or the Judges? The Judges who had to set in their lot, we understand, a gentleman of the county, and what is known in Dublin Castle society as a Christian. In the significance of the term is well known. It would not, perhaps, be well to a detailed definition of it. Our Irish readers will understand it. So much the Irish system of appointing High Sheriffs.

Such insults as the above have been publicly offered to the Catholics of Ireland by Tyrconne days we do not deny, but we certainly underrate the nature, courage and determination of Irishmen if such are now allowed to continue.—London Nonconformist, December 7.

FOREIGN NEWS ITEMS.

Mgr. Lahis, Bishop of Tournay, is dead. He was in his eightieth year.

The Rev. R. Gaffney, C. C., Kinmore, has been thrown from a car and slightly injured.

The Rev. J. Higgins, Anglican curate, Ennion, has been received into the Catholic Church.

At a recent meeting at Waldorf, near Bonn, more than eight hundred persons joined the Moyence Catholic Association.

Besancon and Orleans are the only Dioceses in France where the use of the Roman Liturgy is not the rule.

The exiled Archbishop of Carcass has written a pastoral letter in which he eloquently the present persecution in Venezuela.

The Papal Nuncio has sent a protest to the President of the Federal Council at Berne against the resolutions passed at a recent "Oecumenical Conference" at Basle.

A bust of the Emperor of Germany has replaced the crucifix which has hitherto graced the presidential chair of the Lansing Court of Assize.

The venerable pastor of Garristown, Rev. P. Keane, died on November 21st, after forty-two years' service as curate and priest in that parish—the only one in which he ever officiated.

The beautiful church in John street, Dublin, of the Augustinians, was completed on Sunday, December 1st, by the consecration of the pail of bells purchased by a gentleman whose name is withheld) at a cost of £1,500.

Bismarck has come so far successful out of the "Oecumenical crisis" in Prussia (but it said he has abandoned, for the present, his scheme for flooding the House of Lords with Liberal parliamentarians and bankers.

The Viceroy of India has in person given order for the release of "Hour of the Watirie, who has been over 10 years ago murdered nearly of the soldiers at an outpost near Buono."

The marriage of Prince Leopold with Princess Helena is now definitely announced to take place for ceremony could they are of this.

A marriage is spoken of between the Princess Tyrra of Denmark with the Prince Royal of Hanover, son of the ex-King George. The bride is the sister of the present Queen of England and of the present Empress of Russia.

A telegram from Constantinople says: The Greek clergy and population of Roumania demanded the deposition of the Patriarch Cyrillus, who disapproves of the secession of the Bulgarian schism. The Greeks are afraid of disturbances, and have placed the Greek quarters in military charge.

Mr. Newdegate, M. P., recently addressed a public meeting at Aberdeen on the subject of monastic and conventual institutions in Great Britain. Resolutions approving of a Parliamentary conduct, and appointing a committee to cooperate with him, were unanimously passed.

The two thirty-five ton guns known as the "Cockrich Infants," have met with an accident. One was being craned up when tripped through the hawsers, and crashed through the vessel—knocking a hole in it bottom. The lighter—the Marlborough—sank with both guns on board, as they went under twenty-seven feet of water, but have since been recovered.

Ex-seventeenth annual sermon in aid of Bright's Orphanage was preached on Sunday last by Father Stagni, at the church of Francis Xavier, Dublin. In sixteen years one hundred male and female orphans have been supported or provided for. All the funds of the institution are applied to clothing and feeding the —almost—utterly destitute—children and, very little being spent in display.

A Gentleman Insult.

In the Ministry are bolivered to be busily engaged preparing a memorandum on Parliamentary action of the old standing Irish dimands, English and Irish journalists could not next session a further installment of Irish Land Legislation. The Ministry may employ their time just now in digesting out candidly and publicly what is the real grievances which still exist in Ireland. We have already given the Government credit for more than full credit for what they have done with regard to the undeniably unjust. Imposture—the Irish Church and the Land Question. We have told the Government on what points the people of United Kingdom accept their settlement of the education question. But there are other grievances which Ireland of smaller moment, but of unjust and tantalizing, to which the Imperial Parliament must sooner or later direct its attention. One cause of just discontent, which perhaps require more than legislative action than any other, and which is connected with the existing mode of appointing High Sheriffs and Magistrates.

The recent appointment of the High Sheriff of Cork, in the South of Ireland, is a very good case in point of what is to occur anywhere, and of what occurs in every district where sufficient of the good power of Protestant ascendency Papistry continues to exist to perpetrate its gross insults on the religion of Christ and to shock the people's sense of decency. Some time ago we adverted to the fact that a person, High Sheriff of Cork (although that he had placed upon the Bench of Justice as an active Catholic, and he was persecuted for it by an infuriated mayor and fined £5. Grave offense in the Catholic country, was it not? It is the duty of the High Sheriff to name three persons every year for the office of High Sheriff. The names of these three gentlemen are sent up to the Dublin Castle for approval. The first named his generally selected, and the whole three names are published. Well, Mr. Barke, the first named has, by birth, education, property, position, eminently qualified and fitted for the office. What has happened? Not one of these names has been insulted; they have not been even asked to be published; and an out-and-out Conservative has been set up instead. Question, Who is responsible for the act of this wanton insult upon the Catholic gentry of the county Cork? The Castle or the Judges? The Judges who had to set in their lot, we understand, a gentleman of the county, and what is known in Dublin Castle society as a Christian. In the significance of the term is well known. It would not, perhaps, be well to a detailed definition of it. Our Irish readers will understand it. So much the Irish system of appointing High Sheriffs.

Such insults as the above have been publicly offered to the Catholics of Ireland by Tyrconnel and other defiled days we do not deny, but we certainly underrate the nature, courage and determination of Irishmen if such are now allowed to continue.—London Nonconformist, December 7.

FURNITURE, BEDDING, ETC.

HENRY FRANK,

Wholesale and Retail Manufacturer and Dealer in

BEDDING AND FURNITURE,

CONSTANTLY ON HAND

Spring, Hair, Wool, Moss and Pulu

MATTRESSES,

BIT COMMERCIAL STREET,

Below Front.....SAN FRANCISCO

Or The Cheapest Place in the City.

All work guaranteed to give satisfaction. sa2

JACOB SCHREIBER,

MANUFACTURER AND DEALER IN

BEDDING AND FURNITURE,

830 WASHINGTON STREET,

Directly opposite Washington Market, San Francisco.

Goods sold at wholesale and retail at remarkably low figures.

N. B.—Particular attention paid to Renovating Bedding and Repairing Furniture.

sa3-1m

GOODWIN' & CO.,

—IMPORTERS, MANUFACTURERS & DEALERS IN—

RICH AND COMMON

FURNITURE, BEDDING, ETC.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,

No. 312 Pine Street, Above Sansome.

Prices Extremely Low.

Goods [Custom Made.

Or Are decidedly opposed to State Prison Monopoly and in favor of FREE LABOR.

ALSO AGENTS FOR THE CELEBRATED F. G. LICHTE & CO. PIANOS. o16

C. P. R. R.

Commencing Sunday, December 1, 1872,

And until further notice, Trains and Boats will leave SAN FRANCISCO:

7.00 A. M. (daily)—Atlantic Express Train (via Oakland) for Sacramento, Merryville, Marysville and Portland. Connects at Sacramento with Train leaving at 6.30 P. M.

7.15 A. M. (daily)—Oakland Local Train (via Broadway wharf), connecting at Valley Junction with Train for Knight's Landing, Woodland and Davisville.

2.00 P. M. (Sundays excepted)—A. P. and W. C. R. R. for Pescadero (from Broadway wharf, Oakland).

2.00 P. M. (Sundays excepted)—Train for Hayward, Alameda and Encinal.

3.00 P. M. (daily)—San Jose Passenger Train (via Oakland), stopping at all way stations.

4.00 P. M. (daily)—Train (via Oakland) for Lathrop, Modesto, Merced, Tuolumne and Los Banos, connecting at Lathrop.

4.00 P. M. (Sundays excepted)—Oakland Local Train for Haywards, Alameda and Encinal.

4.00 P. M. (Sunday excepted)—Alameda and Oakland steamer (from Broadway wharf), connecting at Alameda Mole with Train for Alameda.

5.15 P. M. (daily)—Overland Express Train (via Oakland).—Through Freight and Accommodation.

OAKLAND BRANCH.—Leave San Francisco—7.00, 8.00, 9.00, 10.00 A. M.; 12.00 M.; 1.00, 2.00, 3.00, 4.00, 5.00, 6.00, 8.00, 11.30 P. M. Leave Oakland—6.00, 7.00, 8.00, 9.00, 10.00, 11.00 A. M.; 12.00 M.; 1.00, 2.00, 3.00, 4.00, 5.00, 6.00, 7.00, 9.00, 11.00 P. M. Leave Alameda—(for San Francisco)—6.30, 8.00, 9.30, 11.00 A. M.; 1.30, 3.00, 4.30, 6.00, 7.30, 9.00, 11.00 P. M. Leave Oakland—8.00, 9.30, 11.00 A. M.; 1.30, 3.00, 4.30, 6.00, 7.30, 9.00, 11.00 P. M. Leave Haywards—8.30, 10.00 A. M.; 2.30, 4.00, 5.30, 7.00, 8.30, 10.00 P. M. Leave Hayward's—8.30, 10.00 A. M.; 2.30, 4.00, 5.30, 7.00, 8.30, 10.00 P. M.

ALAMEDA BRANCH.—Leave San Francisco—7.00, 8.00, 9.00 and 11.00 A. M.; 1.00, 2.00, 3.00 and 5.00 P. M. Leave Alameda—6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30 and 11.30 A. M.; 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.30 and 6.30 P. M.

Leave Fruit Vale—6.35, 7.35, 8.35 and 11.35 A. M.; 1.35, 2.35 and 3.35 P. M.

* Sundays excepted.

Y. M. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass'r and Ticket Ag't. A. N. TOWNE, Gen'l Sup't.

C. DESMOND

PRACTICAL HATTER,

No. 5 New Montgomery Street,

GRAND HOTEL BUILDING.

SELLING OFF HIS LARGE AND VARIED Stock of Hats and Caps at greatly reduced rates, in order to make room for a large invoice now on hand.

Will and Must be Sold,

No bargains may be expected. You can assure your self of the truth of this statement by a perusal of the following prices, which comprise every variety of the FINEST SILK HAT to a 25 cent CAP.

Hats made to measure and delivered within the hour.

No Hats are for what others sell.
They are made of the best material
Of perfect shape and glossy finish
Those from DESMOND fit to Nature.

C. DESMOND, 5 New Montgomery St.,

n4-3m Under the Grand Hotel.

JUBILEE! 1873.

Better than Pictures is the

NEW YORK OBSERVER

The First American Family Newspaper,

50 a Year with the Jubilee Year Book.

SIDNEY E. MORSE & CO.,

37 Park Row, New York.

SEND FOR A SAMPLE COPY. o2

The Most Rev. Dr. Duggan, Bishop of Clonfert, Captain Nolan and other distinguished in the matter of the Galway election, have filed their plea of "Not Guilty."

SEWING MACHINES.

SEWING MACHINES.

WILLIAM B. HIGGINS,

NO. 941 THIRD STREET, (WEST SIDE),

Bet. Howard & [illegible] San Francisco.

WHO HAS HAD THE ADVANTAGE O

THE HIBERNIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.

Continued from Third Page.

to the bastard Deputy—a knife in the churlish hound's throat! I would to God and Saint Columb Kill, I had him and his ten best men-at-arms before myself and my three foster brothers for one short hour in the gap of Barnamona. Ha! Henry, if ever we ever get back to the Black Valley, we will make a bright bonfire of Ardmullen castle for this!"

"If I would rather see Glenwhirry," answered Henry, "and the blue mountains of Dalaradia—ah, Art! if we were once in merry Antrim, we would soon drive the black strangers from the country of Hugh Buy!"

"It'd give the best year of my life," cried Art, "to hear the war-cry of our house once more upon the hills of Killultagh—Mother of God! for one note of the gathering of Clanaboy!"

"Lamh dearg aboo!"

Cried a, velce low but tremulously earnest, at their backs. The three young men leaped to their feet with a simultaneous cry that drowned the clash of iron, and standing before them, beheld in their attendant the well-known features of their forester and clansman, Turlogh Buy O'Hagar, the bard of Tualloghogo.

For a moment the old man stood gazing with inexpressible love on the three noble youths so long and hopelessly denied to the longing eyes of their people; then rushing forward cast himself on his knees before them, and clasping their hands successively in his, pressed them to his lips and to his heart, in silent but adoring affection. "My son, my prince, my king!" he at last articulated, "my joy, my glory, my hope and promise!—branches of the old tree of my blessed! lights of valor and generosity! do I again behold your fair faces, and the glean of your bright heads like waving gold? Long, long have I planned and pondered, long have I labored and suffered, what no price but the hope of seeing you again before I died could have bribed me to endure. I have been the servant of the Saxon, and the slave of the Saxon's servant for your sakes, and, if need were, I had been the menial of the slave's slave, that I might at last put my old eyes to rest upon the face of your royal father's sons! Save for you, my princely masters, I have brave news from the north. Maguire and O'Donnell are stirring like stout gentlemen in Roscommon and the Brenny, and the earl is drawing his country to a noble head at the Blackwater: Donell spaniagh holds Idrone by a strong; and the bold O'Byrnes overbang the very city walls. Three thousand Kocks to the gap of Glenree.. MacCarthy Mor and Desmond are ready to take up the game in Munster; and it wants but Owen O'Donnell in Ballyshannon and O'Neill in Castlereagh to rise with the whole north at the head of the creal ,queen as shall ere long beat the ridge crown from her withered brows, and blow across the seas those robbers of our lands and snarer of our chieftains' children, never to trample on our blessed soil again,"

"Ah, Turlogh," cried O'Donnell, "thou tellest us a tale we have already heard in the Castle of O'Toole ten days back—alas, we were born at liberty, and thy hopes had are long been verified, but that mischance befell us as thou hast heard, and here we stand to-day with fetters on our feet in Dublin Castle, while others pisy the noble game over green woods and broad mountain; but our friends and people are pushing for their lost leaders, stay lily in the gap of Barnamona. Ha! Henry, if we ever get back to the Black Valley, we will make a bright bolnfire of Ardmullen castle for this!"

"Ah, Art! if we were once in merry Antrim, we would soon drive the black strangers from the country of Hugh Buy!"

"I'd give the best year of my life," cried Art, "to hear the war-cry of our house once more upon the hills of Killultagh—Mother of God! for one note of the gathering of Clanaboy!"

"Lamh dearg aboo!""

Cried a, velce low but tremulously earnest, at their backs. The three young men leaped to their feet with a simultaneous cry that drowned the clash of iron, and standing before them, beheld in their attendant the well-known features of their forester and clansman, Turlogh Buy O'Hagar, the bard of Tualloghogo.

For a moment the old man stood gazing with inexpressible love on the three noble youths so long and hopelessly denied to the longing eyes of their people; then rushing forward cast himself on his knees before them, and clasping their hands successively in his, pressed them to his lips and to his heart, in silent but adoring affection. "My son, my prince, my king!" he at last articulated, "my joy, my glory, my hope and promise!—branches of the old tree of my blessed! lights of valor and generosity! do I again behold your fair faces, and the glean of your bright heads like waving gold? Long, long have I planned and pondered, long have I labored and suffered, what no price but the hope of seeing you again before I died could have bribed me to endure. I have been the servant of the Saxon, and the slave of the Saxon's servant for your sakes, and, if need were, I had been the menial of the slave's slave, that I might at last put my old eyes to rest upon the face of your royal father's sons! Save for you, my princely masters, I have brave news from the north. Maguire and O'Donnell are stirring like stout gentlemen in Roscommon and the Brenny, and the earl is drawing his country to a noble head at the Blackwater: Donell spaniagh holds Idrone by a strong; and the bold O'Byrnes overhang the very city walls. Three thousand Kocks to the gap of Glenree.. MacCarthy Mor and Desmond are ready to take up the game in Munster; and it wants but Owen O'Donnell in Ballyshannon and O'Neill in Castlereagh to rise with the whole north at the head of the creal ,queen as shall ere long beat the ridge crown from her withered brows, and blow across the seas those robbers of our lands and snarer of our chieftains' children, never to trample on our blessed soil again,"

"Ah, Turlogh," cried O'Donnell, "thou tellest us a tale we have already heard in the Castle of O'Toole ten days back—alas, we were born at liberty, and thy hopes had are long been verified, but that mischance befell us as thou hast heard, and here we stand to-day with fetters on our feet in Dublin Castle, while others pisy the noble game over green woods and broad mountains people hold their own land—namely, the right of a gift of God. Then came the Normans, the Fitzgeralds, the De Courcys, the Butlers and the Burkes. And when they entered Ireland they became, in a hundred years, "more Irish than the Irish themselves." That is the old phrase Mr. Froude quotes, and he says, "Perhaps Father Burke never heard of that phrase." That phrase we all heard as soon as we were weaned. But I remark in all Mr. Froude's replies to me that he takes it for granted—I suppose because I am an Irishman—that I know nothing about my native land. Perhaps Father Burke doesn't know this, and perhaps Father Burke doesn't know that; but I will tell him what I know. So let me ask: "Perhaps Father Burke doesn't know that the Normans were more Irish than the Irish themselves?" They were. But of all the traits of the Irish character that they took up—the most prominent among those in the people, and taking each hold of that mind, heart and conscience that no power on earth or in hell can tear them principles out of the national mind. Show me a single principle in the history of the English people by which they have clung with this fervor. There is not one, except, indeed, if you will, the principle of extending their empire by robbery and by the confiscation of their neighbors' goods. Show me the principle of religion so fixed in their minds? No; for, at the bidding of Harry VIII., they changed their religion. Was the principle of devotion to the throne so fixed in their minds? No!—for at the wave of Cromwell's sword all England bowed before him; and the Englishmen cheered him in the day when he cut off the head of England's king.

What principle is there revealed in the philosophy of their history for which that people were ever prepared to suffer, more or less to die? Now, the whole theory of the Irish race, from the day they entered its existence down to this hour, is with the assertion of an eternal principle, no matter at what sacrifice or at what cost. The first and the strongest principle that can govern the heart and the mind and the conscience of any man, and consequently of any people, is their and their duty to God. Unless you admit the religious principle in the land and even in the conscience of the man with whom you have to deal, the less you have to say to him—the less you trust him—the better. Tell me, my friends, is there a man among you who would place say $10,000 on trust, depending on the honor of a man who told you he had no religious principle whatever; that he had no real conscience in his conscience; that he did not care that (snapping his fingers) for religion! You would take good care to keep that man out of his hands.

FIDELITY TO WHAT THEY KNOW BE THE TRUTH

Ireland for fifteen hundred years has held the Catholic faith among the nations. The Catholic faith has three effects, operating upon the mind, and consequently upon the people who profess it. First of all, it acts upon the intellect by conviction of the strongest kind, the intellect seeking to the truths; secondly, it acts upon the heart, purifying the affections and strengthening all the emotions of the spirit in man; thirdly it acts upon the conscience in the form of a strong, immutable, unchanging law, to which every man who professes it—be he great or small, gentle or simple—must bow down and conform himself alike.

I assert that the Catholic religion alone possesses that triple influence over the intelligence, heart and conscience of man, and I will prove it in three words—although it does look more into the subject of my lecture. First of all, it acts upon the intellect alone among all religions. The Catholic religion alone can find a man what to believe, and tells him that with somuch certainty that he is not at liberty to change it. The best Protestant in the nation can become a Methodist, or a Quaker, or a Mormon, or anything. No one is responsible, if he likes, he will go to hear Mr. So-and-so, and the next Sunday he will go to hear somebody else. On one Sunday he will hear the reverend So-and-so say that black is white, and the the next Sunday the reverend Mr. So-and so will tell him that white is black.

He has no fixed principle of belief; he has no real unchanged intellectual faith at all; his mind is like the general highway where every traveler can passalong. The Catholic religion alone influences the heart, and I assert this for her on the simple ground that she alone takes hold of the heart of a man and fixes it forever in one form of affection or love. If she calls that man to the priesthood, she consecrates him forever to the love of the Church, the altar and the souls of his brethren. Not a single thought, nor affection, nor emotion of any other love must ever disturb it. In this she acts upon the heart, for she seals with her sacramental blessing the matrimonial bonds, and they are fixed forever. That man, and that woman, Heaven and earth may move, but their engagement may never be broken; their vow may never be violated; and when the Catholic Church binds the husband to wife, and the wife to the husband in those sublime and mutual fidelity and love, the oath is as unchangeable as that oath which binds Jesus Christ to his Church. Finally, she alone lays hold of the conscience of a man—shakes him, brings face to face with himself, teaches him to look at himself with fearless eyes, teaches him, in her sacrament and in her confessional, to bring up all that was basest, vilest, meanest, most shameful in his sins, lay them out under his own eye and confess them with his own lips. And I say that this first principle of fidelity in a nation is the fidelity to the principle of their religion.

For fifteen hundred years Ireland steadily, invariably, conscientiously held that Catholic faith. For three hundred years the Danes endeavored to change that faith into paganism; for the Danish war was a religious war. Ireland fought, fought with all her strength—fought with unfailing arm —fought with undying, though bleeding heart. And for three hundred years she struggled, until at length she cast the Danes to the earth, and Christ put his foot on the neck of the pagan kings of the Scandinavian. Another cycle of three hundred came, and it was no longer the Danes, but it was the Saxon that held his sword at the throat of Ireland, and said, even as the Danes of old had said to every infidel paganism or faith, "So she said to her, "Protestantism or death." And Ireland answered as she had answered the Dane. "I will fight. I will suffer. I will die. All this I know how to do and will do well. But my faith I will never change from God, from his Christ, and from His Holy Church." And just as, after three hundred years of war, on that Good Friday morning, the sun in the Heavens beheld an Irish king and his Danish enemy as he sank —an epitaphe of a perfect discipline under good and perfect government.

Now, I ask him upon that point, and I say: "If, according to you, my learned friend, a year or two of discipline and of justice and of good government will make such a perfect subject out of an Irishman, tell us, if you please, Mr. Froude, how is it that for seven hundred years you have never been able to make good subjects out of them?" The reason is, that for seven hundred years Ireland has never known, for twenty-four consecutive hours, what good government or sensible government meant. The Scripture says that one of the greatest curses that can fall upon a people is to give them a child for their king—that is to say, a child without reason, without wisdom. And the curse of Ireland has been, that she has been governed for seven hundred years, not by one child nor by one booby, but

BY A NATION OF BOOBIES.

That never knew how to govern. Any other people, under the same government, would have been driven mad. The Irish have only been made national—every man of them—in a heart's core! The third great characteristic as a moral principle in the people of Ireland is

THE GLORIOUS BANNER OF RELIGIOUS LIBERTY AND FREEDOM

Which was to be ours forever. Does Mr. Froude tell me or or tell America that a people that have stood for the faith of God for a hundred years, faithful to the first principle—the principle that includes every other form of virtue and principle, and which, if a man is faithful to it, will make him honest, upright, faithful in his commercial, domestic and social and national relations—does this man mean to tell me that a people that have never shown that fidelity of principle, either to faith, country, or king, are fitted by the Almighty God to govern and to make for such a people as they are, what is worthy of remark, my dear friends, is the exact their loyalty to the Irish Parliament, that, although it was a packed Parliament, even to the kings who were unjust to them? It is scarcely worth while, I suppose, to seriously look upon it as praiseworthy, but I must say it. Whenever England revolved against her king, Ireland stood by him and said, "I will not change; if he was my king yesterday, he is my king to-day." And I will be wrong fixing themselves in the mind and in the heart and in the conscience of the people, and taking each hold of that mind, heart and conscience that no power on earth or in hell can tear those principles out of the national mind. Show me a single principle in the history of the English people by which they have clung with this fervor. There is not one, except, indeed, if you will, the principle of extending their empires by robbery and by the confiscation of their neighbors' goods. Show me the principle of religion so fixed in their minds? No; for, at the bidding of Harry VIII., they changed their religion. Was the principle of devotion to the throne so fixed in their minds? No!—for at the wave of Cromwell's sword all England bowed before him; and the Englishmen cheered him in the day when he cut off the head of England's king.

What principle is there revealed in the philosophy of their history for which that people were ever prepared to suffer, more or less to die? Now, the whole theory of the Irish race, from the day they entered its existence down to this hour, is with the assertion of an eternal principle, no matter at what sacrifice or at what cost. The first and the strongest principle that can govern the heart and the mind and the conscience of any man, and consequently of any people, is their

FIDELITY TO WHAT THEY KNOW BE THE TRUTH

and their duty to God. Unless you admit the religious principle in the land and even in the conscience of the man with whom you have to deal, the less you have to say to him—the less you trust him—the better. Tell me, my friends, is there a man among you who would place say $10,000 on trust, depending on the honor of a man who told you he had no religious principle whatever; that he had no real conscience in his conscience; that he did not care that (snapping his fingers) for religion! You would take good care to keep that man out of his hands.

Ireland for fifteen hundred years has held the Catholic faith among the nations. The Catholic faith has three effects, operating upon the mind, and consequently upon the people who profess it. First of all, it acts upon the intellect by conviction of the strongest kind, the intellect seeking to the truths; secondly, it acts upon the heart, purifying the affections and strengthening all the emotions of the spirit in man; thirdly it acts upon the conscience in the form of a strong, immutable, unchanging law, to which every man who professes it—be he great or small, gentle or simple—must bow down and conform himself alike.

I assert that the Catholic religion alone possesses that triple influence over the intelligence, heart and conscience of man, and I will prove it in three words—although it does look more into the subject of my lecture. First of all, it acts upon the intellect alone among all religions. The Catholic religion alone can find a man what to believe, and tells him that with somuch certainty that he is not at liberty to change it. The best Protestant in the nation can become a Methodist, or a Quaker, or a Mormon, or anything. On one Sunday, if he likes, he will go to hear Mr. So-and-so, and the next Sunday he will go to hear somebody else. On one Sunday he will hear the reverend So-and-so say that black is white, and the the next Sunday the reverend Mr. So-and so will tell him that white is black.

He has no fixed principle of belief; he has no real unchanged intellectual faith at all; his mind is like the general highway where every traveler can passalong. The Catholic religion alone influences the heart, and I assert this for her on the simple ground that she alone takes hold of the heart of a man and fixes it forever in one form of affection or love. If she calls that man to the priesthood, she consecrates him forever to the love of the Church, the altar and the souls of his brethren. Not a single thought, nor affection, nor emotion of any other love must ever disturb it. In this she acts upon the heart, for she seals with her sacramental blessing the matrimonial bonds, and they are fixed forever. That man, and that woman, Heaven and earth may move, but their engagement may never be broken; their vow may never be violated; and when the Catholic Church binds the husband to wife, and the wife to the husband in those sublime and mutual fidelity and love, the oath is as unchangeable as that oath which binds Jesus Christ to his Church. Finally, she alone lays hold of the conscience of a man —shakes him, brings face to face with himself, teaches him to look at himself with fearless eyes, teaches him, in her sacrament and in her confessional, to bring up all that was basest, vilest, meanest, most shameful in his sins, lay them out under his own eye and confess them with his own lips. And I say that this first principle of fidelity in a nation is the fidelity to the principle of their religion.

For fifteen hundred years Ireland steadily, invariably, conscientiously held that Catholic faith. For three hundred years the Danes endeavored to change that faith into paganism; for the Danish war was a religious war. Ireland fought, fought with all her strength—fought with unfailing arm —fought with undying, though bleeding heart. And for three hundred years she struggled, until at length she cast the Danes to the earth, and Christ put his foot on the neck of the pagan kings of the Scandinavian. Another cycle of three hundred came, and it was no longer the Danes, but it was the Saxon that held his sword at the throat of Ireland, and said, even as the Danes of old had said to every infidel paganism or faith. So she said to her, "Protestantism or death." And Ireland answered as she had answered the Dane. "I will fight. I will suffer. I will die. All this I know how to do and will do well. But my faith I will never change from God, from his Christ, and from His Holy Church." And just as, after three hundred years of war, on that Good Friday morning, the sun in the Heavens beheld an Irish king and his Danish enemy as he sank —an epitaphe of a perfect discipline under good and perfect government.

Now, I ask him upon that point, and I say: "If, according to you, my learned friend, a year or two of discipline and of justice and of good government will make such a perfect subject out of an Irishman, tell us, if you please, Mr. Froude, how is it that for seven hundred years you have never been able to make good subjects out of them?" The reason is, that for seven hundred years Ireland has never known, for twenty-four consecutive hours, what good government or sensible government meant. The Scripture says that one of the greatest curses that can fall upon a people is to give them a child for their king—that is to say, a child without reason, without wisdom. And the curse of Ireland has been, that she has been governed for seven hundred years, not by one child nor by one booby, but

BY A NATION OF BOOBIES.

That never knew how to govern. Any other people, under the same government, would have been driven mad. The Irish have only been made national—every man of them—in a heart's core! The third great characteristic as a moral principle in the people of Ireland is

THE GLORIOUS BANNER OF RELIGIOUS LIBERTY AND FREEDOM

Which was to be ours forever. Does Mr. Froude tell me or or tell America that a people that have stood for the faith of God for a hundred years, faithful to the first principle—the principle that includes every other form of virtue and principle, and which, if a man is faithful to it, will make him honest, upright, faithful in his commercial, domestic and social and national relations—does this man mean to tell me that a people that have never shown that fidelity of principle, either to faith, country, or king, are fitted by the Almighty God to govern and to make for such a people as they are, what is worthy of remark, my dear friends, is the exact their loyalty to the Irish Parliament, that, although it was a packed Parliament, even to the kings who were unjust to them? It is scarcely worth while, I suppose, to seriously look upon it as praiseworthy, but I must say it. Whenever England revolved against her king, Ireland stood by him and said, "I will not change; if he was my king yesterday, he is my king to-day." And I will be wrong fixing themselves in the mind and in the heart and in the conscience of the people, and taking each hold of that mind, heart and conscience that no power on earth or in hell can tear those principles out of the national mind. Show me a single principle in the history of the English people by which they have clung with this fervor. There is not one, except, indeed, if you will, the principle of extending their empires by robbery and by the confiscation of their neighbors' goods. Show me the principle of religion so fixed in their minds? No; for, at the bidding of Harry VIII., they changed their religion. Was the principle of devotion to the throne so fixed in their minds? No!—for at the wave of Cromwell's sword all England bowed before him; and the Englishmen cheered him in the day when he cut off the head of England's king.

What principle is there revealed in the philosophy of their history for which that people were ever prepared to suffer, more or less to die? Now, the whole theory of the Irish race, from the day they entered its existence down to this hour, is with the assertion of an eternal principle, no matter at what sacrifice or at what cost. The first and the strongest principle that can govern the heart and the mind and the conscience of any man, and consequently of any people, is their

FIDELITY TO WHAT THEY KNOW BE THE TRUTH

and their duty to God. Unless you admit the religious principle in the land and even in the conscience of the man with whom you have to deal, the less you have to say to him—the less you trust him—the better. Tell me, my friends, is there a man among you who would place say $10,000 on trust, depending on the honor of a man who told you he had no religious principle whatever; that he had no real conscience in his conscience; that he did not care that (snapping his fingers) for religion! You would take good care to keep that man out of his hands.

Ireland for fifteen hundred years has held the Catholic faith among the nations. The Catholic faith has three effects, operating upon the mind, and consequently upon the people who profess it. First of all, it acts upon the intellect by conviction of the strongest kind, the intellect seeking to the truths; secondly, it acts upon the heart, purifying the affections and strengthening all the emotions of the spirit in man; thirdly it acts upon the conscience in the form of a strong, immutable, unchanging law, to which every man who professes it—be he great or small, gentle or simple—must bow down and conform himself alike.

I assert that the Catholic religion alone possesses that triple influence over the intelligence, heart and conscience of man, and I will prove it in three words—although it does look more into the subject of my lecture. First of all, it acts upon the intellect alone among all religions. The Catholic religion alone can find a man what to believe, and tells him that with somuch certainty that he is not at liberty to change it. The best Protestant in the nation can become a Methodist, or a Quaker, or a Mormon, or anything. On one Sunday, if he likes, he will go to hear Mr. So-and-so, and the next Sunday he will go to hear somebody else. On one Sunday he will hear the reverend So-and-so say that black is white, and the the next Sunday the reverend Mr. So-and so will tell him that white is black.

He has no fixed principle of belief; he has no real unchanged intellectual faith at all; his mind is like the general highway where every traveler can passalong. The Catholic religion alone influences the heart, and I assert this for her on the simple ground that she alone takes hold of the heart of a man and fixes it forever in one form of affection or love. If she calls that man to the priesthood, she consecrates him forever to the love of the Church, the altar and the souls of his brethren. Not a single thought, nor affection, nor emotion of any other love must ever disturb it. In this she acts upon the heart, for she seals with her sacramental blessing the matrimonial bonds, and they are fixed forever. That man, and that woman, Heaven and earth may move, but their engagement may never be broken; their vow may never be violated; and when the Catholic Church binds the husband to wife, and the wife to the husband in those sublime and mutual fidelity and love, the oath is as unchangeable as that oath which binds Jesus Christ to his Church. Finally, she alone lays hold of the conscience of a man —shakes him, brings face to face with himself, teaches him to look at himself with fearless eyes, teaches him, in her sacrament and in her confessional, to bring up all that was basest, vilest, meanest, most shameful in his sins, lay them out under his own eye and confess them with his own lips. And I say that this first principle of fidelity in a nation is the fidelity to the principle of their religion.

For fifteen hundred years Ireland steadily, invariably, conscientiously held that Catholic faith. For three hundred years the Danes endeavored to change that faith into paganism; for the Danish war was a religious war. Ireland fought, fought with all her strength—fought with unfailing arm —fought with undying, though bleeding heart. And for three hundred years she struggled, until at length she cast the Danes to the earth, and Christ put his foot on the neck of the pagan kings of the Scandinavian. Another cycle of three hundred came, and it was no longer the Danes, but it was the Saxon that held his sword at the throat of Ireland, and said, even as the Danes of old had said to every infidel paganism or faith, "So she said to her, "Protestantism or death." And Ireland answered as she had answered the Dane. "I will fight. I will suffer. I will die. All this I know how to do and will do well. But my faith I will never change from God, from his Christ, and from His Holy Church." And just as, after three hundred years of war, on that Good Friday morning, the sun in the Heavens beheld an Irish king and his Danish enemy as he sank —an epitaphe of a perfect discipline under good and perfect government.

Now, I ask him upon that point, and I say: "If, according to you, my learned friend, a year or two of discipline and of justice and of good government will make such a perfect subject out of an Irishman, tell us, if you please, Mr. Froude, how is it that for seven hundred years you have never been able to make good subjects out of them?" The reason is, that for seven hundred years Ireland has never known, for twenty-four consecutive hours, what good government or sensible government meant. The Scripture says that one of the greatest curses that can fall upon a people is to give them a child for their king—that is to say, a child without reason, without wisdom. And the curse of Ireland has been, that she has been governed for seven hundred years, not by one child nor by one booby, but

BY A NATION OF BOOBIES.

That never knew how to govern. Any other people, under the same government, would have been driven mad. The Irish have only been made national—every man of them—in a heart's core! The third great characteristic as a moral principle in the people of Ireland is

THE GLORIOUS BANNER OF RELIGIOUS LIBERTY AND FREEDOM

Which was to be ours forever. Does Mr. Froude tell me or or tell America that a people that have stood for the faith of God for a hundred years, faithful to the first principle—the principle that includes every other form of virtue and principle, and which, if a man is faithful to it, will make him honest, upright, faithful in his commercial, domestic and social and national relations—does this man mean to tell me that a people that have never shown that fidelity of principle, either to faith, country, or king, are fitted by the Almighty God to govern and to make for such a people as they are, what is worthy of remark, my dear friends, is the exact their loyalty to the Irish Parliament, that, although it was a packed Parliament, even to the kings who were unjust to them? It is scarcely worth while, I suppose, to seriously look upon it as praiseworthy, but I must say it. Whenever England revolved against her king, Ireland stood by him and said, "I will not change; if he was my king yesterday, he is my king to-day." And I will be wrong fixing themselves in the mind and in the heart and in the conscience of the people, and taking each hold of that mind, heart and conscience that no power on earth or in hell can tear those principles out of the national mind. Show me a single principle in the history of the English people by which they have clung with this fervor. There is not one, except, indeed, if you will, the principle of extending their empires by robbery and by the confiscation of their neighbors' goods. Show me the principle of religion so fixed in their minds? No; for, at the bidding of Harry VIII., they changed their religion. Was the principle of devotion to the throne so fixed in their minds? No!—for at the wave of Cromwell's sword all England bowed before him; and the Englishmen cheered him in the day when he cut off the head of England's king.

What principle is there revealed in the philosophy of their history for which that people were ever prepared to suffer, more or less to die? Now, the whole theory of the Irish race, from the day they entered its existence down to this hour, is with the assertion of an eternal principle, no matter at what sacrifice or at what cost. The first and the strongest principle that can govern the heart and the mind and the conscience of any man, and consequently of any people, is their

FIDELITY TO WHAT THEY KNOW BE THE TRUTH

and their duty to God. Unless you admit the religious principle in the land and even in the conscience of the man with whom you have to deal, the less you have to say to him—the less you trust him—the better. Tell me, my friends, is there a man among you who would place say $10,000 on trust, depending on the honor of a man who told you he had no religious principle whatever; that he had no real conscience in his conscience; that he did not care that (snapping his fingers) for religion! You would take good care to keep that man out of his hands.

Ireland for fifteen hundred years has held the Catholic faith among the nations. The Catholic faith has three effects, operating upon the mind, and consequently upon the people who profess it. First of all, it acts upon the intellect by conviction of the strongest kind, the intellect seeking to the truths; secondly, it acts upon the heart, purifying the affections and strengthening all the emotions of the spirit in man; thirdly it acts upon the conscience in the form of a strong, immutable, unchanging law, to which every man who professes it—be he great or small, gentle or simple—must bow down and conform himself alike.

I assert that the Catholic religion alone possesses that triple influence over the intelligence, heart and conscience of man, and I will prove it in three words—although it does look more into the subject of my lecture. First of all, it acts upon the intellect alone among all religions. The Catholic religion alone can find a man what to believe, and tells him that with somuch certainty that he is not at liberty to change it. The best Protestant in the nation can become a Methodist, or a Quaker, or a Mormon, or anything. On one Sunday, if he likes, he will go to hear Mr. So-and-so, and the next Sunday he will go to hear somebody else. On one Sunday he will hear the reverend So-and-so say that black is white, and the the next Sunday the reverend Mr. So-and so will tell him that white is black.

He has no fixed principle of belief; he has no real unchanged intellectual faith at all; his mind is like the general highway where of your father as if he were my own flesh and blood, and don't forget to tell him so. Who are the Sadleirs?—the men who have made the tenant-farmers of the county what they are. Who are the Gores, Ed like to know? That latter to this," and I like to know? That latter to this," and I have a copy of the Weekly Telegraph offered to the electors of Tipperary in plain. They are called upon to choose between a Catholic gentleman of the highest standing in whom his country is indebted for his manhood of heroism, and the representative of a family many of whose members in times past, burned the sacred altars of our holy faith, and flogged priests at the cart tail! Yes that is the issue before the people—Sadleir is a traitor to God and country!" What do you think of that?"

Prendergast had only time to express his horror of the revelation with a nod, when the lawn door opened, and Kate, dressed in a simple morning costume of white and blue, made her appearance.

"Have you had any breakfast, Mr. Prendergast?"

"No, Kate. Will you give me a cup of tea and a mouthful of toast?"

"Certainly and some mountain trout, to keep them in countenance. Will you step in and help yourself?"

"What a way to ask a man to breakfast!" exclaimed Mr. Lacey. "Why, my God, we're not in the Society Islands, are we?"

Kate reddened, and looked quite confused and embarrassed and put out. He too reddened all over like a girl, and commenced to stammer out: "I beg your pardon, Kate—I—I—I—I know they're not mine my wedding—I—I—I—I hope you'll excuse me—I—I—I—I—Is her carriage there?—Give me my coat. I—I—I don't prefer breakfast—I—I—I—No, you take the other seat, Charley—I loved all of this for my trial."

SADLEIR, THE BANKER

OR, THE

LACEYS OF RATHCOOL

A TALE OF IRISH LIFE

Part II.—Chapter XXX.

It was a fine morning—one of dreamy, cloudy mornings only to be found in Ireland, when Mr. Lacey, having finished his after-breakfast pipe, was lying on the grass in the lawn, sheep, in a mixed meditation on potatoes and flies, when he caught sight of the figure of a young man striding towards the house.

"Hullo! Prendergast," he shouted his heartiest manner. "How cause—how goes the good cause?"

Prendergast removed his hat and made a forehead sparkling with beads of perspiration.

"Everyone but the people themselves against us, sir," he said, grasping the gentleman's hand, "but I think we're sound to win. We ought to win, all notions of political decency are on Ireland."

"And so shall, by Heaven! Have landlord touts called on your father?"

"They have, indeed; and you may on a visit to-day."

The scoundrels!" exclaimed Mr. Lacey. "I'll put them out of house on the prongs of a pitchfork."

"He made no two words about it, but threw himself away from the table, and gallows in Ireland sooner than betray Sir and friend. Gore looked for taken back, and Ellis shook his head said nothing. Then the attorney his hands in his pockets, and looked men write, though he used none."

"His was too cute for that! Well them, please God—we'll show them Tipperary men are made of. I am sure You are, of course, the best judge in your own interests."

"And you are the best judge of yours," remarked Ellis, looking significantly at the landlord.

The dragoons turned their horses' heads towards the gate, and with a sharp canter of spurts and swords they left the place. Old Lacey's heart beat fast when the last sounds of the retreating troopers died away. Prendergast looked at him sadly.

"You will lose your farm, I fear, sir," he said.

"And what matter?" observed the other. "We are provided for. I've got seven thousand pounds in the Tipperary Bank. We won't starve—not that exactly!"

Kate entered the room, her eyes red for weeping.

"I told you, Mr. Prendergast, there was some trouble to befall us. This is no longer our home. They are sure to put us out, if they can."

"Tut, tut about it!" asked her father. "You ought to feel ashamed—spoiling your face and making this young man uncomfortable. We shall beat, however the wind blows; and I beg of you, for God's sake, not to make yourself miserable over a trifle."

Kate said nothing, and Dick held his peace. His sweetheart's words were, he believed, prophetically true. He would be out on the lawn, his hands thrust into his pockets, and his head sunk on his breast.

A light touch on the arm awakened him. "I fear your prospects, Mr. Dick," said Kate Lacey, "but I ought to say something in the way of explanation before we part. Can you see me a minute?"

"I do," and you will forgive me?"

"Forgive you! No, but I love you while grass grows and water runs. You poor girl! Of course you will forgive me for all I've done. If all fails here, I may find a home for you elsewhere! You know that I adore you."

"Yes, Dick, I know it, and so appear and so kind," she murmured. "God bless you."

"But that is not the answer I crave for," he pleaded.

"I suppose you would not press for an answer now? I feel so wretched and depressed. I would like to say so many kind and grateful things, to say them I am sure."

They walked down the lime-tree avenue, in dead silence.

"I have no fortune, or make a name in the world," he suddenly said, "but I am cast both at your feet. Even should you marry another man, Kate, I do risk, you shall be my sole heiress—darling, darling Kate!"

He folded her in his arms, and her beaming face rested on his shoulder. While they were engaged in this tender way, Mr. Lacey strode up the avenue, but seeing his sister's arm round, and Prendergast's despair—of which he was not aware—he returned hastily into a side path leading out of the avenue. Here he walked about in a vague terror at her heart, and the stains of her rouge on her bright, pure face.

Chapter XXXII.

Meanwhile the contest for the representation of noble Tipperary drew towards a close. James Sadleir was exerting all his powers of duplicity and finesse to win the day. Behind Mr. Sadleir were the priests, and behind the priests were the people—the Irish people. It was a fearful struggle—determination and influence on one side—fear and fanaticism on the other.

The priests were roused to extraordinary efforts, and the people were roused. The aristocrat, but he was a Tipperary man, and he had to claim community of blood with the builder and highest race that ever trod the earth, and the noble instincts of human chivalry. It was not a question of such name of blood attached to him; he was a soldier and gloried in the name. Let them remember what his brother had done for the devoted and unpurchasable race whom he had the honor of representing. That brother, in whose name he gloried, and of whose name he was proud, had long and devoted his great intelligence and his ample means to the good of his native country. He (James Sadleir) with the help of the Almighty, would be none the less faithful, earnest and high-principled. And then remember what his brother had done for the tenantry, and how he had stood by them in the terrible famine of '47. Was there a single man who could point to a single act of his brother's life which was not that of a true friend of Ireland?

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JAN. 18.
JANUARY
12—Sunday—Sunday within the Octave of the Epiphany.
13—Monday—Octave of the Epiphany.
14—Tuesday—St. Hilary, Bishop, Confessor, and Doctor of the Church. St. Felix, Martyr.
15—Wednesday—St. Paul, First Hermit. St. Maur, Abbot.
16—Thursday—St. Marcellus, Pope and Martyr.
17—Friday—St. Antony, Abbot.
18—Saturday—Chair of St. Peter at Rome. St. Prisca, Virgin and Martyr.

THE MONITOR:

THE ONLY

Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....JANUARY 11, 1873.

IRELAND AND THE POPE.

The fidelity with which the Irish clung to their holy faith, through centuries of trial and persecution, has not been without a corresponding reward even in this world. The imprint of religion was, so to speak, burned into the hearts of the people and rendered forever ineffaceable. Hence they occupy to-day a position among the Christianized races of the earth of which they have every reason to feel proud. For them, now almost exclusively, is attachment to faith, with its great moving spirit, love of Almighty God, a power that guides their course through life and sways their every action. Infidelity is rare among them; than among any other people whatever. They steadfastly refuse to sacrifice revealed religion to the insatiable demands of so-called "science;" they do not fling away the traditions of the Church at the bidding of every self-sufficient theorist who writes a book. They will not uproot the foundations of Christian society to build therupon a structure framed to suit the requirements of "a progressive age;" they embrace no fantastic doctrines about marriage, property, education or human rights, however flattering to self-love they may appear.

One thing only do they hold to be true, fixed and immutable in this world, and that is the authority of the Catholic Church. When the infallible exponent of that authority speaks, they, as the faithful in all ages, regard discussion as closed, no matter what be the topic. Thus, secure in their faith, following the footsteps of an unerring guide, they view with sorrow always, with wonderment sometimes, the aimless wanderings of the false philosophers who deceive so many thousands by impious misrepresentations of the ways of truth. These are no empty boasts; they are facts which can be tested by any one inquiring into the social and religious condition of the Irish people. We venture to assert that the number of communicants, of those who approach the Sacraments regularly, is, in proportion to population, greater in Ireland than in any other country. We are pretty well satisfied that they contribute, in proportion to their means, more money for the furtherance of religious purposes than any other people. We believe they are secure in the confidence of religion, and for the evident devotion with which they assist at its ceremonies.

And the literature they love is highly characteristic of them, reflecting faithfully as it does all their sympathies and antipathies. Irreligious journals—newspapers which scoff at everything human and divine, which advocate spoliation of the Church, and defend persecution as long as it is directed against priest, monks or nuns—could not exist in Ireland; any more than those noxious reptiles said to have been banished by Saint Patrick. Two or three papers were indeed started which did not care to openly assail the authority of the Church—even their warmest supporters could not stand that—but contented themselves with covert sneers and artful misrepresentations; yet their following was in every case miserably small, and soon of them lived long. And as it is in the ancient home of the Celtic race, so is it also wherever the "sea-divided Gaels" are settled. An Irish paper, to receive any support at all, must be imbued with religious principles and must prefer the maintenance of ecclesiastical authority to every other aim and object. Would, indeed, that we could say as much for the other nationalities which comprise the population of these United States! That we cannot conscientiously do it, is proved by the anti-Catholic or else utterly indifferent tone adopted by the great majority of the journals which profess to declare their sentiments.

We have been led almost unwittingly into these reflections by reading a short account of an Irish deputation which waited on His Holiness on the Feast of the Epiphany. The deputation, which comprised a large number of well-known Irish Catholic gentlemen, took this occasion of the recurrence of the Festival to assure the Sovereign Pontiff of the unwavering fidelity to the Holy See of themselves and of the millions of their fellow-countrymen at home, and also to express their lively remembrance of and profound gratitude for the many favors conferred on Ireland by the successors of St. Peter. In reply the Pope deplored the persecutions to which the Church was subjected in several countries, and condemned the inaction and indifference with which the Catholic populations regarded the encroachments of the civil power upon the domain of ecclesiastical authority. From this condemnation, however, he specially excluded the Irish, giving them ample credit for their attachment to the centre of Catholic unity, as well as for their zeal in promoting the interests of religion.

The Irish heart ought certainly swell with pride at being thought worthy of such commendation from the highest human authority on such matters. Indeed, the chief aim of our people should be to so act in the future as to never prove unworthy of it. There is only one way of accomplishing this, and it is to continue faithful to the traditions of the Church, obedient to the teachings of its ministers, and zealous in defence of the faith. It is of first necessity that they should discountenance and repudiate the irreligious and demoralizing theories and principles of revolutionists, "free-thinkers," "modern philosophers," and all those who are incessantly striving to destroy Christianity and subvert Christian society.

GOAT ISLAND AGAIN.

While the Radicals were fighting their election battles their newspapers dropped all allusions to the Goat Island project, about which they were wont to be so eloquent. This change of tactics was mainly attributable to the circumstance that the Republican candidates were, almost without exception, in favor of ceding the island to the railway monopolists; while the Democratic nominees were, to a man, strongly opposed to it. It would, therefore, have been injurious to limited prospects if the citizens of San Francisco were allowed to know that the Grantites were deadly enemies to the prosperity of their city. The Liberal journals did their utmost to expose and denounce this conspiracy against truth; but the Administration money had been well distributed, all the political wire-pullers had been put under canary, all the "boys" had been drilled, and the revelations would not be listened to. The battle was fought; the Democrats made but a poor show, and all but one of the Republican candidates were elected by immense majorities. When the tactics of spoils had been secured in the radical faction—when ring-men, corruptionists and monopolists had renewed their lease of power—up crops the Goat Island question again. Strawberry, like a wise lad, had bided his time until his creatures and faithful servants had been elected to office, and then he set them to work for him. The probability now is that the Goat Island Bill will pass. San Francisco, in her anxiety to give General GRANT a second term, sacrificed herself and sent enemies instead of friends to represent her in the national council-chamber. The chief city of the Pacific Coast can now exercise but little influence at Washington, and there its destiny will be decided before long. It very well may be that those who cry out about Goat Island are mere alarmists; it may be that the railway monopolists cannot build up a rival city; it may be that the cession of the island would not be followed by the disastrous results predicted by so many people; but there is no denying

PAST AND PRESENT.

Ah, well I remember the button-wood trees
That stood in front of the door—
The button-wood trees with their broad, green leaves,
And the house that stands no more.
And well I remember the quiet street,
And my heart oft throbs with pain
For the old, familiar sound of feet,
That I shall never hear again.

Ah, well I remember, though years have flown,
The hopes that filled my breast—
Bright hopes that with manhood's prime
Are forever laid at rest.
And well I remember the golden dreams
That these years of boyhood knew—
Golden dreams which, alas! it seems
Have come at length to naught.

Ah, well I remember the sunny bed,
And th e chamber where I slept;
No fairy picture since life began
Has my memory fondly kept—
No fairer picture than those, I ween,
Of my boyhood's happy days—
When first seemed like a painted scene,
And in lessons writ in rhyme.

I remember the parlor, cosy and warm;
And the friends who gathered there—
Father and mother, and sister dear,
So gentle and so fair;
And oftentimes of a winter night,
When the fire burned cheerful and clear,
As I sat and gazed in the dark warm light;
Their faces will appear.

And another than theirs will often shine
In the firelight's ruddy glow—
The face of a child with fairer hair,
And a brow as white as snow;
And though often since in my later prime
I have met the fairy form,
Absent is the love of my boyhood's time
A halo seems to play.

I love to think of her sweet child's face,
And her winning, artless ways—
Of her childish bliss and each guileless kiss
In those happy golden days;
I love to think of the place we met
Of the hour when our young lips made
To bind in fast in life;
But time has worked changes with each new year
And death has closed the door
On many a fair one dear to me
Who lived in days of yore;
And the face of the child with its fairer hair,
And the brow as pure as snow,
I can only see in the empty air
And the firelight's ruddy glow.

So, seated here by the hearth alone,
With the fire burning low and dim,
I thought it a pleasant task to look back and turn
To the days of long ago;
And Past and Present like gone meeting bells,
That one through a mist of tears,
Call to each other with voices sad
Through the intervening years.

N. G. SHEPHERD.

THE HIBERNIAN
NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS,

BY SAMUEL FERGUSON, LL. D., M.R.I.A.

FIRST NIGHT.

The Death of the Children of Usnach.

(Continued.)

Upon a certain day, King Conor was feasting with his nobles in the mansion of Emania, and there was sweet music and delight amongst all present. And after the bards had sung in delightful measures their branches of kindred and boughs of genealogy, King Conor raised his royal voice and said, "I would know of you, princes and nobles, whether you have ever seen a feast better than this, or a mansion better than the mansion of Emania!"

"We have seen none," they replied.

"And again," said Conor, "I would fain know of you if there be anything whatsoever here wanting?"

"Nothing," they replied.

"Say not so," said Conor, "I well know what is here wanting—the presence of the three renowned youths, the martial lights of the Gael, the three noble sons of Usnach, Naisi, Ainli and Ardan. Alas, that they should be absent from among us for the sake of any woman in the world! Hard bested they are, and outlawed in an island of the ocean, fighting with the men of the King of Alba. Sons of a king indeed they are, and well could they defend the sovereignty of Ulster—I would that they were with us!"

Then the nobles replied and said, "Had we dared to speak our thoughts, this is what we would have said; and moreover that had we but the three sons of Usnach in the country, Ulster alone would not be inferior to all the rest of Erin; for, men of might they are, and lions for valor and prowess."

"Let us then," said Conor, "dispatch messengers to Alba, to the island of Inis Ruive, to the fastness of the clan Usnach, to solicit their return."

"Who can give sufficient surety of safety to induce the sons of Usnach to come into thy kingdom?" asked they.

"There are only three of all my nobles," said Conor, "on whose guaranty against hurt of anger the sons of Usnach will trust themselves; and they are, Fergus, Cuchulian and Conall Carnach; one of these will I send upon this message."

Then taking Conall Carnach into a place apart, Conor asked him what he would do if he should send him for the sons of Usnach, and that they should come to harm while under his pledge of safe-conduct.

"Whomsoever I might find injuring them," said Conall Carnach, "on him would I straightway inflict the bitter pain of death."

"Then can I perceive," said Conor, "that dear to you I myself am not."

A like question asked Conor of Cuchulian, and of him received a like answer. Then called he apart Fergus, the son of Roy, and in like manner questioned him; this said Fergus in answer: "Thine own blood I shed not, nor whosoever else I should I do doing injury to those in my safe conduct him would I not permit to live."

"Then," said Conor, "I perceive thou lovest me. Go thou to the clan Usnach, and bring them to me to my feast at Emania, return thou by the way of Dun Barach, let let not the sons of Usnach tarry to any most with any until they come to the feast. I shall have prepared for their welcome in Emania. Here are my pledge to do this."

Then Fergus bound himself by solemn vow to do the king's commands, and so returning together, they joined the other nobles, and bore away that night in feasting and dalliance. The king, however, and Barach, the son of Calnii, into a place apart and asked him if he had a feast prepared at his mansion.

"I have a feast prepared in Dun Barach," said Barach, "in which thou and thy nobles are ever welcome."

"Let not Fergus then depart this mansion," said Conor, "without partaking of that feast on his return from Alba."

"It shall feast with me for three days," replied Barach, "for we are brothers of the Red Branch, and he is under vow not to refuse my hospitality."

Next morning Fergus, with his two sons, Buini Borb and Illan Fin, and Callon the ship-bearer, bearing his shield, departed from Emania for pleasant Alba. They sailed across the sea until they came to Loch Elive, to the lake' of the sons of Usnach. Here dwelt the clan Usnach in green hunting booths along the shore. And Deirdre and Naisi sat together in their tent, and Conor's polished chess-board between them, and they played at chess. Now when Fergus came into the harbor he sent forth the loud cry of a mighty man of chase. And Naisi hearing the cry, said, "I hear the call of a man of Erin."

"That was not the call of a man of Erin," replied Deirdre, "but the call of a man of Alba."

Then again Fergus shouted a second time.

"That was surely the cry of a man of Erin," said Naisi.

"Nay, 'twas not, indeed," replied Deirdre; "'tis as play on."

Then, again, Fergus shouted a third time, and Naisi knew that it was the cry of Fergus, and he said, "If the son of Roy be in extremities, I hear his hunting shout from the body go forth, Ardan, my brother, and give our kinsman welcome."

"Alas," said Deirdre, "I knew the call of Fergus from the shout."

"Why didst thou then conceal it, my Queen?" said Naisi.

Then Deirdre answered, "Last night I had a dream. Three birds came to us from the plains of Emania, having each a drop of honey in its beak; and they departed from me, having each a drop of our blood in place of the drop of honey."

"And how dost thou read that dream, O princess?" said Naisi.

"That Fergus cometh with false messages of peace from Conor," she replied, "for sweeter is not honey than the message of peace of the false man."

"Nay, think not so," said Naisi; "Fergus is long in the port; go, Ardan, meet him quickly and guide him to our tent."

Then Ardan went and welcomed Fergus, and embraced him and his sons, and kissed them and demanded of them the news from Emania. Then they told him, and thereafter came to the tent of Naisi, where he and Ainli and Illan Fin were together. Then with many kisses to Fergus and his sons, they asked what news from Erin. "Good news," said Fergus; "O Conor sent us to be your warranty of safe-conduct, if you will return to Emania."

"There is no need for them to go thither," said Deirdre, "greater is their own sway in Alba than the sway of Conor in Erin."

"To be in one's native land is better than all else," said Fergus, "for of little worth are power or prosperity to a man if he seeth not each day the land that gave him birth."

"True it is," said Naisi, "dearer to me is Erin than Alba, though in Alba I should enjoy more fortunate estate than in Erin."

"Put your trust in me," said Fergus, "I pledge myself for your safe-conduct."

"Let us go then," said Naisi, "we will go under Fergusson's safe-conduct to our native land."

They whilled away that night until the dawning of next day; then went they down to their ship and set sail across the sea. They reached the port of Dun Barach; and Barach himself, meeting them upon the shore, welcomed Fergus and his sons, and the sons of Usnach, and Deirdre also, with great kindness and affection. Then Barach said to Fergus—"Tarry, and partake of my feast, for I will not let the foot part from me for three days without breaking the vow of brotherhood and hospitality."

When Fergus heard that he be became crimson red, for anger, from head to foot, and thus he said—"Thou hast done ill, O Barach, to ask me to thy feast, knowing, as thou dost, that I am bounden to Conor not to let the sons of Usnach, who are under my safe-conduct, tarry night or day for entertainment from another, till they reach Emania, where he nach his banquet prepared to welcome them."

"I care not," said Barach, "by the under the ban of our order if thou rejectest my hospitality."

Then Fergus asked of Naisi what he should do, and Deirdre answered—"Thou must either forsake Barach or the sons of Usnach; for it were death to the one or to thy feast than thy friends who are under thy protection." Then said Barach to the sons of Usnach will I forsake," said Fergus; "for I will remain with Barach, and my two sons, Illan Fin and Buini Borb, shall be your escort and pledge of safe-conduct, in my stead, to Emania."

"We care not for thy safe-conduct," said Naisi; "our own hands have ever been our pledge of protection!" and he departed from Fergus in great wrath: and Ardan, and Ainli, and Deirdre, and the sons of Fergus followed him, and they left Fergus sad and gloomy behind them.

Then said Deirdre—"I word counsel that we go to the isle of Hathlin, and abide there till Fergus shall be free to accompany us; for I fear this safe-conduct will not long protect us." Then did Naisi and the sons of Fergus reproach her, and they said they would not take that counsel, but go forward to Emania even as they were. "Alas!" said Deirdre, "would that I had never left the long grassed Alba!" But when they had all come to Emania each lower, on the mountain of Fuaith, Naisi perceived that Deirdre did not accompany them, for sleep had fallen upon her; and on returning he found her in a deep slumber in the valley; and when she was awakened she arose in grief and fear. "Alas!" she said, "I dread treachery; I had a dream, and in my vision I beheld Illan Finn fighting for us, and Buini Borb Idle, and his head on Buini Borb, and Illan Finn's trunk headless."

"Thy lips are lovely, but thy prophecy sought save evil," said Naisi. "Let the sons of Usnach be together. Then the stranger, I fear not treachery. Let us on."

And so they went on till they came to Ardalaigh; and then Deirdre said to Naisi —"I see a cloud over Emania, and it is a cloud of blood. I conjure you, O sons of Usnach, go not to Emania without Fergus; but let us go to Dundalgan, to our cousin Cuchulian, for Fergus shall have fulfilled his obligation to Barach."

"Then shall we be perjured," said Naisi; "let us proceed."

Then again Deirdre cried—"O! Naisi, look at the cloud over Emania; it is a cloud of blood; grow drops from its red edges. Ah me! go not to Emania to-night; let us go to Dundalgan—let us take shelter with Cuchulian."

"I fear not," said Naisi; "if will not bear thy counsel; let us proceed."

"Grandson of Roy," said Deirdre, "seldom have we not been of one second before this; and now, if thou wilt not go with me to Dundalgan, I will not go to Emania."

"Then go, my king," cried Fiara.

"As I live," said O'Conor, "it was on the same night that Deirdre and Illan Finn were born: go then and do battle with him manfully. And as he is clad in his father's arms, clothe-in thyself in mine, and take Gosau, Flight and Victory—my shield, my spear, and my claymore, and do good battle in the fore' most ranks of Emania."

Fiara then arrayed himself in his father's coats and bright armor, and went forth to the Red Branch, and did good battle with a Illan Finn. They fought a fair fight, stout and manly, biter and bloody, savage and fell, and vehement, and terrible, till Illan Finn beat down the shield of Fiara, and the latter crouch beneath the shelter of his shield. Then the wares round the blue rim of Gosan; round and round the mazes of Conor's shield that it ever resounded as with the noise of stormy waves when he who bore it was in distress. And the three chief seas of Erin roared with all their wares responding to the shout of Gosan. And the sky-Tuath, and the wave of Clione, and the fishy-streaming wave of Isvar-Rory roared around Erin for the danger of Fiara. Conall Carnach stuling on the rock of Ilunsevrick heard the tumult from Loch Rory and the sea, and taking his arms and calling his men of might, came towards Emania, where he knew that Conor, his sovereign, was in peril. There, on the open field before the mansion of Red Branch, he found Fiara Finn sore pressed by his adversary, and, coming behind him, he thrust his sword through the heart of Illan Finn, whom he knew not, for he had not yet beheld his face.

Who hath pierced me at my back?" asked Illan Finn, "when he might have had fair battle, face to face, had he sought it?"

"Nay, rather, who art thou?" said Conall. "Illan, the son of Fergus," replied Illan Finn; "and art thou Conall Carnach?—Alas, it is even so. Evil is the deed thou hast done, Conall, to slay him while clasping the clan Usnach, who are in the Red Branch under my father's pledge of safe-conduct from Alba!"

"By my hand of valor," cried Conall, "this shall not be unavenged," and he struck Flara Finn a sharp stroke, where he stood, and stepped away his head from his beard and wont thence in great wrath and sorrow. The weakness of death then fell upon Illan Finn, and he drew his arms into the mansion, called to Naisi to fight manfully, and expired.

And now the men of Ulster came again to assault the Red Branch, and to set fire and faggots to the doors. Then forth came Ardan and his men and put out the fires, and slew three hundred men of might abroad, and scattered the troops. And Ainli, with his men, went forth the other third of the host, and slew six hundred abroad, and made sore havoc of Conor's people. Naisi himself came forth with his men the last third of the host, and before dawn had slain two hundred and driven all the troops from around the mansion. And at dawn Conor brought all the men of Ulster, and he and the clan Usnach, with their men, joined their forces, and fought a fierce fight till broad day. And after that battle went against the men of Ulster, and till the sands of the sea, the leaves of the forest, the dew-drops of the meadow, or the stars of the heaven be counted, it is not possible to tell the number of heads and hands and lopped limbs of bravery that then lay bare and red from the hands of Naisi and his brothers and their people on the side of Conor. And when the men of the Red Branch of Deirdre, and she encouraged the hand and said:

"We will yet escape; fight manfully and fear not."

Then the son of Usnach made a phalanx of their shields, and spread the links of their joined hauberks around Deirdre, and bounding forth like three eagles, swept down upon the troops of Conor, making sore slaughter of his people in their onset. Then when Cuthbel the fruid saw that the sons of Usnach were bent on the destruction of Conor himself, he had recourse to the arts of magic; and he cast an enchantment over them, so that their arms fell from their hands, and they were taken by the men of Ulster, for the spell was like a sea of thick gums about them, and their limbs were clogged in it that they could not move.

Then was Naisi taken in the hook of Ulster, that could be found who would put the sons of Usnach to death, so loved were they of the people and noble; but in the house of Conor was one called Miani Rough Hand, son of Dorcha, the Earl of Rudis border of the lake runs an old road Naisi had slain his father and two brothers; and he undertook to be their executioner. Then Naisi asked if there was still left one of the men of Ulster, when they beheld their dead, until fifty-three heavy shouts of sorrow and lamentation. Then Naisi fell down beside their bodies, wailing and weeping, and she tore her hair and her garments, and bestowed kisses on their lifeless lips and bitterly bemoaned them. And a grave was opened for them, and Naisi was buried by it, with her hair disheveled, and shedding tears abundantly, chanted their funeral song; she then fell down and expired beside the grave. And they laid her in the grave with his head upon her breast, and their cairn, and their names were written on the stone above them. Then fell the curse upon clan Conor; for Fergus, the son of Roy, slew Conor and burned Emania to the earth, and it lies desolate to this day, and man hath inhabited them from that day to this. So ends the history of the three sons of Usnach.

(To be continued in our next.)

CARPETS.
NOTICE.
CASH CARPET STORE,
715 MARKET STREET,
IS NOW OPEN, WITH A
GRAND DISPLAY
NEW AND ELEGANT GOODS!
Purchased expressly for the
CASH CARPET STORE.
Goods will be offered for about
Half the Price Asked Elsewhere.
TERMS—CASH ON DELIVERY.
m16 tf

SMOKY CHIMNEYS.
Martha's Patent Chimney Tops OR VENTILATORS.
BY CALLING ON
W. O. HURTHA,
CORNER OF York and Taylor Streets,
And have one of his PATENT CHIMNEY TOPS put on your chimneys. They are highly recommended by no complaints from your neighbors. Also, Tin Roofing repaired, or put on new. They are universally known throughout this State.
Plumbing, Gas Fitting and General Jobbing.
Strict attention paid to repairing Stoves, Ranges, etc.
Leaky Roofs repaired and warranted. m16 3

SHAW'S PECTORAL SYRUP,
For the Cure and Relief of all
PULMONARY COMPLAINTS.
Ask your druggist for it. It will not fail to cure you. 19

WANTED—EVERY ONE TO KNOW THAT I will sell kinds of Monuments twenty-five per cent cheaper than you can buy stone from any other dealer in the world. Only competition. Mattress factory and removed the same day if required. Upholstery of every kind repaired at No. 8. MURPHY'S Spring Mattress depot, No. 7 Powell street, four doors from Market. a18dm

EDUCATIONAL.
SANTA CLARA COLLEGE.

THE NEXT TERM OPENS ON THE SIXTH of January, 1874. Entered students failing to be present on the appointed day, can, according to rule, be excluded from the College until the follow ing term. A. VARSI, S. J., President. ja4-7t

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME.
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.
YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IN INCORPORATED WITH THE UNIVERSITY OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, possessed no regular academical honors, will commence the Twenty-second Academical Session, on MONDAY, August 18, 1873. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once.....$10 00
Board and Tuition, per month.....25 00
Physicians' fees (unless it may be preferred to pay the bill to pass daily) per quarter.....2 50
Music, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges according to the extra charges for the French, Spanish or German Languages, use of Piano, Painting Needle-work.

Payments are required to be made half a session in advance. Session will be divided into two terms of five months and a half each, commencing the first Monday in August, and terminating on the last Thursday in June.

For further particulars apply to the SISTERS OF CHARITY, Santa Barbara, Cal. 1t30

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL,
PETALUMA.
Day and Boarding School, Conducted by the Sisters of Charity.

TERMS for Boarders, including tuition in the various branches of English education, French, Music, and ornamental Needle-Work, per month.....$15 00

EXTRA CHARGES:
Music with use of Piano, per month.....$ 50
Drawing and Painting, per month.....1 00
Only a limited number of Boarders can be accommodated. The next session will commence on the 1st of August. Payments invariably in advance. 2m13

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,
SANTA BARBARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THE SIXTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUTION, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, will commence on the 2nd Monday in August.

The object of the Institution is to give a good English, Mathematical, Classical and Philosophical Education, in the lowest possible cost.—Want long felt in California—and thereby bring its advantages within reach of all.

TERMS:
Entrance Fee, (to be paid but once).....$15 00
Tuition, Board and Washing, per session, of ten months.....150 00
Those who spend vacation at the College will be charged $50.

Payments must be made semi-annually in advance. Parents to pay for incidental attendance, and supply toilet articles, etc.

Money will not be advanced by the College; for the purchase of necessary articles, a sufficient sum must be deposited.

For further particulars apply to
REV. J. O'KEEFE, O. S. F.
jy19

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE
LOS ANGELES, CAL.
DEGREES CONFERRED
Rev. JAMES McGILL, C. M.
ja10-tf President

EDUCATIONAL.
ST. CATHERINE'S ACA
BENICIA, CAL.
Conducted by the Sisters of St.

THIS INSTITUTION AFFORDS every facility for the acquisition of a refined education. The Academy has flourished for ranks among the most successful institutions of the State.

The course of instruction includes the English, French, Spanish and Italian languages, Geography, Composition, Arithmetic, Natural History, Biography, Mythology, Astronomy, Botany, Book-keeping, Botany, Natural Philosophy, Chemistry, Geography, Astronomy, Use of Globes, Mathematics, Vocal Music, Instrumental Music, Guitar and Organ, Writing, Drawing in Water Colors and in Oil, Tapestry, Ornamental Needle-work, etc., etc.

TERMS:

Board and tuition (payable half-yearly in advance).....$150
Washing.....
Entrance Fee.....

EXTRAS.
Piano and use of instrumental pieces.....$
Guitar.....
Vocal music in class.....
Private lessons.....
Drawing and Painting in Water Colors.....
Painting in Oil.....
Use of Library, each session.....
School-book & stationery.....

Each young lady is required to be furnished with a good and sufficient outfit. Particular attention will be paid to the comfort and convenience of Boarders.

For further particulars apply to the SISTERS OF CHARITY, Santa Barbara, Cal.

SAN JOSE MARBLE W
E POWER
BENTER STREET.....North of
WEST SAN JOSE
Warerooms in the Hensley Block, next to Postoffice Box, 537.

STATUARY,
TOMBS,
HANDI-PIECES
AND MARBLE WORK
DESIGNING, MODELING
And every style Wood and Stone Carving.

HOT FOR THE HOLIDA

Christmas and New Year's
Japanese Goods,
French Fancy Goods,
Musical Albums
California
The largest assortment in the State, and at reasonable rates, at
ROBERT MAYER'S BA
R. E. cor. Montgomery and m21tf SAN FRANCISCO.

JO SOWLE
Livery and Feed Sta
HOLLISTER, Monterey County
The best Horses, Buggies and Light Wagons in Monterey county always on hand, and at reasonable terms. If you give him your patronage he will promise to give you satisfaction.

A REVERIE.

[illegible] to-day, [illegible] to [illegible] of the [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE CRUSADE OF THE PERIOD.

Continued from First Page.

did not see anything of it herself; but I thhink she had bad dreams.

Why should I wade any more through all this blood and brains? The reader must be weary of it, if not sick. Let it be sufficient to say that folio after folio, with Jurat, Jurat upon the pages, is full charged and reeking with the same kind of abomination. By far the greater part of the depositions are sworn upon hear-say; yet now and then a man comes boldly up and swears that he saw dreadful things with his own eyes. For example:

"James Geare, of the county of Monaghan, deponeth, That the rebels at Clowens murdered one James Netterville, proctor to the minister there, who, although he was diversely wounded, his belly ripped up, and his entrails taken out, and laid above a yard from him, yet he bled not at all, until they lifted him up and carried him away; in which this deponent being an eye-witness, much wondered; and thus barbarously they used him after they had drawn him to go to Mass with them."

Another saw an "Irish rebel" make three passes with his drawn sword point blank into the body of a woman, she with hands clasped defying him to hurt her unless God permitted him; and accordingly the sword never grazed her skin; and the wicked rebel walked off much discomfited, and all the on-lookers mightily edified. Still another swearer tells how the "rebels" took a Scotchman (they seldom have any surnames, neither the rebels nor victims), and having cut open his body to get at his "small guts," they did pull the end of said small guts to a tree, and then whipped the Scotchman round and round the tree, until all that intestine was drawn out and wound nearly round the trunk; then whipped him back again, till it was unwound—and all this, as they said, to find out whether a Scotchman's gut or a dog's is the longer.

PROUDE'S TREATMENT OF THE EVIDENCE.

We have seen that the historian scarcely names one of the swearers, except Dean Maxwell, whose testimony is the most strong tower to our Protestant interest; that he never gives the full depth of the swearers, and carefully omits any allusion to ghosts and miracles; but in one instance he has actually another witness, Adam Clover, of the county Cavan, and gives him an authority for an act of cruelty perpetrated by three Irish women, who stripped a Protestant women naked at the time of her childbirth, and left her and her child to die. I am delighted to find that he knows Clover's name, but why not give us a little more of what Adam saw with his own eyes—for Adam was a good swearer. Why does he withhold from his admiring readers such a choice morsel as the following? Now Adam Clover deposeth and saith:

"That he observed thirty persons to be barbarously murdered, and about one hundred and fifty more cruelly wounded, so that some of them bleed issuing from them lay upon the high-road for a considerable time together; and many very young children were left and perished by the way to the number of sixty or thereabouts."

Mr. Froude's friend Adam does not say where he observed all this, or what road, nor between what towns, nor by whom, upon whom, the murders and other cruelties were committed. At any rate, we see here an example of the manner in which this historian manipulates his authorities, presenting only those particulars which he thinks agree with his credulous people, and suppressing the rest.

One blunder, however, he has made, in calling attention at all to the atrocious cruelties charged in these oaths against Irishmen and Irishwomen, as perpetrated upon helpless women and children of another nationality. At no time in their history have the Irish—our proud, fierce, generous Irish—been capable of cruelty to women and children, to, nor indeed to helpless men. If Froude wants to tell of massacres, let him consult the annals of his own country; let him go back to St. James's day, 1902, at cockcrow in the morning, and tell a full chronicle of the slaughter of the Danish masters on St. Brice's day, afterwards formed a plot to massacre their French masters in the time of William the Conquerer; or let him turn his eyes a moment to the wild valley of Glencoe, and tell how King William's Protestant soldiers knew how to deal with women and infants.

Mr. Froude is right in saying that England and Ireland will never arrive at a good understanding until the business of the "massacres" (that turning-point in history) shall have been fully cleared up. It is true; but he has not cleared it up; nor was that his intention. The man's bias has been that the public would take his very general statement of the matter, and rest upon his authority for those details which it would be tough to support him. He never was more mistaken in his life; and I shall be much deceived if the examination of that portion of Irish history—an examination which is now ready for the press—does not, to the feeling of Froude on high, as the most immoral of historic impostures.

My next chapter will finish his delinquencies as to the "massacres," and I shall afterwards have to show that in compiling the history subsequent to that, he has proved himself even more reckless and desperately depraved.—Irish American, January 4.

From a Lieutenant to a Bird-Shooter.

When the war of the rebellion broke out, Lieutenat Beale was an officer in the Second Regiment of Dragoons, and was stationed at Fort Leavenworth. He was a graduate of West Point, and the future was bright with promise of promotion. The war changed everything. This officer cast his fortunes with the Confederacy, left the Union army, and served in the cause of secession. With his change of sentiment he lost not only caste of position, officially, but he saw that his old associates were being rapidly dismissed, his friends leave him, and himself left like many others outranked politically and socially. Since the war Lieutenant Beale—who, by the way, is a son of the then-prominent official who made a survey of Arizona—has found himself buffeted hither and thither by the waves of adversity. A few days ago Captain E. L. Berthoud, who has charge of engineering parties on the atmospheric railroad, met with a curious way, who knew Beale in his better days before the war, accidentally discovered the man shooting at a flock of sparrows. A gang of workmen on the railroad grade in the mountains Arizona changed though he was, Berthoud at once recognized him, and was greatly astonished at finding a man who had before occupied so high a position, and whose associates had every avenue of success and a rapid elevation open to him, laboring with a shovel to earn his daily bread. After the recognition, Mr. Beale told Berthoud the story of his vicissitudes, and the latter, who knew the man's superior capacities, at once took him to finished and secured him a responsible position in the engineer corps of the Juiesburg road.—Rocky Mountain News.

Industrial Condition of the State.

A company has been organized in this city to cultivate tobacco extensively, and manufacture it under the patents obtained by J. D. Culp, of Gilroy, who, it is claimed, has made great improvements in the method of curing the weed. The plant is of a succulent nature, with leaves sometimes two feet long and a foot wide, and is cut when the leaves and stem are full of moisture. If the leaves were thrown into a heap they would rot; if laid out in the sun their peculiar flavor and fragrance would evaporate. Their marketable value depends upon the method of curing, which includes fermentation and drying. It has been customary to hang the cut plant up by the butt under a shed, with the leaves pressing against the walls. Mr. Culp hangs up the plant horizontally so that each leaf is separate, in a tight house, so arranged that it can be ventilated and heated. Instead of allowing the plants to hang up until dry enough for use, he takes them down several times and lets them ferment in piles, his process being based on accurate chemical analysis of the elements used to obtain the highest development of the good qualities, and the throwing off of the bad qualities found in the plant when grown, or formed during the process of curing. It is claimed that in this manner Mr. Culp obtained a crop of 6,000 pounds in 1871, and 40,000 pounds in 1872 from his farm near Gilroy, of tobacco superior for cigars to the best Havana, a superiority recognized by many connoisseurs in San Francisco.

The Coniferville and Yosemite wagon road will be completed into the valley this year, in time to accommodate much and perhaps nearly all the travel. A survey was published a few weeks ago for a road seventeen miles long, to leave Hazel Green at an elevation of 5,600 feet above the sea, on the present Coniferville road; thence down the southern slope of the mountain north of the Merced river, to the safest, and up the cañon to the valley. Two miles and a half from Hazel Green the line passes through a grove of big trees covering about fifty, and half of these are large, from three to seven feet in diameter. At this point it is called the Merced Grove, and is within three miles of the Merced river, in Mariposa county, about five miles southwestward from the Tuolumne Grove, and twelve miles east of the Yosemite grant. It has been claimed for the purpose of protecting it against vandalism, and of making it a permanent and attractive feature of the route. The survey passes southward of the present line from Hazel Green to Gentry's, but then runs miles, all of which advance on the old road is more than 5,600, and part of it 7,000 feet above the sea. On the present road there are eighteen miles more than 5,000 feet high; on the new one there will be only five. On the first of last June the snow was seven feet deep on Tamarack Flat, the highest point on the present road. The new road will enable stages to run into the valley at all seasons, as the snow will not be found on it to any extent, and regular trips will be made through the year to Yosemite by the stages. The scenery of the valley in the winter is magnificent. The grade of the new road will be easy except about three-quarters of a mile in the Merced cañon, where the rise is fifteen in 100 feet. The staging from Merced to the valley will be eighty-five miles by the new route. The location is satisfactory to the Commissioners, and the road is under contract with surveyors. The work will cost $40,000.

All the ale and beer consumed on this coast—about 500,000 barrels, of 300 pounds each, per month—is now produced here. It is made in nine cities by the Pacific Soda Ash and Soda Company, at their refinery, from crude soda, obtained from Soda Lake, twenty miles southeastward from Walker's Pass, Nevada. This lake is on the edge of the desert, extending in shape, and in the same area of seven acres, with its surface about seventy five feet below the level of the desert. A large spring, saturated with soda, rises out of it, and a little common salt, 95 degrees of Fahrenheit, and 105 degrees in winter, and, to the summer the brine evaporates, leaving a solid bed of clean crystals. The Company pumps the brine by pumping up the brine in the summer into compartments, in which a layer of spring has run over the crystals. These are brought to this city, at an expense of $22 per ton for freight, and are refined at their factory, on Fifth street, between Fourth and Fifth. Their soda has been in the market for six months, and the business is now on a permanent basis. The price of sal-soda, obtained directly or indirectly from the works, is now about 4½ cents; now Pacific soda, equally good, is 8½ cents per pound. A large amount could be made for exportation if the freights were low. It is calculated that 150,000 tons of crude soda could be made annually from the brine, without taking into account a large stock of crystals, mixed with mud, lying in the bed of the lake, the entire lake at least ten feet deep.—Alta.

Modern Liberalism.

The proposed bill against the Church, which is now before the Prussian Parliament, and which will undoubtedly become a law, leaves no longer any room to deny that Prussia has taken the course of destruction of the Catholic religion within its border. If the provisions of this decree were carried out, the Church as an organism would be broken to pieces. When a society, formed for temporal or spiritual ends, is denied the natural right to determine the qualifications of its members, and to hold the privileges of association, the very life of the society is imperiled, and if it submits, it has come to a decree of nullification. Every society is an organism possessed of the active right in the human body to expel all that would endanger its existence. To compel a Church to retain as members those who openly violate the creed or its discipline, must necessarily lead to the same result as to force a human body to carry within it the disease which it naturally rejects. The State always and justly resists the attempt of foreigners to expel all that will not submit to the laws of the corporation—a Church can not be denied, without the grossest injustice, the same jurisdiction over membership. The power of excommunication is an organic right that belongs to every association. The power that prescribes the duties of membership, can re-relatively exclude from all privileges of the society, when the duties are unfulfilled. Every organization knows that herein lies the principle of its life.

The new Prussian law proposes to strip the Church of the grossest injustice, and communication. The Catholic Church is the judge of its own doctrines—it alone is competent to decide when the proceedings of individuals differ from its own. It has a right to condemn those doctrines as un-Catholic. The new law, in its second and fourth sections especially, deprives the Church of this competency, and forbids it to exclude from membership those who refuse in accept its law of faith. According to Prussian legislation, a man may deny any number of the doctrines of the Catholic Church, may embrace every heretical error that has ever been invented, and if the State so wills, the Catholic Church must allow him to receive the sacraments, and treat him in all things as a Catholic. No minister of religion, so reads the law, is authorized to threaten a citizen with even legally admissible disciplinary or corrective measures, or to proclaim him subject to the same, if said penalties are incurred in consequence of an action ordered by the laws of the State or the commands of the civil authorities within their province. No minister of religion, again, is allowed to make public any of the said disciplinary measures, if therein a citizen is designated by name. It is perfectly clear that obedience to such laws would lead to the annihilation of any Church against which they may be directed. They throw open the door of every Catholic pulpit in Germany to men who may control in their teaching every article of faith which the Catholic Church holds. Men holding the office of Catholic priest, directing Catholic congregations, may set up any standard of faith, mock at all that is Catholic; still, according to law, the Catholic Church cannot protect itself by expelling such teachers from its fold. This is modern Liberalism.—Catholic Telegraph, Dec. 29.

Newspaper Property.

NEWSPAPER PROPERTY.—The sum of $350,000 has been paid for fifty-one shares of the New York Tribune Association. This would make the entire value of the property $1,100,000, which, the Tribune says, "is by far the highest price ever paid for a newspaper on this continent." This is not exactly correct. Some years ago the shares of the Tribune were sold, before the, at the same price relatively, that is, on the basis of $1,100,000 for the entire property. Since then $300,000 of the tangible property of the establishment had been destroyed without insurance, leaving the present value at only $800,000. The New York Herald could not, probably, be bought for $2,000,000, if it were for sale at all. The New York Evening Post is believed to be worth over a million dollars, and the Boston Daily Globe even more than the Post, and the Philadelphia Ledger more than either. The St. Louis Democrat sold recently on the basis of $500,000—a ridiculously low price, as the seller, it was said, was in such circumstances since admitted to themselves.—Chicago Tribune.

Our Bodily Infirmities.

Physical infirmities are the ills that Miltner are always sick. No man, woman or child is uniformly in perfect health. More or less every one of us does and suffering which render life a burden. Some of our fellow-beings is due to carelessness and neglect of a proper answer to the leading cause of these ills, has been provided. It is as harmless as it is effective. It possesses true curative properties in its composition. It is an undoubted stimulant, but not a dangerous one, for its every ingredient is vegetable. This unexceptionable preventive and invigorator combines in a pleasant drink (being under the name of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters) the best tonic, the most genial alterative, and the most reliable diuretic in the list put forth in any one remedy. Indigestion, biliousness, nervousness, kidney complaint, and rheumatism, which have been strengthened and established by this agent, have been subdued by it, and the system restored to a healthy standard. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are a very safe and reliable remedy, and every body ought to use them.

Subscriptions Received.

| | |
|---|---|
| Somerville—James Xavier | $4 00 |
| San Francisco—Mrs. Mary Ann Sullivan | 4 00 |
| " —Patrick Cunningham | 4 00 |
| " —Michael Quinn | 4 00 |
| " —Michael Quinn | 4 00 |
| San Bernardino—John Flanagan | 4 00 |
| " —Patrick Cunningham | 4 00 |
| " —Mrs. Ellen Cunningham | 4 00 |
| Placerville—A. Whitehead | 4 00 |
| Virginia City, Nev.—Mrs. Ellen Cunningham | 4 00 |
| Hilmar—Mrs. H. P. Stiles | 4 00 |
| Los Angeles—Mrs. Mary Ann Sullivan | 4 00 |
| San Mateo—Stephen Tobin | 4 00 |
| Springfield—Mrs. Mary A. Brennan | 4 00 |
| Spring Valley—John Sheridan | 4 00 |
| Alameda—Jacob Kuhl | 4 00 |
| San Lorenzo—John Chisholm | 4 00 |
| Pajaro—Mrs. Mary Ann Sullivan | 4 00 |
| Watsonville—Mrs. Mary Ann Sullivan | 4 00 |
| Gilroy—Mrs. Mary Ann Sullivan | 4 00 |
| Gilroy—Henry McCarthy | 4 00 |
| Gilroy—Mrs. Mary Ann Sullivan | 4 00 |
| Marysville—William Fitzgerald | 4 00 |
| Washington Station—T. S. White | 4 00 |

Wholesale Market Report.

MONITOR OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, January 9, 1873.

FLOUR—The local market remains very quiet, while for export a fair inquiry had existed. Buyers show no advance for superfine; extra ranges from $5 to $5 25; choice, $5 25 to $5 50; and fancy, $5 50 to $5 75; Stockton and Sacramento at $5 25@5 50 in sax; $5 75@6 00 in bbls.

WHEAT—The market is quiet and unchanged rates, during the past week, the receipts continuing light. The Liverpool market was unchanged, remaining at 10s 8d for California, and 10s 9d@11s for Oregon; cargo lots quiet at 10s 6d@10s 7½d for shipping, and 10s 8d@10s 9d for milling. Shipping grades are unchanged rates, since our last. We quote coast at $1 30 @1 40; Oregon, $1 40@1 45; Chile, $1 40; Salter $1 40@1 42½; Sonora, $1 10@1 30.

BARLEY—The market has been dull, at unchanged rates, during the past week. Fair to choice are quoted at $1 15@1 25 per ctl.

OATS—The market has been dull, at unchanged rates, during the past week. Fair to choice are quoted at $1 40@1 60 per ctl.

CORN—Quotations are nominal at $1 12½@1 15 per ctl.

MIXED—Quotable at $1 05@1 10 per ctl.

RYE—Quotable at $1 05@1 10 per ctl.

BEANS—The market remains unchanged, and the following are the ruling prices: Pinks, $3 50@3 75; Reds, $4 50@4 75.

POTATOES—The receipts have been light, with a light demand. We quote the range at $1 00@1 25; Sweets, $1 50@1 75.

ONIONS—Quotable at $2 75@3 00 lb.

DRIED FRUITS—Quotations are given in small lots.

MIDDLINGS—We quote feed at $24@25 per ton.

BRAN—Quotable at $21@22 per ton.

BUCKWHEAT—Market quiet at $2 50@3 00 lb.

HAY—Is very quiet at $15@18 (Wheat), (Oat), and Mustard, $14@16 per ton.

HIDES—Are quiet. California dry 17½@18½c, and salted at 9@9½c per lb.

TALLOW—Is quiet at 6c per lb.

WOOL—The market has remained quiet during the past week, and sales are small except for choice fall clip. Most Fall remains consists largely of hairy and inferior wools, which are not wanted by the trade at present. Holders of such wools are disposed to part with their stock at the prices offered, preferring to let some other party speculate on it. We do not will show an improved issue, when they can sell at much better prices than at present. We continue our last week's quotations: Fall lower, 16@18c; good to choice 19@21c; extra choice, 22@23c.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California fresh, 40c in the bbl for fair to choice; Brine, 30@38c; Sacramento Valley, 35@40c; Oregon, 38@40c; California, 18@19c; Eastern, 14@16c.

CHEESE—California, factory in stores; Oregon, 10@12c; Eastern, 15@16c.

CURED MEATS.

Hams—California at 13½@15c lb; Oregon, 16c; Eastern do, 17@18c.

Bacon—California, at 11½@12½c lb; Eastern (sugar-cured Breakfast, 14@15c; Oregon, 12½c.

Pickled Pork—California, 8@9c lb; Oregon, none in the market; Eastern, in sax, 10½@11½c; do in cases, 12@13c; do in tcs, 11@12c.

FRESH MEATS.

Beef—For first quality, 6@6c ⅌ lb; for second and third quality, 5@5½c ⅌ lb.

Veal—4½@5½c ⅌ lb.

Mutton—4½@5c ⅌ lb.

Lamb—5@6c ⅌ lb.

Pork—Dressed, grain-fed, 7½@8c; on foot, grain-fed, 5½@6c per lb.

POULTRY AND GAME.

Prices as follows, large, ⅌ @ doz: Spring, Chickens, $6@7; Hens, $6@7; Roosters, $6@7.

Ducks—Wild Mallard, $3@4; Tame, $3@4.

Geese—Tame at $10@12 ⅌ @ doz.

Turkeys—Gobblers, $3@4; Dressed, 18@20c ⅌ lb.

Quail—$1@1 25 ⅌ @ doz.

Rabbits—Wild, $1@1 25 doz.

Hares—$1@1 50 ⅌ @ doz.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

DRY GOODS!
DRY GOODS!
FOR THE HOLIDAYS!

LANDERS, BYRNE & CO.,
NO. 4 THIRD STREET,
ARE NOW OPENING A SPLENDID STOCK OF DRY GOODS, suitable for HOLIDAY PRESENTS.
CONSISTING OF
BLACK SILKS from the best manufactories.
COLORED SILKS in all shades.
IRISH POPLINS, direct from Pim Bros., Dublin. In our
DRESS GOODS DEPARTMENT
Will be found a splendid line of colors in
EMPRESS CLOTH,
DIAGONAL AND MERINO POPLIN,
SATIN DE CHENE, in all shades,
VENICE VOILE SILKSTRIPES, in all shades,
PERSIA CLOTH, etc., etc.
Scotch and Poplin Plaids.
IN MOURNING GOODS
Our stock is the most complete in this city, consisting
BLACK POPLINS, DRAP DE ÉTÉ,
PARRAMATTAS and HENRIETTA CLOTH,
CASHMERES and CARLOTTA CLOTH,
BAREGE, FOULARD, CREPON,
BARREGE, EMPRESS & PARISIAN CLOTH.
A complete assortment of
HOSIERY,
GLOVES,
HANDKERCHIEFS,
EMBROIDERIES,
LACES, and
SMALL WARE.
HOUSEKEEPING GOODS
being a specialty with us, our patrons can always depend on finding this department well worthy of attention.
LANDERS, BYRNE & CO.,
No. 4 Third Street.

CONTINUATION OF BROWN & BARRY'S
GREAT
DRY GOODS SALE,
No. 114 FOURTH STREET.
BROWN & BARRY
WILL CONTINUE TO DISPOSE OF THEIR large and beautiful selected stock of DRY GOODS at FABULOUSLY LOW RATES
Formerly advertised. All marked in plain figures.
Brown & Barry's
Have also a large and beautiful assortment of real years' experience as a Machinist in the Eastern States, and in this city, having gone into business for himself in this line, hopes to receive a share of the public patronage. Repairing and Grinding Machines on the most reasonable terms, and short notice.
Sewing Machines adjusted, etc.
Beware of traveling humbugs.
Machines always on hand for sale or for rent by the month. Give him a call.
$10 MADE FROM 50 CENTS. CALL AND see for yourself. Or if you cannot call, send for circular, which tells how to make $10. R. L. WOLCOTT, 111 Chatham Square, New York. p-fri-1yeow

DRY GOODS, ETC.

KERBY, BYRNE & CO.,
HAVE JUST RECEIVED
From New York
LARGE AND WELL ASSORTED
ADDITIONS TO THEIR COMPLETE STOCK
—OF—
DRY GOODS
—COMPRISING—
SILKS AND DRESS GOODS
OF THE LATEST STYLES,
Suitable for Fall and Winter Wear.
ROBES DE CHAMBRE.

J. J. O'BRIEN & CO.,
606 MARKET STREET,
HAVE JUST RECEIVED FORTY CASES OF Fancy Goods, suitable for the present season, and consisting of the newest styles and most unique effects of Shawls,
Silks,
Poplins,
Waterproofs,
Blankets,
Flannels,
ROBES DE CHAMBRE.
J. J. O'BRIEN & CO. respectfully invite all intending purchasers to read the following list of prices, and satisfy themselves that they will find it to their advantage before purchasing elsewhere; for, most assuredly, a saving of from 10 to 25 per cent. can be effected:
10 pieces fine satin finished Grace Silk, $2 50 per yard; worth $3 50.
3 pieces heavy gros blue black silk, $1 50; well worth $1 75.
Black plain colored Silks, $1 75 per yard; reduced from $2 25.
20 pieces French striped Silks, reduced to half price.
Black Gros Grain Silks, 21 inch, $1 50; worth $2 per yard; 24 inch, $1 75; worth $2 25.
6 cases new Japanese Poplins, 37½ cents per yard; reduced from 50 cents.
3 cases extra heavy Mohair Poplins, 25 cents per yard; reduced from 37½ cents.
200 pieces black and colored Satin de Chêne, 10 cents per yard; worth 15 cents.
Black and colored French Merinos, 62½ cents per yard; reduced from $1.
Scotch Poplin Plaids, 25 cents per yard; half price.
Ladies' Cloaks, from $5 upward.
500 very handsome striped Wool Shawls, from $1 50 upward.
MOURNING GOODS.
Black Drap d'Été, Poplin Alpacas,
Cashmeres, Silk Alpacas,
Henrietta Cloth, Bombazines, Barèges.
Bombazines, Barèges.
A very nice Black Alpaca for 37½ cents per yard.
On account of the reduction in Wool, we have reduced all our Woolen Goods fully 25 per cent., and would respectfully solicit an early call.
J. J. O'BRIEN & CO.,
606 Market Street,
One door from Montgomery.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

SPECIAL
KEANE, O'CONNOR & CO.
We are Daily Opening Fresh Arrivals
—OF—
FRENCH AND ENGLISH
Fancy Dress Fabrics,
Drap D'Ete, Satinets,
Cashmere d'Ecosse, Merinos,
Cretonnes,
Double Merinos,
Empress Cloths,
Broche Epingle, Etc.,
IN ALL THE
Newest Shades of the Season.
BLACK DRESS FABRICS
Of the best textures and colors, including
THE NEW AND SUPERIOR ARMURE
"BLOOMING BLACK."
ONE CASE
DAMAGED
DRESS GOODS,
OF 12½ CENTS PER YARD.
SPECIAL ATTENTION
IS CALLED TO OUR
SHAWL DEPARTMENT
In which will be found the largest and assorted stock in the city.
KERBY, BYRNE & CO.
NO. 7
Montgomery St.
Broche and Cashmere
Long and Square Shawls
NORWICH AND OTTOMAS
REVERSIBLES.
Long and Square
Scotch Tartan Plaids
IN ALL THE CLASS
KEANE, O'CONNOR & CO.
107, 109 and 111 Kearny Street.
GREAT PREPARATIONS
FOR A BIG
FALL TRADE!
JOUVIN'S CELEBRATED
KID GLOVES
$1 50 PER PAIR.
KEANE, O'CONNOR & CO.
107, 109 and 111 Kearny Street.
READ THIS.
HEALTH FOR ALL
What is Wealth, or Power, or Life, without Health?
PERSONS AFFLICTED WITH ANY DISEASE of the Blood, or any other disease, should consult DR. AIKIN, who offers his services to the afflicted with confidence.
DR. AIKIN has the experience of large numbers of cases in private practice, and in the hospitals, and treats with unequaled success, all those who place themselves under his care. He has a large and complete supply of the best preparations of nature, and performs all operations in surgery with the utmost skill and success.
The Approved, Scientific Treatment given by DR. AIKIN
Cures Breast and Chronic Disease of the Uterus.
Spermatorrhœa, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Stricture, Kidney and Bladder Affections, Syphilis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Nervousness, Female Weakness, Scrofula, Fever Sores, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Piles, Fistula, Ulcers, Tumors, Cancers, Etc.
LADIES,
Married or widowed, who are suffering from ill-health, amount of speedy relief and early cure.
DR. AIKIN'S Female Pills are the best in the world. Warranted in all cases. Sent by mail, with full directions, to any address, secure from observation, on receipt of price, $5 per box.
Office and Infirmary, 737 Clay street, between Montgomery and Kearny, San Francisco, Cal.
Consultation Free. Hours from 9 A. M. to 4 P. M. Sundays, from 10 A. M. to 12 M.
Letters for advice must contain $5, and be addressed, registered letter, P. O. Order or Draft. All letters by return mail or express. Address
DR. AIKIN, 737 Clay street, San Francisco, Cal.
Office—737 Montgomery street, cor. Clay.
Opposite the Oriental Hotel, San Francisco, Cal. may1-ly
A GREAT OFFER! HOLIDAYS
HORACE WATERS, 481 Broadway, N. Y.
Will dispose of 100 PIANOS, MELODEONS and ORGANS, of three first-class makers, including several pianos in rosewood cases, 7 octaves, with the modern improvements, for $175 and upwards; 40 second-hand pianos, from $60 to $100; 25 PARLOR ORGANS (Mason & Hamlin's), in beautiful in style and perfect in tone order, for $65 to $90; also, 100 new and second-hand pianos and organs of other makers, for $10 and upwards for cash. Illustrated Catalogues mailed.

THE MONITOR!
The Only Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
LYONS & BARRY, - - - Publishers.
DENIS LYONS. JOHN T. BARRY.
DENIS LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.
OFFICE—522 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts. (Rooms 1, 7 and 8, up-stairs.)
All communications should be addressed to "LYONS & BARRY."
TERMS (Payable in Advance):
Served by Carriers, per week.....10c
Mail subscribers, per year.....$4 00
The Monitor and Catholic World, one year.....7 75
" " Godey's Lady's Book.....6 00
" " Demorest's Fashion Magazine.....6 00
" " Peterson's Ladies' Magazine.....3 50
ADVERTISING RATES:
1 square, 1 time.....$1 50 | 1 square, 4 months.....$ 6 00
" 1 month.....6 00 | " 6 months.....12 00
" 2 months.....7 00 | " 9 months.....15 00
" 3 months.....9 00 | " 1 year.....18 00
The above rates will be strictly adhered to.
Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

THE CRUSADE OF THE PERIOD.

BY JOHN MITCHEL—No. V.

TOO MUCH PROUDE.

Some readers, by this time, may be disposed to say, we have enough of Froude: he is unfriendly; a nobody-can-be-detected-lover, and no historian; and it is making too much of him to keep pursuing him in this way. Certainly, it is making too much of Froude, himself, whose utter pretensions I call on the public to judge. But the value of him as an "authority" might, perhaps, be questioned even by us at the time of the alleged "massacre" he was a boy; had never been in Ireland at all; was at school in England, like his father, a clergyman, in the city of Caen, in France; and it was only in the track of Cromwell's army that he took up his empty carpet-bag, and went to make his fortune in Ireland. A biographical sketch of this extraordinary person was written and published about six months before these present pages of his life, as if they were the chief points of interest. But the most remarkable part of the business is that these notices occur in his wit written at the end of his life. He strikes simply and sweetly enough, either, as if he meant to save space and time, and show himself as economist to the last of his days, or as certainly his most elegant art will on record, exhibiting some of the most accomplished specimens of social nullity, jostled with the penurious apologies of a genius mammon-scraper familiar with much of the sharp practice of the world. But his intimations are very brief, and the story of his acquaintance was one he would not care to tell at any length, very probably. He slurs things over, like Richard Boyle, first Earl of Cork.

"He sells enough, however, to show, that this gathering of Irish property were large and rapid. He says he was appointed to survey the Irish estates, and in this way made £9,000, which enabled him to buy smaller items, including salaries as doctor and as clerk, of the Council of Dublin, and to begin business in Dublin. He says that 'when men bought as much land for ten shillings as is 1085 yielded the same amount per annum.' Aubrey says he made brought in a rental of £18,000; which would be about £40,000, and over, at the present day, say $200,000."

The Doctor was returned to Parliament (Richard Cromwell's Parliament) in 1658. A certain Jerome Sankey was a member of the same Parliament, who was a large "adventurer" in Ireland upon the confiscated estates, as wait as Petty, but who had been overreached by the smart Doctor and his "ring" in the matter of landgrabbing. This is not wonderful. The Doctor as surveyor had many chances; and as he was relied upon for "setting out" lands for whole regiments and brigades, he had endless opportunities for buying up for little or nothing estates of great value. The Doctor had surveys made, and all the fieldwork done by private soldiers instructed by himself; "hardy men," says Prendergast, "fittest to ruffle with the rude spirits they were like to encounter, who might not see without a grudge their ancient inheritance, the only support of their wives and children, measured out before their eyes for strangers to occupy; and they must often, when at work, be in danger of a surprise from Tories." In fact many of them were surprised and captured, and lost their lives, as tithe-farmers and bailiffs did in later years; but, on the whole, Doctor Sir William and his friends had not only the large lands of which they were to give them, but could very often, when some Crom-wellian officer or soldier came to see his lot, gravely show him a few leagues of quaking black bog, and the poor fellow would be glad to sell his estate for a horse to ride away upon; so that the county Meath (million about the "White Horse of the Peppers" was not only true in fact, but was only a sample of many bargains in Ireland made which took place in after days, under the prudent, administration of the Doctor. In short, he had so many advantages over his brethren of the sharpers, that Sir Jerome Sankey could stand it no longer. Especially there was the case of some very fine lands, the Liberties of Limerick.

One Captain Winkworth, a prayerful officer of the Protector's army, had obtained an order for this coveted district; at least the Captain thought his order covered that place, and so he presented his credentials to the Doctor, as Surveyor-General, who told him those lands were "reserved." This formed one of the many charges brought by Sir Jerome against the Doctor in his speech in Parliament. "Why, then, Mr. Speaker (said Sir Jerome, turning to Captain Winkworth; Captain Winkworth came with an order for the Liberties of Limerick; but the Doctor said, 'Captain will you sell? Will you sell?' 'No,' said the Captain, 'it is the best land in the land.' Then said the Doctor, 'this brandy sell. Why, then, my dear, I will buy it.' And so the Liberties are rent for your master, meaning the Lord Deputy," and so forth. In short, the Doctor was a match for Sir Jerome Sankey's real cause of quarrel with him was that the Petty "had stopped Sankey's mouth with money for rejecting and turning and scrue fallen him by lot, and enabling him arbitrarily to elect the same quantity of land, thus rejecting a lot by himself, what God had predetermined for his lot." The Doctor retorted upon Sir Jerome with his own libraries; and we learn from it, that in the year 1674, Lord Essex was soliciting from the Earl of Feather Sir Jerome's valuable grant for Temple—five hundred pounds a year "the Orfordest," says Aubrey. And the Mimery seems to have made the re-publication of Temple's History an objection against that grant, which the Lord Essex, on the part of his friend, thus endeavors to remove:

Extract of a Letter from the Earl of Essex, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, to Mr. Secretary Coventry, dated

"I am to acknowledge the receipt of yours of the 23d of December, wherein you mention a book that was printed in Holland concerning the cruelties committed in Ireland at the beginning of the late war. Upon further inquiry I find that Dr. Maple, Master of the Rolls here, author of that book, was the person sent to by several stationers of London, to have his consent to the printing thereof. But he assures me that he utterly (long for his) and would not have printed it did it without his knowledge. Thus much I thought it to add to what I formerly said, touching that business." Sir Ralph Bankes might do this gentleman right, in case it be suspected, but I see very scant in publishing this new edition."

"He utterly denies it!" that is, did not absolutely affirm it. The proposal came to Petty, and he published the book, but only denied that he had given permission, or any endeavors to reprint the offensive thing; and his friend Lord Essex pleads this in order "to do the gentleman right." It is true that Petty's sensuality was made; poor Sir John Temple never had enough. He was already an "Adventurer" under the Parliamentary arrangement for dividing the confiscated lands; he had invested a part of his "share" here," and I find his name amongst the subscribers to the fund of the "gentlemen adventurers;" but he always wanted more, more, being the son of a horse-leech's daughter; and he got more and more. No some innocent reader, greener than the rest, will say, well, at least the poor man was ashamed at last of his naughty book and endeavored to make people forget it. Alas! no, he was not ashamed, but the Information had occurred in the meantime—the Stuarts were come back; Charles II. was king; about the court there was supposed to be much Papistry; and a hardworking Protestant gentleman that he former zealous labors in doing the work of the Lord" might not meet with such recognition and encouragement as Sir John Temple received of under the godly government of the Lord Protector.

But Temple's abandonment and repudiation of his nasty work does not suit Proude at all. Proude has no idea of permitting a man who has all such a fine cockatrice egg to thing it aside to rot; no, he, Proude, will pick up that egg, warm it, sit on it, hoping to hatch it into a venomous breed. It is true, the egg is not a Protestant egg, and true we Protestants have noose, which we must hold when things grow too fetid.

So much for Temple. "Hand Temple," says Proude, "whatever else you read, you who would form an independent opinion."

DOCTOR PETTY.

The Doctor is perhaps, next after Temple, the favorite authority relied upon by our impertinent historian; although in citing the Doctor at all Proude feels that he is making a too great concession to Irish susceptibilities. From Temple's account of 154,000 Protestants, whose throats were cut in Ulster alone, the Doctor, in his estimate, subtracts 116,000; and Petty is mentioned by Proude as an authority not likely to be unfavorable to the Irish; so much he claims for him in one of his lectures; and in his book he terms that clever doctor "a coolheaded, sceptical sort of man," whose computation is surely not excessive. Cool-headed! Well this is true; a cooler head or a cooler hand did not appear in those days within the four seas of Ireland than Dr. Petty. The value of him as an "authority" might, perhaps, be questioned even by us at the time of the alleged "massacre" he was a boy; had never been in Ireland at all; was at school in England, like his father, a clergyman, in the city of Caen, in France; and it was only in the track of Cromwell's army that he took up his empty carpet-bag, and went to make his fortune in Ireland. A biographical sketch of this extraordinary person was written and published about six months before these present pages of his life, as if they were the chief points of interest. But the most remarkable part of the business is that these notices occur in his wit written at the end of his life. He strikes simply and sweetly enough either, as if he meant to save space and time, and show himself as economist to the last of his days, or as certainly his most elegant art will on record, exhibiting some of the most accomplished specimens of social nullity, jostled with the penurious apologies of a genius mammon-scraper familiar with much of the sharp practice of the world. But his intimations are very brief, and the story of his acquaintance was one he would not care to tell at any length, very probably. He slurs things over, like Richard Boyle, first Earl of Cork.

"He sells enough, however, to show, that this gathering of Irish property were large and rapid. He says he was appointed to survey the Irish estates, and in this way made £9,000, which enabled him to buy smaller items, including salaries as doctor and as clerk, of the Council of Dublin, and to begin business in Dublin. He says that 'when men bought as much land for ten shillings as is 1085 yielded the same amount per annum.' Aubrey says he made brought in a rental of £18,000; which would be about £40,000, and over, at the present day, say $200,000."

The Doctor was returned to Parliament (Richard Cromwell's Parliament) in 1658. A certain Jerome Sankey was a member of the same Parliament, who was a large "adventurer" in Ireland upon the confiscated estates, as wait as Petty, but who had been overreached by the smart Doctor and his "ring" in the matter of landgrabbing. This is not wonderful. The Doctor as surveyor had many chances; and as he was relied upon for "setting out" lands for whole regiments and brigades, he had endless opportunities for buying up for little or nothing estates of great value. The Doctor had surveys made, and all the fieldwork done by private soldiers instructed by himself; "hardy men," says Prendergast, "fittest to ruffle with the rude spirits they were like to encounter, who might not see without a grudge their ancient inheritance, the only support of their wives and children, measured out before their eyes for strangers to occupy; and they must often, when at work

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

IRELAND.

The Ballot in Cork.

The working of the ballot in Cork seems to have given general satisfaction. The town was perfectly quiet, there was not even much excitement round the polling-booths; and, in fact, the indifference of the matter given in the case of Derry would apply in the case of Cork, except that in the latter place there were many more absentee-tionists, both relatively and absolutely, than in the former. However, there was a larger number of absentee-tionists in Cork at the last general election, which was held under the open system of voting. The only violation of the provisions of the Ballot Act recorded is laid to the charge of a magistrate, named Uskies, who acted as one of the Conservative candidate's personation agents. It is charged that although he subscribed a declaration of secrecy, he disclosed how an illiterate voter polled, and on Tuesday he appeared at the Cork Police Court to answer that charge. Mr. Rongan, himself, was the complainant. After a short discussion, the case was dismissed; but as the decision was not given "on the merits," but because of a purely technical point raised by the accused—that the writ, or an attested copy of the writ, for holding the election was not produced to show that the election had taken place, Mr. Uskies will be summoned again. We may mention that, if convicted of the charge, that magistrate may be sentenced to six months' imprisonment.—Nation, December 14.

Heavy Taxation.

In several counties in Ireland bitter complaints have been made of the heavy taxation to which the people are subjected by the additional force of police quartered in different counties under the Coercion Acts. At a late special session in Mayo an application was made for £1,276, for half a year's extra police duty. Mr. O'Malley, a magistrate, denounced it as monstrous, and handed in a resolution protesting against it. There would be no excuse for the continuation of the extra police. Mayo is particularly tranquil, and yet it is enormously taxed for police. "It is very satisfactory," said the Chairman of Swinford Special Session, a few days since, "that our business has concluded without a single claim appearing for the loss of cattle by malicious injury. It is a matter for congratulation that in one of the most thickly populated baronies of the country I may say in the province, there is no claim of the kind has been made at this session, or at the last session, or at the one preceding." We notice, too, that Limerick also complains, and that Mr. Mossell, M. P., was the chief grumbler at a recent meeting. The Postmaster-General and other friends of Mr. Gladstone feel the shoe pinching, and dislike the place; but they ought not to forget that they all voted for the Coercion Bill, from the effect of which they are now suffering.—London Universe, December 14.

The Phœnix Park Assaults.

The case of Mr. A. M. Sullivan against Under-Secretary Burke and other Castle officials for brutal maltreatment at the Phœnix Park meeting of August twelve months, came before the Chief Justice two or three times since the publication of our last number. Mr. Sullivan's counsel applied for an immediate trial on grounds of what took place in reference to the learned Judge's Bench on Tuesday. The Crown counsel, curiously enough, opposed the application, and the Chief Justice at last decided to postpone the trial till the next after-sitting. He said that the affidavit of the plaintiff "had completely exculpated him from any blame for the fatality that prevented the early trial of the case," and he acknowledged that several of the reasons advanced in support of having an early trial were cogent and forcible. Nevertheless, the fact that some legal points in the case of Mr. P. J. O'Byrne vs. Harrington and others were soon to be decided by the Court of Exchequer, together with the possibility that Mr. Sullivan's case would not be concluded before Christmas, induced him, he said, to think that the best course would be to postpone the trial till next term.—Nation, December 14.

Landlord Rage.

The landlord organs in this country and several of the English newspapers have gone into a rage over the formation of the Farmers' Defence Association in Kildare. They have raised the old cry of "confiscation," declaring that the tenants desire to deprive the landlords of a portion of their property, and the Times says that the London Parliament will never sanction the demands of the Athy Association. One or two of our Irish landlords, too, have taken up the same line. Lord Bandon, on Wednesday, at a meeting of the Ballinrobe Farmers' Club, referred to the agitation on the estate of the Duke of Leinster, and protested in strong terms "we are told, against the attacks which have been made against his noble kinsman." "He declared," we are further told, "that the object of the agitation was simply to revive the cry for fixity of tenure on one hand, and to pretend to put forward when the Land Bill was before the House of Commons, which was simply a demand that the property of the landlord should be handed over to the tenant." We really thought the landlords of Ireland had by this time given up talking in this wild manner; but it appears many of them, like the French exiles, have learned nothing and forgotten nothing in whatever during the last few years. As to the assertion that fixity of tenure was not demanded while the Land Bill was under discussion in the House of Commons, we can only say that outside the House—in Ireland—the cry for that right has been unceasing that time ceased to be raised. It is gratifying to note that his lordship's remarks did not meet with any favor from the Ballinrobe Club. We are significantly told that "they only laughed at them." They fell perfectly flat, although they fell from aristocratic lips.—Nation, Dec. 14.

A Strange Reason for a Postponement.

A meeting of magistrates of the county of Limerick was held on Saturday, at which a resolution was unanimously adopted declaring the one hundred and twenty-eight extra police at present stationed in the county no longer necessary. The meeting was presided over by the lord lieutenant of the county, who stated that the cost of the extra police was £8,760 a year. He quoted the statistics of "reported outrages" and "agrarian outrages" in 1871 in Limerick, Galway, Clare, Longford, and Leitrim, and showed that, allowing for the difference of population, Limerick presented a more favorable return than any of the other counties enumerated, none of which are burdened with extra police. The governor of the county jail had also informed him that the average number of prisoners under his charge had gradually decreased from ninety in 1856 to forty-two in the present year. The governor had also informed him that by far the greater number of serious outrages committed during the last two years for which persons at present in custody are to be committed, with but few exceptions, in the eastern part of the county. This state of things could be attributed to nothing but the most lamentable revival of those faction feuds, but for which exception the county would be almost entirely free from crime. He sincerely wished that any words he might express could influence those misguided persons, and that if for no better or nobler reason, they would, for the honor of their county, remove the only blot there now remained on the character of the county. The number of crimes reported to the police last year was one hundred and eighteen, and of these only eight were of an agrarian nature, and these latter were confined to a very small angle of the county.—Universe, December 14.

Orange Bigotry.

A resolution was passed a few days since at a meeting of the "Loyal Orange Institution of Ireland," which deserves being recorded here as an instance of the low-minded ness and shameful bigotry of the Orange body in this country. It says: "That, as the question of Irish education is likely soon prominently to engage the attention of Parliament, this meeting desires especially to express its strongest condemnation of the demand for denominational education put forward by the Romish prelates, and that it recognises in its fullest extent the principle that has ever guided the proceedings of the Orange Institution—namely, that education should be based on the Word of God, and the teaching of a free and open Bible." The Orange body, however, does not possess a monopoly of such bigotry on the subject of Irish education. The General Synod of the Disestablished Church only last year passed a similar resolution.—Nation, December 14.

Death of a Celebrated Watchmaker.

The name of Cullen's Wood will be long grateful memory by all true lovers of faith and country, as the sterling patriot and the munificent benefactor of religion—is universally regretted at the announcement of the death of his worthy and much respected brother, Mr. Patrick Donegan, Sr. Mr. Donegan succeeded to the business of his honored brother, and it is not too much to say that he and Mr. Donegan, Jr., conducted it in a manner fully worthy of the high fame the establishment had won under its founder. The deceased gentleman was possessed of many rare and honest virtues, and will be sincerely regretted by a large circle of friends.—Nation, December 14.

New Monthly Journal.

The Dublin Freeman says: "We are hearing glad tidings of a new monthly—long a discredit to our city—that we could not maintain an Irish periodical—is at length about to be taken away. The first day of the coming year will be the day, and we hope sincerely to a long life, the Irish Monthly Illustrated Journal, and if the contents at all shadow forth its reality, we shall have an issue worthy of the old repute of Irishmen as men of letters. The editor named is Mr. T. D. Lewis, a man of eminence in literature, a poet of the first order, whose genius—and we do not misapply the word—has made him known and honored wherever the excellence and modesty are appreciated."

Miscellaneous.

On the 7th, breaking the ceremony of Convent of Loughrea, Miss Egan, of Edgehill, taking the veil.

The supplementary collection in the town of Sligo for the completion of the new Cathedral has already reached the large sum of £1,000.

Mostly's Mind was celebrated on the 4th of December at the parish church, Donoghmore, for the Rev. Thomas Mostyn, in the twenty-seven years of age at the time of his death.

The Sisters of Charity have taken possession of a building in Kingstown, which they intend as a nursery hospital. As the nearest hospital to the township is in Dublin, this will be a most valuable institution.

At the last meeting of the Board of Superintendence of the Nenagh jail an application was made by the Very Rev. Dr. O'Malley, for the admission of the Sisters of Mercy to the female prisoners, was readily granted.

At the Dublin Cathedral, December 7th, a solemn office and High Mass was celebrated for the repose of the soul of the late Hon. James Stopple. His Eminence the Cardinal Archbishop, assisted by the Very Rev. Canons Murphy and MacMahon, officiated at the throne.

A general meeting of the friends and parishioners of the Most Rev. Dr. John MacHale, Archbishop of Tuam, was held in the vestry of St. Brigid's church, Blanchardstown, on the 8th ult., for the purpose of considering the address to be presented to his Lordship. The subscription already handed in amounts to £150.

The Brehon Law Commission have presented seventeen volumes of the manuscript translations made under their direction by the late Dr. O'Donovan and Professor O'Curry, to the Library of the Catholic University, and seventeen documents have been placed in the Irish Record Office of the University, under the care of Bryan O'Looney, Esq.

The Freeman gives the following description of the pass or ballo for the absence of SS. Augustine and John, Dublin: "The first and largest ball weighs twenty-five hundred weight, and the remainder of the series gradually decrease in size and weight, the smallest of the whole series, to the eighth—the smallest of all. The total weight of the peal exceeds five tons; the largest bell of which gives the note of the semitone tenture and purest tone; and comprises within its compass three to be as true to the notes of a piano. All the bells are ornamented with national emblems, comprising shamrocks; and the great 'tenor' in addition bears the name in Latin of the benefactor who, in a cost of £1,500, presented the peal to the new church, now rapidly approaching completion."

ENGLAND.

English and German Catholics.

The Colleges of the bishops of England in the German episcopate has been hailed with delight by all members and friends of the Church in Germany. At the meeting of the "Constitutional party" of Rhineland, held at Cologne on the 25th ultimo, the great champion of the Catholic cause, Herr Bendit, spoke of the address in the most enthusiastic terms. He pointed out the great difference between the spirit evinced by the signatories of the letter and the rabid fanaticism and dismal bigotry of the Protestant Alliance, embodied in the address they sent to Bismarck some months ago. "The letter was replete with hatred, and bad for its object to encourage the Chancellor in adopting oppressive measures against citizens of the empire; the former, on the contrary, breathed nothing but peace, and, by the sentiments expressed in it, appealed only to the eternal laws of justice." On the motion of the chairman, the meeting gave three cheers to the episcopate of England. The cheers were heartily given, and these cheers resound on the shores of England and there proclaim to the people that, just as the English Catholics have victoriously come out of a struggle of three centuries, the Catholics of Germany also will persevere in their labors until they have gained the day."—Universe, December 14.

Horsman Again!

Mr. Horsman, it is said, is going to receive a place in Mr. Gladstone's administration. We wonder what department will be handed over to this tender mercies. We hope he will not be allowed to meddle with Ireland or with education. Speaking the other day on public affairs it is said that there must be a "national system of compulsory undenominational education and school boards in every parish, the members of which must be elected by the ratepayers. There were two questions upon which the Government had promised legislation. They were going to bring in a bill on Irish education, and although several other Governments had failed in satisfying the demands of the Catholics, Mr. Gladstone was going to try. Whatever the people of Catholic ladies presented the Pontiff with an address stating that the Government party in Parliament would insist upon, and that was that the education of the population of Ireland should not be handed over to the priests. Would Mr. Horsman have the kindness to state who have a right to educate children the Catholic children of Ireland as Catholics? What should he say to those who would exclude Presbyterians from the control of schools (mark the reason) on account of a special service having been solemnised, by which the Roman Catholic Church in the province was placed under the special protection of the Most Sacred Heart of Jesus." So it is a crime in Prussia to place the education of the Catholic Church under the protection of the Divine Redeemer. Heard the Saturday Review will doubtless vindicate this act of Prussian anti-Christian tyranny as a noble piece of wise legislation. Well, what matters it, that journal will say—when masters is that Jesus Christ is acknowledged, provided the Catholics of Posen are persecuted!—Weekly Register, Dec. 14.

ITALY.

Italian News.

Naples has been visited by a frightful tempest, which has occasion great loss to the inhabitants. The people are thankful for reason why Victor Emanuel is there again; or did he feel out of place in the Holy City on the great festival of the 8th? However the map be, he took care to quit Rome early on the Feast of the Immaculate Conception. We are sometimes accused of exaggeration in our statements of the condition of unhappy Italy; but this is the present degradation. The accusation is, of course, false, yet in our defense let us quote the language of one who never yet had a good word either for Rome who under the Pope or for Italy when ruled by its lawful princes. Here is what he said and printed on January last: "Beyond all dispute, crimes of blood have greatly increased and are yet increasing throughout Italy. In the provinces of Catanzaro and Cosenza there is no security for property or life. The increase of crime alarms even Italians (than it must be alarming). . . . Not merely in the Romagna, but in the other provinces, the knife is in every man's hand and life is insecure."

Pius IX. received lately deputations from the United States and also from Ocania. They were the bearers to the Sovereign Pontiff of the expression of the devotedness of the faithful of these parts to the head of the Church, and of their indignation at the persecutions of which the Holy See is the victim.

The Court of Assize at Frosinone have acquitted a Government employé, found guilty of forgery, for the unheard of reason the verdict states that the accused had yielded to a morally irresistible pressure! We fancy that many of Victor Emmanuel's agents, from Venosta upwards and downwards, could have done the same.

A consistory will be held on the 16th, at which the Bishops of Aulon and Mende and the Coadjutor of Bordeaux will be preconized.

The Holy Father has ordered the first volume of the history of the Vatican Council to be translated into French, German and Italian.

The law against religious houses still continues to be a subject of fierce discussion both in and out of the Chambers. May confusion wait upon all their councils, must be the devout aspiration of every worthy child of the Church.

On the feast of the Immaculate Conception the Holy Father gave Communion to more than one hundred persons. On the same day a number of Catholic ladies presented the Pontiff with an address stating that the Government party in Parliament would insist upon, and that was that the education of the population of Ireland should not be handed over to the priests. Would Mr. Horsman have the kindness to state who have a right to educate children the Catholic children of Ireland as Catholics? What should he say to those who would exclude Presbyterians from the control of schools (mark the reason) on account of a special service having been solemnised, by which the Roman Catholic Church in the province was placed under the special protection of the Most Sacred Heart of Jesus." So it is a crime in Prussia to place the education of the Catholic Church under the protection of the Divine Redeemer. Heard the Saturday Review will doubtless vindicate this act of Prussian anti-Christian tyranny as a noble piece of wise legislation. Well, what matters it, that journal will say—when masters is that Jesus Christ is acknowledged, provided the Catholics of Posen are persecuted!—Weekly Register, Dec. 14.

GERMANY.

Protestantism.

The Emperor and his evil counselor are pursuing with vigor their war upon the Church. The Minister of Public Instruction, Falk, has appointed a Protestant professor, named Professor, on the plea avowed by him the week before last that the dogma of Papal infallibility is displeasing to the Prussian Government, and therefore it is their duty to uphold priests and Professors who come under the censure of the Church for refusing obedience to the decree of the Vatican Council. The appointment was made on occasion by the Minister is in direct opposition to the obligation that rests upon the Prussian Government of providing for the public schools for the instruction of Catholic pupils by Catholic teachers; and it is unjustified that a teacher excommunicated by the proper authority for holding heretical opinions upon an article of Faith, cannot be a Catholic. Nevertheless, the Prussian Government insists upon the appointment. As the nearest hospital to the township is in Dublin, this will be a most valuable institution.

At the last meeting of the Board of Superintendence of the Nenagh jail an application was made by the Very Rev. Dr. O'Malley, for the admission of the Sisters of Mercy to the female prisoners, was readily granted.

At the Dublin Cathedral, December 7th, a solemn office and High Mass was celebrated for the repose of the soul of the late Hon. James Stopple. His Eminence the Cardinal Archbishop, assisted by the Very Rev. Canons Murphy and MacMahon, officiated at the throne.

A general meeting of the friends and parishioners of the Most Rev. Dr. John MacHale, Archbishop of Tuam, was held in the vestry of St. Brigid's church, Blanchardstown, on the 8th ult., for the purpose of considering the address to be presented to his Lordship. The subscription already handed in amounts to £150.

The Brehon Law Commission have presented seventeen volumes of the manuscript translations made under their direction by the late Dr. O'Donovan and Professor O'Curry, to the Library of the Catholic University, and seventeen documents have been placed in the Irish Record Office of the University, under the care of Bryan O'Looney, Esq.

The Freeman gives the following description of the pass or ballo for the absence of SS. Augustine and John, Dublin: "The first and largest bell weighs twenty-five hundred weight, and the remainder of the series gradually decrease in size and weight, the smallest of the whole series, to the eighth—the smallest of all. The total weight of the peal exceeds five tons; the largest bell of which gives the note of the semitone tenture and purest tone; and comprises within its compass three to be as true to the notes of a piano. All the bells are ornamented with national emblems, comprising shamrocks; and the great 'tenor' in addition bears the name in Latin of the benefactor who, in a cost of £1,500, presented the peal to the new church, now rapidly approaching completion."

ENGLAND.

English and German Catholics.

The Colleges of the bishops of England in the German episcopate has been hailed with delight by all members and friends of the Church in Germany. At the meeting of the "Constitutional party" of Rhineland, held at Cologne on the 25th ultimo, the great champion of the Catholic cause, Herr Bendit, spoke of the address in the most enthusiastic terms. He pointed out the great difference between the spirit evinced by the signatories of the letter and the rabid fanaticism and dismal bigotry of the Protestant Alliance, embodied in the address they sent to Bismarck some months ago. "The letter was replete with hatred, and bad for its object to encourage the Chancellor in adopting oppressive measures against citizens of the empire; the former, on the contrary, breathed nothing but peace, and, by the sentiments expressed in it, appealed only to the eternal laws of justice." On the motion of the chairman, the meeting gave three cheers to the episcopate of England. The cheers were heartily given, and these cheers resound on the shores of England and there proclaim to the people that, just as the English Catholics have victoriously come out of a struggle of three centuries, the Catholics of Germany also will persevere in their labors until they have gained the day."—Universe, December 14.

Horsman Again!

Mr. Horsman, it is said, is going to receive a place in Mr. Gladstone's administration. We wonder what department will be handed over to this tender mercies. We hope he will not be allowed to meddle with Ireland or with education. Speaking the other day on public affairs it is said that there must be a "national system of compulsory undenominational education and school boards in every parish, the members of which must be elected by the ratepayers. There were two questions upon which the Government had promised legislation. They were going to bring in a bill on Irish education, and although several other Governments had failed in satisfying the demands of the Catholics, Mr. Gladstone was going to try. Whatever the people of Catholic ladies presented the Pontiff with an address stating that the Government party in Parliament would insist upon, and that was that the education of the population of Ireland should not be handed over to the priests. Would Mr. Horsman have the kindness to state who have a right to educate children the Catholic children of Ireland as Catholics? What should he say to those who would exclude Presbyterians from the control of schools (mark the reason) on account of a special service having been solemnised, by which the Roman Catholic Church in the province was placed under the special protection of the Most Sacred Heart of Jesus." So it is a crime in Prussia to place the education of the Catholic Church under the protection of the Divine Redeemer. Heard the Saturday Review will doubtless vindicate this act of Prussian anti-Christian tyranny as a noble piece of wise legislation. Well, what matters it, that journal will say—when masters is that Jesus Christ is acknowledged, provided the Catholics of Posen are persecuted!—Weekly Register, Dec. 14.

ITALY.

Italian News.

Naples has been visited by a frightful tempest, which has occasion great loss to the inhabitants. The people are thankful for reason why Victor Emanuel is there again; or did he feel out of place in the Holy City on the great festival of the 8th? However the map be, he took care to quit Rome early on the Feast of the Immaculate Conception. We are sometimes accused of exaggeration in our statements of the condition of unhappy Italy; but this is the present degradation. The accusation is, of course, false, yet in our defense let us quote the language of one who never yet had a good word either for Rome who under the Pope or for Italy when ruled by its lawful princes. Here is what he said and printed on January last: "Beyond all dispute, crimes of blood have greatly increased and are yet increasing throughout Italy. In the provinces of Catanzaro and Cosenza there is no security for property or life. The increase of crime alarms even Italians (than it must be alarming). . . . Not merely in the Romagna, but

JOHN P. PRENDERGAST.

I.

When Fronde, with blast fury blind,
To strike at Ireland fell inclined,
He wrote a book, to show his mind,
Vamped full of lies of every kind.
But though his venom thus was vent,
The Irish people were content
To let the thing pass by unheed,
By patient John P. Prendergast!

II.

'Tis false and foul as black can be—
The black with spite and enmity;
But every lie, as all may see,
Is caught and smashed by John P. P.
Hurrah for John P. Prendergast!
His name's Irish, low and base,
He drags down to it, its Saxon face,
And shames with Irish, as with a mace,
The slandering of the fifth race.
So here's to John P. Prendergast,
Long may his strength and spirit last—
May pain and surgeon never cast
Their shadows on John P. Prendergast!

IV.

And grateful Ireland vows to-day,
She knows and feels, as well she may,
What friends she has in Prendergast!
While John P. stands in the way,
No lying Fronde can have his say,
Who strikes for Ireland hard and fast;
Come, friends, as with a trumpet blast,
Hurrah for John P. Prendergast!

—Dublin Nation.

Another Home Rule Victory.

Cork has done well. Nobly has the capital of the South of Ireland responded to its national feelings, and by a sweeping majority of about eight hundred votes sent to Parliament a bold and unflinching advocate of the glorious principle of Home Rule. The victory was double; for not only was the Conservative Mr. Pim (personally a most excellent man) defeated, but Mr. Shaw, a Protestant Home Ruler, was returned. They had been some fear that the Nationalist might fail. Mr. Mathew bears a name dear to every Irish heart, and who is one of whom Cardinal Wiseman said that he was the most beautiful character he ever met. But let us hope that those to whom Ireland has confided such precious interests will be faithful to their trust, and that they will drive the Irish nation at home cheer them on, and also take a lesson from the Irish exiles who, from their adopted home beyond the Atlantic, gaze wistfully across the ocean at the struggle for the rights of the "old land." The illustrious dead speak to them from their graves, and exhort them to be true to fatherland. Glorious Grattan—

The gallant man who led the van bids them to think how in 1782 Ireland won Home Rule by union amongst her children, and that the nation had no part in the glory gain by which legislative freedom was won for her people. He bids them not to think how he toiled to win Home Rule, but how, rejecting compromise, he died a repealer. Let the Home Rule party in Parliament remember how, "in the brave days of old," one dauntless soldier saved Ireland. They are many, and they have a nation at their back. Let them be true to the pledges they have given. If they fail, they will fail in an honorable battle; if they succeed, they will win the noblest of all statesmen's dearest right.—Universe, December 14.
To Irish liberty.

Werner, the great German dramatist, at the age of forty-two became not only a Catholic, but a priest. His writings show he regarded the religion he embraced as the chief blessing of his life, and that he clung to it as the anchor of his soul. In reply to a remark that he intended returning to Protestantism, he said: "It is impossible that a soul in bliss should return into the grave, as that is one who, like me, after a life of error and search, has found the priceless jewel of truth, should, I will not say give up the same, but hesitate to sacrifice for it blood and life, nay, many things perhaps far dearer with joyful heart, when the one good cause is concerned."

The Suppression of Religious Orders.

The following admirable article from the pen of the illustrious Monsignor Nardi appears in La Voce della Verita. It is distinguished by the ability and eloquence of the writer, and as a clear solution pre-serves some of the characteristics which render it so powerful in the original:

The bill is made, the law will likewise be made, and it will probably turn out to be worse than the bill. We have never doubted that it would come; we never had the slightest hope that reason, right, or the diplomatic appeals of any of the Catholic powers could save it; and least of all could itself to be stronger than they are, be able to check the progress of the ever-growing and more boldness the greater faces which is now in the world, and that is the revolution. It is to this terrible force that the Italian Government owes its origin and its existence, and it cries to this Goverment as, according to the fable, the voice of Eternal Justice cries to the Wandering Jew, "to go on!" And it must go on, no matter by what means, no matter at what cost, for to halt is death. It is about twenty-two years since the Italian Piedmontese Government celebrated the terrible solemnity of the mass day in the history of the present writer's mind that day in the when, coming out of the Cathedral of Turin, where a vast body of people were on their knees, praying fervently; he saw the walls of the neighboring houses and buildings covered with impious posters, and with colored pictures of the Strega or Magic Woman, representing the Catholic Church, pious, statuettes, intirres, and the like, in a large, cauldron, over which were looking on and did not interfere. I said to myself: "This Government will go far; the Sanhedrim of Freemasonry will be consulted as in Italy itself a Government which serves as a bulwark against that religion which it hates." And this came to pass. One of the Cardonari, as a chastisement of God for its boldly

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINS JAN. 74.

January
19—Sunday—Second Sunday after Epiphany. Feast of the Holy Name of Jesus. St. Marius and Companions, Martyrs.
20—Monday—St. Fabian and Sebastian, Martyrs.
21—Tuesday—St. Agnes, Virgin and Martyr.
22—Wednesday—St. Vincent and Anastasius, Martyrs.
23—Thursday—Espousals of the B. V. Mary and St. Joseph. St. Emerentiana, Virgin and Martyr.
24—Friday—St. Timothy, Bishop and Martyr.
25—Saturday—Conversion of St. Paul.

THE MONITOR,

THE ONLY

Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....JANUARY 18, 1873.

HALTING ON THE BRINK.

It is reported by telegraph that Prince BISMARCK has really fallen into disfavor with Emperor WILLIAM, and that his retirement from office is not a ruse to cover up further intrigues against the peace of Europe. The cause alleged for this sudden fall from power is, we think, quite sufficient to account for it. The Emperor, we are told, got alarmed at the extreme to which his Chancellor was pushing the persecution of the Catholics, and refused to countenance any more proscriptive proceedings. This proves that the monarch possesses far more political sagacity than his minister. A man intriguer, BISMARCK has probably no superior living. The manner in which he prepared the sudden rise of Prussia from the position of a comparatively insignificant kingdom to that of the dominating power in Europe, was wonderfully astute and admirably calculated to succeed; but, like many another skilful diplomatist, the realisation of the grand scheme of his life upset the balance of his judgment. He did not know where to stop.

Not satisfied with creating a German Empire, he wanted to create a German Church also, in order that the Sovereign for the time being might be absolute master of the souls and bodies of his subjects. Because several of the German Bishops were what was called "Ultramontanists"—that is, opposed to the promulgation of the doctrine of Papal Infallibility, believing firmly in it meantime—he fancied it would be easy to push them into schism, and so cut off the Prussian Catholics from communion with the Holy See. But he reckoned without his host. Even the Protestant Catholics are suffering cannot fail to have a very discouraging effect upon them and revive their pro-Austrian sympathies. This is precisely what the Emperor saw, and his minister did not, in spite of his great political astuteness. Catholics are either an immensely preponderating majority, or else a very powerful minority, in Bavaria, in the Rhenish provinces, in Westphalia, in Wurtemburg, in Soabia, in Francosia, in Prussian-Poland. The inhabitants of Stillesvig-Holstein are already fiercely anti-Prussian in their sentiments, as is conclusively shown by the almost defiant address to Emperor WILLIAM drawn up by their representatives. Of the disposition of the natives of Alsace and Lorraine, it is totally unnecessary to speak.

Here, then, we have, as the result of BISMARCK'S personal rule, across the conclusion of peace, the surrounding of Prussia with a regular cordon of subjects and allies, so disaffected as to be ready to throw themselves into the arms of any power likely to free them from exacting and persecuting masters! It is no wonder that the Emperor drew back and refused to follow the imprudent counsels of his over-zealous Chancellor before surrendering the sword-and discontent had given place to open revolt.

Even now it is a debatable question whether irreparable injury has not been inflicted on the Empire. If WILLIAM I. has not sufficient firmness to retrace his steps—to undo the wrongs and oppressions inflicted upon innocent persons by the tyrannical policy of Prince BISMARCK—the downfall of Germany as, at present constituted cannot be possibly long deferred. For Catholics, this phase of the German question has a most instructive moral. It must show them what is the only certain safeguard against the peace of Europe. The cause alleged for this sudden fall from power is, we think, quite sufficient to account for it. The Emperor, we are told, got alarmed at the extreme to which his Chancellor was pushing the persecution of the Catholics, and refused to countenance any more proscriptive proceedings. This proves that the monarch possesses far more political sagacity than his minister. A man intriguer, BISMARCK has probably no superior living. The manner in which he prepared the sudden rise of Prussia from the position of a comparatively insignificant kingdom to that of the dominating power in Europe, was wonderfully astute and admirably calculated to succeed; but, like many another skilful diplomatist, the realisation of the grand scheme of his life upset the balance of his judgment. He did not know where to stop.

Not satisfied with creating a German Empire, he wanted to create a German Church also, in order that the Sovereign for the time being might be absolute master of the souls and bodies of his subjects. Because several of the German Bishops were what was called "Ultramontanists"—that is, opposed to the promulgation of the doctrine of Papal Infallibility, believing firmly in it meantime—he fancied it would be easy to push them into schism, and so cut off the Prussian Catholics from communion with the Holy See. But he reckoned without his host. Even the Protestant Catholics are suffering cannot fail to have a very discouraging effect upon them and revive their pro-Austrian sympathies. This is precisely what the Emperor saw, and his minister did not, in spite of his great political astuteness. Catholics are either an immensely preponderating majority, or else a very powerful minority, in Bavaria, in the Rhenish provinces, in Westphalia, in Wurtemburg, in Soabia, in Francosia, in Prussian-Poland. The inhabitants of Stillesvig-Holstein are already fiercely anti-Prussian in their sentiments, as is conclusively shown by the almost defiant address to Emperor WILLIAM drawn up by their representatives. Of the disposition of the natives of Alsace and Lorraine, it is totally unnecessary to speak.

Here, then, we have, as the result of BISMARCK'S personal rule, across the conclusion of peace, the surrounding of Prussia with a regular cordon of subjects and allies, so disaffected as to be ready to throw themselves into the arms of any power likely to free them from exacting and persecuting masters! It is no wonder that the Emperor drew back and refused to follow the imprudent counsels of his over-zealous Chancellor before surrendering the sword-and discontent had given place to open revolt.

Even now it is a debatable question whether irreparable injury has not been inflicted on the Empire. If WILLIAM I. has not sufficient firmness to retrace his steps—to undo the wrongs and oppressions inflicted upon innocent persons by the tyrannical policy of Prince BISMARCK—the downfall of Germany as, at present constituted cannot be possibly long deferred. For Catholics, this phase of the German question has a most instructive moral. It must show them what is the only certain safeguard against the peace of Europe. The cause alleged for this sudden fall from power is, we think, quite sufficient to account for it. The Emperor, we are told, got alarmed at the extreme to which his Chancellor was pushing the persecution of the Catholics, and refused to countenance any more proscriptive proceedings. This proves that the monarch possesses far more political sagacity than his minister. A man intriguer, BISMARCK has probably no superior living. The manner in which he prepared the sudden rise of Prussia from the position of a comparatively insignificant kingdom to that of the dominating power in Europe, was wonderfully astute and admirably calculated to succeed; but, like many another skilful diplomatist, the realisation of the grand scheme of his life upset the balance of his judgment. He did not know where to stop.

Not satisfied with creating a German Empire, he wanted to create a German Church also, in order that the Sovereign for the time being might be absolute master of the souls and bodies of his subjects. Because several of the German Bishops were what was called "Ultramontanists"—that is, opposed to the promulgation of the doctrine of Papal Infallibility, believing firmly in it meantime—he fancied it would be easy to push them into schism, and so cut off the Prussian Catholics from communion with the Holy See. But he reckoned without his host. Even the Protestant Catholics are suffering cannot fail to have a very discouraging effect upon them and revive their pro-Austrian sympathies. This is precisely what the Emperor saw, and his minister did not, in spite of his great political astuteness. Catholics are either an immensely preponderating majority, or else a very powerful minority, in Bavaria, in the Rhenish provinces, in Westphalia, in Wurtemburg, in Soabia, in Francosia, in Prussian-Poland. The inhabitants of Stillesvig-Holstein are already fiercely anti-Prussian in their sentiments, as is conclusively shown by the almost defiant address to Emperor WILLIAM drawn up by their representatives. Of the disposition of the natives of Alsace and Lorraine, it is totally unnecessary to speak.

Here, then, we have, as the result of BISMARCK'S personal rule, across the conclusion of peace, the surrounding of Prussia with a regular cordon of subjects and allies, so disaffected as to be ready to throw themselves into the arms of any power likely to free them from exacting and persecuting masters! It is no wonder that the Emperor drew back and refused to follow the imprudent counsels of his over-zealous Chancellor before surrendering the sword-and discontent had given place to open revolt.

Even now it is a debatable question whether irreparable injury has not been inflicted on the Empire. If WILLIAM I. has not sufficient firmness to retrace his steps—to undo the wrongs and oppressions inflicted upon innocent persons by the tyrannical policy of Prince BISMARCK—the downfall of Germany as, at present constituted cannot be possibly long deferred. For Catholics, this phase of the German question has a most instructive moral. It must show them what is the only certain safeguard against the peace of Europe. The cause alleged for this sudden fall from power is, we think, quite sufficient to account for it. The Emperor, we are told, got alarmed at the extreme to which his Chancellor was pushing the persecution of the Catholics, and refused to countenance any more proscriptive proceedings. This proves that the monarch possesses far more political sagacity than his minister. A man intriguer, BISMARCK has probably no superior living. The manner in which he prepared the sudden rise of Prussia from the position of a comparatively insignificant kingdom to that of the dominating power in Europe, was wonderfully astute and admirably calculated to succeed; but, like many another skilful diplomatist, the realisation of the grand scheme of his life upset the balance of his judgment. He did not know where to stop.

Not satisfied with creating a German Empire, he wanted to create a German Church also, in order that the Sovereign for the time being might be absolute master of the souls and bodies of his subjects. Because several of the German Bishops were what was called "Ultramontanists"—that is, opposed to the promulgation of the doctrine of Papal Infallibility, believing firmly in it meantime—he fancied it would be easy to push them into schism, and so cut off the Prussian Catholics from communion with the Holy See. But he reckoned without his host. Even the Protestant Catholics are suffering cannot fail to have a very discouraging effect upon them and revive their pro-Austrian sympathies. This is precisely what the Emperor saw, and his minister did not, in spite of his great political astuteness. Catholics are either an immensely preponderating majority, or else a very powerful minority, in Bavaria, in the Rhenish provinces, in Westphalia, in Wurtemburg, in Soabia, in Francosia, in Prussian-Poland. The inhabitants of Stillesvig-Holstein are already fiercely anti-Prussian in their sentiments, as is conclusively shown by the almost defiant address to Emperor WILLIAM drawn up by their representatives. Of the disposition of the natives of Alsace and Lorraine, it is totally unnecessary to speak.

Here, then, we have, as the result of BISMARCK'S personal rule, across the conclusion of peace, the surrounding of Prussia with a regular cordon of subjects and allies, so disaffected as to be ready to throw themselves into the arms of any power likely to free them from exacting and persecuting masters! It is no wonder that the Emperor drew back and refused to follow the imprudent counsels of his over-zealous Chancellor before surrendering the sword-and discontent had given place to open revolt.

Even now it is a debatable question whether irreparable injury has not been inflicted on the Empire. If WILLIAM I. has not sufficient firmness to retrace his steps—to undo the wrongs and oppressions inflicted upon innocent persons by the tyrannical policy of Prince BISMARCK—the downfall of Germany as, at present constituted cannot be possibly long deferred. For Catholics, this phase of the German question has a most instructive moral. It must show them what is the only certain safeguard against the peace of Europe. The cause alleged for this sudden fall from power is, we think, quite sufficient to account for it. The Emperor, we are told, got alarmed at the extreme to which his Chancellor was pushing the persecution of the Catholics, and refused to countenance any more proscriptive proceedings. This proves that the monarch possesses far more political sagacity than his minister. A man intriguer, BISMARCK has probably no superior living. The manner in which he prepared the sudden rise of Prussia from the position of a comparatively insignificant kingdom to that of the dominating power in Europe, was wonderfully astute and admirably calculated to succeed; but, like many another skilful diplomatist, the realisation of the grand scheme of his life upset the balance of his judgment. He did not know where to stop.

Not satisfied with creating a German Empire, he wanted to create a German Church also, in order that the Sovereign for the time being might be absolute master of the souls and bodies of his subjects. Because several of the German Bishops were what was called "Ultramontanists"—that is, opposed to the promulgation of the doctrine of Papal Infallibility, believing firmly in it meantime—he fancied it would be easy to push them into schism, and so cut off the Prussian Catholics from communion with the Holy See. But he reckoned without his host. Even the Protestant Catholics are suffering cannot fail to have a very discouraging effect upon them and revive their pro-Austrian sympathies. This is precisely what the Emperor saw, and his minister did not, in spite of his great political astuteness. Catholics are either an immensely preponderating majority, or else a very powerful minority, in Bavaria, in the Rhenish provinces, in

VERY BAD "TALKS" INDEED.

Mr. MICHAEL SCANLAN, late editor of the Irish Republican, published at Washington as an Administration organ, is now contributing to the Western Cell of St. Louis a series of papers entitled "Talks to Our People." That appearing in the issue of January 4th is the fourth in number, and is the only one we have read. If the preceding three were any way like it, we cannot help thinking that our contemporary would have been a great deal better off without them, and that our fellow-countrymen would not have suffered a very deplorable loss to-day if they were never printed.

In the article before us, Mr. SCANLAN discusses the question, "Are we fit for self-government?" and he comes to the conclusion that we, Irishmen, very decidedly are not. Whether the country is in search of an answer is new to us; we have heard both before, and to us the answer did not, in spite of its being Unfavorable, it is one of the chief points that Ireland becomes Christian without getting a drop of blood, while many lands dowed with blood before they would part from their idols and accept the pardon of the Cross.

All this is absolutely infamous. Mr. JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE himself would not dare libel our people so atrociously. Here we have an Irishman making it a reproach to his ancestors that they were so intelligent and so ready to receive the blessed gospel of salvation as to abandon idolatry the moment a divinely-inspired saint landed on their shores and proclaimed the truths of revealed religion. And what shall we say of a man, calling himself a Catholic, too, who is blasphemous enough to speak of a nation embracing Christianity as "accepting the newer gods"? That, certainly, to say the very least, is not language becoming one who has been baptized and believes in the saving mission of our Divine Redeemer. There is not one Irishman out of a thousand, Catholic or Protestant, who will not be shocked and outraged in his dearest sympathies upon reading such abominable nonsense.

After this flight of infidel audacity we are treated to a long paragraph, which is so confused in its wording and so execrable in composition as to be hardly intelligible, but we gather from it that he considers the majority of Irishmen to be "spiritual and temporal slaves." He furthermore announces his conviction that

> Until the Bishops and priests of the Catholic Church of the United States are willing to see the Catholic Churches in Ireland suffer on the question of Irish liberty, and even encourage the people in their efforts for their independence, it is but the war of words and parchment—no good to be talk in the cause of a down people—for the few men who love Ireland above all churches and creeds, will be willing to be martyrs in the impossible work of freeing Ireland.

Now it strikes us very forcibly that if we have to wait until this comes to pass, we might as well give up the cause of Ireland forever and advise our brothers at home to become "loyal subjects" of her Britannic Majesty as quickly as possible. So far as we are concerned, we are not willing to wait for our part, be extremely sorry to see Ireland freed by the men—be they few or many—who love her "above all churches and creeds," and, heartless as it may appear, we should infinitely prefer their becoming martyrs—even useless martyrs at that. In fact, we could look upon all these "patriots" marching to the gallows with pretty much the same feelings as those with which a respectable, order-loving Freeduhmen beheld the condemned Communists on their way to the trysting place at Satory. We should congratulate ourselves upon a good riddance of very bad and dangerous rubbish, and thank the British Government for another "concession" to the wishes of the Irish people. If our countrymen will obtain their independence, as we hope and believe they will before long, it must be as Christian patriots, and not as infidel revolutionists. Better a thousand times were the continuance of British misrule, with all its evils, bitter and grievous as they undoubtedly are, than, we will not say loss of faith, but even the slightest diminution in our attachment to it.

Mr. SCANLAN has, we confess, written one sentence which we must thank him for—the sake of which we could forgive him

> The duty of the present hour—the real nationalists are but a small minority—is to find our fainting flags, disarm our enemies, and re-organize our shattered ranks and pull the tongues out of blustering revolutionists.

We are positively charmed to hear that the "real nationalists," i. e., nationalists of the same stripe as the late editor of the Irish Republican, are but few. We are glad that they never may be any more numerous. And if, following the advice of Mr. SCANLAN, they fish their disarming flags, shoulder their puny muskets, and march in lees parades and pull the tongues out of their blathering revolutionists, they will put us, the majority—the nationalists, who believe in the authority of their Bishops, who want to be free with the freedom of Christ—under a debt of eternal gratitude to them.

We have taken notice of these stupidly vicious "Talks" only lest they might deceive any of our unthinking countrymen whose love of their native land runs away with their reason, or might induce any of our foreign correspondents to believe that they express the sentiments of the great body of Irish nationalists. We have shown how abominable they are in spirit and sine-ding, and how false in fact they are. We prove how unspeakably contemptible they are as literary productions. Mr. SCANLAN has, manifestly, small acquaintance with the very first rules of English grammar—probably is unaware that he does not—and disregard them as he would other rules or laws owning the same nationality. He pretty evidently has not read much of BLAIR, for his style is inextricably confused, so as to be almost unintelligible. His grammar is bad; his style is wretched—but what shall we say of his logic? He cannot have the faintest idea of what logic or argument really is. Whenever he attempts anything of the kind he utterly befogs himself before he goes a dozen lines. We shall call the attention of our readers to only one example of this, but that one is as laughable as it is absurd. He sets out by saying that no nation worthy of freedom can be enslaved. All history gives emphatic denial to such an assertion. The idea that every nation which has been trodden under foot by conquerors deserved its fate, is repugnant to the instincts of humanity as well as at variance with truth. It follows from Mr. SCANLAN'S showing that Ireland that the Irish are not fit for freedom because, of course, they have been subjugated by the Anglian. He declares they were subjugated in consequence of their fondness for surrendering! Most writers of history seem to think that if our people were a little less stubborn and a little more given to surrendering, they would be in a better position to-day. We quote from Mr. SCANLAN:

> Ireland, indeed, from the misty dawn of the Vendre to Dunaree, whenever they were, to the time of the Battle of Benburb, was never free. Even in the very heart PROVIDENTIAL ISOLATION, she was struggling in her watery bed before the ARYAN came. The Milesian, who were but serfish Norman Troglodytes, seeded in more than twenty-five centuries, was engaged ANCESTORS. St. PATRICK, in this manner, had only to put up a shamrock to conquer the whole population to Christianity. It is one of the chief boasts that Ireland became Christian without spilling a drop of blood, while many lands dowed with blood before they would part from their idols and accept the pardon of the Cross.

JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE himself would not dare libel our people so atrociously. Here we have an Irishman making it a reproach to his ancestors that they were so intelligent and so ready to receive the blessed gospel of salvation as to abandon idolatry the moment a divinely-inspired saint landed on their shores and proclaimed the truths of revealed religion. And what shall we say of a man, calling himself a Catholic, too, who is blasphemous enough to speak of a nation embracing Christianity as "accepting the newer gods"? That, certainly, to say the very least, is not language becoming one who has been baptized and believes in the saving mission of our Divine Redeemer. There is not one Irishman out of a thousand, Catholic or Protestant, who will not be shocked and outraged in his dearest sympathies upon reading such abominable nonsense.

After this flight of infidel audacity we are treated to a long paragraph, which is so confused in its wording and so execrable in composition as to be hardly intelligible, but we gather from it that he considers the majority of Irishmen to be "spiritual and temporal slaves." He furthermore announces his conviction that

> Until the Bishops and priests of the Catholic Church of the United States are willing to see the Catholic Churches in Ireland suffer on the question of Irish liberty, and even encourage the people in their efforts for their independence, it is but the war of words and parchment—no good to be talk in the cause of a down people—for the few men who love Ireland above all churches and creeds, will be willing to be martyrs in the impossible work of freeing Ireland.

Now it strikes us very forcibly that if we have to wait until this comes to pass, we might as well give up the cause of Ireland forever and advise our brothers at home to become "loyal subjects" of her Britannic Majesty as quickly as possible. So far as we are concerned, we are not willing to wait for our part, be extremely sorry to see Ireland freed by the men—be they few or many—who love her "above all churches and creeds," and, heartless as it may appear, we should infinitely prefer their becoming martyrs—even useless martyrs at that. In fact, we could look upon all these "patriots" marching to the gallows with pretty much the same feelings as those with which a respectable, order-loving Freeduhmen beheld the condemned Communists on their way to the trysting place at Satory. We should congratulate ourselves upon a good riddance of very bad and dangerous rubbish, and thank the British Government for another "concession" to the wishes of the Irish people. If our countrymen will obtain their independence, as we hope and believe they will before long, it must be as Christian patriots, and not as infidel revolutionists. Better a thousand times were the continuance of British misrule, with all its evils, bitter and grievous as they undoubtedly are, than, we will not say loss of faith, but even the slightest diminution in our attachment to it.

Mr. SCANLAN has, we confess, written one sentence which we must thank him for—the sake of which we could forgive him

> The duty of the present hour—the real nationalists are but a small minority—is to find our fainting flags, disarm our enemies, and re-organize our shattered ranks and pull the tongues out of blustering revolutionists.

We are positively charmed to hear that the "real nationalists," i. e., nationalists of the same stripe as the late editor of the Irish Republican, are but few. We are glad that they never may be any more numerous. And if, following the advice of Mr. SCANLAN, they fish their disarming flags, shoulder their puny muskets, and march in lees parades and pull the tongues out of their blathering revolutionists, they will put us, the majority—the nationalists, who believe in the authority of their Bishops, who want to be free with the freedom of Christ—under a debt of eternal gratitude to them.

We have taken notice of these stupidly vicious "Talks" only lest they might deceive any of our unthinking countrymen whose love of their native land runs away with their reason, or might induce any of our foreign correspondents to believe that they express the sentiments of the great body of Irish nationalists. We have shown how abominable they are in spirit and sine-ding, and how false in fact they are. We prove how unspeakably contemptible they are as literary productions. Mr. SCANLAN has, manifestly, small acquaintance with the very first rules of English grammar—probably is unaware that he does not—and disregard them as he would other rules or laws owning the same nationality. He pretty evidently has not read much of BLAIR, for his style is inextricably confused, so as to be almost unintelligible. His grammar is bad; his style is wretched—but what shall we say of his logic? He cannot have the faintest idea of what logic or argument really is. Whenever he attempts anything of the kind he utterly befogs himself before he goes a dozen lines. We shall call the attention of our readers to only one example of this, but that one is as laughable as it is absurd. He sets out by saying that no nation worthy of freedom can be enslaved. All history gives emphatic denial to such an assertion. The idea that every nation which has been trodden under foot by conquerors deserved its fate, is repugnant to the instincts of humanity as well as at variance with truth. It follows from Mr. SCANLAN'S showing that Ireland that the Irish are not fit for freedom because, of course, they have been subjugated by the Anglian. He declares they were subjugated in consequence of their fondness for surrendering! Most writers of history seem to think that if our people were a little less stubborn and a little more given to surrendering, they would be in a better position to-day. We quote from Mr. SCANLAN:

> Ireland, indeed, from the misty dawn of the Vendre to Dunaree, whenever they were, to the time of the Battle of Benburb, was never free. Even in the very heart PROVIDENTIAL ISOLATION, she was struggling in her watery bed before the ARYAN came. The Milesian, who were but serfish Norman Troglodytes, seeded in more than twenty-five centuries, was engaged ANCESTORS. St. PATRICK, in this manner, had only to put up a shamrock to conquer the whole population to Christianity. It is one of the chief boasts that Ireland became Christian without spilling a drop of blood, while many lands dowed with blood before they would part from their idols and accept the pardon of the Cross.

THE DEATH OF NAPOLEON III.

The death of NAPOLEON III. must have a most depressing effect upon the Bonapartist party in France. Its confidently expected to see the late Emperor restored to power, through the agency of the army, as soon as the German troops had been withdrawn from the departments now occupied by them, and the whole of the indemnity had been paid. Notwithstanding all that has been said to the contrary, a large portion of the population—comprising the traders and peasantry, almost to a man—were, and most probably are still, strongly attached to the Napoleonic dynasty, and the deceased member was personally very much liked by them. His chief enemies were the artisans and working men of the large cities, all of whom are more or less imbued with the vicious principles of atheistic communism, and their power was materially diminished when MACMAHON'S brave soldiers overthrew the barricades in the spring of '71. So the adherents of the Emperor fancied he could be reinstated on his throne with far less disturbance than occurred at the time of his celebrated coup d'etat, nearly twenty years previously. Now his unexpected death has thrown all their hopes and disorganized all their plans. The Prince Imperial is a mere lad, who has not made himself remarkable for anything particular, and may be utterly devoid of the governing faculty. It is chiefly that the French people, who have been so accustomed to a Government strongly marked by the personal influence of the sovereign, should accept a boy as their nominal master, and if the army did place him on the throne his reign would be little more than a series of struggles against Democracy, of which it would finally get the worst. The present Government cannot last, for, the offspring of a compromise, it is neither Republican, Imperialist or Monarchial, and all must inspect from one to very serious about what will replace it. The great majority of the so-called Republicans are reckless, turbulent and impracticable theorists, who have no idea whatever of free institutions as we possess them here, but dream of a Utopia where everybody shall be rich and nobody shall own property. The Republic, as it now exists, is mainly supported by the Imperialists and Monarchists, who uphold it merely because it is paying the war indemnity and saving them from the sans culottes. If it relied on the "Reds" it would fall to pieces, or rather knocked to pieces, at once. The truth is, the French are not fit for Republican institutions, and they never can have a successful Republic. The best thing they can do is to go back to the old dynasty and accept the rule of one of the sons of St. LOUIS.

THE INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

It is not our practice to condemn any man unheard, or to believe him guilty of a crime simply because he happens to be charged with it. We have been taught and trained from passing an opinion upon the management of the Industrial School during the progress of the late investigation, but we cannot help saying that the system will sufficiently illustrate what we mean. The Call and Bulletin are opposed to its adoption on the grounds that it would give the Archbishop too much power. For this reason alone it has been sufficiently proven that Mr. H. Haven is utterly unfit for his position, and ought not be allowed preside any longer over the institution. We cannot understand how an intelligent man can be backed up with a cause has been in the habit of indulging in can be thought a fit and proper person to be trusted with the care of boys, many of whom are of tender years, and of both sexes. The inmates of the Industrial School are not negroes; it is, perhaps, true that they are not as tractable as their more favored fellow-creatures, but their antecedents it would be hard to expect so much from them); nevertheless, it is most possible to so keep them in good order without resorting to cruel or degrading punishments as to make even a man of ordinary humanity sicken at the bare idea of such a thing. Yet, without any care having been bestowed upon his wound, he was further compelled to undergo the torture known as the "shrink punishment" for two days and two nights, with but slight intermissions. This last mentioned plan of chastisement is admirably calculated to permanently injure, if not to cripple for life, those who are subjected to it for any length of time. In contests, we are informed, in making a boy stand on a brick and bend forward until he touches another brick with his fingers. Our readers can, perhaps, imagine the terrible torture of maintaining such a position for the space of time alleged by HAVEN. No wonder that the poor fellow begged to be sent to see and not back to the Industrial School, where Mr. HAVEN still reigns with plenitude of power!

---

Thomas Mooney, who will long be remembered by sons of our readers, is in Newgate prison, London, because of saying a good word for Ireland at a Hyde Park meeting. While we wish Tom a speedy release, we fear there are many in these parts who would be had been incarcerated years ago.

---

REDUCED PRICE OF CATHOLIC BOOKS.—Henry O. Sullivan, bookseller, 304 Kearny street, will sell his large stock of Catholic books and holiday goods at less than New York prices. This is a new feature in the Catholic book trade.

---

☞ Newsdealers desiring THE MONITOR on Saturday evening or Sunday morning, can call at the office of publication, as the store of J. N. CROTHERS, 144 Second street.

A SINGULAR EXPLANATION.

In our issue of January 4th we paid a little attention to the Overland Monthly. In the course of our remarks we stated that the second paper in the current number of that magazine, a story entitled "The Ghost of Rummelsburg," had been published six years or eighteen years previously in a London weekly, called the Family Herald. Our statement was copied pretty extensively by our city contemporaries, and the reputed author was called upon for an explanation. For some days he vouchsafed nothing of the kind, but contented himself with stigmatizing our assertion as "malicious libel." This was rather short tempered, but was by no means satisfactory. By-and-by the gentleman thought it better to rise to explain. He said that he was more than twenty years in this country, that he had never seen a number of the Family Herald in all his life, and therefore could not have been guilty of plagiarism. He added that his "story" was in reality a "legend" with which he was acquainted from the days of his youth, and that the locality in which it was placed was quite familiar to him. His statement does not in the least conflict with ours. This story, or legend, as he prefers to call it, is not original we mentioned. Our memory cannot serve us so well as to enable us to declare whether the Overland's version is literatim et punctim with the one which appeared in the Family Herald, but we are satisfied that the actors in the drama have the same names in both cases, and we can inclination to think that the phraseology of some passages is identical. But why do not Mr. VAN MENH publish his story as a "legend?" There was nothing to indicate that it was not the coinage of his own brain from first to last. Legends are common property, and any writer is at liberty to dress them in his own language without laying himself open to the charge of plagiarism. But to palm off a legend hundreds of years old as an original tale, or to publish it in such shape as that the majority of readers will mistake it for one, is assuredly indicative of very loose literary morality. Mr. VAN MENH will save himself from a great deal of trouble and prevent much misapprehension if, when next he writes for the Overland, he will let us know whether his contribution is a legend of his own or an ancient legend of Fatherland. If it be the first, we will cheerfully give his credit: if the second, we will accord the praise to his ancestors.

---

A PROTEST.

We venture to protest, on behalf of many intelligent citizens, against a very distasteful feature now prominent in some of our daily papers. We allude to the importation of personalities into the discussion of matters of the highest importance. It would seem somehow to be thought "smart" by certain journalists to attribute the policy advocated by their contemporaries, with respect to any measure presumably for the public good, to motives which are either if not actually base or criminal. The controversy now going on about the good or evil of the Industrial School System will sufficiently illustrate what we mean. The Call and Bulletin are opposed to its adoption on the grounds that it would give the Archbishop too much power. For this reason alone it has been sufficiently proven that Mr. H. Haven is utterly unfit for his position, and ought not be allowed preside any longer over the institution. We cannot understand how an intelligent man can be backed up with a cause has been in the habit of indulging in can be thought a fit and proper person to be trusted with the care of boys, many of whom are of tender years, and of both sexes. The inmates of the Industrial School are not negroes; it is, perhaps, true that they are not as tractable as their more favored fellow-creatures, but their antecedents it would be hard to expect so much from them); nevertheless, it is most possible to so keep them in good order without resorting to cruel or degrading punishments as to make even a man of ordinary humanity sicken at the bare idea of such a thing. Yet, without any care having been bestowed upon his wound, he was further compelled to undergo the torture known as the "shrink punishment" for two days and two nights, with but slight intermissions. This last mentioned plan of chastisement is admirably calculated to permanently injure, if not to cripple for life, those who are subjected to it for any length of time. In contests, we are informed, in making a boy stand on a brick and bend forward until he touches another brick with his fingers. Our readers can, perhaps, imagine the terrible torture of maintaining such a position for the space of time alleged by HAVEN. No wonder that the poor fellow begged to be sent to see and not back to the Industrial School, where Mr. HAVEN still reigns with plenitude of power!

---

Thomas Mooney, who will long be remembered by sons of our readers, is in Newgate prison, London, because of saying a good word for Ireland at a Hyde Park meeting. While we wish Tom a speedy release, we fear there are many in these parts who would be had been incarcerated years ago.

---

REDUCED PRICE OF CATHOLIC BOOKS.—Henry O. Sullivan, bookseller, 304 Kearny street, will sell his large stock of Catholic books and holiday goods at less than New York prices. This is a new feature in the Catholic book trade.

---

☞ Newsdealers desiring THE MONITOR on Saturday evening or Sunday morning, can call at the office of publication, as the store of J. N. CROTHERS, 144 Second street.

THE DEAD EMPEROR.

...January 9—The sudden death of Napoleon yesterday in Chiselhurst, as well as in London, excites the deepest interest. Every telegram, letter, and even his physician, were unlooked. So great was the confidence felt in the Emperor's constitution that the Prince Imperial was only to return to Woolwich to resume his studies.

...was his demise, that Father Goddard, ...ests for to administer the last Sacraments, ...ere in time.

...produced a deep impression in London, ...the Emperor was always personally very popular in the country. The evening Journals publish ...with full expressions of mourning.

...January 9—The Emperor of the French ...chiselhurst says that a terrible responsibility ...on his shoulders. He has been the ...ment of a tradition, and was deficient in moral ...ity. He has not the genius of his uncle, but ...ll preserve her hereafter from political errors

...The New Republique" studies the man psychologically, and says that after gazing upon ...ce of Napoleon I. it is impossible to ...ve that Napoleon III. was a great man. ...ever, he was responsible for most of the ...ts of his reign.

...Pays" appeals to the Orleanists Princes to ...ve their differences, and to unite in ...ing the throne of France, and thus rally the ...ty party. The Empress is said to be ...ly ill.

...Le Temps" says that a terrible responsibility ...s on Napoleon's memory. He, however, was ...ation of a tradition, and was deficient in moral ...ity. He has not the genius of his uncle, but ...ll preserve her hereafter from political errors

...The New Republique" studies the man psychologically, and says that after gazing upon ...ce of Napoleon I. it is impossible to ...ve that Napoleon III. was a great man. ...ever, he was responsible for most of the ...ts of his reign.

...Journal des Debats" is impressed by the ...ty with which the Emperor's remains were ...ed from Chiselhurst to Farnborough. ...ys that the Emperor's funeral ceremonies ...ld be a mockery

THE HIBERNIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.

BY SAMUEL FERGUSON, LL. D., M.R.I.A.

THE SECOND NIGHT.

On the next evening, Hugh Roe required no solicitation to do full justice to such fare as the liberality of the warden had afforded; and, when left alone with his fellow-captives and their friendly guard, he was the first to demand of Turlogh another tale for their amusement.

"My chains have all day hung lighter," said he, "in expectation of another hour's forgetfulness of their restraint. Let me again walk with the steps of a free dreamer beside brave man and fair ladies. Come, Turlogh, beat me down these black and hideous walls, and show me again the free prospect of waving wild woods and flowing rivers, blue mountains of mist, and the dun deserts where red deer are running free upon the backs of Corry Vanscht or Gougan More."

"Then, noble princes," said Turlogh, "I shall tell you a tale that seems to me to be suitable to all your tastes, which I learned of a friar in the church of Killeshin, given in O'More's country when the Earl, my late master, I have seen confirmation of its truth in a certain pleasant chronicle much studied among the English nobles, written by a French gentleman of note, named Froissard; but that which I have heard is, doubtless, the truer, as it is the fuller and more explicit history." So saying, Turlogh addressed himself to his tale.

The Captive of Kilteesha.

On a pleasant autumn evening, towards the end of the reign of King Richard the Second, the horseboys and galloglass quartered about the court-yard of Killeshin Castle, a strong pile hard by the ancient church of that name, in O'More's country, was started from the various games and recreations in which they whiled away their leisure hours, by the sudden appearance of a horseman who roped his panting steed up the green slope to the gates at a desperate but tottering pace. His bore all the marks of recent conflict and rough-riding: his torn mantle streamed loose from his shoulders; his head was bare, and he reeled in the saddle, as if exhausted by loss of blood.

"A behoo!" cried a young battle-axe man, starting from the dice-board, and clapping his hands, "what mischief has happened to Donagh-Donogh, the chief's gilly? Donogh Dhu, son of my mother's brother," he exclaimed, as the horseman cast himself from the reeking and jaded charger, and stood panting for breath to tell his errand, "who has done this?—who has drawn the blood of a MacDaniel in the woods of Slieumargie?"

"Where is the chief?" cried the chieftainman; "I will go to him at once. Let him mail his where I stand if he think fit! Let it be my blame and mine only—I care for nothing that can happen after this."

"Bones of Saint Bride! after what?" cried his kinsman; "has Fitzgerald striven a prize into Kildare, or is Dunamase fired by the Butlers?"

"I would rather, Rory Buy, see the rook of Dunamase level with the meadows of Moy Liffey," replied Donogh Dhu, "I would rather see the whole clan Gerald swept in the deepest pools of the Barrow, and my own wretched body forfeit of them all, than have to say before these gates of Killeshin what I have to say this day. Brothers, this is a black day for the house of O'Nolan—Sir Evor Oge is slain."

"Allain!" echoed a hundred voices; "the Iarun Oge slain! the only branch of the old tree of honor lopped off and you live to bear the tidings!"

"I will not long survive them," said Donogh, hastily, leaning against the shoulder of his horse, as all drew back in ordinary horror and execration. "Ay, Fleetfoot, let my blood flow this evening like the wine of the feast! Ye shall not be robbed but on my own kind deep me," he said bitterly. "I will never mount thee again; I think my own gearnail! Will no one bring me to the hall? I would fain see the chief himself before I——"

He could say no more; his limbs sunk under him, and he slid forward on the ground at his horse's feet.

"Stand back," cried an authoritative voice, as the now consternating crowd closed around the body tendering their late assistance, "stand back, my children. What ails my young man, dark Donogh?"

The speaker was a tall and noble-looking personage, advanced in years, but nothing impaired by old age; his dress costly, his aspect mild and benevolent.

"Allal!" cried he, as a dull puddle of blood welling with slow increase from under the prostrate body caught his eye, "there is murder done at my door—villains, by whom but Donogh Dhu been stabbed?"

The men around looked with considerable confusion on one another; but ere any had found words to profess the dreadful intelligence, the speaker himself added, "Ah! the body, ye villains, and bear it to the hall, where the wounded man may be looked to—but how? what! you stare and stammer and gape like guilty men on one another. Come hither, Rory Buy MacDaniel—I was wont to love thee for thine honesty. Look me, strink, and say what means all this?"

"O'Nolan," replied Rory Buy, saluting the chief by his title, "I know no more of this tragedy than that his scarce a minute since Donogh Dhu rode hither sore wounded, and fell into a swoon having first given us such doleful tidings that I would out the right hand off by body to be able to believe them saitrue."

"What tidings, sirrah—aught touching my son? Speak, villain, do you dare to trifle with your chief?"

"O'Nolan!" said the clansman, "we have heard no more than that Sir Evor Oge has come by harm in Donogh Dhu's company; but here comes one who will satisfy your uobleness, alas, I fear, too surely; look around."

As he spoke, loud lamentations were heard in the valley, and a crowd appeared, leading up the steep ascent with slow steps and mournful gestures. In front, on a rude bier of branches, was something wrapped in a cloak. A-dhay neared, a human arm and hand covered with a hawking glove became visible hanging over one side. Blood dropped from between the supports upon the mantles of the bearers, and left a mottled track upon the grass behind.

"My son, my son!" cried the distracted father, and uttered his cry with his hands, as if with the sight of his misfortune he could have shut out his reality. But soon recovering his fortitude, he addressed with seeming calmness, and said, "Set down your burden, friends and kinsmen, and let me look upon the face of my boy!" They set down the bier, and removing the cloak discovered the dead body of a fair youth of eighteen, pierced with many wounds. "Has this been done in private broil or by malice of another?" said the father, in a low voice. "Answer me, noble Cormack O'Connor!"

"O'Nolan," replied he whom he had accosted, "the foul deed was done through the malice of your old enemies, the MacGillpatricks. What I know of it, I shall relate. An half hour since, in the glen, I was overtaken by Donogh Dhu, thy clansman, spent and bleeding, and bearing the corpse of Sir Evor Oge upon his steed before him. They had been surprised in the woods beyond Shrule, by the kern of Upper Ossory, headed by Richard Roe MacGillpatrick, the arch traitor himself, who set upon them unawares, and slew all their company on the spot, saving himself; and he made his escape, after taking many wounds in his young chief's defence. He lurked in the woods until the departure of the murderers; then returning, had discovered the dead body of Sir Evor, which he besought me to bear hither for him, as his strength was fast failing; and he earnestly desired to supplicate thy forgiveness for leading the Ierna Oge into that fatal adventure, as he should give up the ghost."

The father, who, during the narrative, had stood with clasped hands, gazing on the dead features which were in haughty expression of calm scorn in the midst of all their disfigurements, now turned to question Donogh Dhu, whom he had thought, at first, merely in a swoon from loss of blood. The loyal warrior was gone to his account before another tribunal.

"Bear the bodies in together," said O'Nolan, "place them in the hall, out of our sight, for a little space; for I cannot look on my son's face till I have avenged my body, to which I propose to avenge his death. Friends and kinsmen, arm yourselves and mount. We must ride for the passes of Sewn Regan before day."

The crowd who till now had stood silent in awe and astonishment, presented by a fierce shout of vengeance. In a moment the court-yard was flagging to the tramp of horses, the clattering of swords and axes, and the tumultuous execrations of the enraged clansmen, as they buckled on their arms and harness, or reigned their chargers into line. O'Nolan himself, clad in a shirt of mail, his brows encircled by a helmet, his shield slung round his neck, equipped with spear, claymore and skene, strode into the hall of the Castle; and taking the cold hand of his son in his steel gauntlet, swore never to give over his feud against Cheevy till either Richard Roe MacGillpatrick or himself should perish in its prosecution. The transition from the mild father of his people to the implacable avenger of a savage feud, was complete; and, as O'Nolan rushed from the house, and threw himself on his horse, the voice in which he issued his commands was as unlike that in which he had bespoke the bearers of his son's bier, as was his martial bearing unlike the peaceful aspect he had then worn.

As he mounted, the monks from the neighboring abbey appeared in the courtyard, "Holy Father," cried O'Nolan to their leader, "I leave the burial of my dead boy in your hands; spare nothing for his soul's health; and if he do not back on the fourth day, inter him as becomes the last of an ancient house. I command my daughter to the lady Abbess of Saint Castle's, whom you will summon to the charge of my household till my return. She is now my only child, and therefore should I also be taken from her, I commit her to the guardianship of O'More, whose behests ye are to be heard but shouts and war-cries and the clang of iron.

Brian Moore O'Nolan had already struck down three antagonists; his blood was up, his frame dilated, and his whole aspect breathing furious purpose, when he suddenly checked the impetuous course of his charger, and in a voice distinctly heard over all the clamor and tumult of the field, called off his men, before whom the ranks of Richard Roe's vanguard was consequently giving ground; for the main body of the Earl's army was now in sight, and more than one shaft from the rear had long how had already fallen among the combatants.

It was with ill-suppressed reluctance that the Irish leader prepared to withdraw from a field, where a few minutes more would have gained him a victory so complete as he seemed about achieving, and the more so, that one cavalier among the English who had twice endeavored to single him out, still continued to press through the thickest of the fray with a daring which, while it challenged his admiration, provoked his pride. The Englishman was absorbed in complete armor; his closed visor concealed his face, but his figure was slight, and, although he fought with distinguished valor, it seemed as if he had been indebted for his success hitherto, as spared to the weight and mettle of the magnificent horse he rode as to his own personal prowess. The fortune of the day was now turned; the Irish horsemen again made for the woods out of which they had issued; for, in the midst of such a rout as was now approaching, further contest on the plain would have been madness. The pursued were the pursuers in their turn; those who hung on the broken rear of the Irish was the English cavalry, who, seeing had not been idle for a moment during the skirmish.

Brian More, seeing him again doing such gallant service against him, rode back with the design of encountering him hand to hand; but ere he had gained the spot where his determined champion was hotly engaged with two galloglass, a blow of the battle-axe beat the helmet from his head, and exposed the fair hair and flushed features of a youth, for, in the heat and prime of manhood. The ominous hostility of the chief gave way to astonishment and admiration; but, as the warlike boy sprung from among the intercepting blows of his antagonists, and came charging down upon himself, a sudden flood of tenderness and compassion rushed upon his heart, for the calm disdain of the features, the waving of the fair hair, and the graceful figure of his own daughter Eva, as he had loved his death among Mac-Gillpatrick's men, the morning before, seemed tragically summoned up before his eyes. He gazed on the fearless youth—for his sword-arm was disabled, and hung at length by his side—as on an apparition; the young Englishman, with equal wonder, beheld the red weapon, by which he had already expected his doom, driven down to the sheath, and his now unmanageable charger bore him within arm's length of the Irish captain.

Brian More seized his bridle as he dashed past, and spared again on his ingenuous countenance, now animated with all that haughty defiance, mingled with eager expectation, that he so well remembered in his own lost boy. The illusion was complete; the father trumpeted over the warrior; his eyes filled with tears, and he cried in the unmistakable accents of simple consolation, (quarter was neither asked nor given) there was nothing to be seen but flickering blades and prostrate men and horses; and nothing to be heard but shouts and war-cries and the clang of iron.

Brian Moore O'Nolan had already struck down three antagonists; his blood was up, his frame dilated, and his whole aspect breathing furious purpose, when he suddenly checked the impetuous course of his charger, and in a voice distinctly heard over all the clamor and tumult of the field, called off his men, before whom the ranks of Richard Roe's vanguard was consequently giving ground; for the main body of the Earl's army was now in sight, and more than one shaft from the rear had long how had already fallen among the combatants.

It was with ill-suppressed reluctance that the Irish leader prepared to withdraw from a field, where a few minutes more would have gained him a victory so complete as he seemed about achieving, and the more so, that one cavalier among the English who had twice endeavored to single him out, still continued to press through the thickest of the fray with a daring which, while it challenged his admiration, provoked his pride. The Englishman was absorbed in complete armor; his closed visor concealed his face, but his figure was slight, and, although he fought with distinguished valor, it seemed as if he had been indebted for his success hitherto, as spared to the weight and mettle of the magnificent horse he rode as to his own personal prowess. The fortune of the day was now turned; the Irish horsemen again made for the woods out of which they had issued; for, in the midst of such a rout as was now approaching, further contest on the plain would have been madness. The pursued were the pursuers in their turn; those who hung on the broken rear of the Irish was the English cavalry, who, seeing had not been idle for a moment during the skirmish.

Brian More, seeing him again doing such gallant service against him, rode back with the design of encountering him hand to hand; but ere he had gained the spot where his determined champion was hotly engaged with two galloglass, a blow of the battle-axe beat the helmet from his head, and exposed the fair hair and flushed features of a youth, for, in the heat and prime of manhood. The ominous hostility of the chief gave way to astonishment and admiration; but, as the warlike boy sprung from among the intercepting blows of his antagonists, and came charging down upon himself, a sudden flood of tenderness and compassion rushed upon his heart, for the calm disdain of the features, the waving of the fair hair, and the graceful figure of his own daughter Eva, as he had loved his death among Mac-Gillpatrick's men, the morning before, seemed tragically summoned up before his eyes. He gazed on the fearless youth—for his sword-arm was disabled, and hung at length by his side—as on an apparition; the young Englishman, with equal wonder, beheld the red weapon, by which he had already expected his doom, driven down to the sheath, and his now unmanageable charger bore him within arm's length of the Irish captain.

Brian More seized his bridle as he dashed past, and spared again on his ingenuous countenance, now animated with all that haughty defiance, mingled with eager expectation, that he so well remembered in his own lost boy. The illusion was complete; the father trumpeted over the warrior; his eyes filled with tears, and he cried in the unmistakable accents of simple consolation, language, "Brother of my boy! I would have spared you your life had you not slain my son! Yield you, brave boy, if you perished foully you shall be fearfully and fully avenged!—Ah, would to God it had been my fortune before I should die, to have seen you by my side fighting for your land and people, as I saw this gallant young gentleman fight in the English van this day!—Alas, I cannot bear to look on his pale fair face, so like my own child's, when they brought him home fresh from the blade of MacGillpatrick—so changed from the noble and ardent beauty that an hour ago reminded me of Evor, as he rode out on that black steed, now slowly reviving, unless my father expect your return? does mother or sister keep a place at the evening board for you? Ah, my boy! youth, you may well look at me with thankful eyes—for I make a vow to Saint Bride, that when I shall have healed your wounds, and shown you our Irish sports and hospitality, I will return you free of ransom to your people as an alms to heaven, that God may deal as mercifully with me and mine! You understand me not, but I shall soon bring one who will tell you in your own tongue what a sweet reward your valor this day has earned you."

Brian More rose, and leaving his gauntlets and helmet on the margin of the fount, to indicate the short absence he contemplated, left his captive on the ground while he took a path that led into the woods, and was soon hid behind the close screen of thick foliage.

In a short time he returned, bringing with him an aged man, whose long beard and coarse garment of frieze sufficiently claimed a recluse. The hermit, kneeling by the stone platform at the side, spoke to him in broken English, telling him not to be cast down, for that the generous captor would detain him only till the wounds of his son, and then, in consideration of his youth and valor, remove him, free of ransom, to his friends.

"I have no friends," replied the captive in the same half Irish accent of his instructor, "but if I should not have courted death as the highest blessing, I have done him no wrong."

"Who art thou?" said the hermit.

"Had I returned to the English camp today, I would have been Robert Ris Thomas, of the chief gave way to astonishment and admiration; but, as the warlike boy sprung from among the intercepting blows of his antagonists, and came charging down upon himself, a sudden flood of tenderness and compassion rushed upon his heart, for the calm disdain of the features, the waving of the fair hair, and the graceful figure of his own daughter Eva, as he had loved his death among Mac-Gillpatrick's men, the morning before, seemed tragically summoned up before his eyes. He gazed on the fearless youth—for his sword-arm was disabled, and hung at length by his side—as on an apparition; the young Englishman, with equal wonder, beheld the red weapon, by which he had already expected his doom, driven down to the sheath, and his now unmanageable charger bore him within arm's length of the Irish captain.

Brian More seized his bridle as he dashed past, and spared again on his ingenuous countenance, now animated with all that haughty defiance, mingled with eager expectation, that he so well remembered in his own lost boy. The illusion was complete; the father trumpeted over the warrior; his eyes filled with tears, and he cried in the unmistakable accents of simple consolation, language, "Brother of my boy! I would have spared you your life had you not slain my son! Yield you, brave boy, if you perished foully you shall be fearfully and fully avenged!—Ah, bishop—Reynald on Infallibility and the Jesuits.

[illegible] session of the Ecumenical [illegible] the Vatican, the enemies of the [illegible] both in Germany, Austria and [illegible] affected to look upon two menaces [illegible] Hungarian episcopate—namely, [illegible] Strossmayer and Monsigor [illegible] as the principal champions of the [illegible]. The former was called the Hor[illegible] of the Council, and of both we [illegible] that they would be sure to rally [illegible] of the "irreconcilables" round [illegible] establish a National Church in [illegible]. How have these predictions [illegible] one by the event! Neither be[illegible] since the adjournment of the [illegible] Monsignor Strossmayer pub[illegible] a word against the dogma of Pon[illegible]; he has lately been transferred [illegible] the See of Agram, the capital of [illegible] and is appointed by the Emperor [illegible] of Austria and Germany wisely [illegible] from pitching to him as an "anti[illegible]." On the other hand, Monsig[illegible]eld, Archbishop of Kolocza-Bács, [illegible] himself content with mere [illegible]obedience," but has actually come [illegible] champion of the dogma and of [illegible] were at the time considered its [illegible] supporters, the Jesuits. At a re[illegible]ception of the magistrates of the [illegible]rth, it was proposed to petition [illegible] to adopt a law for the ex[illegible]of the Black Pontiff, which [illegible]ion was vigorously opposed by [illegible] Hayzahl, and eventually lost [illegible] of the speech he delivered on [illegible], the eminent prelate alluded [illegible] to the Jesuits, and declared [illegible] quired to be present at the regular recep[illegible] of the faithful.

Pontiffs entering after the commencement of [illegible] and half each portion of [illegible] No deduction, however, will be made [illegible] pupils in attendance during the months [illegible] vacation.

Parents may rest satisfied that every [illegible] will be taken of their children, and [illegible] most, will be paid to the comfort of the [illegible] and to their progress.

All correspondence of the young ladies [illegible] to the Superioress, or to the Chaplain, [illegible] inquiry may be addressed to the [illegible]

REV. P. HENNEBERY, D.D.,
LADY SUPERIOR.

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE,

Rohnerville, Humboldt County, Cal.

CONDUCTED BY THE PRIESTS OF THE CONGREGATION OF THE MOST PRECIOUS BLOOD.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED on a beautiful and healthy location, in the midst of a delightful valley, in the vicinity of the Eel River, and near the town of Rohnerville, and is about two hours' ride from the city of Eureka, in Humboldt Bay. It is designed for the education of boys, and the course of studies is classical, scientific and commercial, and embraces all the branches usually taught in the best Catholic institutions.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half yearly in advance).

For board, bedding, uniform, washing and mending, $150 00
Tuition fee, to be paid half yearly, 50 00
Entrance fee, to be paid but once, 10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines, 5 00
Vacation at College, 50 00
Use of Library, 2 00
Modern languages, lessons and drawing form extra charges.
Studies will be resumed on the 1st day of August, 1873.

For further particulars address the Superior,

REV. P. HENNEBERY, D.D.,
Superior.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL,

PETALUMA.

Day and Boarding School, Conducted by the Brothers of Charity.

TERMS for Boarders, including tuition in the various branches of English education, French, Latin and Greek, Mathematics and Needle-Work, per month.....$15 00

EXTRA CHARGES:

Music with use of Piano, per month, $ 5 00
Washing, if done at the institution, 2 50
Physician's and dentist's services, each to account.
The next session will commence on the 1st of August. Payments invariably in advance. 2m14

SAN JOSE MARBLE WORKS

E. POWER,

SENTER STREET.....North of Julian

WEST SAN JOSE.

Warerooms in the Masonic Temple, San Jose.

STATUARY, TOMBS, MANTEL-PIECES, HEAD-STONES, FURNITURE

And every description of MARBLE WORK. DESIGNING, MOULDING, &c.

And every style Wood and Stone Carving. 1y8

HO! FOR THE HOLIDAYS!

Christmas and New Year's Gifts

Japanese Goods,
French Fancy Goods,
Musical Albums,
California Jewelry.

The largest assortment in the State, and at the most reasonable rates, at

ROBERT MAYER'S BAZAAR,
S. E. cor. Montgomery and Pine Sts.
sn28-3m SAN FRANCISCO.

JO SOWLE,
Livery and Feed Stable
HOLLISTER, Monterey County, Cal.

The best Horses, Buggies and Light Wagons always on hand, and at the most reasonable terms. If you give him your patronage he will promise to give you satisfaction. 1y6 never dreamed that I was breaking the law, having in my possession the license issued by one of the officers of her Majesty's Customs—returned four years' penal servitude by going out to shoot under that contract.

A Voice—Devil's cure to you for trusting them.

Mr. Ronayne—They might have told me, my fellow-countrymen, to have gone to a policeman to ask permission; but I gave away my gun and threw my powder and shot into the sea, and thus gave up one of the only amusements of my life. I will tell you why. I did not wish to go to a policeman to ask for permission, for a friend of mine who went to ask for a license to have arms in his house was refused by a stipendiary magistrate of this city; but when the Crown Prosecutor asked the stipendiary magistrate why he had refused his friend and relative, the magistrate replied, "Why didn't he tell me he was a relative of yours? I refused him on account of the bat he wore." I do not lately been sent after that gentleman, who had been previously refused, now ill-standing the bat he had on him, because he was a relative of the Crown Prosecutor's.

FIFTH YEAR

—OF THE—

YOUNG CRUSADER,

AN ILLUSTRATED

CATHOLIC MAGAZINE,

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, FOR the entertainment and instruction of the young. It is read with interest and profit by every member of the family. A new and charming Story, by Mrs. Anna H. Dorsey, is now appearing in the YOUNG CRUSADER. Most of the leading Catholic writers of the country contribute from time to time to its pages, and secure for it great praise from the Press, and great favor among Catholic readers, young and old.

TERMS:

One copy, twelve months.....$1 00
Three copies, twelve months..... 2 50

☞ Special terms, very low, to Sunday Schools.

Address subscriptions, orders for specimens, and all other communications to

REV. WILLIAM BYRNE,
Editor "Young Crusader,"
Boston, Mass.

Ja4-3t

HAIR.

The Cheapest Place in the City

—TO BUY—

Human and Imitation Hair Goods, Cheap and Fine JEWELRY, And FANCY GOODS,

—AT THE—

NEW YORK STORE

No. 110 Second Street.

Human Hair Switches, Braid quality.....$1 to $50
Human Hair Switches, Loose Wavy.....$7 to $30
Human Hair Switches, natural fronts, $3, Wavy, $12
Human Hair, Curly, $15 to $30 per lb. Wavy, $20
Human Hair Curls, Ringlets, Long Curls.....$1 to $5
Silk Mohair waterfalls, crimped.....$5 to $10
Silk Mohair waterfalls, Wavy.....$10 to $20
Linen Tarsad Chignons.....$1
Real Hair Chignons.....$6 and $8
Hair Nets, hand-made.....15 cts., worth 25 cts.
Hair Nets, hand-made.....25 cts., worth 50 cts.
made by machinery, entirely different from the hand-made nets, 10 cts.
Invisible Nets, white or rose tint, per box, 10 cts.
Invisible Nets, black, per box, 10 cts.
Invisible Nets, in various styles.
Ornamental Hair Jewelry—largest stock in Chicago and Ribbons, Hosiery, Zephyr Wool, etc.

To the Trade.

We offer our goods at wholesale at the lowest prices. Wholesale agent for Mlle Mohair Curls. Orders by mail, post-paid dollars, assorted colors, on hand. Goods sent C. O. D.

A. B. SAMPSON & CO.,

No. 110 SECOND STREET,

Between Mission and Jessie.....San Francisco.

sn5-3m

PROPOSALS

FOR MATERIAL AND WORK

FOR A PORTION OF THE

NEW CITY HALL BUILDING.

OFFICE OF BOARD OF CITY HALL COMMISSIONERS, San Francisco, November 25, 1872.

SEALED PROPOSALS will be received at the office of the Board of City Hall Commissioners, in the City Hall Building, until 12 o'clock M., on Monday, December 30, 1872, for furnishing all the labor and materials required for the erection of the Fire Department Building, corner of McAllister and Larkin streets, in accordance with the plans and specifications of the City Hall Commissioners, on file with the Clerk of the Board of Supervisors, A. D. 1874, etc.

$5,000 in Gold Coin CURRENT!

Rolled Iron Joists,
Iron Girders and Columns;

Plain, Fitting and Laying Iron Joists and Girders.

All according to the Printed Specifications Schedules, &c., and Plans and Drawings.

The Printed Specifications and Printed Forms of Proposals can be had on application to the Secretary, and the Plans and Drawings can be seen, and all Further information as to details of the work, &c., may be obtained from the Architect, at the office of the Board.

Each proposal must be accompanied by a written guarantee of two responsible persons, that if the proposal is accepted, the person making it will enter into a bond with sufficient sureties, in a sum equal to 25 per cent. of the total sum of the tender, to be returned on the completion of the work, for the faithful performance of the same, according to the terms of the proposal. If any proposal is made without such guarantee, it will be rejected.

The Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

Proposals will be made separately on "Gray Hall Material," of 75 per cent of the estimated amount for, and the remaining 25 per cent. when the contract is completed.

P. H. CANAVAN,
JOS. D. EARLAND,
CHAS. E. McLANE,
Board of City Hall Commissioners.

Write for Large Illustrated Descriptive Price List to

GREAT WESTERN Gun WORKS
PITTSBURGH, PA.

Double, Single, Muzzle and Breech-Loading Rifles, Shot Guns, Revolvers, Pistols, etc., of every kind, for sale by the trade generally. Send for Price List. 4m6

HOTELS.

Removal.

THE SECOND STREET HOUSE

Has Removed to 115 Second street, Montgomery corner of Minna. Furnished Rooms to let with or without board, on the most reasonable terms. Call and examine.

M. O'NEIL,
Proprietor.

CENTRAL HOTEL,

816 AND 818 SANSOME STREET,

Between Broadway and Pacific.....San Francisco

THIS NEW, LARGE AND COMMODIOUS Hotel has been thoroughly renovated by the well known proprietor, M. FARRELL, late proprietor of Broadway House, where he will be happy to receive his numerous friends and the public in general. Thankful for past favors, he respectfully solicits a continuance of their future patronage.

There is a fire-proof safe in the House, where money and valuables can be kept at the risk of the proprietor.

The Central House Coach will be at each car depot and steamboat landing, to convey passengers to the House free of charge.

Price of board to suit the times.

Parties sending for their friends in the States, or who expect any, will please notify MICHAEL FARRELL, and he will attend to them on their arrival and forward them to their friends with due care, and charges more than reasonable.

The strictest attention will be paid to the comfort of the patrons of this House.

1y2-tf MICHAEL FARRELL, Proprietor.

RAILROAD HOUSE,

Corner of Sansome and Pacific streets, San Francisco

IS NOW OPENED BY

P. CASSERLY,

(Late of the Tremont House; where he will be happy to welcome his friends and the public in general.)

The House is thoroughly fitted up on the latest improvements with Elevator, Baths and all other modern improvements. The Rooms are large and airy, and can be had either single or en suite of Parlors.

The best attendance will be paid to the comfort and convenience of guests.

Board and Lodging per week.....$5 to $8
Board, and Lodging per day.....$1 to $1 50

P. CASSERLY, Proprietor.

Ja18-1y

FRANKLIN HOTEL,

616 AND 618 PACIFIC STREET,

Between Sansome and Montgomery...San Francisco

HUGH CURRAN.....Proprietor.

Board, per week.....$4 00
Board and Lodging—single rooms.....$5 00
Board, per Month, 16 cents. Lodging, 25 cents.

Family accommodations for reasonable rates.

Passengers and baggage conveyed to the House free of charge. Free Coach to the boats and cars.

A City Directory, and all the city papers taken.

WESTERN HOUSE.

Marysville, California.

GEORGE WAFFLE.....PROPRIETOR

sn21

BOOTS AND SHOES.

F. BUCKLEY, JR. J. R. MORTON.

BUCKLEY & MORTON,

BOOT AND SHOE STORE,

No. 906 MARKET STREET,

Opposite St. Ignatius Church.....San Francisco.

Ladies' and Gentlemen's Boots, Shoes and Gaiters made to order. Repairing neatly done. Ja11-1y

M. GUBRIN,

PRIZE BOOT MAKER,

327 and 329 Bush street,

Between Montgomery and Kearny.....San Francisco.

ALL THE LATEST STYLES OF

Boots and Shoes

—FOR—

Ladies, Misses, Children and Gents,

Made to order at the shortest notice.

Also, a full assortment of Kenberly Philadelphia Boots.

J. SELLNER, THOMAS KING

BOOT AND SHOE STORE

—OF—

SELLNER & KING,

No. 19 Third Street, corner of Stevenson.

Keep a large assortment of Ladies', Gents' and Children's BOOTS AND SHOES, which are selling at very low prices. Those made to order; a fit, good workmanship and satisfaction guaranteed. Also, a large stock of the firm of McAdams & King, will be glad to see all their old friends at this new store, where they will continue to do his best to please them and deserve their patronage as heretofore.

UNDERTAKERS.

JAMES McGINN,
UNDERTAKER,
717 Market Street, (opposite Dupont.)

For everything requisite for Funerals at the shortest notice.

Ja11-tf

MASSEY & YUNG,

Undertakers,

PRACTICAL FURNISHING UNDERTAKERS. Banister's Burial Caskets always on hand, and Agents for Fish's Metallic Burial Cases.

Everything necessary for Funerals kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges.

No. 611 Sacramento street, between Kearny and Webb.

JAMES KELLY,

(Late of St. Mary's Hospital) successor to

Undertaker

NO. 826 MARKET STREET,

Nearly opposite Fourth.....San Francisco

EVERYTHING NECESSARY FOR Funerals kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges. sn6

OUTSIDE LANDS.

ANY AND ALL PERSONS THAT HAVE made duplicate payments of OUTSIDE LAND ASSESSMENTS can have the amount refunded at the office of the undersigned, upon presentation of an order from the Mayor and City and County Attorney.

A. AUSTIN.

$10 MADE FROM 50 CENTS. CALL AND see it, or it sent free. Illustrated circular free. Address R. M. WOLCOTT, 131 Chatham Square, New York. Ja18-1y*

SEWING MACHINES.

HENRY FRANK,

Wholesale and Retail Manufacturer and Dealer in

BEDDING AND FURNITURE,

CONSTANTLY ON HAND

Spring, Hair, Wool, Moss and Pulu

MATTRESSES,

617 COMMERCIAL STREET,

Below Front.....SAN FRANCISCO

☞ The Cheapest Place in the City. ☜

All work guaranteed to give satisfaction. sn1

JACOB SCHREIBER,

MANUFACTURER AND DEALER IN

BEDDING AND FURNITURE,

620 WASHINGTON STREET,

Directly opposite Washington Market, San Francisco.

Goods sold at wholesale and retail at remarkably low figures.

N. B.—Particular attention paid to Renovating Bedding and Repairing Furniture. no5-1m

GOODWIN & CO.,

IMPORTERS, MANUFACTURERS & DEALERS

—IN—

RICH AND COMMON

FURNITURE, BEDDING, ETC.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,

No. 312 Pine Street, Above Sansome.

Prices Extremely Low.

Goods Custom Made.

☞ Are decidedly opposed to State Prison Monopoly and in favor of FREE LABOR.

ALSO AGENTS FOR THE CELEBRATED F. C. LIGHTE & CO. PIANOS. o12

C. P. R. R.

Commencing Sunday, December 1, 1872, and until further notice, Trains and Boats will

LEAVE SAN FRANCISCO.

7.00 A. M. (daily)—Atlantic Express Train (via Benicia) for Sacramento, Marysville, Oroville, Reno and Ogden.

7.15 A. M. (daily)—Dr. P. R. steamer (from Broadway wharf), connecting at Port Costa with Train for Calistoga, Knight's Landing and Sacramento—connecting at Benicia as Napa with stages for Sonoma.

